It is quite probable that when Gengis Khan conquered half of the world, some small fragments of his clan crossed the Bering Strait and then gradually migrated southward along the western coast of North America. As they slowly pushed southward, wherever they went, they, like their ancestors, the Mongols, were raiders and spoilers. The mystery of the vanishing Cliff Dwellers is a mystery no longer when we know the nature of these people coming from the North. This also explains why the Hopis settled on high and quite inaccessible Mesa plateaus. The Spanish narrators gave the name of Navajos, to them.

Some six hundred years ago they came into the wild and desert country of New Mexico and Arizona. To the settled Indians at the east the name Navajo was for centuries a name of terror. If one may believe the Pueblo traditions they habitually raided and looted the settled tribes, carrying off their crops at harvest time and kidnapping their women and children. When the Spanish settlements came, they instinctively reverted back to their Mongol tradition, admiring the horses belonging to the Spaniards, stealing them and their sheep, often whole herds at a time, and thus becoming the herders of the desert plains. Yet, warlike as they were, they also had very admirable traits. They were celebrated for the good order among themselves and for the intelligence with which their tribes were ruled. Very hospitable and given to jest and humor, their good nature was appreciated by white travelers who came in contact with them.

In 1692 when the Spaniards conquered the Indians in this area, the Navajos fled into the almost inaccessible Canyon de Chelly. Here, for more than a century, they were practically forgotten, and here, in the bottom of this canyon, the Navajo nation was born. Hitherto they had been a small tribe of wanderers, but now they became agricultural people, raising corn, beans, squash, and melons in the rich bottom land of the canyon. Here they also learned the art of weaving and silversmithing in which they have become so proficient.

In 1848 New Mexico was acquired by the United

Dr. D. V. Wiebe, who is now Chief Surgeon in the Navajo Medical Center, a hospital of 250 beds at Fort Defiance, Arizona, contributed the above article which gives a better knowledge of some people in our nation and not far from one of our mission fields.

States and a new chapter started for the Navajo nation. It is one of the dark and disgraceful chapters of the dealings of our nation with the American Indian. A struggle began which lasted twenty years. In 1862 Kit Carson was enlisted to subdue the obstinate Navajos. With the New Mexico Volunteers and with the aid of neighboring Indian tribes, the Navajos were hunted down like wild beasts. In July of 1863, just as the corn and wheat was ripe, their domain was invaded, their crops destroyed, their huts burned, and their sheep taken away. When from the high walls of the canyon, the Navajos saw their houses burn, their horses and sheep killed, and the canyon floor left bare, there was nothing left for them to do but to surrender. Then the "Great Walk" to Fort Sumner, some three hundred miles east, began. The Navajos still talk about the "Great Walk." Some died on the way.

When the last contingent reached Fort Sumner they numbered about twelve thousand. They were not happy in a foreign land away from their own sacred Canyon de Chelly and their sacred Shiprock. Sickness and disease brought death to many of the homeless people. In one year they were swept by four epidemics. The prophecy of the Navajos, that they would all die if they were taken away from their Canyon de Chelly, seemed to come true. Our government could not let this condition go on, so in 1868 the chiefs of the tribe were summoned to go to Washington. A treaty was made which the Navajos have kept up to this day and which permitted them to go back to the Land of their Fathers and to the Land of their Faith. They were given two sheep a piece for every man, woman and child. One big buck was kept out, and when they got back to their own land, this buck was tied by his horns to a pinyon tree on a little knoll at the mouth of the canyon where their young people could see him as they passed by. The buck, butting his head against the tree until he was dead, should teach the young people what it was like to fight against the government. The Navajos have taken good care of their sheep; today they have over three million head.

The Navajos are now a nation of fifty-five thousand people, by far the largest Indian tribe in the United States. The reservation comprises twenty-five thousand square miles which is a good bit larger than a number of our smaller states. They now own a large sawmill, a number of producing oil wells, several coal mines and a large Helium plant. The income from these industries flows into the tribal fund. They are a proud people, self-supporting, not asking favors. When one meets them as they ride on horseback through the sage, silvered bridles, bright colored velvet clothes, turquoise bracelets, earrings and necklaces, sitting erectly in their saddles and riding a horse as only a Navajo can ride it, they remind one of Oriental royalty. They are good natured, full of banter and humor, intelligent and quick witted. I wish some of our white children could watch me as I sew up a gaping wound on an Indian boy who is only five years old. He does not bat an eye or change his facial expression as I do the sewing, without anesthetic. They crave affection and kindness. I have heard the expression "thank you, doctor" said more here than ever before in my life.

The Navajos have come a long way along the road of Christianity and civilization. The Christmas program which we attended here, given, not by a church, but by the children of the government school, its speaking choir quoting the Biblical Christmas story as well as the Christmas prophecies, all from memory, interwoven into a sacred pageant, gave the program an atmosphere which would be difficult to duplicate in one of our own home churches.

Daily Devotional Messages

By Gerald Stucky, Berne, Indiana

And yet I show you a more excellent way, I Cor. 12:31—The expressions which the Christian life take are manifold. All the expressions are good; helpful and properly used they bring to us much blessing. Some expressions such as the possession of wisdom, knowledge, faith, the ability to prophesy, and the ability to speak in tongues are spectacular and people take note of them. Men tend to desire those talents and gifts which bring to them the applause and attention of men. But there is a more excellent way—and Paul says it is the way of love.

Though I speak with the tongues of men and angels and have not love, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. I Cor. 13:1—Love is greater than persuasive speech or oratory. This verse applies not only to great speakers, but to anyone who can speak at all. When we speak with love, even the most ordinary topics of conversation become lovely, but if we speak without love—even the greatest themes such as Calvary and Salvation become hollow and unattractive. It often takes missionaries years to learn the language of the natives—but the language of love is understood by all and becomes operative immediately. Words spoken in love will transform your social life—today.

Though I have all faith so that I could remove mountains, and have not love, I am nothing. I Cor. 13:2—Love is greater than orthodoxy. Paul would be the last to say that we should not be orthodox and fundamental in our faith, but yet he tells us that if we be ever so fundamental and lack genuine love—that we are nothing—Nothing. Orthodoxy without orthopraxy is one of the biggest stumbling blocks in the Christian and non-Christian world in the advancement of the kingdom of God. Let us so live that all men will know that we love them.

Though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor . . . and have not love, it profiteth me nothing. I Cor. 13:3. Love is greater than philanthropy. This is true because the whole is always greater than its parts or even the sum of its parts. We all know that there is much philanthropy (often called charity) without love. I remember standing on the street in downtown New York. I noticed outside of a theatre a blind man playing an accordian. I wondered whether people would put any money into his little box. I watched him for about an hour as people began to pour out of the theatre. It was estimated that this man received about $10.00 in dimes, etc., during that hour. Yet—how many loved?

Love suffereth long, I Cor. 13:4. Love is patient. Love is patient because love understands and therefore can wait. Understanding is the secret of patience. A farmer is not impatient to harvest his crop. He does not seek to harvest it a week or two after it has been planted, nor does he pull on the little sprouts to make them grow faster. He knows—he understands—that it takes time for things to come to maturity, and, understanding, he has patience. Love is understanding and therefore is patient. Dr. P. A. Penner says that there are three rules for being a missionary. The first is patience, the second is patience, the third is PATIENCE!

Love . . . is kind. I Cor. 13:4 "How much the world needs this," says Henry Drummond. How easily it is done, how instantaneously it acts; how infallibly it is remembered; how superabundantly it pays back. Love never fails, Love is success, love is happiness, love is life. "I shall pass through this world but once. Any good thing therefore that I can do, or any kindness that I can show to any human being, let me do it now. Let me not defer it, nor neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again." Kindness is the garden in which the seeds of friendship grow and bloom.

Love envieth not. I Cor. 13:4. Love is always generous. This is love in competition. It seems that when we seek to do good, that there is always someone else who can do the same thing—and do it better. It is easy to envy—unless, we love our fellowmen and the kingdom of God so much that we rejoice for all things that bring joy to our fellowmen and brings advancement to the kingdom of God. It is easy to see that a mother who loves her child does not envy her child when he makes progress or is advanced—but rather rejoices with him. Love cannot envy.

IN MEMORIAM

PETER JACOB WIENS

Peter Jacob Wiens, son of Jacob J. and Maria Quapp Wiens, was born at Neu-Schoensee near Cherson in South Russia on April 15, 1877. He attended the village school and then helped his father and brothers on their farm until the year 1896 when he entered the newly organized "Zentralschule."

PETER JACOB WIENS

In this high school among other things he studied Bible and German in preparation for missionary work. After high school he was planning to continue his education for missionary work at the Mission House in Neukirchen, Germany, when the late David Goerz of Newton, Kansas, persuaded him to come to America to attend Bethel College. He enrolled in the college in 1900 and made many life-long friends while there and while continuing his preparation at the Missionary Training Institute of Brooklyn, New York, in 1904 and 1905.

An urgent call from the Mission Board of the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America caused him to cut short his studies. He married his fiancée, Agnes Harder, whom he had met while at Bethel College, and then proceeded at once to India. After a brief honeymoon in South Russia, he reached India on August 16, 1906, to begin a long period of fruitful work in the field of the General Conference Mission in the Central Provinces.

He was stationed at Champa until 1911 when he moved twenty-four miles south to Mauhadih where the mission had decided to open a new station. From then until 1937, with the exception of the year 1928 when he and his family were stationed at Basna, he devoted his entire energies to building up of this large station with its extensive evangelistic, medical, and educational work. Besides supervising the building of many substantial station buildings, he traveled over a large area during all seasons of the year and was often called out by poor suffering people in urgent need of medical attention.

He returned to America on furlough in 1915 and 1925, and again in 1937, but health difficulties prevented his going back to India for a fourth term of service. During each furlough and in 1937 and 1938, he traveled among the churches of the General Conference in America, telling people of the work of the mission in India. He loved the people of India and would gladly have returned to spend his last years among them.

During the last few years he worked at the Conference Historical Library, sorting, classifying, storing and checking out Conference and mission literature besides doing translation work for the Mennonite Central Committee.

He loved the Lord and early gave his heart to God and dedicated his life to the service of the Savior. He was diligent in all church and Sunday School work. He was especially fond of music and singing which made it easier to gain the hearts of the Indian people and to carry the burdens of life.

After an illness of two weeks at home and eight days at the Bethel Hospital, he passed away to his reward on June 7. He leaves to mourn his passing his devoted wife, five children—Ferdinand J. of Portland, Oregon; Rudolph P. who is in Iraq; Mrs. Robert Willis and Mrs. Galen Koehn of Newton, Kansas; and Mrs. Dan Epp of Toccoa, Georgia—eight grandchildren, a brother, Frank J. Wiens of Paraguay, and a sister, Mrs. John Harder of Hepburn, Saskatchewan, Canada.

During his last illness he often spoke of the happy home in Heaven and urged us all to meet him there. He is not dead—he has only gone home.

S. S. BAUMGARTNER

The Rev. Samuel S. Baumgartner, son of Daniel and Katherina Baumgartner, was born in Allan County, Bluffton, Ohio, May 26, 1869, and passed away early Saturday morning, May 5, at his home in Portland, Oregon. His health had been failing for some time, but he continued quite alert and active to the last.

He received his elementary education in Ohio. In 1889 he enrolled in the Halstead Preparatory School, and in 1890 he became pastor of the Garden Township Mennonite Church, five miles south of Moundridge. He served this church for twenty years. He also taught German school and farmed some land.

On September 25, 1892, he was united in marriage to Mary M. Vogt. To this union two children were born: Paul G., Newton, Kansas, and Mrs. Elizabeth Penner of Portland, Oregon. The couple commemorated their Golden Wedding anniversary in the Alberta Community Church, Portland, on September 27, 1942.

In 1910 the family moved to Pratum, Oregon, where he served the Emmanuel Mennonite Church for fifteen years. From 1926 to 1929 he served the Zion Mennonite Church near Dallas, Oregon. From 1929 until 1937 he was pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Monroe, Washington.

He then retired from the active ministry and moved to Portland, Oregon, where he was a blessing in teaching Sunday School and in counselling and helping many.

For two years he served as Secretary of the Western District Conference, for four years as Secretary of the Pacific District Conference, and from 1924 on for many years as Secretary of the Evangelism Committee. He was still serving this committee in an advisory capacity.

He was often referred to as the "Daddy" of the Pacific District Conference, for he was instrumental in the founding and the establishment of many of the churches. He was able to attend the session of the conference in 1944. He also served on the Home Mission Board of the General Conference from 1917 to 1941, when he asked to be released because of his age. While at Pratum he also served on the board of the Salem Deaconess Hospital.

He is survived by his wife and two children and many relatives and friends. His has been a long active life of service for His Lord and Master. Many have been greatly blessed by his wholesome influence upon their lives.

Conference Resolutions

so as speedily as possible and thereby help achieve our coveted goal, namely, "A Conference paper in every conference home." J. N. Suderman, W. C. Andreas.

57. RESOLVED, that Conference reports include a complete itemization of salaries paid to all individuals employed by the Conference. Don. E. Smucker, Walter Temple.

58. RESOLVED, That the conference Executive Committee restudy the salary situation among our employees and suggest a fair and orderly basis on which salaries can be determined. Donavan Smucker, A. S. Bechtel.

59. RESOLVED, To adopt the report of the Publication Board as a whole including the treasurer's and auditor's report. G. T. Soldner, J. H. Epp.

60. RESOLVED, That the Board of Publication consider the possibility of securing the manuscript of S. F. Pannabecker on the History and Condition of the General Conference, for publication in book form. J. Winfield Fretz, Geo. G. Dick.

61. RESOLVED, That the report of the Conference be adopted. Olin Krehbiel, J. M. Franz.

62. RESOLVED, That the secretary of the Conference be the Statistician of the conference. A. J. Dyck, J. C. Mueller.

63. RESOLVED, That since according to statistics 26% of the General Conference C.P.S. men wish to continue their education after the war, and since the government in its G.I. Bill has made liberal provision for all discharged service men, but especially for those who wish to continue their education, and since our C.P.S. men have received no help from the government while in camp nor will they receive any when they get out, and since some of our most promising young men are in C.P.S. and should be helped to continue their education if they so desire, and since the Board of Education, the Home Mission Board, Relief Board and the Peace Committee are co-operating in working on this problem, it is recommended that the conference approve of this effort and encourage special contributions for this 'Educational Rehabilitation Program' for C.P.S. men." Lester Hostetler, Olin Krehbiel.

64. RESOLVED, That the Committee on Doctrine and Conduct be considered a temporary Committee. Freeman Swartz, Dan. J. Unruh.

65. RESOLVED, That we adopt the whole report of the Board of Education including the report of the treasurer and the auditing Committee. J. C. Mueller, J. E. Amstutz.

66. RESOLVED, That we continue the afternoon session until 5:30 p.m. This motion was lost. (chair called for a division of the house). J. S. Schultz, Walter Gering.

67. RESOLVED, That the $1,000.00 loaned to Canadian Mennonite Immigrants for transportation debt and now paid back, now be given them as a gift. This motion was amended by the following motion: P. H. Richert, E. J. Neuenschwander.

68. RESOLVED, That the gift be made $2,000.00 instead of $1,000.00. E. G. Kaufman, Walter Dyck.

69. RESOLVED, That our General Conference co-operate with the M.C.C. to establish a mental institution. This motion was modified in the next resolution. Geo. Dick, J. J. Unruh.

70. RESOLVED, That if it is impossible, our own General Conference go ahead as a Relief Board to establish a mental institution. E. G. Kaufman, J. C. Kaufman.

71. RESOLVED, That a Conference Board be established to carry out the proposed plan of the fact finding Committee of the Relief Board. H. A. Fast, D. J. Unruh.

72. RESOLVED, That we adopt the whole report of the Emergency Relief Board including the treasurer's and Auditor's reports. C. C. Wedel, Walter H. Dyck.

73. RESOLVED, To adopt the report of the Placement Committee, Jacob H. Janzen, Jacob R. Fretz.

74. RESOLVED, That we adopt the report of the Seminary Board. A. J. Neuenschwander, J. J. Thiesen.

75. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 1 of the Peace Committee, which reads as follows: "We believe that we should all sacrifice in this needy time, and would recommend that all who are sharing in the increasing profits or wages as a result of the war, contribute accordingly to the peace cause and to the various other activities of the General Conference." H. T. Unruh, J. J. Plenert.

76. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 2 of the Peace Committee, which reads as follows: "That the Christian testimony of peace may be more fully emphasized in our churches, we suggest the following:

A. Occasional clear and convincing peace sermons by the pastors, as well as addresses by men of other denominations who hold firmly to the Biblical background for peace.

B. We recommend Ministers' Retreats, where one of the main items of discussion and consideration be the question of our Mennonite Biblical position of peace and non-resistance, both now and in the future.

C. We would encourage the continuation of various articles on peace in our church papers.

D. We would urge our Board of Education to include one peace lesson a quarter in our Sunday School lesson helps, and to arrange suitable peace material for our young people to be used in connection with the Christian Endeavor groups.

E. We would encourage the use of a special "Peace Quarterly" in our Sunday Schools for a quarter at a time. Such quarterly is now in the process of construction.

F. Booklets and pamphlets on actual peace testimony and experience are now being prepared. We recommend that these be given a wide circulation when ready for distribution.

G. We urge a strong Biblical peace emphasis in all our catechetical instruction. To this purpose a short catechism on peace, similar to that published by the Canadian brethren might be helpful.
H. T. Unruh, J. S. Schultz.

77. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 3 of the Peace Committee report, which reads as follows: "We encourage the continuation of the 'Pastoral Visitation Program' in cooperation with the other boards as is now being planned for the camps and churches." H. T. Unruh, J. M. Regier.

78. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 4 of the Peace Committee report, which reads as follows: "A. We as a Mennonite Church reaffirm our position as to war and military training as expressed in 'A statement of the position of the General Conference of North America on Peace and Military Service' accepted August 17-22 1941: a portion of which statement follows: 'We can have no part in carnal warfare or conflict between nations, nor in strife between classes, groups or individuals. We believe that this means that we cannot bear arms personally nor directly aid those who do so, and that, as consequence we accept service under the military arm of the government whether it be combatant or noncombatant, which ultimately causes us to be responsible for the destruction of life, health and property of our fellow men. This applies to all wars whether they be designated defensive or offensive.

B. We further acknowledge our common guilt of not having taught and lived more fully our Christian life as a way of peace and love and good will toward all, and so recommend that the men are demobilized we engage in a service of humble penitence and prayer for the forgiveness of our common sins and rededicate ourselves to a more honest effort to follow the Prince of Peace and to spread his gospel of peace and love among all men." H. T. Unruh J. J. Unruh.

79. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 5 of the Peace Committee report, which reads as follows: "As to peace-time conscription and military training we stand by the accepted statement of the General Conference of August, 1941, as follows: 'We can have no part in military training in schools and colleges or in any other form of peace-time preparation for service as part of the war system.'" We ask our church members as individuals to consider sending protests against such training, to the proper officials. Should peace-time military conscription be passed by our Congress we recommend that we follow a non-military program such as the Mennonite Central Committee may accept from officials at Washington. We further recommend that our resolutions Committee present to the Conference a resolution to be conveyed by the Conference Officials to the proper government officials at Washington, regarding our position on Peace-time Conscription. H. T. Unruh, Jacob R. Fretz.

80. RESOLVED, To adopt the whole report of the Peace Committee including the Treasurer's and Auditor's reports. Walter H. Dyck, L. L. Ramseyer.

81. RESOLVED, That the conference shall meet two years from this session. J. S. Schultz, Homer Leisy.

82. RESOLVED, To accept the invitation of the First Mennonite Church at Berne, Indiana, to hold the next session of the General Conference there. L. L. Ramseyer, Homer Leisy.

83. RESOLVED, That we accept the report of the Resolutions Committee by standing vote. Carried. It reads as follows:

1. Whereas, through the Providence of God it has been possible for this Conference to convene at North Newton, Kansas, in the midst of wartime conditions, and whereas the prevailing spirit has been permeated with brotherly love during these sessions, be it resolved, that this Conference express its gratitude to God through a season of prayer led by two brethren designated by the chair.

2. Resolved, that by a rising vote we express our warmest thanks to Bethel College and all churches of Kansas, as well as the various committees responsible for the splendid way in which the Conference was entertained during these days.

3. Resolved, that we recognize the interesting exhibits arranged by the various boards, committees, and institutions, and especially the articles from the Civilian Public Service Camps, and offer our hearty thanks to the committees for making these displays possible.

4. In view of the fact that Bro. J. J. Eymann, Reedley, California, a member of the Board of Trustees, has been ill for the past year, be it resolved that the executive officers of the General Conference convey to Brother Eymann our sincere Christian greetings, and expression of sympathy in his illness.

5. Be it resolved that our Executive Officers express by letter our warmest thanks for the long years of service that Broth. H. E. Suderman rendered on the Board of Trustees.

6. Be it resolved that the thirtieth session of the General Conference express by a rising vote of thanks its appreciation for the services rendered by the outgoing Executive Officers, Board, and Committee members.

7. Resolved that by standing we pay tribute to Bro. C. H. van der Smissen our oldest minister who by God's grace was privileged to attend the sessions of this conference.

8. The Resolutions Committee rejoices in the fact that Bro. A. Warkentin has through God's grace been sufficiently restored in health to participate in the sessions of this conference and requests that the conference delegates remember him in their prayers to the end that he may be completely restored.

9. Whereas, the Mennonites from the beginning of their history have believed participation in military service to be contrary to the teachings of Jesus, Christ and have felt led on numerous occasions to flee from countries that demanded participation in military service both in time of peace as well as in time of war.

Be it resolved, that the thirtieth session of the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America, assembled at North Newton, Kansas, May 31 to June 5, 1945, reaffirm the statement on peace-time conscription and military training adopted by the twenty-ninth session at Souderton, Pennsylvania, August, 1941: "We can have no part in military training in schools and colleges or in any other form of peace-time preparation for service as part of the war system," and go on record as opposing the present attempt to introduce peace-time military conscription.

Be it further resolved, that, first, we ask our church members as individuals to consider the sending of protests against such training to the proper government officials; second, that in the event that peace-time military conscription should be passed by our respective governments (the United States, the Dominion of Canada, and the Republic of Mexico) that we follow a non-military program such as the Mennonite Central Committee may accept; third, that a copy of this entire resolution be sent by the Conference officers to the proper government officials.

Respectfully submitted.

84. RESOLVED, That the regulation specifying that the members of the Peace Committee represent the four districts be set aside for this election. E. G. Kaufman, H. D. Raid.

85. RESOLVED, That we adjourn, J. S. Schultz, Walter Gering.

RELIEF

Seventh Worker Arrives in India

Titus Lehman, R.N., arrived at the Mennonite relief headquarters, Calcutta, India, following approximately eight weeks of traveling in a Pacific convoy.

Wilhelmina Kuyf, who left the States the same time as Brother Lehman, cabled from Lisbon, May 26, to inform Akron that she had passage as far as Haifa, Palestine, May 31, and hoped to have less delay getting passage to India from Port Said.

Aiding French Mennonite Brethren

Henry Buller has been contacting French Mennonite families in the region of Colmar, Altkirch, Blamont, and Mulhouse, towns in Alsace. Mennonite families who lost everything, or suffered severe loss when the war raged through Alsace, have assisted Brother Buller to visualize how American and Canadian Mennonites can best help. The present need is not financial. Each family feels that there is sufficient money to spend intelligently at present. Financial assistance might be helpful eight or twelve months from now when reconstruction can begin.

There is unanimity in their requests for materials that are especially necessary to continue farm work. Clothing for young and old, and cloth to make work clothing, head the list. Small tools are needed for their farms, orchards, and vineyards: hoes, rakes, forks, spades, shovels, scythes, sickles, etc. Larger tools might include mowing machines and one-row listing plows. The homes will need help with bedding and linens for the next year or two.

Sam Goering has expressed his desire to see a young man go into this area with a fair-sized cement mixer, patterns for cement or prefabricated houses, who could move from one community to another building, with local labor, the houses which are so badly needed.

Glass-Canned Foods Arrive in Puerto Rico

The La Plata Unit received 132 cartons of canned fruits and vegetables, selected from the 1944 surplus stock of C.P.S. canned foods, for hospital and unit consumption. The shipment, aside from meeting a unit need, was a preliminary overseas shipment which was to become a fair indicator of the advisability of sending glass-canned foods to Europe. Out of 2,200 jars, there was less than two per cent breakage. Similar preliminary shipments are ready to leave for Holland and France.

A shipment of fifty heifers and bulls arrived in Puerto Rico, May 26, for distribution among poor farmers cooperating with the Farm Security Administration and the Puerto Rico Reconstruction Administration (PRRA). The La Plata unit hospital received seven of these dairy cattle through the PRRA. The cattle have been raised by members of the Church of the Brethren—farmers supporting the Brethren Service Committee "heifer for relief" project.

Sugar for C.P.S. Canning Program

Canning sugar will be furnished by the M.C.C. for the 1945 C.P.S. Canning Program. The camps are applying for sugar which will be forwarded to the Akron Office for distribution to the groups participating in the canning. Requests for C.P.S. canning sugar should mention the grocer or firm from whom the sugar will be purchased, the quantity needed and the person responsible for reporting to M.C.C. Requests for canning sugar ration points should be conservative as more may be obtained when needed as the season progresses and when we will have received more of the sugar from the camps.

"Food for Relief" Program

The processing of foods for relief, as mentioned in previous announcements, should proceed as those foods come in season. Contributions should be held locally until collection center arrangements are announced. Use of corn syrup for fruit butters and preserves is strongly encouraged as present prospects give little hope of our being able to obtain extra sugar for relief canning. The bulletin on "How to Can Finer Fruits and Save Sugar" is available by writing to: Corn Products Refining Co., 17 Battery Place, New York 4, N.Y. You will find this publication very helpful to you in saving sugar.

C. P. S.

C.P.S. Demobilization

Selective Service officially announced, May 25, a point plan for the demobilization of C.P.S. men. This plan is exactly as announced before in these notes, except for the number of points computed for the wife of an assignee. It is as follows: One point for each month of service or fraction thereof as of May 12, 1945; 12 points for each child born prior to midnight of May 12, 1945; and three points for a wife, provided the marriage occurred before May 12, 1945. The number of points required for release was not announced, but the assignee must be in camp for at least one year to be eligible. Consideration for honourable work and conduct was considered in stipulating that one point for each day of AWOL or RTW (refused to work) would be deducted from the camper's total number of points.

It is believed that this plan for demobilization will affect approximately ten per cent of the men in C.P.S. over a year's time, beginning with the coming month of August. This would mean the release of approximately 400 men from Mennonite camps by the point system.

West Coast Transfer

Most of the 500 C.P.S. men shifting from base camps in the East and Middle West have arrived at units on the West Coast at the time of this writing. As announced earlier, the reason for this shift was the increased need for fire-fighting personnel in the Far West Rockies. This was further explained recently when it was revealed that the presence of incendiary bombs, dropped from balloons released by the Japanese, increased the fire hazard. This information was confidential until the War and Navy departments announced that such balloons were seen on the West Coast and as far inland as the Mississippi River.

Brethren Men Send Trees to Churches

C.P.S. men at the Brethren camp, Waldport, Oregon, are working on a plan to send a red pine tree to each of the approximately 1,000 churches in the Brethren constituency, according to the Gospel Messenger. "The tree would be sent as a token of appreciation from the C.P.S. men for their support in terms of money, food, other goods, and encouragement." The trees will be donated by the Forest Service but the expenses of shipping will be borne by the C.P.S. men.

CORRESPONDENCE

IMMANUEL MENNONITE CHURCH Delft, Minnesota

Our congregation has received many blessings since the arrival of our new pastor, Rev. and Mrs. Victor Graber and son on February 1. Every Thursday evening in connection with our weekly practice we have either Bible study or teachers' meeting. Our pastor teaches both classes.

Our church has lost four members through death this year, but our instruction class consisted of six young people so our number is brought higher again.

On May 9, a little girl, named Cheryl Lavonne, arrived at Rev. and Mrs. Graber's home.

On June 5 our church basement received a re-decorating job with a coat of new paint. It was done by the Ladies Mission Society.

One of our church members is going to teach Bible school for two months in Northern Minnesota this summer.

The daily vacation Bible schools will begin June 11 in most rural schools in this community.

EAST SWAMP MENNONITE CHURCH Quakertown, Pa.

May 24, 1945, Rev. Harold D. Burkholder, Pastor of the East Swamp Mennonite Church, Quakertown, Pa., was graduated from the Reformed Episcopal Theological Seminary. Several of the local congregations had the pleasure of attending the graduating exercises.

Friday evening, May 25, in the Church Grove, a picnic supper and fellowship was well attended as an informal farewell to the Burkholder family. Sunday morning found the Church filled as Rev. Burkholder gave a farewell charge to the congregation and Sunday evening a program arranged by the Burkholder family, consisting of vocal numbers and a short message.

We thank and praise God for all the blessings we received through the consecrated ministry of Rev. and Mrs. Burkholder these past seven years and our prayers are that the Immanuel Church of Los Angeles, California will prosper spiritually through their ministry.

We are looking forward to the coming of Rev. A. H. Schultz from Henderson, Nebraska, by July 1 as our new pastor. —Mrs. Robert Landis, East Swamp Corr.

JOTTINGS

—An illustrated lecture on Mennonite History was given by Dr. Cornelius Krahn of Bethel College in the Buhler Mennonite Church, June 10.

—"The Creation" by Haydn was again presented by the Mennonite Choral Society of Berne, Indiana, on the evening of June 10.

—Bluffton College: "...armed service personnel may after the war or after discharge from the service attend Bluffton College at the expense of the government in so far as tuition, fees, and books are concerned; and that they will also receive a maintenance allowance," so writes Dr. Ramseyer, President of Bluffton. He goes on to say that Mennonite Colleges have agreed that the men from C.P.S. "should have free tuition in our colleges, with the hope that some church agency will relieve the colleges of this financial load..." (See General Conference Resolution No. 63 as given elsewhere in this issue). Half a dozen or more summer conferences are to be held on the Bluffton Campus this year. Prospects are for a larger enrollment in 1945-46. Dr. J. S. Schultz, Dean, is attending the North Central Association workshop at the University of Minnesota. After this he is to tour C.P.S. camps, speaking on "Christian Home," and "Life Problems." Rev. Paul Shelly is to fill the Quakertown, Pa., charge for a month during the absence of the pastor. Miss Edna Ramseyer is serving as dean of the Mennonite girls who are working in the mental hospital at Poughkeepsie, New York.

—The Church of the United Brethren has approved union with the Evangelical Church. This merger has been under consideration for twelve years.

—Oklahoma Disciples of Christ recently decided at Enid that universal military training would be "unnecessary, wasteful... and not conducive to moral and spiritual development."

—The Congregational Christian Churches of Ohio are considering a merger with Evangelical and Reformed Church and are to vote on this merger at next year's conference.

—It is reported from London that Quaker Relief units "have been withdrawn from Germany because of occupation orders against fraternization with civilians."

—American combat casualties passed the one million mark on the last day of May according to official announcement. It is estimated that there have been from thirty to forty million battle casualties in this war.

—Helen Habegger, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Habegger of Busby, Montana, and J. Herbert Fretz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob R. Fretz of Lansdale, Pa., were married at Berne, Indiana, on June 9.

—Rev. Alfred Habegger gave an illustrated lecture on mission work among the Cheyenne Indians of Montana at the mid-week meeting of the Berne Church, June 13.

—Jacob T. Friesen, who will serve an internship at the First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, this summer plans to make a special study of the ministry to the sick and aged during his internship, according to a report by Walter H. Dyck, pastor of First Church.

—Rev. Elbert E. Koontz, pastor of the Second Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, is to spend a month or six weeks in a speaking tour of C.P.S. camps and units. During this time Rev. Albert Jantzen, returned missionary from the Philippines is to fill the pulpit. The Jantzens will occupy the parsonage while Rev. and Mrs. Koontz are gone.

—After the General Conference many of the churches reported on the conference in some way. The Bethel College church had a unique report. In an informal gathering the heads of various committees, such as food, exhibits, transportation, accommodations, etc. give a short summary of "What General Conference Meant to Me." This furnished a lot of "in side" information. Dr. C. E. Krehbiel also told how he had seen the conference. In addition, Dr. H. A. Fast and Dr. Ed. G. Kaufman outlined what they considered the trends of the General Conference. Again the First Church, Beatrice, had an informal discussion in which members of the church were permitted to quiz their fellow members who had been delegates.

—The C.P.S. camp at Colorado Springs, Colorado, recently commemorated its fourth anniversary. It was opened June 5, 1941, with twenty-five men from Kansas arriving at 6:30 a.m. Albert Gaeddert was the first director.

—The Mennonite Student Fellowship of Chicago, Illinois, enjoyed a picnic supper at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Paul Voth, 6116 Ingleside Avenue on May 27, 1945. This was the annual picnic generally held in Jackson Park, but due to inclement weather it was held indoors. After playing indoor baseball, the group enjoyed a general period of fellowship.

The Student Fellowship meets monthly, and all students in the vicinity of Chicago are welcome to attend. The next meeting will take place on July 8. New people in the community should contact Mrs. E. N. Hiebert, 1156 East 56th St., Chicago 37, Illinois, secretary of the organization.

—A painting of the Deep Run Church, Bedminister, Pa., has been made by Rev. Forrest Musser, artist-pastor of Pandora, Ohio. The painting was made from the photograph which appears on the front page of the Deep Run Bulletin.

—The Seventeenth Joint Conference of Mennonites, Schwenkfelders, Brethern and Friends was held in the Towamencin Schwenkfelder Church on June 16. The evening address was by Horace G. Alexander, lecturer at Pendle Hill.

PILGRIMS IN PARAGUAY

Whence Came These Pilgrims?

By Willard Smith

Mennonites are a wandering people. Ever since their origin over four hundred years ago in Switzerland and Holland, they have been travelers upon the face of the earth in search of religious liberty, travelers "for conscience- sake." The Mennonites of Paraguay are no exception to this general truth. Their ancestry, in the case of Menno colony, goes back through Canada, Russia, Germany, and Holland. In the case of the others, the Canadian step is omitted and these trace back through Russia, Germany, and Holland. In both cases some of the ancestors lived in Poland when that country was still independent over a century and a half ago. Others of these people found their way to Paraguay only after several years of wandering in China, to which country they had escaped from eastern Siberia.

In the various countries in which the Mennonites found refuge, they were usually given, at the outset, the religious freedom which they desired. Later, however, under different regimes these liberties were either greatly restricted or taken away altogether. Then it was that new homelands were sought. Only in the case of predominantly Anglo-Saxon countries like the United States and Canada, where the protection of civil and religious liberties is a strong tradition of long standing, are these freedoms relatively secure. The migration of a group of Canadian Mennonites to the Chaco in the 1920's for the reason that they could not teach their religion in school—meaning for the most part the German language—is not an argument to the contrary.

Sufferings in Russia

In the case of Russia, religious freedom was given the Mennonites by Catherine the Great and was continued by Catherine's successors. When these liberties were threatened and restricted in the latter part of the nineteenth century, thousands chose to migrate to the United States, where they constituted an important element in the settlement of the last frontier.

Other thousands decided to remain in Russia with somewhat restricted religious freedom. This was a fateful and almost fatal decision, the results of which, of course, could not be seen by those who made it. The years down to the first World War were not so difficult, but the years that followed 1917 were for the Russian brethren years of great tribulation, the like of which has not often been seen in Christian history. I have sat by the hour listening as scores have told me about their sufferings under the Communist regime. Added to this was the suffering caused by the famine of 1920-22. As a result of this need, the Mennonite Central Committee was born in North America in 1920 and rendered a service to the Russian brethren which they will never forget.

The trials of the brethren did not end with the famine. In the late 1920's, after a few years of relative calm, the persecutions became worse than ever as the Communists made renewed efforts to complete their program of socialization. Because many Mennonites were on a higher economic class than most of their Russian neighbors, they suffered, in addition to a religious persecution, the economic persecution meted out to the kulak class. The fact that they were an unassimilated German cultural group made their sufferings the more severe. The tales of suffering which these people relate include everything from the smaller crimes to torture, starvation, rape, and murder. Even when these stories are discounted fifty per cent, as perhaps they should be as a result of the tremendous excitement and tension under which the Mennonites lived, the tales are still tales of dreadful horror. It is not surprising that such a people cannot be convinced that anything good can come out of Communistic Moscow. Nor should it be surprising that such a people should have a natural tendency to be sympathetic with any country that is fighting their former persecutors.

Why They Chose Paraguay

Up to and including 1929, thousands were able to leave Russia and migrate to Canada. In that year alone some 4,000 were able to flee. Practically all of them had their eyes and hearts set on Canada. Some of them, as thousands before, were able to go to that land of promise. But suddenly that door was closed, and about 3,000 were left stranded in Germany with no new homes in prospect. Germany herself did not at that time want them to stay permanently. Then it was that the Mennonite Central Committee again came to their aid and helped them find a new homeland.

The question often arises as to why these pilgrims built again in far-away and almost unknown Paraguay. The answer is simple: there was virtually no other place to go. Brazil permitted only a few to come and offered no guarantee of religious liberty. On the other hand, little Paraguay was ready to invite the Mennonites—sick and well, old and young—to settle in her territory and at the same time to grant them a privilegium which gave them complete religious freedom as well as a large degree of liberty with regard to their political and cultural life. Many of the Mennonites were suffering from diseases common to Southern Russia, especially trachoma. Those suffering most from this disease were usually left behind because the doors of other countries were closed to them. Only Paraguay was willing to welcome them and at the same time recognize their faith.

Scattered Families

Not to be able to go to Canada, to which some twenty thousand of their fellow religionists—many of them close relatives—had gone, was an additional blow to these people. Never have I heard of a people whose relatives and friends are more widely scattered than these. It is common to find families in Paraguay who have close relatives—brothers, sisters, father, mother, sons, or daughters—in Canada, Russia, Germany or Brazil. In many cases different members of the family are to be found in several or all of these countries. While it was and is tragic for them to be so widely separated from loved ones it was even worse to have had to leave loved ones in Russia, of whose fate nothing has been heard for five or six or more years.

The General Conference as I Saw It

By Elmer Ediger, newly elected Y.P.U. president and M.C.C. director of the educational program in Mennonite C.P.S. camps and units

Many of us gained a new confidence in the distinct purpose and potential strength of the General Conference. The action on the doctrine of non-resistance somehow points up the general direction of the conference. We thank God for the hearty, sweeping "aye," unopposed affirming the Biblical doctrine of non-resistance and clearly declaring that participation in the business of war is sin. Whether it was a true inner affirmation or a "yes, but" remains to be seen. We pray that the affirmation was made in a spirit of repentance and with a prayer for God-given strength to live by it. Though our members vary in this position, our churches have been asked by the conference to teach and preach clearly that this is an essential of Christian discipleship.

As one looked at the gathering in the Memorial Hall, listened to the conference proceedings, conversed between sessions, various observations were impressed upon me.

1. The large bloc of our church representatives was rural, not easily swayed, not very vocal. This group, it seemed to me, was united: in its deep faith in the power of the gospel to change human lives and our responsibility to spread this gospel; in the necessity of a faith that has fruits and our responsibility to teach, educate for Christian character so that love may abound in our knowledge and judgment; in a church that has a spiritual warmth and challenges its members to give of themselves to missions, relief, and in living upright and useful lives.

2. A unique and potential strength of the General Conference is that it is not quick to "silence" individuals who may not be quite in the middle of the stream—that creative individuals have much room to be led by the Holy Spirit; that even though we run a risk, individuals in our schools are encouraged to launch into areas of knowledge rather than bury their heads in the sand. There is a mission with intelligent and educated people as well as with the backward.

3. The conference made one appreciate anew and thank God for the "older pillars" of the church who have the vision to support progressive measures as well as uphold lessons of the past.

4. Many of us are too ignorant of the Canadian Mennonites whose large numbers and increased activity point toward an ever-increasing influence in the General Conference. In general, we need more interchurch contact for greater unity.

5. Our conference machinery, as in motion during the meetings, evidenced an efficiency but also a desirable informality. We perhaps tend to be less efficient between conferences, and therefore, it was encouraging to note steps that were taken to coordinate board activities. The endorsement of aggressive board action and the interest in board field secretaries seem to speak of a new day for carrying out conference concerns.

HARVEST TIME is at hand in Kansas. The fields are standing ripe unto harvest. A little less than a year ago farmers plowed the fields which now stand with grain. Later they did still more to prepare a good seed bed. Then they sowed good seed. It came up and covered the fields with a lush green. The plants lay comparatively dormant during the winter. With spring came growth. Heads with kernels developed. Now it stands ready for harvest. Many steps are involved in this whole process.

So it is with the spiritual harvest in our life. The spiritual harvest which we may be facing today may seem to have come upon us very suddenly, so much so that it hardly seems like a harvest with a long development behind it. Things seem to come so suddenly in the realm of the spirit. However, usually they do not. Decision plus decision plus decision finally results in a major one that is really a harvest decision. All the little things I do today plus all the little things I do tomorrow, etc., will finally determine what I will add up to in some future day. Today I am very largely if not entirely the sum total of what I have been in the past. Judas did not go bad all at once. He built up to his final colossal sin. It had a basis in his past. The young man or woman who blossoms out in winsome wholesomeness has something back of that. We are sowing for the future harvest today.

A QUESTIONNAIRE is to appear in an early issue of this paper. It will afford you an opportunity to give information and to make suggestions for the improvement of your English church paper. We hope that even though you may like the paper and may be in accord with its general policy, you will fill out all or part of the questionnaire and mail it to The Mennonite, North Newton, Kansas.

LOVE OF ONE'S BROTHER is an excellent indication that one has been enlightened by God, who is love, I John 2:9,10,11. In contrast, hate signifies a life of darkness. Love thinketh no evil, for it forgives the evil in another. Hate is ever pouncing upon evil, real or imagined, for a heart filled with hate cannot forgive. Love comes naturally to him who has confessed his own sins and felt forgiveness. Hate comes naturally to him who denies his own sinfulness and yet burms with the guilt of it. Love unites. Hate separates. Love speaks kind words. Hate stings like a serpent. Love is the standard by which we can know who is close to God.

Hate in my heart? That is something most of us do not want to confess. Yet it may be there more often than we want to admit. Two recent books have in their title the words "love" and "hate." There seems to be a new consciousness of how much we hate when we ourselves do not suspect it. That hate may often rule in hearts becomes rather plausible when we observe in ourselves and in others how frequently genuine love is absent. To the extent that we hate to that extent we are unchristian for being a Christian means loving. Love of brother reveals the light of God.

FORGIVENESS AND LOVE are joined by Jesus in his parable of the two debtors who were forgiven their respective debts of fifty pounds and five pounds, Luke 7:41-47. The sinful woman, who in Simon's house wet his feet with her tears, wiped them with her hair, pressed her kisses upon them, and anointed them with perfume, was overcome by her sinfulness. She admitted her own sinfulness to herself. That was a very courageous and significant act. On that basis God's forgiveness was hers, and Jesus told her to "go in peace." Feeling forgiveness of her great sinfulness, she responded with a great love. She had hungered and thirsted for righteousness; she had mourned. Now Jesus told her to go and be the kind of woman that she felt she should be. Simon had had little to be forgiven, at least, so he thought. In his own eyes he was quite righteous. He had not sinned like this "sinful woman." But Jesus did not tell him to "go in peace." Jesus, in fact, tried to disturb his smug complacency with himself by pointing out his unlovingness. So full of love for himself and so lacking in love for others was Simon, that he had not given Jesus water for his feet, or a kiss, or anointed his head with oil. And for this "sinful woman" he had had no use. But he saw nothing wrong with himself. It was impossible for him to have a great experience of forgiveness, and therefore it was impossible for him to have a great experience of love. The way to love, says Jesus, lies through forgiveness of one's own sins. But God cannot forgive us our sins unless we confess them. "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." I John 1:9. The way to a great love of God and man lies through a thorough confession of one's own sins.

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

Meditations on the Mennonites

By J. Winfield Fretz

CHRISTOPHER DOCK

Every Mennonite should be acquainted with Christopher Dock, in fact, every person who is interested in Christian education or the methods of Christian education should be acquainted with him. One reason why ministers constantly refer to political figures such as Washington, Jefferson, and Lincoln when they want to illustrate heroism or greatness rather than to great characters within the Church is because they are not acquainted with heroes of their own faith.

Who Was Dock?

Christopher Dock is one of the great spirits of Colonial America. Former Governor Pennypacker of Pennsylvania described him as "The pious schoolmaster on the Skippack." Unfortunately very little is known about the history and character of Dock himself. It is very likely, however, that he came to Montgomery County, Pennsylvania, as a young man somewhere between 1714 and 1718. About the latter year he was found teaching school in a Mennonite school at Skippack. Except for a brief interval of farming he taught school until the day of his death in 1771. Dock's marvelous success as a Christian school teacher might have been lost to future generations had it not been for the effective persuasion of Christopher Sauer, the noted printer at Germantown, who induced Dock to write a treatise on his method of conducting school. Dock was a man of such modesty that he consented to oblige Sauer only on condition that the treatise would not be published until after his death. He considered it sinful to do anything that would bring praise to himself.

What Did He Do?

The written documents Dock left to posterity are two inspiring hymns, a copy of a letter to his living pupils for their edification and instruction, and "A Hundred Christian Rules for Life for Children," and "A Hundred Necessary Rules for Children." These precious educational rules are amazingly up to date. Dock was fully two hundred years ahead of his time as a religious educator. The secret of his success may be summarized in the following statements:

1. He opened and closed every school day with worship, making religion a natural experience and infusing his entire teaching with a warm sincere piety.
2. He loved children in an intense and understanding way and prayed for each child individually. He died on his knees while at prayer in his schoolroom.
3. He won the respect of his pupils, their obedience and hard work by seeking the child's best advantage in body and soul and by encouraging good work by means of rewards, many of which were personally illuminated mottoes or texts, called FRACTUR SCHRIFTEN.

FOR GREATER IMAGINATION

By Mrs. A. W. Geigley, R.N.

I have been glad to notice a few expressions of appreciation for the "extra touches" that have added beauty to the bundles of relief clothing that are being sent out. A few have dared to suggest that the sewing groups should endeavor to make the clothing look less like outmoded hand-me-downs, and more like the clothing worn by our own children. I should like to go a step further and propose that our various buying and selling agencies do something about helping us to produce more attractive garments.

Do materials and patterns have to be unattractive in order to be practical? I know the long standing arguments: Patterns must be conservative to save materials. (Are we more concerned to save materials than we are to save the spirit of a people?) Garments must take up a minimum of shipping space. They must be simple to make. They must not show soil easily!

If there are no simple attractive patterns to meet the requirements, surely there are those capable of designing such! True, a gathered skirt does take up more room than a sack. It is also more attractive, warmer, and therefore, might eliminate the extra petticoat. A black or drab grey garment might not show soil as readily as one of a lighter color, but it gets just as dirty, just as "smelly," and just as lousy, if it is not kept clean, as does one of a more pleasing color.

I wonder too if the wearer of a pretty garment would not make more effort to keep it clean and in a wearable condition. Besides, printed materials (even pretty ones) show soil far less easily than do plain ones; so, if it's a virtue to hide the evidence of dirt, why buy so many drab colors in the first place?

I've wondered if the M.C.C., like the Red Cross, falls heir to "bargain" bolts of materials (good quality) but of such unattractive patterns, that they have remained on the shelves in and out of season, a white elephant on the salesman's hands? Let the buyers look at the bargains with an eye to the finished product on the back of one of the members of his own family. He will find that there are other important points besides durability.

It would not require any more yardage to combine colors—prints and plains—or plains of different shades in the same garment. Instead of cutting double collars from bulky materials, why not cut single ones, and use the material saved for decora-

REPORT ON CIVILIAN PUBLIC SERVICE

Middle District Conference, Pulaski, Iowa

May 27, 1945

By David H. Suderman

This month marks the completion of four years of Civilian Public Service. We are grateful to our Heavenly Father for the guidance and help He has given us. We believe He has blessed this work and we thank Him for it. Also, we are grateful to our government that they see fit to preserve religious liberty and freedom of conscience. And to the leaders of our Mennonite Churches as well as our congregations who have both planned and are supporting the program, we are grateful.

As of April 30, 1945, we had a total of 3,995 men in our Mennonite Camps, 14 per cent of which were non-Mennonite men. Some 59 per cent are in MCC maintained camps; the remaining are in self-maintained projects. We have Mennonite men in our camps from all the Mennonite denominations. At present, we have fifty Mennonite-administered camps and units, which are located in every section of the United States and one outside our United States boundaries.

The largest number of our men are in Soil Conservation Camps. This is probably as we might expect it, since the majority of our men come from the farm directly. Mennonites are known to be good farmers, hence might it not be correct to think that they become spearheads in becoming stewards of the soil? Many of our men will be coming home with a much keener sensitiveness toward the need for soil conservation practices. We have almost as many men in mental hospitals. Just what this may mean for our churches in the future is not clear as yet. Might it be correct to believe that when these men come home, they will bring with them a new vision as to caring for those who are ill, especially those who have become mentally ill?

Special Projects

The present agreement with Selective Service is to hold the number of men in base camps to about 2,200. This then means that each month about as many move into detached service on special projects as are inducted. Selective Service has been quite willing to approve new units as well as enlarge present hospital units. They feel the need is very great in mental hospitals.

Other units too are being approved. The Tiffin unit at Tiffin, Ohio, is the most recent approved unit. Tiffin Institute is a school for epileptics who are people of good scholastic ability. The work will consist in re-habilitating some thirty buildings to begin with, and later supervise the tilling of a six-hundred-acre farm which is operated for the students who come to the institution. Our men will act mostly in the capacity of supervisors on the farm. In connection with this school, we are planning a specialized school of music for the men of the unit. This will, of course, be done after working hours.

The Mississippi Unit located near Gulfport, Mississippi, is just getting underway. This is a unit similar to the Florida Unit in that it too is a health and sanitation improvement unit. The work here is planned directly with the public health authorities and then carried out by our own men.

Other units which have been underway for some months and which are unique are the Lincoln Farm Units. These units are organized around the general idea of a Farm and Community School. The work is similar to that in the base camps except that our men are used more in the capacity of Soil Conservation "agents," i.e., their skills are utilized a bit more.

Educational Program and Religious Life Activities

The camper's time and responsibility is, broadly speaking, divided into two general areas, namely, his responsibility to the government, (responsibility on the job) and his responsibility to himself and to his church (off project time). Both are important, however, the church has special interest in the latter. In each of our camps and units, there is considerable effort made to help the camper grow. Although specific courses could be mentioned, suffice it here to say that we are concerned with the general areas of Bible Study, Mennonite History, Stewardship of the Soil, (soil conservation practices) and special skills which the individual camper may later profitably use such as typewriting etc. Through it all, however, we are trying to re-think the entire philosophy underlying the doctrine of nonresistance as given to us by Jesus Himself and as held by the Mennonite Church. To quite a number of campers, this results in an experience that might well be called a Damascus-road experience. To be sure, not all experience it, but we sincerely hope enough will have caught a bit of the Spirit and Teachings of Jesus which finds expression in a complete philosophy of nonresistance, so that it will make a difference in our churches when these men return.

David H. Suderman is Director of C.P.S. camps and units in the Rocky Mountain Area. His report on Civilian Public Service at the Middle District Conference was appreciated so much that it was recommended for publication in "The Mennonite." The article given here is a condensation of the report given. Mr. Suderman is on leave of absence from Bethel College where he taught music. —Cut courtesy Bethel College.

Visiting Ministers

Sunday Services, as well as mid-week services, are scheduled in all our camps. Various conference ministers come to conduct the services; also staff members as well as other campers take charge. At times we have felt that the spiritual needs of the campers are not met too well. Campers do have personal problems, however this help can best be given only when ministers come to "live" with the men. We are now moving in that direction.

It seems to us that one of the greatest gaps in our program now is that of relating the camper back into his church and the church to the camper. In view of demobilization, this becomes rather important. The camper has faced a good number of problems which have been a crisis for him. For both the church and the camper to be of most help to each other, we need to do more thinking and relating in this area.

The Camper—What Is Happening to Him?

What happens to the camper after two, three, or four years of camp life? What does this group living do to him? What kind of person will he be when he comes home? Not long ago I heard a certain camper put it this way. He said in CPS we shrink to our natural size. By that he meant we live so close together that nothing is hid from each other. Our good qualities are emphasized, but also our weaknesses show up. Although it would be difficult to evaluate the camper's experience in terms of Christian growth, some things might be mentioned which would help you to understand him a bit better.

Being of a minority group, the camper has had to learn to stand alone. He had had to "face the crowd" as it were. This has caused him to be less dependent on others, and has caused him to make his own decisions.

Also, he has had to re-think and re-evaluate his whole view of Christianity as it affects his daily life. At many points, he has been pressed to admit that he is woefully weak, and that there are areas of his life where his Christianity has made little difference.

Furthermore, he has learned to know, understand and respect those of our other Mennonite branches. He has developed a kinship with these men. By living, working, playing and sharing with men from other denominations, he has learned to "re-appreciate" many of the fine emphases that are found in his kindred Mennonite branches. Along with this, he has also gained a new appreciation of emphases in his own denomination.

Also, most campers have received a new appreciation of the early Anabaptist vision, and what our forefathers were willing to sacrifice for freedom of worship according to the dictates of conscience.

Then too, some campers are re-thinking their vocational interests. Through their associations with other campers, through reading and study, some are finding out that their life's work may be in another area after the war.

We also need to mention that we have a small group of campers who find camp life rather difficult and adverse, and grow almost resentful toward the whole idea of conscription and even the CPS program. We also have that small group which is going to "sit it out" for the duration. They, too, have not cared to accept the challenge of CPS. A few also seriously question whether the Church should administer a conscription program. They say the Church is compromising its position and is no longer clear on its lines of separation of Church and State.

We think, however, that the majority of men do accept the challenge of CPS. It is this group that is trying to turn a rather adverse situation into an opportunity. No doubt, it will be this group toward which the churches will look for some of its future leadership.

It is our wish and prayer that it may please our Heavenly Father to continue blessing the efforts of our Mennonite Churches for the cause of Peace in order that His Kingdom may come.

NEEDS AND CONDITIONS IN EUROPE

I. INTRODUCTORY

By M. C. Lehman

(The Mennonite Central Committee has chosen Northwest Europe as one of the areas in which to alleviate the sufferings of war victims. In order that those who are supporting the program of relief work may be familiar with the needs in Europe, M. C. Lehman has prepared a series of articles on the conditions there. He discusses in his articles such problems as population displacement, food, shelter, clothing, disease, economic disturbances, and spiritual deterioration.—M.C.C. Publicity Editor)

For a little more than five years a death-dealing giant has been stalking through most of the habitable portion of our globe. No living human being has remained completely unaffected by him. Millions have directly or indirectly lost their lives because of his visitation. Approximately sixty million living people are displaced from homes today because of him. Many millions more, whose number cannot accurately be calculated, are ill and undernourished because of him. His name is WAR.

A study of a map of Europe will reveal how large a portion of Europe's total area is taken up by the countries more or less seriously devastated by the present war. England, France, Belgium, Holland, Norway, Germany, Poland, Russia, Italy, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Rumania, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Albania, Greece, Latvia, Estonia, Lithuania and Finland include about seven-eighths of Europe. Sweden, Switzerland, Portugal, and Turkey take up nearly one-eighth of Europe, and although neutral, are also definitely affected by the war through controlled economy. Denmark, not conquered but controlled, is seriously affected by Germany's administration, and food and clothing are rigidly rationed. Spain still suffers acutely from its own civil war.

Causes of War

Economic, cultural, religious, and political competitions have been constant disturbing factors producing war in Central Europe. Americans who are accustomed to thinking of the states composing the United States as a politically homogeneous group under a central administration need to remember that in this respect their nation is very unlike Europe. Each of the countries of Europe has an individual and independent history and in most cases an indigenous language expressing a distinct culture of its own.

Economic rivalries intensified by tariffs easily cause jealousies which are intensified by cultural diversities. A jingo press will appeal to national pride or sentiment based on a supposed race superiority. An army as well-equipped as the citizenry of a country can be taxed to support it is maintained, and rival nations go to war with slight provocation.

These and other factors have made Central Europe a perennial source of war. Hermann, Charles the Great, Philip II, Napoleon, Frederick the Great, Wellington, Hindenburg, Franco, and Hitler are names that identify leaders of these conflicts that have produced great changes as well as caused much suffering. In the wake of these monarchs and generals many, many millions have died, suffered, been made homeless, and been subjected to great cruelties and injustices. "Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn."

Our present war, only twenty-two years after a similar though smaller one, comes from this same perennial source of conflict and is a direct result of the last. Indeed, there are yet some thousands of white Russian refugees in northeastern Poland who fled from Russia during the last war and cannot return. Thousands of refugees from Spain were in France when that country was invaded by Germany. These would have been in peril of their lives if they had returned.

Suffering, the Result of War

The present war has reproduced the suffering caused by the previous world war on an immensely vaster and more acutely intense scale. From Liverpool in England to Moscow in Russia and from the North Cape in Norway to the island of Crete, we now have an expanse of territory peopled by more suffering individuals and groups than have ever existed at any one time in the history of the world. Within this vast area and from among the countries mentioned, the following may be noted as those suffering most intensely: Greece, Italy, Poland, France, and Norway.

The miseries of war have fallen heavily on the people of the countries in Central Europe and they will be our special concern in this brief study. Both allied and enemy peoples will be helped by the Mennonite Central Committee as opportunity affords. True to its principle of no discrimination among recipients of relief, the Committee will consider one, and only one, test as to eligibility for relief. That test is the fact of need.

Motives for Relief Service

The motivation for relief service is the spirit of Christ as shown in the parable of the Last Judgment: "And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." . . . "Then shall he answer them, saying, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me." Note also the statement of St. John: "But whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him how dwelleth the love of God in him?" Let us remember likewise the command of Christ: "But I say unto you, love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you." We have also the statement of St. Paul: "Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink."

The relief workers need to be actuated by more than a natural pity for millions of homeless refugees, hundreds of thousands of orphaned children, thousands of widowed mothers, great numbers of war prisoners staring into the world over barbed-wire entanglements with the anguish of uncertainty in their eyes, thousands of maimed soldiers in hospital beds, and numberless emotionally and mentally upset people who have been affected by the strains and devastation of war. They need to serve these with the same love that caused their Lord to call them "my brethren."

Another motivation for service in Holland, Poland, Russia, France, and Germany comes from the reflection on the fact that St. Paul enjoins Christians to remember their special obligation to those of the "household of faith," in addition to doing "good to all men." The duty to help our Mennonite brethren who are war sufferers cannot be sidestepped. The extent and nature of their suffering is as yet uncertain but many of them, especially in Russia, have had to migrate from their homes en masse.

M. C. Lehman, experienced missionary, lecturer, and relief worker, has been directing research work in relief for the M.C.C.

The fact that many of our brethren in Europe have departed far from the faith and practice which characterized the Church during the first century of its history, rather increases than diminishes our obligation for service among and to them. The nature of this service must yet be determined. Methods for procedure cannot be formulated until more detailed and explicit knowledge of postwar conditions and attitudes are available. This much is certain now: we will want to help them with necessary material aid. Many of them will be able and willing to help in a program of general relief. Out of this shared experience there can grow knowledge for future effort on the part of us all to realize and live a more consistent Mennonitism. Via M.C.C. Headquarters, Akron, Pa.

The Flag in the Church

By Gerhard Friesen

Ever since the atmosphere in our nation turned militaristic, there has been a wave of flag display in our churches. I do not know how other denominations have reacted to this upwelling, but in our circles there has been a decided trend toward conformity to public opinion. I believe it had its origin during the First World War. At least, I do not remember having seen any flags in our churches before.

What is back of this conduct of our churches? As far as my observation goes, it was an effort on the part of our people to prove that they were patriotic. The war was against the German nation. And since many of our people have used the German language, the militaristic-minded in our nation looked with suspicion on our people, mistrusting them as to their loyalty to our country. The fact that we do not believe in war made it still worse. Evidently, to protect themselves against this suspicion the churches started to display the national flag in the House of Worship. Whether the church leaders or influential church members had most to do with this, I do not know.

With this introduction let me state this question: What place does the national flag have in a Christian place of worship? If I should go to Mexico, England, Germany, or any other country and join the Christians there in their worship and see their national flag displayed in the House of God, the thought would immediately come: Do they worship something else here than I do? Is this a Mexican religion or an English religion, or whatever the nation might be? Is this state worship as Brother Winfield Fretz described it in The Mennonite of January 30th? It would distract. It would rob me of the feeling of oneness, it would be divisive. The thought would come: Is it Christian, is it in harmony with Christ's words, "that they all may be one"? Would not the displayed flag in the house of worship tend to act like a barrier between Christians of different nations? Would it not indicate that national allegiance is valued above the allegiance to the Divine Lord, above the ecumenical nature of the church? One would be inclined to go away and say, "These people value popularity with their worldly government higher than their relationship to Christ and His commission to His followers."

What would our thoughts be if these Christians were of those who had received the light, that war is wrong and directly opposed to the teachings of Christ? If they would display these emblems, especially in time of war, to make the war-minded believe that they were loyal to, i.e., supporting, or at least not opposing, a leadership that favored such a program, would not the thought of hypocrisy come up in our mind? Would we not be inclined to wonder whether they really believed what they professed to believe? We would hardly be able to prevent the thought that they either lie to these patriots or they are denying their faith. Christians are in the world but not of the world. Their light is not to be hid under a bushel. (That is quite symbolic of an earthly measure of values.)

Another conclusion my observations have led me to make is that those who are most emphatic in showing their patriotism by the use of the flag are often among those whose true patriotism is open to question. True patriotism shows itself in doing that which really furthers the well being of fellowmen and makes for righteous and friendly relations between individuals and nations, and not in flag waving or displaying. If my conduct does not prove my patriotism, the flag never will.

Another observation a Christian would make is that putting good material in flags that should be used in clothes, and paying big money for such emblems when the world is full of need and suffering is neither good Christianity nor true patriotism.

I hope we Christians can rise to a place where we are a clear light of the world and a preserving salt of the earth with a faith comparable to that of the three friends of Daniel who refused to bow to the golden image in the face of sure death. We cannot serve two masters.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

China Missionary Conference

June 6, 1945

(The secretary has gone into detail for the benefit of those who could not be present)

This China missionary conference closely followed the Tri-Annual General Conference Session, held at North Newton, Kansas, in the Memorial Hall of Bethel College. (May 31-June 6, closing on the evening of June 5, 1945)

The China Missionary Conference, with some of the Foreign Mission Board members and the executive members of the Women's Mission Societies present, was held in the basement of the First Mennonite Church of Newton, Kansas, (June 6, 1945) beginning at 9:00 a.m. and closing at 6:00 p.m.

Members Present:

Foreign Mission Board

Dr. P. H. Richert, Secretary; Rev. A. E. Kreider, President; Rev. D. J. Unruh. (These were present part time)

Women's Missionary Society Officers

Mrs. R. A. Goertz, Mrs. A. M. Lohrentz, Mrs. Frieda Regier Entz, and Mrs. D. J. Unruh, wife of a Foreign Mission Board member.

Missionaries Present

Rev. and Mrs. H. J. Brown, Mrs. S. J. Goering, Rev. and Mrs. W. C. Voth, Rev. and Mrs. P. J. Boehr, Rev. and Mrs. Albert L. Jantzen, Rev. and Mrs. Marvin J. Dirks, Rev. and Mrs. Lester Wuethrich, Miss Aganetha Helen Fast, Miss Talitha Neufeld, Miss Jessie Brown and Miss Lois Lohrentz.

The noon meal was served by the ladies of the Mission Society of the First Mennonite Church with Mrs. Frieda Regier Entz as the host of all the guests as mentioned above. For the evening meal Rev. and Mrs. W. C. Voth and Mrs. S. J. Goering were the hosts of all the guests.

The morning session was opened by Rev. H. J. Brown, temporary chairman, by singing, "So nimm denn meine Hande and fuere mich." Devotions were led by Dr. P. H. Richert, Secretary of the Board (substituting for Aganetha Fast, at her request). Basis of Dr. Richert's devotions, Rev. 1:3-6. (Missionaries like Paul also prisoners, barred from their work, but being priests, intercessors, still continue in the work, and do a great work for the Master.) Two sessions of prayers were offered up to the Throne of God in which all of those present took part. Basis of their intercession was: the field in China it workers and Christians; internees, Marie J. Regier and Elizabeth D. Goertz; thanksgiving for the safe return of our six Philippine internees and five children; protection of those of our number at present out—service overseas, as well as for their loved ones at home. Members overseas: S. J. Goering, S. F. Pannabecker, Miss Kuyf, Dr. A. M. Lohrentz. Other fields, phases and workers were included in these prayer requests.

10:10 Election of officers:

Rev. August Ewert, chairman
Miss Aganetha Fast, secretary
Findings Committee:
Rev. H. J. Brown
Mrs. P. J. Boehr
Rev. Marvin Dirks

10:20 Report of missionaries liberated in the Philippines.

Rev. Marvin Dirks—How and when were we interned.

Mrs. Albert Jantzen—Food supplies and Schools

Mrs. Marvin Dirks—Living conditions

Mrs. Lester Wuethrich—Removal from Baguio to Billibid Prison

Rev. Lester Wuethrich—Release

Rev. Albert L. Jantzen—Praise and Thanksgiving. Psalm 37

All testified to God's marvelous protection and care. Report of Sam Goering's work gleaned from letters. The need and suffering very great.

"The Mennonites never had a greater opportunity for service than now."

Time for noon session adjournment.

Mrs. A. M. Lohrentz closed with prayer.

Song: "O mein Jesu, Du bist wert, des man Dich im Staube ehrt."

Intermission: Noon.

I. 1:30 p.m. Opening by chairman, August Ewert.

Song: "If we walk with the Lord"

II. Devotions: mostly prayer, some of it directed prayer. Scripture reading and message, John 15:7-16, Rev. August Ewert. Thoughts: Our close relationship with the Lord. "Ye have not chosen me but I have chosen you." Why us? That we should go and bear fruit. We must accept more open doors. That we aim to create more open doors for our young people to go out under our own General Conference Board in order to preserve funds in our churches that are being spent to send our young people out under other boards.

"If ye abide in Me, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be added unto you." —Mrs. J. P. Boehr Emphasis—Keep your eyes upon Jesus.

1. Prayer emphasis: Seeking the Will of the Lord.

2. Prayer emphasis: Preciousness of the Lord.

3. Prayer emphasis: Open doors for young people. Wisdom given to Mission Boards to find open doors.

Close of prayer hour: Song, "Guide Me, O Thou Great Jehovah"

III. Report of Rev. S. F. Pannabecker's work. Letter entrusted to Mrs. A. M. Lohrentz by Mrs. Sylvia Pannabecker. Special request from S. F. Pannabecker for conference to set down specific principles as to student loans and supports.

There was much discussion back and forth as to the implication involved by helping too much or too little: setting up precedence for future work.

Questions under consideration:

What kind of help should be given students in free China?

Students paying back their school expenses.

Mission Board reimbursing individuals of other missions for help given students.

Sending money direct to students upon request considered risky procedure. With Mr. Pannabecker and others on the spot it can be regulated and controlled.

Does Mr. S. F. Pannabecker wish us to corroborate what we had decided at our last conference? Will the Chinese ask to have losses sustained through the war, made up by Board?

Moved: That the missionaries will not send in any losses sustained due to war —H. J. Brown, Marvin Dirks. Passed.

Upon decision the other reports were called for and the Findings Committee was advised to set up principles governing the administration of funds in China.

IV. Relationship of foreign workers and funds to church work after liberation. W. C. Voth.

1. Consider the Old Field

2. Consider the New Field

The beginning pioneer work, difficult. Later: striking leaders and laymen.

Thoughts:

Missionaries should live in houses more on the level of Chinese.

"Must not be too aggressive." —Chinese leader.

"Need more missionaries" —Chinese leader.

Missionaries more as advisors, co-workers.

Funds: Need funds and lots of them. Great need!

Churches should all be patterned more after Chinese country churches.

Hospitals will need more funds, the Chinese cannot supply them.

Bible schools, Specialized work, Missionary homes —repairing, rebuilding of public mission buildings.

There are funds available and much funds, we need the wisdom to tap them.

V. Possibility of supporting Ezra Steiner's work in Tibet with workers and funds. P. J. Boehr.

Main emphasis: Reaching out into farther fields.

VI. Missionary Personnel for the future—Mrs. W. C. Voth.

Variety types of missionaries.

1. Preaching one type—in the kitchen another type.

2. Missionary make a great flourish back home, is in actuality just ordinary.

3. Older missionaries—set, suppress younger ones.

4. Missionaries overemphasizing one phase of work, education, evangelism, or medical.

5. Well-balanced missionary—the most satisfactory.

Conclusion: Be prepared to face the effects of war. War will give China experts, we must be ready for them. Be ready with Christian approach.

Rev. A. E. Kreider, (newly elected President of our Board, Dr. P. P. Wedel having resigned due to ill health) had to leave for the train at about 5:00 p.m. and parting made a special request that at our next General Conference, preceding the conference, all the foreign missionaries of all fields should meet for conference and after that each field could meet separately.

Moved: "Following the suggestion made by Rev. Kreider, president of our Foreign Mission Board, we recommend that there be a meeting of all foreign missionaries immediately preceding our next General Conference at Berne, Indiana, with separate meetings for the groups of the different mission fields. The chairman of our Foreign Mission Board shall call such a meeting." Boehr—Voth. (Passed)

Moved: That the chairman of our China Missionary gathering shall call the next China missionary meetings. (Passed) Boehr—Jantzen.

While the Findings Committee had its separate meeting the China Conference had its closing devotions. The chairman in a few words expressed praise and thanksgiving to God for this privilege of meeting, not we, but with us were our returned internees. This gives us much cause for praise. By a standing vote we expressed our gratitude to the First Mennonite Church; its pastor, Rev. D. J. Unruh; the ladies who prepared the two meals; to Mrs. Frieda Regier Entz as hostess for the noon meal; Mrs. Goering and Rev. and Mrs. Voth for the evening meal.

Song 438 was sung, "Praise Him, Praise Him, Jesus our Blessed Redeemer"

Parting Song: "Blest Be the Tie that Binds"

Benediction by Rev. D. J. Unruh.

Report of Findings Committee

Rev. H. J. Brown, Mrs. P. J. Boehr, Rev. Marvin J. Dirks

1. We need to pray that the doors may be open for our young people and that they may be encouraged to go out under our Foreign Mission Board rather than under other agencies. (Second: Mrs. A. M. Lohrentz)

2. We see the great need of prayer for China. May we not only pray ourselves, but win others to pray for China as a whole, the Chinese people, the Christians and their spiritual leaders. (Second: Mrs. P. J. Boehr)

3. In reply to Rev. S. F. Pannabecker's inquiry we state:

a. That he is to use his judgment as to the helping of students in free China to attend "sound schools," and that the Foreign Mission Board and the China Missionary Conference favor the sending of more funds to him in China as soon as he reports new needs. (Second: Rev. Jantzen)

b. That we ask him to exercise great care in assuming responsibility for back debts of students, who may have been helped by missionaries under other mission boards. (Second: Mrs. W. C. Voth)

4. We encourage well-trained Christian professional workers to enter China following their profession, and at the same time by word and life be a testimony for Christ and be a means in bringing people to the Saviour. They might even eventually get into full time missionary work. (Second: Mrs. Marvin Dirks)

5. We are resolved to pray for Miss Talitha Neufeld, that God's will be done in regards to her hopes of future work in Europe. (Second: Mr. P. J. Boehr)

Resolutions

We herewith express our appreciation and thanks to the Foreign Mission Board for attending our sessions of the China Missionary Conference.

To the Mission Society representatives present in our meetings.

To the officers of the First Mennonite Church for the use of the building.

To the ladies of the local church, who have rendered us such splendid service during the day of our meetings.

To Mrs. Regier Entz, Mrs. Mathilda Voth and Mrs. Pauline Goering for their great hospitality in being our host during our conference.

Second: Aganetha Fast.

Neglected Duties:

1. Concerning a schedule writing to church papers and the "News and Notes."

2. Appreciation of the love and service that Mrs. R. A. Goerz has given to the cause of missions, particularly as related to our China Mission in the gathering of funds for the Girls' Boarding School, the bicycles for the Biblewomen, and otherwise encouraging the work in China, etc., sponsored by the Women's Mission Association.

The missionaries decided on a minute book and printing of sufficient copies to be sent to each Board member, missionary and Women's Mission Association. For this the assembled members took up a collection, 10 cents each, which brought the sum of $2.95.

Aganetha Fast, Secretary

India Scholarship Fund

"The harvest indeed is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that he send forth laborers into the harvest."

The task of training Indian leaders is a responsible and sometimes an arduous one. The missionaries find their first great difficulty in the lack of higher educational institutions within our own Mission. It is a necessity, not a choice, for our youth to go far from their homes for high school and any specialized training to fit them for evangelistic, educational or medical work. This means that the missionaries also need continually to challenge the promising young people to consecrate themselves and remain true to Jesus Christ, to answer the need of the Church and be loyal to their own Mennonite Mission. In the name of all of the missionaries I entreat all interested friends to pray earnestly for India. In this time of encouraging growth and expansion may many loyal Indian coworkers join the ranks to help relieve the hardship that comes from such a paucity of missionary personnel.

Financial help is needed at this time for Indian students. The reasons are many and valid. 1. Opportunities for earning while learning, through manual work (jobs) is much less prevalent in India than in America. 2. Tuition fees and board are often much higher than our students and their families can afford; 3. War-time prices are abnormal and out of all proportion to income from day labor or professional work.

The INDIA SCHOLARSHIP FUND is a Mission sanctioned and controlled plan for helping worthy, selected students. It is in most cases a loan fund and has been founded carefully and prayerfully by those who know the needs and the conditions of the land. At present there is great need to have a substantial fund on hand with which to work. The amount has been set at $650 for the year 1945, this with the approval of the Mission board. At least ten students are already receiving some help at present.

A typical case is that of Theresa Alfred. Because she was deserted by her mother when she was not yet of school age, Theresa grew to young girlhood with no other home than the Funk Memorial Boarding at Janjgir. Here she completed the middle school course, attended the Bible Training school for a year, next the high school course in a large Methodist institution far from our own Mission. She taught one year, grade five with thirty four pupils enrolled, in the Funk Memorial Girls School, and then went on to college because she had dedicated her life to become a doctor. Word has come that she passed her first year's course in the Women's Union Christian College in Madras, South India, in April of this year. Late in July she will begin her pre-medical studies and if God grants her health, and she applies herself well to the difficult studies, and keeps very close to her Saviour so that He can guard her character and calling, Theresa may in the future be a lady surgeon and doctor in one of our own hospitals, one willing and trained to help her needy Indian sisters. Who will help her, and others like her? Sunday School classes, individuals, C.E.'s, women's or girls' missionary societies, anyone and everyone who desires to share in this may send the contribution to the treasurer, Dr. P. A. Penner 722 Main Street, Newton, Kansas. Be sure to designate it clearly for the INDIA SCHOLARSHIP FUND. Thank you.

Discovering and Training Leaders

By S. T. Moyer

At this stage of our work in India in establishing the Church of Jesus Christ so that it takes root in India, a large emphasis must be given to training leaders. The three major tasks of Jesus here on earth were (a) winning followers, (b) healing the sick, (c) training picked followers so as to become apostles.

With my keen interest in "(a)" above, there has come over me a deepseated conviction as the imperative necessity with reference to "(c)" above. I am not willing that any possible boy miss the chance to be trained,—if not to give full time Christian service, then to become a valiant helper as a layman, who located in our Indian Christian communities, rooted there economically, gives of his talents and earnings to further the work of Christ through the church. I can never forget the large part laymen play in the churches of America. For example, Souderton, Zion Mennonite Church, would never have come to its present size and position, were it not for the valiant work of laymen during the past three and four decades.

The Part of the Home

Nevertheless, I am even more interested in guiding and helping the best boy of our Christian homes to enter the ministry of the Word as pastors and evangelists. Recently I was in Jagdeeshpur, and had opportunity to talk freely with Janjgir boys studying there. All except one were studying in the grades under the High School. One must not expect too much of such young boys. I asked each boy a number of questions. Of all the boys, only two replied that they wished to become pastors or preachers.

What kind of homes do you suppose they came from? That to me was the big point. They came from homes where family devotions had been observed for decades, and from our best Christian homes. There were the homes of Sukhie Bhai (now deceased) and Garib Das. The other homes did not produce boys who wished to give full time Christian service. Such other homes, may and do so, at times. It is also true that not all our Janjgir homes were represented by boys at present studying at Jagdeeshpur. Yet only the Lader and the Garib homes have boys in school now who definitely plan on full time Christian service. In both homes the Christian spirit and family prayers have been outstanding.

The letter copied below was written by the oldest son of Sukhai Bhai, the son we now know as Philip Lader. It was written as part of requirements preparatory to entering Theological College for further training, and was uncoached by me. Please study this spontaneous testimony from the standpoint of the part the father-son relationship played in the formation of the son's vocation, as well as the prayer life of that relationship. How many times does Philip speak with affection and appreciation of "my father?"

National and other factors demand that we man our work with national leaders as soon as possible. But, me thinks, nothing will give us those possible leaders, in the first instance, except godly homes, with fathers and mothers who pray not only for their children, but with them.

THE TESTIMONY OF PHILIP LADER

My parents were non-Christian illiterate farmers. When I was six years of age, they were baptised. Father got much opposition because of his conversion. This came from relatives and other Hindoos. From that time on my destiny was changed. My father reached his heavenly home fourteen years ago. Mother is still with us. They taught me about Jesus Christ from my early childhood. Father taught me to pray.

He daily led us in devotions twice a day. Early morning and at night before going to bed we had family prayers. From that time on I felt that Jesus Christ was Somebody, Who is our friend and helper. I finished my primary education in the home school at Janjgir. Then I was sent to Dhamtari for my middle and high school by my father. There I joined the C.E. Society, and the Sunday School. My father always reminded me through his letters that I should read the Bible and pray daily. One time I left my private devotions for a long time. Then I fell sick, and became very ill. Medicine could not help me. Then I remembered the words of my father, and began to pray in my heart. I felt that Christ touched me, and from then on I began to recover. When I returned home from Christmas, for the holidays, I took baptism.

I was much interested in religious matters. I used to help the Dhamtari Gospel Team wherever they went out for village preaching. I used to sit in the annual all-India Sunday School examinations, and receive many certificates and a Bible. I was chosen Jr. S. S. teacher, and afterwards, Intermediate, and taught for four years regularly. After finishing middle school, my father opened up his plan for my future. He said he wished to send me on to Theological College after I would finish high school. He asked me many questions, but I did not give entirely satisfactory answers. When I finished second year high school my father became very ill. Somehow or other without his earnings I finished that year, and returned home. I stayed home and nursed my father to the end of his earthly life.

My father's life greatly influenced my life. He used to give his testimony to his Hindoo relatives, and Government people, even in his illness. I saw joy in his face, though he was in great pain. When he knew that his time to go had come, he requested me to carry on home devotions, and serve the Lord. At his last moment, he rejoiced, and said, "Glory to God" "Yeshu ki jai." Then he slept. By this experience my faith increased and became firm in Christ.

After some time the Janjgir Bible School was opened and was in its beginnings. An inner call came for his service. I offered myself as a student. After finishing my three year training successfully, I became a teacher in Mission Primary School. Not only that, but also my church called me to assist my pastor in his absence, so I did both services. Then a call came to me to be a teacher in the Bible School in 1936. Since then I have taught full time.

In the year 1944 I was given ordination as a minister of the gospel by the Mennonite Conference. I am married and have seven children. My family life is joyful. I have experienced Christ's guidance, help, and blessings in my teaching and family life. I know that He has washed my sins by His precious blood, and He gives me strength to get victory over temptations. I feel my need for further training, and knowledge for His service. For a long time I prayed for opportunity and now I believe this opportunity is His answer to my prayer. I have given Him myself completely to make me a worthy servant of His.

BLESSED FAREWELL SERVICES FOR TWO MISSIONARIES

Last Sunday, June 17, Brother and Sister H. A. Toevs and children were given a farewell by their home church, the Mennonite Bible Mission in Chicago. It was my privilege to be present and take part in the program in two services morning and evening. The little church was almost filled, and quite a number of outside friends had come. Brother and Sister John T. Neufeld, who have charge of this mission, must be given credit for the fine program. They are doing good work and have already made many friends.

Rev. and Mrs. Toevs plan to leave from Chicago today, June 19, and from Philadelphia, June 25. Brother Rediger is to see them off there. They are the second couple we sent to Congo, Africa, together with the Congo Inland Mission Board, and some more are to follow soon, perhaps this year yet.

Brother Rediger, the Secretary-Treasurer of the CIM Board, is planning to make an inspection trip to this mission field in the near future. The mission is growing fast and new problems arise, which make such a trip necessary. May we remember him in our prayers as well as the missionaries that go out.

Christian Community Recreation

By Herbert E. Wiebe

A Paper Read at General Conference

Because of the many different opinions regarding the importance, necessity and wholesomeness of recreational activities, it has become almost dangerous to discuss such a topic, yet we feel that now and in the coming years this matter of recreation and entertainment in the various communities will become increasingly important.

We are definitely facing a new era in this respect, which, let us say, has, to some extent, been brought on by the war. Our youth will be different tomorrow; the demands for activity and entertainment are already increasing and with the return of our young men and women from the services, this problem will become even more important. These people will be restless, and just the old routine of community activities will not satisfy them. They will have to readjust themselves to their friends, community life, and customs. They will have experienced new things, and many of these experiences will never fit into our Mennonite philosophy. It is our job to cope with these problems, and we must be prepared by offering them something that will be a good substitute and that will occupy their minds with something worthwhile and wholesome.

I do not wish to be misunderstood that a community recreational program is only for the benefit of those who return from the service, even though that will be a problem. In order to organize a recreational program that is fundamentally worthwhile, we must work with those young people who are at home now. It is this group that should promote the activities that will help others to become re-adjusted. If we are interested in having a recreational program that is Christ-centered, it should be sponsored by our church organizations and not left entirely up to the public schools which is done in so many communities.

Most certainly we must admit that we have grossly neglected the matter of offering organized activity that is interesting and truly Christian in nature. Hundreds of boys and girls go to other places than the church or church controlled centers for their entertainment, and there is probably some reason for it. They drift to the theatres almost habitually, and consider it a necessity to attend them regularly each week. They drive recklessly in their parent's car, around and around city blocks for want of something to do. The country youth drives to town and falls in line with all these things. Some of these young people visit road houses, sit in restaurants, filling stations, indulge in unwholesome stories, and spend money promiscuously. Is this a problem, or should we not be concerned about it at all? One thing is absolutely certain, that if we as a church are not willing to sacrifice time and a great deal of money to provide recreational centers that are Christ-centered, and really offer some activity that will compete with what young people find elsewhere we cannot hope to capture and hold our youth.

Herbert E. Wiebe, has had years of experience as high school teacher and last year served as Dean of Men and Director of Student Labor and Recreation at Bethel College. He is now Business Manager at Bethel.

Maybe at this point we should define, just as a matter of form, what we mean by the term recreation. It is often said that recreation is a form of refreshment, diversion, or a less serious and more passive type of playful activity. John Finley points out that recreation is a term so broad as to include, not only play, as we so often think, but also such things as music, drama, arts and crafts, or any creative activity for the enrichment of life.

Naturally we ask, why sponsor a recreational program through the churches and church schools, and what is it that we can offer to fill the need that will be interesting, effective, draw the young people, and really cover what the term recreation implies, and still stay within the bounds of our Mennonite principles. First of all, before we can answer this question, it may be necessary for many of us to get some different notions or ideas regarding the importance and usefulness of recreation. We can no longer get by with the old idea which has so often been expressed, that boys can get all the exercise and recreation they need at the end of the fork handle, and the girls with a dish towel, nor can we say that recreation is a waste of time. Young people must play and have some activity. This is natural and we cannot suppress this desire.

It is true that some people find recreation in their daily routine of work. Their vocation is so interesting and absorbing that they find a great source of satisfaction in it. For example, Thomas A. Edison gave himself so completely to creative work in his laboratory that he felt no need for recreation outside his working hours.

But not everyone's work is so creative and interesting, and wherever this is true, routine work may become very tiresome. It may be either mental or physical. A banker, for example, who works with papers, figures, and people all day, need to do something else during his leisure time for relaxation. The farmer boy who works alone day after day, again desires contact with people and wants some social life. We cannot expect farm youth to remain in the country evenings and week-ends, neither can we expect youth in our cities to remain at home when they know where to find the social life they so eagerly want.

Let us just briefly enumerate some of the reasons why recreation is so important. First of all, it contributes to the human happiness. Happiness was recognized by our forefathers as a fundamental objective of life. Happiness can seldom be obtained by doing only one thing, but it can be attained by a balance between recreation, work, rest, love, and worship. In the second place, recreation affords an outlet for expression which is an important form of relaxation and release. Third, physical recreational activities also afford an excellent opportunity to develop bodily health, and we should stress the organized physical exercises for bodily development much more than we have thought necessary. In the fourth place, recreation is also important in helping to maintain a proper form of mental health. Shaeffer, in his book on Psychology of Adjustment, says that there are more people suffering from mental diseases than from all other diseases combined. If this was true before the war, certainly this problem will be much greater after the war. The government already realizes what effect this war has upon the mental balance of those in the service. It is establishing recreational centers wherever possible, where these people may go for entertainment to take their minds off of the terrible and strenuous daily routine of service. Entertainment tours are scheduled to the front lines for recreational purposes. It has also been necessary to develop a definite program of organized recreation and entertainment in the various C.P.S. camps. In camp life it is as important to play, read, worship, and have an outlet for the various skills through organized arts and crafts and hobbies, as any other part of the daily routine.

Camp Wood Retreat, August 11-16

The Western District Young People's Retreat will again be held at Camp Wood, near Elmdale, Kansas, this year from August 11-16, Saturday to Thursday. Registration blanks and programs will be sent out in the near future. —H. E. Miller, Director.

If it has been proved here that this form of recreation and entertainment has a tendency to ease the mind and develop mental healthiness, then the churches should have a definite responsibility here also. Fifth, the recreational program should stress opportunities for character development by offering opportunities for social life, sportsmanship, develop respect for rules and regulations, respect for fair play and offer an experience and training for leadership. Then, sixth, we would say that recreation is also important in promoting community solidarity. Many forces of modern life tend to separate people into distinct and often hostile groups, based upon many things such as—economic status, social position, race, creed, nationality, and educational or cultural background. Recreation should be a common ground where these differences may be forgotten in the joy of participation and achievement.

What then shall we suggest? The prescription is a difficult one to fill. Recreation takes so many different forms that one hardly knows what is suitable. To some people it means fishing, sailing, camping, skating, photography, folk games, horseback riding, athletic contests, and as a whole mostly the physical activity. To others again it means reading, taking part in plays, going to entertainments and programs, or just visiting with others. Still others get practically all of their recreation from some hobby that requires some skill and creativeness. Some people object to checkers, others do not; some object to social games, others again believe that they have great recreational values; some object to basketball, others would never give it up; some object to noises so frequently present at games and contests, others say that is an expression of joy and an outlet of emotions.

So you see that we have two schools of thought, and it will be necessary for each community to study its own situation and decide accordingly. One thing is true, however, if there is considerable difference in the degree of liberalness, the problem will not be solved by any means. Mennonite Christian communities should agree somehow upon the fundamental forms of recreational activities that should be tolerated, and what activities should not be permitted.

Recreation in a sense, is really a form of attitude, and it must be well planned to fit into the spirit of the community life and into our Christian philosophy. Such a program must be directed by well-trained leaders. Our churches in our Mennonite communities should consider it a responsibility to direct the recreational as well as the religious life of our young people. It may require the building of a community building for such a purpose if the church building and basement is not suitable for some of the recreational activities. Certainly money spent for such a building would return dividends manifold if it could be used to develop and direct the lives of our youth.

I hope that the day is not too far distant when Bethel College and other church-related colleges can serve as community recreational centers. These institutions are generally quite well equipped to carry on such a program. They have libraries, good reading rooms, a large selection of good reading material, suitable gymnastic equipment, equipment for arts and crafts, hobbies, and quite generally well-trained leaders. It would be well to plan for a regular weekly program for the young people from the surrounding communities. This would afford a good opportunity too for Sunday School leagues and other points of contact between people from the various churches and communities. Above all, the youth would be brought into a more wholesome environment than the city streets, theatres, and many other places could offer.

Since I believe that youth is the biggest asset we have, we should do all we can to promote opportunities for their Christian education, health, and social development. Let us remember that Jesus increased in wisdom, in stature, and in favor with God and man, and when we also strive to maintain a proper balance of these—then only can we live an abundant life.

By Emma Ruth, Reedley, California

JULY 7.—A Promise Given. Read Matt. 28:16-20. We use, "I am with you" as a common expression, meaning nothing more than that we agree with the other person in what he is saying or doing. Judgment from the way we speak, the way we act, that is as much significance as we attach to the words of Jesus when he said to his disciples, "Lo, I am with you alway." Would that have been sufficient to send them out to face persecution and death, just to know their Master approved? No. Nor would it have been sufficient to send missionaries to the ends of the earth to bear all manner of hardships and trials for His sake throughout the centuries since then. As they, so we today may realize the significance of His "Lo, I am with you alway," in our own lives, if we will.

JULY 8.—What Manner of Presence is Promised? Read John 15:1-5. Jesus said, "We will make our abode with him" (John 14:23). This Presence is not one with or without which we can get along, just as we choose. We cannot be on the vine one day and off the next and expect to bear fruit. "As a branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine, no more can ye." It must be a continuous relationship. It must be vital enough to result in fruit-bearing or we do not remain on the vine. Fruit is the mark of His presence, "For without Me ye can do nothing."

JULY 9.—Power-Witnessing. Read Acts 1:1-5,8. Ye shall receive power—Ye shall be witnesses. The essence of the Holy Spirit is power. His manifestation is witnessing. Have we experienced either of these marks of His presence? As a Mennonite church we have gone to the extreme in expecting our lives to witness for Christ instead of our lips. In the early church both were present. Do we not need to search for the cause that hinders the Spirit in manifesting Himself in witnessing by word? Perhaps it is historical. Our forefathers were compelled to refrain from speaking. Were they choosing the easy path instead of letting the Spirit have full control and suffering the consequences? Did they choose to save life rather than lose it for Christ's sake and the Gospel's? We cannot answer for them. We must answer for ourselves.

JULY 10.—A Sound from Heaven. Read Acts 2:1-4. The Holy Spirit is sometimes compared to the air about us, which we inhale unconsciously and noiselessly. That is true. But most of the time our breathing is so shallow it scarcely serves to keep us alive spiritually. However, the Spirit came first as a rushing mighty wind and a fire. He became audible to the human ear and visible to the human eye, or shall we say the human ear and eye became sensitive to His presence. Sometimes it is a desperate need that brings us into an awareness of His presence, sometimes a step of faith in the darkness. The important thing is that we come to a realization that it is more than merely an influence, this mighty Power that is at our disposal.

JULY 11.—Ye Shall Receive the Gift. Read Acts 2:37-41. "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins," was the ringing challenge Peter threw out on that first Pentecost day, with the promise that the gift of the Holy Spirit would follow. Perhaps the greatest tragedy is that the modern world has nothing to repent of, much less the church member. The standard is whatever you can get by with and not get caught or be disgraced. We must not fall too far below the level of the standard of the society in which we move. Jesus said, "He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me . . . and I will love him and manifest myself to him." John 14:21. Is it a wonder that we know little of this great Gift? He is the Divine response to obedience.

JULY 12.—Spiritual Boldness. Read Acts 4:13-20. "When they saw the boldness of Peter and John . . . they marvelled." You say we have no need of spiritual boldness today. We have nothing to fear if we speak in Jesus name. There is a fear that is more deadening to faith than the fear of those who may kill the body—fear of those who eat at the same table with us, fear of those who work by our side, fear of those whom we call our best friends. We fear their ridicule, their accusation of hypocrisy or sanctimoniousness. But He, who gave Peter boldness to speak in the presence of an angry Sanhedrin, can also fill our hearts beyond restraint if our union with Him is vital and unhindered, and the time comes when “we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard,” even as Peter and John.

JULY 13.—Power, Love, and a Sound Mind. Read II Tim. 1:7-14. Who does not enjoy meeting a person with a combination of these qualities. Some of our higher institutions of learning seek to develop individuals along these lines in so-called “Personality Courses.” But to the Christian they come as the natural expression of the Spirit that dwells within, with a power to integrate the personality that surpasses the efforts of the best psychologists, as the natural rose surpasses the artificial one in beauty, color, and fragrance. All of the aims and ambitions fall into one pattern, “Christ-likeness.” “Every branch that beareth fruit He purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit.” John 15:2. Inconsistencies may appear, but sooner or later they will be eliminated and there is complete harmony.

JULY 14.—The Spiritual Stimulant. Read Romans 8:5-13. A large per cent of the human race is addicted to the use of a stimulant of one kind or another to “whip up” their natural faculties. God has provided a stimulant—a quickener of our mortal bodies (vs. 11) in His Spirit that dwelleth in us. We have no need of any other. Any other must necessarily act as an interference. Jesus said, He shall teach you all things and shall bring all things to your remembrance; He shall guide you into all truth; He will show you things to come.

“Holy Spirit, Truth divine,
Dawn upon this soul of mine;
Word of God, and inward Light,
Wake my spirit, clear my sight.

Holy Spirit, Love divine,
Glow within this heart of mine;
Kindle every high desire;
Perish self in Thy pure fire.”

PONDERABLES

We should be content with what we have—not what we are.

It takes two to make a quarrel but only one to end it.

A diamond is a piece of coal that stuck to its job.

tive as well as useful pockets? If double collars are a necessity, why not have one piece in a contrasting color to show as a piping? It takes imagination and planning—Yes! But why not? Time? Surely it would take more time. But the end result in satisfaction to the people who cut, stitch, pack and the people who wear the garments, would justify the extra time and effort required.

I recall a huge bolt of “bargain” material (beautiful quality linen) that lay on the shelves of a Red Cross cutting room for years. The pattern was a wide stripe in tan and white. Dozens of pairs of pajamas had been made from the stuff. Pajamas that gave the wearer a choice between looking like a zebra or an escaped convict. When someone had the imagination to combine the material with white or a plain tan the result was something that could have passed for a very modern pair of slacks. Striped tops, trimmed with white or tan, with plain bottoms trimmed with stripes, or the other way about, the effect was equally pleasing. Moreover, it gave the spirits of the workers a lift to feel that they were producing a garment that would be received with pleasure, and not with distaste. Would you like to wear one of the garments you are making, or would you put it on one of your own children with a thrill of pleasure? It is a good question to answer.

In my service as community nurse, I saw many people coming to clinics in need of clothing. Red Cross garments were available. For the most part the clothing was well made, warm and “practical,” but utterly unattractive. Stripes were too large, or the material had been so cut as to give a bizarre effect upon the wearer. Prints were too big, and plaids too pronounced, or the colors were too drab. Patterns were old fashioned and the results ill fitting. Children compelled to wear the clothes looked odd, “felt funny,” and were made conspicuous. Embarrassed by the obviousness of their acceptance of charity, the clothes only added to their burden of problems.

I remember well one young widowed mother, compelled to accept aid for her children, asking, “Why must charity clothes always be so out-standing, so ugly?” Why, indeed! I ask you?

CORRECTION OF RESOLUTION NUMBER 78

Somehow a mistake crept into resolution number 78 of the last session of conference as given in last week's issue. The sentence reading “We believe that this means that we cannot bear arms personally nor directly aid those who do so, and that, as consequence we accept service under the military arm... etc.” should read thus: “We believe that this means that we cannot bear arms personally nor directly aid those who do so, and that, as a consequence, we cannot accept service under the military arm of the government, whether it be combatant or non-combatant, which ultimately causes us to be responsible for the destruction of the life, health, and property of our fellow men."

Copies of A STATEMENT of the POSITION of the GENERAL CONFERENCE of the MENNONITE CHURCH of NORTH AMERICA On Peace, War, Military Service, and Patriotism as approved by the General Conference, Souderton, Pennsylvania, August 17-22, 1941, may be secured from the Mennonite Publication Office, 722 Main, Newton, Kansas.

AN URGENT APPEAL

The financial support of the Civilian Public Service program by our Mennonite people has been very gratifying, generous and adequate. Now, however, the MCC-CPS camp population has risen to about 4200, of which almost 2200 are in base camps. Because of this situation expenditures have for some months exceeded contributions so that there has been a serious decline in our CPS Reserve Fund.

While gradual demobilization is expected to get under way by August, it now looks likely that induction will exceed demobilization totals for some months to come and that the CPS population for the coming six-month period will continue to be around 4200 or more. There is, therefore, strong possibility that the rate of expenditures above present contributions will continue during the next six months.

At its last meeting on June 9 the MCC Executive Committee seriously faced this situation and decided that instead of raising the monthly quota per church member for the next six-month period we ask our churches to make an extra month's cash contribution during the July-August-September three-month quarter. It was felt that this would be a more acceptable arrangement to our churches than a raise in the monthly quota. What the MCC needs, therefore, is a generous contribution equivalent to about an extra fifty cents per church member during the next three months.

At the last session of the General Conference we adopted the following resolution (No. 75): "We believe that we should all sacrifice in this needy time and would recommend that all who are sharing in the increasing profits or wages as a result of the war contribute accordingly to the peace cause and to the various other activities of the General Conference." We hope that our churches will respond to the above special appeal in the spirit of this resolution but we also hope they will continue to support this Christian work and witness of CPS in the same spirit of grateful appreciation and stewardship.

IN MEMORIAM

Mrs. Henry Riesen, nee Katherina Funk, was born in Linnea, South Russia, May 18, 1865, and emigrated with her parents to Hillsboro, Kansas. She and her husband who preceded her in death in 1934, moved from their farm to Hillsboro in 1920. Mrs. Riesen was a member of the Bruderthal Church. The call to the beyond came June 4, 1945. Three children, Mrs. Walter Ewy, Stafford; Mrs. Earl L. Frey, Montezuma; and A. F. Riesen, Hillsboro, Kansas, survive her.

Clarence Wesley Schmidt, son of Daniel B. and Anna Schmidt, was born June 14, 1930, near Hillsboro, Kansas, and died May 23, 1945. It had been his sincere desire to take catechetical instruction the coming year, be baptized and received into the Alexanderwohl Church, which he faithfully attended with his parents. But when seriously injured medical attention proved of no avail.

George Loewen was born November 6, 1863, Furs-tenwerder, South Russia. He migrated to Marion County, Kansas in 1876. He remained single and became a very prosperous farmer. Baptized in 1886 he joined the Alexanderwohl Church. He passed away June 6, 1945. He is mourned by two sisters, Mrs. Agatha Schmidt and Mrs. Sara G. Pankratz, and one brother, Henry Loewen of the Bethesda Home for the Aged, Goessel, Kansas.

RELIEF

Memorial Service Conducted

The Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, home church of Marie Fast, held on June 17 a service in memory of her life and sacrifice. P. C. Hiebert, Chairman of the M.C.C., was present to represent and express the condolences of the organization which she served. Sister Fast, as announced before, was lost at sea on May 2 when the ship on which she was traveling while on a relief mission struck a mine off the coast of Italy. It is certain that she did not survive the incident. A memorial service will be held at Akron sometime in the near future. A folder telling the story of her life and service will also be prepared.

To Visit Relief Projects

Orie O. Miller left Akron, June 12, to visit the Mennonite relief projects in Northwest Europe, Middle East, and India. He will be absent from Akron Headquarters for the summer and is planning to return the latter part of September. Brother Miller will confer with the directors of the various relief projects as to the present work and possible expansion in light of new opportunities for relief service. The prayers of God's children for protection and guidance are desired.

New Relief Appointments

At the recent meeting of the M.C.C. Executive Committee, June 9, 1945, Elsie Bechtel, Canton, Ohio, was appointed for relief service in France. Mrs. Henry Buller, now serving at the Akron office, was also appointed for relief service in connection with the center to be opened in Switzerland.

Second Relief Worker Enter France

Vernon Toews is the second Mennonite worker permitted to leave England and enter France to carry on relief work. Henry Buller met him in Paris, June 9, and it is expected that Brother Toews will assist in establishing and expanding the relief program in the northeastern part of France.

Church Christmas Package Project

The M.C.C. has begun a plan whereby Mennonite and Brethren in Christ churches will have an opportunity to pack and send parcels to Christian families in relief areas in Europe. The M.C.C. program will be carried out jointly with the Church Committee on Overseas Relief and Reconstruction. The C.C.O.R.R. is arranging the shipping space to send thousands of such parcels into all liberated countries to which access can be gained by October. There the parcels will be distributed within the Protestant church at Christmas time as tokens of Christian remembrance and fellowship. The parcels, similar in size to overseas cartons, will be packed with concentrated and non-perishable foods. To guide families and organizations in packing their parcels, a list of foods, as approved by the WPB (War Production Board), will be released at the time that plans are announced.

Clothing Center Opened in Manitoba

Mrs. M. C. Lehman recently assisted the Mennonite churches in the vicinity of Winnipeg, Manitoba, to open a clothing center which will serve as a receiving center for clothing contributions from central and western Canada. Margaret Froese will supervise the work of the center, under the direction of C. F. Klassen. Many of the brethren in this area experienced the hardships of Russia, following World War I, and received relief from Canadian and American Mennonites, and they are eager to participate in the present relief program. Sister Lehman reports that approximately three tons of clothing were unpacked between May 15 and 30.

FOOD FOR RELIEF PROGRAM IN CANADIAN CHURCHES

In response to the interest shown by the Mennonite Churches of Canada toward providing relief food for war stricken European countries, the Mennonite Central Committee is sponsoring a "Food for Relief" program in Canada similar to that in the United States. Contacts with Canadian government officials have been made and approval has been granted for our proposed program in Canada along the following lines.

1. Home processed meats and fats. This will be the most needed food for relief feeding to be contributed by the Canadian churches. Meat should be canned or otherwise processed so as to keep at least six months without refrigeration. Unlimited quantities can be used in our relief feeding program.

2. Concentrated sweet fruits as jams, butters, and preserves; also honey, maple syrup, and similar sweets. Extra sugar ration points for these products are not available, but gifts made from personal sugar ration allotments are encouraged.

3. Ripe beans and peas. These should represent extra production especially for relief.

4. Strained fruits and vegetables for infant feeding. Recipes for these foods will be published.

5. Canned fruits and vegetables. These are acceptable though not to be most strongly emphasized.

6. Emphasis should be on the production of extra foods for relief purposes rather than on contribution of foods that would otherwise be produced for the market. Our program should supplement, rather than compete with, other programs providing food for foreign countries through commercial market channels.

7. Any question regarding this program or other products to be contributed by the churches of Canada should be directed to C. J. Rempel, Kitchener, Ontario, or your M.C.C. representative. Further information and instructions will be sent out from time to time.

Regional Directors Meet

The four regional directors of Mennonite camps meet quarterly with the C.P.S. staff from the Akron Office and other leaders in the program to share concerns and keep unified on concerns and policies of administration. The most recent meeting of this group was held in Chicago, June 6 to 8. On their agenda were the following concerns: demobilization and its implications for C.P.S.; problems growing out of the expanding side camps program, an evaluation of the recent conscription institutes held in the camps, serving the various groups in the camps while administering the larger group.

Dairy Units in Oregon and Washington

William Snyder, in charge of the Dairy Service Division at Akron, recently returned from the West Coast where he completed negotiations for the opening of a 20-man C.P.S. unit for dairy farm service in Tillamook County, Oregon. On this trip Brother Snyder also arranged for the transfer of the dairy unit in King County, Washington, from the Brethren Service Committee to the M.C.C. This was a small unit of eleven men, nine of which were Mennonites, and was recently approved by Selective Service to be expanded to twenty men. Assignees to serve in these units will be drawn principally from the western camps.

C.P.S. Staff Appointments

Appointments to fill staff vacancies and new positions in Mennonite C.P.S. were made recently as follows:

Elbert Koontz—Pastoral minister in California
J. M. Regier—Pastoral minister in Colorado
Charles Hostetter—Pastoral minister in eastern area
A. Warkentin—Pastoral minister in mid-western area
Alvin Reimer—Music teacher
Katherine Shank—Nurse-matron at Camino, Calif.
Mary E. Hostetter—Nurse-matron at Belton, Mont.
George L. Classen—Unit leader at Staunton, Virginia
Merrill M. Mishler—Acting bus. manager at Terry, Montana
Warren N. Leatherman—Unit leader at Howard, Rhode Island
David D. Schrag—Business manager at Gulfport, Mississippi
Dwight Weldy—Unit leader at Tiffin, Ohio
Willard Gaeddert—Asst. director at Missoula, Mont.
John Siemens—Asst. and educational director, Hill City, South Dakota

Have You Been Asking Questions Like These?

How were mental patients treated before there were mental hospitals? How were mental patients cared for? What is psychiatry? What are my chances for "going crazy"? Is hospital work dangerous? What treatments are given for mental disorders? Has C.P.S. made any contribution to the care of the mentally ill? What possibilities exist for the future?

The work being done by Civilian Public Service men in mental hospitals is described in the Anniversary Review, published by members of C.P.S. Unit No. 93, Harrisburg State Hospital, Harrisburg, Pa. The emphasis of this large 64-page booklet center around the care of mental patients. Many interesting photographs vividly illustrate various aspects of mental hospital work. Writers include not only C.P.S. men, but also the hospital superintendent, a psychiatrist, a medical doctor, a registered nurse, and other specially qualified individuals. It is professional and accurate, yet it is written in simple language that can be easily understood. Above all, the Christian point of view predominates throughout. The descriptions given apply primarily to this hospital and its activity, but are probably quite typical of other hospitals as well. All who have an interest in C.P.S. men in mental hospital work will find this booklet very interesting and informative.

Share this announcement with your friends, for they also want to learn more about the work that C.P.S. men are doing in mental hospitals. Why not order the Anniversary Review in lots of ten or more and thus get them at the reduced rate? Remember this booklet is designed to answer your questions about the work which you have had a part in making possible.

The price of the Anniversary Review is $1.00 post-paid for single copies, or 85c each in lots of ten or more.

—Bethel Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: Rev. C. L. Graber, who has worked with the personnel department of the M.C.C. was the main speaker at the memorial service held for Marie K. Fast on June 17. He also brought the message at the morning service.

—The young people of the two Mennonite churches at Beatrice, Nebraska, had a get-together after the union service on the evening of June 17 to welcome into the community Rev. Jacob Friesen, who will serve as an interne in the First Church this summer.

—Rev. and Mrs. Elbert Koontz of the Second Church, Beatrice, will this summer spend six weeks at North Fork, California, ministering to the men in the camp there and to other units in side camps.

—Bulletin, First Church, Nappanee, Indiana: "This evening the pastor and wife will tell of their experiences at the conference. Pictures and printed materials of the conference will be on display. We will also sing some of the songs sung at conference. You will be interested to hear the story of how the hymn 'Be Still, My Soul' came to mean so much to the conference." The Music Guild of Nappanee, assisted by the First Church Choir, gave a sacred musicale in the First Church on May 27.

—Bethel Church, Mountain Lake, had both oral and written reports of conference for its members who had not attended.

—Flatland Church, Quakertown, Pa., "Rev. A. J. Neuschwander in his Sunday message brought us a report on the work and activity of the General Conference. This was gladly heard for it reveals us a growing united church." —Corr.

—Miss Eva Pauls and Miss Helen E. Nickel, on furlough from India, visited most of the Canadian churches in Manitoba and Saskatchewan during the last week of April and all of May. They went directly to the General Conference after completing their itinerary. Miss Pauls is attending summer school at Bethel College at present. Miss Nickel is helping out in Bethel Hospital at Mountain Lake, Minnesota. She received her Master's Degree in Religious Education from Northern Baptist Seminary in April.

—Rev. J. E. Kaufman, pastor of the Inman Mennonite Church, Inman, Kansas, recently officiated at baptismal and communion services held by the congregation near Perryton, Texas. Rev. D. J. Ediger supplied the pulpit during his absence.

—Hebrom Church, Buhler, Kansas: Arnold Nickel, a Bethel College student brought us a message on "The Peace that Passeth Understanding" on May 27. Our pastor, Rev. van der Smissen was visiting C.P.S. camps in Colorado at that time. Rev. Russell L. Mast was our visiting minister on June 3. His subject was "I will give thee the valley of Achor (the valley of trouble) for a door of hope," Hosea 2:15. Children's Day was observed with a program by the children and the men's chorus in the morning and a dinner at noon. In the afternoon the children played while the grownups listened to the General Conference reports given by the delegates. Elmer Ediger from the M.C.C., Akron, Pa., occupied the pulpit Sunday morning, June 17.

—Negro employment in industry was higher in 1944 than ever before.

—P. H. Richert wrote on June 15, "Good news! On June 12 the following message arrived from Dr. Bauman, Bombay, India: 'All well!' Thank the Lord. It has been a remarkably fast trip, perhaps, partly by air. On June 17, the farewell service for Brother and Sister H. A. Toews was held in the Chicago mission. They are bound for Africa."

—Zion Church, Elbing, Kansas: Dr. George Klassén, who served as dentist to the Mennonites in the Chaco for some time, is to speak and show slides on July 22. On July 1 the C.E. is to give a program in the Grace Hill Church.

—An article in Fortune (May, 1945) points out the terrible need in Europe since the Nazi collapse, "Liberated Europe," the article says, "is fed, clothed, and sheltered worse even than it was under German occupation." Pointing out that extensive relief will be necessary, the writer continues, "The job must be done either on grounds of Christian duty or on grounds of egotistic self-preservation; but it must be done. And the only country that can do the job is America." Certainly every Christian will "on grounds of Christian duty" and privilege contribute to his utmost for the starving and almost naked victims of the cruellest war in history. From Christian Doctrine a supplement to the Gospel Herald.

—White families in twenty different towns in Vermont will be hosts this summer to one hundred and twenty-five Negro children from New York City who will spend a two weeks' vacation there. This is a continuation of an experiment successfully begun last summer, the purpose of which is "to increase friendliness between the white and colored races and break down the barriers of racial prejudice." —Ibid

—Walter H. Hohmann, professor of music and teacher of organ and piano at Bethel College, left for Canada recently. He is to be in the Altona area June 22-30; for the first several days of July he is to be at the Canadian Conference which is to be held at Rosthern; after this he is to spend one week at the young people's retreat to be held there; following this he is to head a choir directors' institute for a few days; next he goes to the Swift Current retreat, July 15 to 22; he is to visit churches for a week after the retreat. He plans to come home to North Newton by August 1.

SAVED FROM STARVATION BY M. C. C. RELIEF by J. P. Klassen

As we look into the world today, a world torn by strife and war, we see a great many people suffering—people whose homes have been destroyed, whose countries are devastated—people who have lost everything they held dear, and who now are facing life with nothing to hope for, with nothing to believe in—people in full despair, millions, and millions of them.

Yet, they are human beings, just like all of us, and as we think of them, we cannot help but recall our own situation in which we were a generation ago, when, following the first World War, we who then lived in the Old Country, also found ourselves surrounded by famine, starvation, deadly plagues, civil war, revolution, and anarchy.

Through Suffering to Serving and Loving

Certainly, those were dark and gloomy times, which, we would much rather forget, were it not for the fact that those most tragic experiences in the end became a God-given blessing for us, which has cleared our minds, has lifted up our souls, and has given us a new outlook upon life, that is far greater and better than we ever had before. Yes, we are learning by suffering, and it is only as we suffer with each other and for each other, that we also learn to serve and love one another.

No, we will not forget those hard experiences, because into the darkness a light was shining, and as we saw the light and followed it, we received help and found salvation.

Mice, Horse-meat and Dog-meat for Food

It was in spring, 1922. We lived in Rosental, near Chortitza, Ukraine, where I was teaching in what was then our old Central School and Teachers Seminary. War, revolution, and anarchy already had passed over us. Now, we thought, perhaps things would straighten out again and life become more tolerable.

But that springtime a very strange, dry wind was bowing from the south, and instead of bringing us the much desired rain, black clouds of dust were covering the sky. The earth began to crack, the grass dried up, and nothing could grow. We had honey-bees—they died first; we had rabbits—there was nothing with which to feed them; we had to butcher our last little pig. Farmers who still possessed an old horse or a cow did the same, and so there was no milk. Food became scarcer every day. People began to eat horse meat. Women and children went out into the fields with buckets of water, looking for mouseholes, into which they poured water to drive out the mice, and then took them home for a meal. I heard one man ask his neighbor for his old dog, because he had seven children, and they were very hungry. People ate

Takes Bullets of War and Melts Them into a "Thank You" for M.C.C. Relief

J. P. Klassen who made the above "thank you" medal relates, "I walked out to the nearest battlefield, picked up a handful of bullets, took them home, melted them, poured the metal into a mould, and shaped it into a small medal. And on one side I showed a boat steaming over the ocean and bringing food to a hungry world, and on the other side an American Relief worker handing out bread to starving children." Inscriptions on medal to left read: "Thanks to the brethren on the other side of the ocean. We were hungry and you gave us to eat." On the opposite side of the medal are the words Chortitza and Rosental, the names of two Mennonite communities in Russia which were helped by M.C.C. relief in 1922.

anything they could find, and when there wasn't much to be found, starvation actually set in.

When Children Grow Weak from Starvation

It was then that we began to worry, and look out for help, especially those with small children. While grown ups still could exist on almost any kind of substitute food, it was heartbreaking to see little children suffer and grow weaker every day.

But we prayed to God, and our cries were heard. From far over the seas, from Canada and the United States our relatives, our friends, and our people kept writing us comforting letters, encouraging us to hold out, and definitely assuring us that help would be sent. Those letters filled our hearts with hope, and gave us new strength to endure. We knew that our brethren were thinking of us, and that they were working hard to bring us help.

A Day Never to be Forgotten

And will we ever forget the day when the first messenger actually arrived and brought us greetings from the churches in America, or the time when young American relief workers set up their kitchens in our villages and actually began to feed our children!

Didn't we see them hand out food to hungry mothers and distribute clothing among the poor? And that wasn't all. Soon hundreds of individual packages began to arrive, packages filled with wholesome, nourishing food, or with warm clothing for the coming winter. They reached every home, and there wasn't a single person in our locality who had not experienced and felt the divine touch of the helping hand from over the seas. And no distinction was made—Mennonite, Jew, or Russian—all shared equally in the help of Christian people.

A Vision of "The Way"

Yes, after years of war and destruction, after so much suffering and despair, we saw religion at work, and that gave us the vision that some day, some where, and somehow life would be shaped after the pattern of Jesus, that Christian love and good will would prevail, and men would serve each other and bear one another's burdens. Then suffering would become an opportunity for service, hatred would be changed into good will and mutual understanding, and life receive a new meaning. That was new light for a dark world, and we wanted more of it.

Is it any wonder, then, that our response was to express gratitude, to tell our brethren over the seas how much their sympathy and help did mean to us, and that if given a chance, we would wish to continue in

THAT OUR WITNESSING FOR CHRIST should consist more in verbal testimony is a point made here and there by members of our conference. This suggestion seems to assume that there is something within many of us that should be expressed but isn't. Perhaps, this is true to quite an extent, but we wonder whether this is the sore point of the problem. We would ask, "Can anyone keep concealed from others what he really is?" We are what we are in God's sight, our own, and others. We are always some kind of a person, and the outer behaviour is rooted in the inner condition. We cannot hide what we are. "A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid." Yes, some are not set on a hill, but does not Jesus imply here that he who has His spirit will deem it the most natural thing to let his light shine? Being Christlike and witnessing of Him cannot be separated. The look in a person's eyes tells you whether he is occupied with his own importance and welfare or yours. Some looks hardly grant recognition, others notice you as a being and stop there, and others see you and look into you to find what your heartfelt wants and needs are. Words in a conversation can be a mask used to hide what the individual feels uneasy about, or they can flatter and invite flattery, or they can be so honest and humble that one comes to reality in ten seconds flat. We witness more than we sometimes think we do. The quantity may become greatly puffed up, but the quality of witnessing can never rise higher than the condition within the heart. Let that condition be great love and there will be a love in eyes and words that will win. If we are not up to par in our witnessing, may it not be due to an inner condition that lacks vitality?

SAN FRANCISCO is acclaimed a success or a failure, or a mixture of both, depending upon the viewpoint held. The thought of failure needs correction. Dr. D. Elton Trueblood says, "When objectors point out that some particular dire eventuality might not be prevented by anything in the charter, the answer given (by men most responsible for the document) is that, if there is a will to war on the part of the great powers, neither this nor any other document will avoid war. All that a system can do is to facilitate peace when a will to peace exists. The will to peace comes in other ways, partly by an alteration of men's hearts." Calamity howlers have not been absent from San Francisco. When a difficult problem was under discussion one paper screamed with its headline "Soviet Union and Western Powers At Breaking Point!" The falsity of the headline could be discovered from the article which followed, "but few readers read their papers that carefully." Over-optimism needs to be corrected by the painful fact that the great powers have not knelt in contrition and confessed their own sins and repented of them. How then can we expect fruits worthy of repentance? The ideals of San Francisco are inspiring, but can and will they be backed up by people, a great many of whom hesitate to confess their own sinfulness? The Christian Church needs to hold high the ideals of cooperation for mutual welfare, but it also needs to bring conviction in regard to the self-love that blocks the practical attainment of those ideals.

THE YOUTH PROGRAM of the General Conference is undergoing a vigorous overhauling at the hands of the new executive committee of the Young People's Union. This indication of active leadership is important. It is rather natural for young people to leave leadership to those who are older. Yet somewhere maturing young people have to enter that leadership and give to those who are older some of the fresh insight and enthusiasm that comes uniquely to those who are young in years or to those who keep young in life. The young people need a specific, well-planned program that is interestingly and intelligently presented. A sample of the pulsating and powerful idealism of youth is to be found in the youth supplement attached to this issue. Daring for the right and worthwhile is not a matter belonging solely to Daniel's days. Life is not an empty dream for Christian youth; it is beautiful reality.

THE HISTORY AND PRINCIPLES OF MENNONITE RELIEF WORK—AN INTRODUCTION by M.C. Lehman is a sixty-seven-page booklet that has just been published by the Mennonite Central Committee. Although the booklet is helpfully designed for those who want to do relief work, it is also "Intended just as much for those Christians who for purposes of help for their own spiritual life desire to familiarize themselves with the history and principles of this phase of the various activities of the Mennonite Church." Church study groups can use this for a course of study.

HOME MISSIONS

A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

Bethel Mission Church, Winnipeg, Man.

We are glad to report that due to the support received from various sources the Bethel Mission Church of Winnipeg has been able to acquire a church building of its own. This is particularly appreciated because for the last eight years this group has been using rented quarters which were in a very poor state of repairs and were inadequate to meet the needs of the people. The church that has been bought is located at the corner of Westminster and Furby streets and can be readily reached by either street car or bus service. The building has an auditorium that will accommodate two hundred people and also has a full basement that can be used for various smaller meetings. We wish to thank all those who have contributed thus far in order to make this purchase possible.

Attendance Is Growing

We are also grateful to be able to say that the work of the Bethel Mission Church has been growing and that we now have between sixty and ninety persons attending the morning and evening services every Sunday. At present we are also conducting a catechism class of twenty-six young people who have expressed their desire to be united to the church by baptism.

Young People Discuss Vital Topics

Every Monday evening the young people of the church have their own service, with a group of between thirty and thirty-five young people attending. Problems pertaining to the interest of Christian young people are discussed at these meetings. Some of the topics have been: "How To Overcome Temptation," "How To Live without Fear," "How To Win Men and Women to Christ," "What Does It Mean To Be a Mennonite?" The young people have also recently started a youth publication called, The Bethel Beacon. In this way they hope to reach out to other Mennonite young people in the province of Manitoba.

Have Bible Study and Active Choir

On Wednesday nights we have prayer meeting and Bible study. We have been discussing the Mennonite Confession of faith during these meetings.

On Thursday nights we have catechism instruction, and on Friday the choir meets for singing practice. The choir takes part in both morning and evening services on Sunday and has between twenty and twenty-five voices.

To Repair Church Building

With reference to the church we have purchased it may be said that since the building is thirty years old that certain repair work will be necessary before we enter the church. It is estimated that this work will amount to about $2,000. If some friends or organizations could help us in paying for such repairs it would be greatly appreciated. Since most of our congregation is made up of young people who do not have very high incomes we cannot expect too much financial support from them. We are, however, very glad for the opportunity of serving them while they are in the city.

Contributions that have come in thus far for the support of our work and the purchase of the church may be divided as follows:

From members of the Bethel Mission Church	$1134.00
From churches in Saskatchewan	587.73
From Churches in Manitoba	528.00
From churches in British Columbia	118.00
From churches in Ontario	41.00
From friends in Saskatchewan and Manitoba	578.54
Total	$2987.27

Any further contributions might be sent either to Rev. P. A. Penner, Newton, marked "Bethel Church Fund, Winnipeg," or to Dr. J. B. Derksen, 733 Garfield St., Winnipeg, Manitoba.

This fine article is submitted by Rev. J. J. Friesen, 864 Downing Street, Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Mennonites Testify at Hearings on Post-War Military Policy

Over a year ago the Mennonite Central Committee appointed a delegation of six brethren to represent the Committee in Washington in connection with prospective legislation on permanent peacetime conscription, and gave the delegation a statement of position on conscription and alternative service to guide it in any necessary government contacts. The delegation as appointed was composed of P. C. Hiebert, H. A. Fast, Amos Horst, Eli Bontrager, Jesse Hoover and Harold Bender, chairman.

The first work of the delegation was to send Harold Bender to testify at the hearings of the House Select Committee on Post-War Military Policy. On Monday afternoon June 11, 1945, he spoke at the hearings for ten minutes, reading a statement approved by the delegation at a meeting in Chicago on June 9, 1945. Albert Gaeddert accompanied him. Ten Mennonites in Washington and vicinity were present at the hearing, including J. N. Weaver of the NSBRO Office, and Dorsa Mishler, assistant director of the Beltsville C. P. S. Unit.

The purpose of the Mennonite testimony at the hearing was to give witness of conviction as to the evils of conscription as they are seen in the light of our Biblical peace principles, our four hundred twenty years of experience in endeavoring to maintain our heritage of nonresistant faith in a largely militarized world, and our concern for freedom of conscience and religion in the world.

The statement given at the hearing will appear in the published record of the hearings and is hereby released for general distribution to those who may be interested.

A STATEMENT OF POSITION ON PERMANENT PEACETIME CONSCRIPTION AND THE CHRISTIAN CONSCIENCE AGAINST WAR

Presented to the House Select Committee on Post-War Military Policy at its Public Hearing on June 11, 1945.

Mr. Chairman, Members of the Committee, I appreciate very much the privilege of presenting this statement on behalf of the Mennonite Central Committee with the constituent Mennonite and Brethren in Christ bodies which it represents.

The Mennonite Churches of the United States, numbering in all bodies over 125,000 baptized members, and established in this country since 1683, represent a body of Christians originating in Reformation times in Switzerland and Holland. From the very beginning of its history this church has rejected participation in war and violence in any form, holding this to be contrary to the spirit and teachings of Christ and His Gospel, and has endeavored to follow the way of peace and love, even at the cost of much suffering and sacrifice.

Our Mennonite forefathers came to America from various European countries throughout a period of two hundred years seeking a refuge from persecution and freedom from conscription. Here they found a land where liberty of conscience, separation of church and state, and democratic institutions aided the practice of their way of life as peace-loving nonresistant Christians, and enabled them to make their distinctive contribution to the nation. They found complete freedom from old-world militarism in a country which, since the time they first arrived, has never had peacetime conscription in any form except for the pre-war year 1940-41, which has never had a military caste, and in which the ideal of constructive achievement in peace has always been cherished above that of military prowess. They, and we their children, have deeply appreciated and cherished these ideals and liberties which have continued as a precious heritage in the land which we love, and which have made possible a wider witness to the Christian Gospel and the practice of a purer Christianity.

Our trust that the Congress of the United States intends to maintain such liberties gives us confidence to appeal at this time that in any future legislative enactments for the defense of the nation no policy be adopted which will endanger these great traditions or imperil these principles.

In this appeal we speak from experience. The Mennonite Church was founded in an age where armies were professional and mercenary and served the private or dynastic interests of autocratic rulers or oligarchies, or even intolerant religious groups. In four hundred and twenty years of history as a peace church since that time, living in Switzerland, France, Holland, Prussia, Germany, Austria, Poland, and Russia, as well as in the United States and Canada, we have seen rulers and dynasties and military systems come and go. We have experienced in our communities the rise of brutal Prussian militarism, the crushing Napoleonic conquest, the harsh Czaristic autocracy, and the Communist terror. We saw the rise of universal military conscription in a Europe which has reaped a fearful harvest of war, perverted nationalism, dictatorship, totalitarianism, and anti-Christian ideologies. For four hundred years we have struggled to maintain the ideals of the Christ and His way of peace and love against the encroachments of these monstrous forces and movements. Out of our bitter experience, which has included the ravages of repeated wars, the burdens of militarized economics, and the miseries of forced migrations, we have come to know the power of the military idea once it is given the encouragement of universal peacetime conscription. We have seen those of our own faith who have remained behind in militarized Europe suffer great spiritual risk and loss. We therefore feel we must speak now, for we fear greatly not for America but for all mankind, if the greatest (and one of the last) nations of the world with a record of genuine moral and spiritual idealism and devotion to peace and the arts of peace, should commit itself to what in our conviction is a policy leading to militarism.

Apart from the grave danger to the future of world civilization arising from American adoption of a policy of permanent peacetime conscription, we see the following specific dangers to the spiritual welfare of our country:

1. That conscription will give a powerful forward thrust to the growth of the power of the state over the individual and his life and thought, and place a weapon of untold power into the hands of possible unscrupulous elements who might later secure control of the machinery of the state.
2. That this growing encroachment of the state fostered by universal conscription will make it difficult and finally impossible for conscientious individuals and groups to live and teach in America the way of life which their conscience and faith in God requires.
3. That the practice of requiring immature youth to take a year's military training and conditioning for war before being morally and spiritually prepared for intelligent choices on the basis of conscience, will be particularly dangerous to the maintenance of this freedom. The net result of a year of training would, we fear, be a conditioning to docile submission to state control and a decay of independent conscience.

Having observed thus in history the difficulty of preserving the basic and essential freedoms of conscience and religion in the midst of growing military programs, and having suffered in our own experience the bitter fruits of militarism, and being convinced that even in the affairs of nations the way of love and peace as taught by Christ is the best way, we feel deeply moved, Mr. Chairman, to give our earnest witness against the adoption of a policy of permanent peacetime conscription. We speak not because we believe that religious bodies should seek to dictate state policy, particularly not in defense matters, but because we fear that the losses to the spiritual ideals and liberties of our nation might be irreparable.—Respectfully submitted, Harold Bender, Assistant Secretary, The Mennonite Central Committee.

that spirit and build future lives with them upon new foundations.

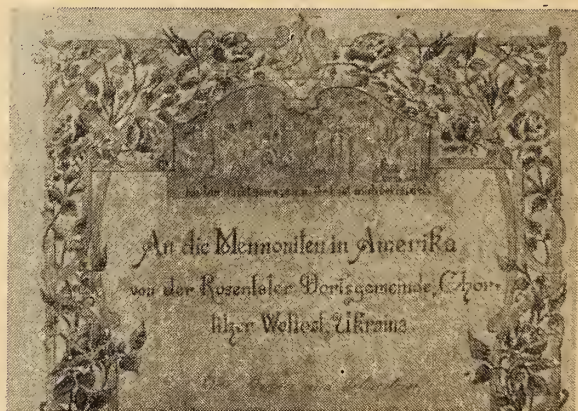

It was then that our groups at Rosental wrote a letter of thanks, in the form of a beautiful manuscript, signed by all members of that community, and sent it through the American representative to our people in America.

Bullets melted into a "Thank you"

But manuscripts and papers are perishable, ink does fade away, and so I thought something more lasting and durable should be given to our brethren. And I walked out to the nearest battlefield, picked up a handful of bullets took them home, melted them, poured the metal into a mould, and shaped it into a small medal. And on the one side I showed a boat steaming over the ocean, and bringing food to a hungry world, and on the other side an American Relief Worker handing out bread to starving children.

"We were hungry, and you gave us to eat, we were naked, and you gave us clothes."

Today some of us are here in this country, living among those who helped us a generation ago. Our boys are serving with your boys in the same camps or hospitals. Together we are preparing ourselves for greater service in the future, when Christian people all over the world again will have a chance to live and practice religion . . . They shall beat their swords into plowshares—and bullets will be turned into symbols of Christian love.

"I was naked, and you gave me clothes."
To all Menmonites in America.
From the congregation in Rosental, Chortitzer Colony, Ukraine, Russia.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

After years of rich and overflowing blessings we now find ourselves in the midst of great misery and want, so that in spite of all our efforts and hard work we are not able to secure for ourselves the necessary clothing; neither is there any hope for betterment of this our situation in the future.

And so your gift which is a flowing out of genuine Christian love has released in us the deepest feelings of gratitude, esteem, and love—but also painful melancholy. You have sent us a very rich gift of clothes of all kinds. For this we thank you from the very bottom of our hearts.

In a time when unending suffering and unheard of afflictions have come over us, you in far away lands have very humbly and graciously thought of us with the best intention to put new courage and fresh hope into our despairing hearts.

Only genuine love to God and to your own brethren and sisters could incite you to perform such noble work. And we too are determined to render rich fruits of love for God and our fellowmen. But deep sorrow fills our hearts, as we realize our own inability to express adequately our gratitude to you. However, we know that every good deed carries with it its own reward.

Christ says in His sermon about the last judgment: Whatever you have done to one of these my least brethren, you have done to me.

Dear Brethren and Sisters, accept these few words from us, as a sincere expression of our feelings, and as a genuine greeting from your brethren and sisters in Christ.

NEEDS AND CONDITIONS IN EUROPE

II. UPROOTED PEOPLE

By M. C. Lehman

The International Labor Office, Montreal, and the Inter-Allied Committee on Post-War Requirements have, after much research, come to the conclusion that there were, at the beginning of 1944, about thirty million displaced people in Europe. This is about four and one-half times the population of New York City or about ten times the population of the state of Wisconsin.

Sir John Hope Simpson, the English expert on the problem of refugees, classifies refugees under the following heads: those dislocated by the impact of modern war; those who are the product of ideological policies; and those moved because of manpower requirements. This is a convenient classification based on factors and causes producing various classes of refugees. We use this classification.

Dislocated by the Impact of Modern War

War fugitives are people who bolt before the sudden invasion of their country by a foreign power, as when the French populace of northern France fled southward before the oncoming German army, or like the stampede of the Poles before the fall of Warsaw. I recall being in Budapest and seeing thousands of Polish civilians arriving there by foot and on every conceivable kind of vehicle. All were cold, hungry, and bedraggled.

In modern warfare the sense of futility and desperation accompanying such a movement is all the greater because artillery bombardment of a town by an invisible foe will likely begin at the same instant as mass bombing from the air and this makes death almost certain for anyone remaining longer than necessary to follow an instantaneous, mad stampede from the town. At such times the keeping together of family groups or the choosing of a destination become impossible. The one thought is "getting away from"

and not "going to." Such sudden mass movements resemble the stampede of cattle before an advancing prairie fire. Note the following instance:

"That was a night of horror. The sad reckoning: 117 dead, among them fifty Protestants. The temple (local term for Protestant church), restored in 1940 after the damage sustained in 1939, was miraculously preserved between a residence, the post office, and the city hall, all of them completely destroyed. Nine bombs fell on the immediate neighborhood of the manse and Pastor Roulet, hidden in his garden with five members and friends, was just slightly wounded in the legs and head, whereas three persons by his side were killed. Pastor Robert, his wife, and their children were saved. The surviving parishoners of Sochaux and Montbéliard have been evacuated, as both towns are practically in ruins."

Such fugitives from Poland before the fall of Warsaw in September, 1939, are now dispersed to twenty-nine different countries as far apart as India and the United States. Similar experiences could be cited from what occurred in France, Belgium, and Holland in 1940.

Evacuees are people moved by armies or governments from areas of probable military operations or for political or economic reasons. This is usually an organized movement to a definite destination but frequently means great hardship by loss of property and adaptation to new climatic and social or economic conditions. Cases in point are the removal of French, Belgian, and Dutch populations from Atlantic coastal areas by Germany, and the evacuation of Jews from Berlin to western Poland. The latter were frequently awakened about two o'clock in the morning and told to be prepared to accompany police to a railway station in two hours and relinquish all property except thirty marks and a suitcase full of clothing. Many of these died because of exposure and extremely hard labor.

Another group in this class are people who are sometimes voluntarily but more frequently involuntarily transferred by capturing armies in order to bring together people of the same cultures. Such was the removal of Slovaks and Czechs from Czechoslovakia by the Germans when they took over that country. These had to leave their homes and take up forced residence in another environment to leave behind a population of solid German culture adjacent to Germany. The shuffling of German-Polish and Slavic-Polish population between eastern and western Poland is another case in point. Some governments conceive the transferring of population groups en masse somewhat in the same way as a gardener does the transplanting of cabbage or tomato plants. The tragedy in terms of human suffering is terrible.

Millions of prisoners of war languish in prisons under peculiarly hard circumstances. The Geneva Convention requires that food, shelter, and clothing arrangements for prisoners of war be as good as those of the soldiers of the capturing country. Limitations in food, fuel, and shelter in countries confining war prisoners, however, frequently make the lot of prisoners of war extremely difficult. Warring nations naturally strive to produce economic conditions in enemy nations which make normal living conditions impossible. No nation will treat its captured soldiers better than its own civilian population or better than its soldiers. If its civilian population starves or freezes, its captured soldiers do likewise.

The Product of Ideological Policies

Refugees are usually civilians who leave their country to escape the persecution which becomes inevitable in their own country because they are a part of a political group on which a militarily successful opposing party will wreak vengeance. Such are the several thousand White Russians who have been unable to return to Russia since the defeat of the Czarist regime. The thousands of Spaniards who are now in impoverished France for fear of the Franco government if they should return, are in a similar situation.

Some such people are forcibly deported by governments when they are found to be politically incompatible with the remainder of the population. Such were the Estonians, Latvians, and Lithuanians, deported when the Germans took over the Baltic countries.

Moved Because of Manpower Requirements

Prolonged warfare forces belligerents to all sorts of expedients to maintain agriculture and industry at a level of activity necessary for successful war. As more manpower is drained from civil life to the army, this problem becomes acute. Such was the case in Germany.

In order to bolster production for civil and military activity considerable numbers of civilians taken from German-occupied territory were used for work in Germany. I saw hundreds of Danish girls housed in hotels in Germany who had been brought from Copenhagen to work in German factories. In 1941 Poles frequently told me in Warsaw that the wage earners of families had been taken to Germany to work.

The Plight of Displaced People

The plight of these thirty millions of displaced people is pitiable in the extreme. Many will never see their homes again for they have been completely destroyed. The governments of which they were once citizens may in some cases never be reconstituted. They will be people without a country.

In many cases their home governments, even if re-established, will not want them to return. New economic and labor conditions would make them a glut on the market. They will be regarded as intruders where they live. They will be restricted in traveling because they cannot, as stateless people, receive passports or visas except with considerable difficulty.

If a considerable number of people break under the tension of keen commercial competition in our own highly industrialized centers and become temporarily mentally and emotionally unbalanced, what must be the effect on a displaced person who has lost his family, home, position, property, and citizenship and is regarded as an intruder in a strange environment? In America such people receive the healing Services of a mental institution, and in a considerable number of cases are restored to mental health. Institutions to help such frustrated people among displaced groups will be insufficient or lacking altogether. Relief workers among these people should be able, by some rudimentary knowledge of psychotherapy and a cheerful Christian disposition, to help such persons. Via M. C. C. Headquarters, Akron, Pa.

G C SMOKE JUMPERS

Ready to land is this Forest Service Smoke Jumper suspended beneath the 28 foot canopy of this Irvin parachute. Notice the flexed knees. The jumper is exercising them in order to take out any tenseness so that he can go into a good roll on landing. The roll takes much of the shock out of the eighteen-foot per second descent.

Smoke Jumpers

The Civilian Public Service Smoke Jumpers' Unit grew from sixty members in 1944 to one hundred twenty men in 1945. The men represented twenty-nine different states and eighty colleges and universities. Coming from forty different occupations and as many and varied social backgrounds they constituted a most interesting group of men varying in ages from nineteen to thirty-six. Eleven per cent were married and four men had children. On their arrival at this unit their time of service in C.P.S. ranged from three months to three years.

During the 1944 fire season we were called out on 87 fires. Of these—69 were fires jumped on and directly attacked by Smoke Jumpers. On 8 of the fires men were jumped as re-enforcements to ground crews that were already fighting the fires. The largest number of men jumped on one fire was 29. All told, 234 men were jumped on 77 fires. The Smoke Jumpers also fought nine ground fires which they reached by truck and on foot.

This is our story. A green recruit becomes a valuable parachuting fire-fighter in a month. The following pages tell how it is done. With the hottest fire season since 1911 predicted for next summer you may be sure that we will be busier than ever before. You may see many articles about Smoke Jumpers then, but remember, it's always hard, dirty work, hot and grimy; not as glamorous as it appears on the surface.

Smoke Jumper Training

A good deal of comprehensive training is required to bring about the metamorphosis of a neophyte smoke jumper which transforms him into a well-trained, conditioned and seasoned aerial forest fire fighter. If one has such aspirations however, the ideal place to get them carried out is at the Forest Service Nine Mile camp at Huson, Montana—the boot camp for Forest Service Smoke Jumpers. This camp is reputed to have innovated training methods which were copied by all organized professional parachutists, including the Army's modern contemporary unit.

After a brief orientation tour around the camp the first morning the trainees were told to report at the loft for a skull session. Here Frank Derry, who is in charge of all parachuting, gave a very interesting morale building demonstration; it dealt with the history of and proper methods of packing parachutes as well as the nomenclature of its various parts.

The loft, is perhaps the nucleus of activity at Nine Mile, and consequently is one of the busiest places on the entire Smoke Jumper campus. It is a long, rectangular, well-lighted building with long rows of closely spaced large windows on both sides. Inside are various well varnished tables of medium height, simulating over-stretched ping-pong tables. This building which also houses the expensive silk and nylon parachutes along with most of the smoke jumper's paraphernalia worn when jumping, is located on top of a little knoll to the southwest of the Forest Officers' headquarters. On the east it is flanked by the "let-down" tower and on the west by various miscellaneous devices, obviously designed to either "make 'em or break 'em" while the mock-ups (simulated planes) are immediately to the south.

"Introduce all new jumpers to the obstacle course," was the order of the day and subsequently the entire group gathered in front of the loft waiting to be assigned to specific squad leaders. This completed, the squads jog around the camp grounds; first at an easy pace but with straining and exhaustion as the last hill is climbed.

"Line up men, file past the disbursing centers in the loft and get your entire jumping outfit!" Clad in these, either friend or stranger become indistinguishable. From a distance we were something between a deep sea diver and the men from Mars. These suits were not built for either style or comfort—the warmer the weather the truer the latter. There was the back brace first of all, then the padded trousers made out of heavy canvas and reinforced with a continuous strong leather strap built into the inner side of each pant leg and over the crotch. It passed under each foot at the arch, was pulled very tight and secured to the buckle on the outside of each pantleg.

This arrangement permits most of the opening shock when jumping to be absorbed by the feet. Next came the heavy padded coat with a leather faced extra large collar for added protection. Then the mask in front, covering that part not protected by the helmet. Leather gloves and special jumping boots were not to be overlooked. A strong harness with a guaranteed tensile strength of well over a thousand pounds, signalling streamers and two let-down ropes, one of which is over one hundred feet long, were also included in standard equipment.

"Let's try the let-down tower! This part of the training is exceedingly important, so get this: You will be suspended about thirty feet off the ground, hang in your harnesses. Your weight will be unevenly distributed just as if you were hanging in a tree on the end of your chute. In other words, one riser will be higher than the other, which is usually the case when you hang up. Begin by threading your long rope through the V-ring on the side of the low riser, then down through the D ring . . ." and his instructions went on as we faithfully followed them. After much squirming, pulling, and sweating to succeed in this maneuver we felt fortunate if we didn't have to go back up and try to complete the entire operation in the required few, too few minutes.

"You're doing fine fellows, now let's try this other tower while you are resting." Ah yes, that other tower—that thirty-foot back breaking, neck stretching, rib cracking, paralyzing nemesis of a tenderfoot Smoke Jumper. The men labored up the long ramp with difficulty. The thirty feet looked like a hundred. As the harness snaps were fastened to the risers the squad leader tallied with, "When I tap your shoulder, jump and watch the horizon. You get better position that way." It seemed like ages before the rope finally stopped very abruptly and rudely, two feet short of the ground and after bouncing several feet, swinging freely momentarily, the battered jumper was pulled into the platform and released.

Next came the mock-ups. Here we became accustomed to the signals used by the spotter and the correct methods of suiting-up in the plane, hooking of the static line prior to jumping and the technique of leaving the plane.

Suspended in mid-air, this tenderfoot Smoke Jumper is shown leaving the tower. He will fall sixteen feet before the rope from which he is suspended will become taut and break the fall. There is no "give" in this tower except the amount that the rope itself will stretch. The purpose of this training is to become accustomed to the opening shock of parachute jumping. Thinking while jumping is taught later when the man is asked to clap his hands in back and fold them again before completing this fall.

The roll, so important in preventing injuries upon landing, is demonstrated here. Behind the trainee is some of the obstacle course which is essentially the same as that used to train army, navy and marine corps parachutists.

Retrieving of chutes came next. And then spilling of chutes. The wind often catches a chute after the jumper has landed and if it is strong enough will drag him along the ground. No wonder it is of paramount importance to know how to spill a chute immediately upon landing—after all, who wants to run any risk at the edge of a thousand foot cliff, such as abound in this country?

Each following day brought new phases of training and tougher and tougher workouts and calisthenics. Then it rained. Did we stop training? No. Map reading, computations of burned over areas, correct fire fighting technique, and first aid were taught inside. Every man must be able to find his way out of country where he may be thirty or more miles from any road; he must be able to render first aid to himself and others; he must learn to rely on his own skills! And that takes training.

Radio operation came next. All of us were trained in the operation of the short wave sets that are dropped to the men on fires so they can report to headquarters on the progress of the fire-fighting. This included training in the use of climbers to set up aeriels. Well, that was about all of ground training for the present and now—actual jumping! According to the grapevine our squad was to jump most any time, and everyone would speculate as to when it it would be. "Maybe tomorrow!" But tomorrow would find us engaged in compass reading miles out in the back-country or getting real fire-fighting experience by combating a blaze which had been "set" by Forest Service foremen. Other mornings would pass by slowly while we went through more strenuous calisthenics, or more rolls or more signalling practice. Finally, the day came and we knew it early for we were told not to eat a heavy breakfast! This was it! The realization brought with it a peculiar feeling.

After a briefing session at the comparatively narrow airport, boarded on two sides by mountains and timber, we were given more calisthenics, ostensibly to keep us from tensing too much. One by one we suited up with a growing unmistakably grim, tense atmosphere about the place. The first eight men and spotter were soon in the air circling above the fifty foot "spot" which we were to hit, and dropping testchutes to test wind drift and direction. We knew No. 4 was to be the first man out. The Plane banked sharply to come in on the target—and there, there was the man riding the step ready to jump! Wham! His chute opened and there he was suspended beneath that white canopy under a clear blue sky, almost motionless. What a picture and what a relief to the jumper to know all was well. Instructions from the loud speaker on the ground gave him confidence and direction and two minutes after he stepped from the plane he came down. His first jump was over. Jumping was swell, he said, if only the ride down would last longer. And sometimes it does when an up-draft catches the 'chute and keeps him suspended for longer periods of time. He didn't realize that he had dropped most of a hundred feet before his chute opened. After a second or third time, however, he thought it was three hundred—he learned to think while falling.

Jumping continued until we had four open-field jumps and three timber jumps marked in our log. The final step in training consisted of a hypothetical fire camp in which forty men with all the material necessary to live for a week were transported to a fire by plane and parachute. Food, bedding, stoves, fire-fighting tools, camp equipment and men, the complete self-sustaining fire-fighting unit was now ready to jump on any fire far, far from civilization and roads; miles inside the rugged, untouched reaches of the beautiful, timbered wilderness areas of the Northwest.

On the fire line. Jumping lasts two minutes and then the dirty work begins, usually lasting several days. The fire line is built to keep the fire confined to a certain area. If the fire is dangerous, men use all the time to hold the fire line. After it subsides the fire is attacked directly until no spark or hot spot remains.

Injuries

Smoke Jumpers—parachute jumps—forest fires! Surely there must be numerous casualties. With visions of compound fractures, severe burns, and deep lacerations I set out to become camp nurse at the Smoke Jumpers' Camp this spring.

But right from the beginning I was impressed with the safety measures observed to protect our men from injury as much as possible through specially constructed suits and helmets, and through rigorous and proper training. All men are also trained in first aid. That these precautions are adequate as well as worthwhile was shown by the fact that only one man was injured while jumping on a fire this past season.

As a whole, smoke jumpers are "disgustingly healthy" due to the high physical entrance standards. Everyone tries to keep in his best physical condition, for no one knows when the next fire may break out, and to miss his turn in jumping is a major catastrophe.

During the training season in the spring it is the nurse's responsibility to treat countless sprained ankles, bruised muscles, and promise time and again that they will be able to make that coveted next jump—soon. The greatest difficulty is to keep the fellows quiet long enough after an illness for complete recovery. It is remarkable indeed how rapidly ailments disappear when a fire call comes in.

Most of the work in the infirmary consists of minor cuts, abrasions, sunburns, sore throats and so on, with an occasional accident, usually connected with farm machinery or volley ball. Yes, volley ball is rather a dangerous game in our camp. A fractured nose, finger, and a few gashes are some of the prices paid for a fast game. And the only burn that came to my attention occurred when a jumper kicked a log into a stove and burned his foot. What a chagrined Smoke Jumper!

Camp life is rather agreeable (especially since I am not an assignee). We are isolated the greater part of the time from the hustle and bustle of the world, almost living in a world apart.

Various out-door sports such as hiking, swimming, ball games and so on take care of excess energy

Fire Jumps

During the first week of September a dry lightning storm had swept through Western Montana, Idaho, and Eastern Washington with the usual result: numerous fires. By Saturday, September 9, all the smokejumpers who had not already jumped on a fire were on stand-by ready for instant action.

Our squad was somewhat rudely awakened at 4:30 Sunday morning and hustled down to breakfast while still half asleep. We were to be ready for the takeoff at 6:30. A fire at Belle Lake, Idaho, was proving stubborn. Twenty-one men from our unit had jumped on the fire on Friday night and Saturday morning, and now eight were to go in as reinforcements.

After eating a hearty breakfast we hurried to the parachute loft. (Perhaps I should explain that a parachute loft is a building used for packing and repairing parachutes—it is also where our equipment is kept). All of our equipment was checked before we loaded it onto a waiting truck. Jumping equipment consists of the back-pack chute, the emergency front-pack chute, riser protectors—an added guarantee that the jumper and the chute will stay together—the harness, two-piece canvas suit, helmet, gloves, and back brace. In addition, we carry a retrieving bag for the parachutes, and an eighty foot let-down rope, not to mention a set of signal-streamers.

A fire-pack contains a shovel, a pulaski, which is a combination axe and digging tool; a two day supply of K rations, a flashlight headset, a file, a pocket First Aid kit, a canteen, a mess-kit, sleeping-bag, and maps, compass, protractor, etc.

We threw our equipment onto the truck, jumped on, and sped out to the airport. The sky was beginning to take on a reddish hue as we struggled into our suits and harnesses, and snapped on the parachutes. Two boys were loading our cargo into

Ready for the fires are these two men. They will reach the fire in several hours instead of days and will be rested and fresh instead of tired and weary from two days of hiking. That is why the Smoke Jumper is important, for many fires are inaccessible except by trails and that often means long hikes. Long hikes mean larger fires, more manpower wasted, and more of our natural resources destroyed.

the Ford Trimotor as the mechanics refueled it and gave it a last minute check-up.

As we took our seats in the plane the mechanics started the motors. The pilot taxied to the south end of the field and stopped there to warm up the motors. It gave us a feeling of security to hear each motor tested in turn, and then to hear the thrilling roar as all three throttles were opened for the takeoff.

Eight jumpers, all their equipment, the spotter, the pilot, and a newspaper reporter, out after a story, all left the Johnson Brothers' Airport that morning, bound for the fire in the ancient but capable Ford Trimotor. The plane swung around and headed south, gaining altitude as we followed the Bitterroot Valley. The cool morning air was quiet, giving us a smooth ride.

It was now becoming quite light in the east, and the sun would soon be up. After fifteen minutes of flying we left the valley and soon were flying over some of the roughest mountains in the United States. We marveled at razor-like ridges, sheer cliffs, and queer rock formations. There was speculation as to how we would fare if we jumped for one of those narrow, rocky ridges. Then for the first time in our lives we watched the sun come up, from an airplane window 9,000 feet above sea level. The long shadows cast by the early morning sunlight gave one a feeling of awe at the brutal beauty of naked peaks above the timberline.

After an hour's flight we were over the fire. The cold night air had forced the smoke down among the trees and had quieted the blaze. This would be the best time of the day to battle the flames, for by noon there would be numerous flare-ups, and when the breeze begins to stir there is always the possibility that a fire will get away.

The plane glided downward and we circled the fire looking for an opening in the timber. If possible we were to head for a clearing, rather than jump into the trees. Earl Cooley, our spotter, picked out an opening about 100 yards from the fire. It seemed very small from 1200 feet up. The plane circled, and as it crossed over the spot Earl threw out a test chute, a square yard of muslin with two and a half pounds of gravel tied on. By watching its descent he could ascertain the wind drift and velocity. Not satisfied with the first trial he directed the pilot over the spot again, and tossed out another test chute. There was very little wind that morning, we learned, and we could jump directly over the spot.

Wagner Dodge, our squad leader, was to be the first man to jump; so he hooked his static line and knelt in the door with his right foot on the step. Earl watched the ground from a window and directed the pilot by hand signals. As the plane came over the spot he motioned for the pilot to cut the motors, and slapped Wag on the back—the signal to jump.

Out went Dodge. We watched his descent, while Del Barley hooked his static line and got into position on the step. As the plane circled to come over the spot again we saw Wag's chute drape over the top of a tree on the edge of the clearing. Del jumped, and we watched him as he turned and planned his chute, and landed in the center of the clearing. On the next pass two of us were to jump. John Ainsworth hooked his static line and knelt in the door. I hooked up, and crouched right behind him. Once more we were over the spot, the motors were cut, and John jumped. I ducked through the door, straightened up for an instant on the step and dropped off. I was conscious of the ripping-off of the chute cover, and sensed the jerking of the loadlines, as they were pulled from their loops in the backpack. Then came the sudden tug that snapped me about like the end of a whip as my chute blossomed out. It was all very peaceful and quiet, while only three seconds before I had been in a noisy, roaring plane.

After the chute opened I looked up to check on line-overs, tangles, or blownout panels, and then prepared to enjoy my ride down. By pulling the proper guide line I turned my chute and headed for the spot. When I was still three hundred feet up I saw that I couldn't make the spot but saw a small opening below and a little to the right. I turned the chute and as I came down I raised my feet to clear the top of a tall spruce tree, floated just over it, and landed between two rotten logs. My chute collapsed at the base of another tree. I looked up in time to see two more chutes blossom out as the men left the plane.

I slipped out of my harness and jumping suit and took two orange streamers out of my rope pocket and made a cross over the bushes, our "O.K." signal.

John had landed 100 feet away; together we gathered my chutes and equipment; putting everything into two retrieving bags, as the last two jumpers floated down. Then I helped him pack his stuff, and we carried it all to the jumping spot, about 100 yards away.

At this time the plane came roaring over, just above the treetops, to drop cargo, which consisted of our fire-packs. We could see Earl in the door as he kicked out the cargo simultaneously with the pilot's signal. The non-human cargo can be dropped with remarkable accuracy, since the low altitude does not give the wind much chance to deflect it.

In the meantime, Wag had reached the ground, via his let-down rope. He decided to leave his chute in the tree, so we could get to work on the fireline as soon as possible, before things became too hot. There would be time to retrieve chutes later, after the fire was under control.

Our firepacks were dropped two to a chute and were all near the spot. One cargo chute was hanging in a small tree. These chutes, however, are never used for jumping, so we were not particularly careful with them. We cut the tree down with a pulaski from another fire pack, put the chutes in their retrieving bags, and placed them with our other equipment—now ready to be taken out by pack mules. We then started for the fire, with our fire-packs on our backs.

We walked along the edge of the burned area to the upper end of the fire in search of the fire boss. Just ahead we saw some bedraggled-looking creatures. When we moved closer we discovered them to be two of the fellows who had jumped on Friday night. They had worked all that night and all day Saturday, and were really glad to see more help coming in. They were using a Pacific Marine pump, which was happily possible, since Belle Lake was only 200 feet from the upper edge of the fire. The two lads handling the hose were water soaked and unbelievably dirty.

An alternate ranger had walked to the fire on Saturday and was the fire boss. We located him, and he put six of us to work digging fire line. The other two were detailed to the work of sawing down burning and smoldering snags. One of these that is burning twenty or thirty feet up will send out a shower of sparks with every little breeze; no fire is under control so long as such a menace exists.

At noon we ate a lunch of the notorious K rations. There were now twenty-nine jumpers on the fire. A two-way radio had been dropped on Saturday, and our fire boss ordered supplies and sent in reports several times a day. On Sunday he ordered a twenty-five man fire camp outfit and enough food for three or four days. The fire was larger than anyone had anticipated, and it was very difficult to keep it from spreading. The forests were very dry, and a spark blown across the line would easily start a new blaze.

On Sunday afternoon the trimotor again appeared above the fire. Along the lake shore the fire boss had laid out orange streamers to mark the spot where the cargo was to be dropped. The plane roared back and forth, dropping an item of cargo each time it passed. In succession came thirty gallons of gasoline, another Pacific Marine pump, hose, a fire camp cook stove, cases of food, cooking utensils, and the tools necessary to convey the food from plate to mouth. One of the jumpers had had previous experience as a cook; so he was "it."

At night, at about nine o'clock, we were relieved by the night patrol, and trudged to the newly established fire camp, for supper and bed. We had a hot meal, and enjoyed it even more than usual, which is saying something, for smokejumpers. The K rations we had been subsisting on are just chuck full of nutrition, but oh how they taste!

After supper we took our flashlights and bedrolls and went in search of a level spot. Some slept under trees, and others were so weary that they just unrolled their beds, threw aside a few rocks and sticks which happened to be underneath, and crawled in, and immediately dropped off to sleep.

Awakened for breakfast at six, we crawled into dewy, clammy clothes, and hustled over to the fire.

Only a hardy few ran down to the lake to douse their sleep-filled eyes with the icy water. A case of eggs had been dropped by plane so at breakfast we were greeted by cheery sunny-sides-up.

After eating, we received our work orders from the fire boss, and went single file down the trail to our sector. At noon our lunch was brought out to us by a kitchen helper, so that no fire-fighting time was lost. The men operating the pumps kept them going steadily for twelve hours each day, re-fueling them as they ran. It takes a lot of water to control a one hundred and thirty acre fire.

By Wednesday evening the fire was declared under control, and the jumpers were ordered to walk out on Thursday morning, September 14. A few men who had walked in were to stay until the fire was officially out.

Thursday morning we put our tools in our fire packs and were ready for the long trek to the road. It was sixteen miles, and with a forty pound pack each mile seemed double in length. When we reached the road a stock truck took us twenty miles to Hamilton. The Forest Service bought us bus tickets to Missoula, fifty miles away, and we were there in the "Garden City" for supper.

Twenty-nine more miles by truck, after supper, and we reached our base camp, at Ninemile. A tired, dirty crew we were, and very happy to shave, bathe, and crawl into a bed for a good night's sleep; and to dream about the next jump.

Jumpers on Stand-by

Considerable work of importance is accomplished while jumpers are on stand-by for fire calls. Earlier in the season when fire danger is quite low, a certain per cent of the men from each camp can be released from immediate stand-by to maintain pack trails and telephone lines leading up to lookout towers or patrol points on high peaks which have a large visible area.

As fire danger goes up men are drawn in on close stand-by. At Ninemile, the base camp, jumpers are working in the hay field while waiting for that fire call. Most all project work at main camp is closely connected with the Forest Service Remount where an emergency stock of saddle horses and pack mules are kept for packing fire and camp equipment, and food on mountain trails to and from large fires. Pack mules are also used to carry the jumping equipment and fire fighting tools from the fire to nearest road or landing field. Much of the Forest Land in this region is yet quite primitive and has few roads so the use of saddle horses and pack mules is very valuable for the management of it and for fire control.

The project work for most out lying camps is of a similar nature as constructing and maintaining ranger station buildings, yards, and fences. Tools are also kept up and sharpened. Each jumper has his own fire pack to maintain and put into shape after returning from a fire. A trained rigger in each squad spends a large per cent of his time in the loft repairing and packing parachutes. Also inspecting and repairing all other jumping equipment.

Recreation of many types are enjoyed. Volley ball seems to be the favorite sport in most of the units and is also much encouraged by the technical staff so as to keep the muscles limbered up and the body in good physical condition to avoid sprained ankles and other injuries in parachuting to fires.

Most of the units are located near streams or lakes which makes fishing and swimming an attractive way to spend a few hours in an evening. Many fish stories were found in the correspondence between the units this past season. Hiking on the scenic mountain trails is also a favorite way to spend a week-end when fire danger is low and immediate stand-by is not required. Much time is also spent in reading and writing letters. Several classes were organized and conducted.

Yes, the jumper's stand-by time is well utilized; much important work is accomplished; recreation is enjoyed; and men remain in good physical condition to endure fire fighting.

A Letter to the Young People of the General Conference

Dear fellow Young People's workers:

This is a letter to those of you who are already concerned and working in your home, church and district, and to you whom the Holy Spirit may be urging to be more concerned, more active in the work with the young people. I sincerely believe that there are in each church those of you whom the Lord is calling to just such Christian service at home. To have a better young people's program in our entire conference we need at least one individual in each church—perhaps one of the older group—who sees this need, who will meditate and pray about it, speak to others and be willing to have a continuing interest in it.

Many of you were not able to attend the meeting of the General Conference Young People's Union (Y. P. U.) session. I think many of us were surprised and grateful to God to hear of so much that was done. To me, the growth of the district or state Y. P. retreats is one of the biggest steps forward. These offer an excellent opportunity to work with a young people's group. We thank God for those who took the lead in setting up the retreats. Let us pray for people locally who will likewise have the wisdom and energy to have a young people's group retreat. Such local retreats can serve as a good means of beginning a more active local organization of the young people—perhaps as a supplement to the Christian Endeavor programs.

The Canadian young people have evidenced what a simple vision and almost a daring initiative can accomplish. Feeling the need for some place that would centralize their common efforts, they purchased the Rosthern Farm for a youth center. God began by planting this need in the hearts of several young people. Their hunger for such a center led them to this unusual opportunity to purchase a former government experimental farm. The center will not only serve as a retreat ground, but also as a place for various levels of Bible schools, young people's institutes, and a general gathering place. So God works. May He sharpen the hunger in more of us.

Many of us feel that our Mennonite young people should be able to do more for God's Kingdom. It would be good if we could have springing up over various parts of the country, small groups who will pray, meditate over their concerns, and let the Lord lead them. The June 2nd Y. P. U. meeting passed a resolution asking the executive committee to study the possibilities of training periods for Christian Endeavor and young people's workers. Our executive committee and the Y P U board met during the conference and agreed that we need to study not only the training of leaders, but the organization of our young people's

Y.P.U. RESOLUTIONS PASSED AT GENERAL CONFERENCE

Below are given in condensed form the resolutions passed by the Young People's Union at their June 2nd meeting at the General Conference. Resolutions 7, 11, and 13 are being given special consideration by the Executive Committee at this time.

1. Appreciation to the Y.P. officers and committees.
2. Appreciation to those arranging conference meeting.
- 3 Use our page in THE MENNONITE to encourage daily habits of personal Bible Study and prayer.
4. Approve revision and publication of prayer folder when necessary.
5. Y.P.U. re-affirms peace position of the General Conference.
6. Encourage young people's retreat in each district.
7. Executive committee to study possible institutes for C.E. workers.
8. Collection and distribution of literature for use in Y.P. work.
9. Strengthen contact with men in service.
10. District representatives are to stimulate interest in General Conference activities. Each church urged to elect one delegate to the General Conference under thirty years of age.
11. Executive Committee is to select worthy projects.
12. Invitation to Y.P. of Central Conference and youth from our missions to join General Conference Y.P.U.
13. Executive Committee is to select editor of Y.P. Section of THE MENNONITE and proposed supplements. Editor is to be paid $25 out of the Y.P.U. General Fund. Reports of district representatives to be published in Youth Section every six months.

groups. Do C. E. groups include also the young people's group or is there a separate organization? Does "young people" include only the unmarried or also married folks up to thirty years? Are the young people as a body encouraged to tackle some of their group problems or some other community need? Do we need a traveling secretary to help with the local program, and projects? Should several local churches have a combined young people's organization? Our hope is that over a period of a year's study we can gather good illustrations of what local groups have done. We hope some of you will share your concerns on what the young people's group could do. Please do not hesitate to write. In order to move ahead in this study we will need to know who is particularly concerned.

Sincerely in Christ,
Elmer Ediger, President, Y. P. U.

THE LIFE OF A CLUBWORKER WHO LIVES IN "HELL'S HALF ACRE"

Laurine Quiring

Our Wesley Community Center is located in the heart of an industrial section of Chattanooga, Tennessee, among an economically underprivileged group of people.

The center is composed of a residence, nursery, clubhouse, recreational building and playground. A small church, a tank and boiler foundry, a vacant lot and a school house constitute its four boundaries. As one looks out beyond the center, one sees rows of identical, small, filthy, "shot-gun" houses erected on stilts. Soot rains from the sky. Repulsive odors fill the air. There is the never-ending thump and thud of the foundry. This is "Hell's Half Acre"! And this is where I live!

But as I look beyond, my eyes gaze in deep admiration upon the lofty mountains in many shades of purple, blending so beautifully into a bit of blue sky edged in rosy lace; and I "know," even in "Hell's Half Acre," "My God and I, we walk the fields together!" A deep peace falls on a tired, discouraged soul.

Community life here is "never" boring, although sometimes very depressing.

It was 11:55 p.m. I was enjoying my midnite snack. The deaconess had long gone to sleep. Suddenly someone beat the front door so violently, I thought it was coming down. Then a woman screamed at the top of her voice. With cautious steps the deaconess opened the door. What a sight caught our eyes! Here was a woman, her hair entangled with weeds, her dress muddy, her blouse torn, her eye black, her cheek and lips bruised. Yes, here was another victim of a drunken sex fiend! For one hour she had struggled against immorality and the threat of death. God had given her strength to struggle far enough to make her screams audible to us.

Here is a home with four beautiful children. The father is a victim of dope. The mother acts as wage-earner by serving as mechanic in a defense plant. The older child works in a grocery to help support the family. One Saturday nite the father, under a high nervous tension, bruised and beaten, came to us crying. The mother had beaten the little girl with heavy wire. He demanded justice for his child. Upon visiting the mother, we discovered the father had beaten her. It was a most pathetic picture! One under the influence of dope, is, indeed, to be pitied! Sometimes he tries to stand on his head all nite. He waits until his wife is asleep, then he slaps her square in the face. He empties all closets and drawers and carries the contents on the streets. He fusses and fumes and foams.

Then there is the old lady who boasts five marriages. Two husbands died, one being shot in cold blood. Now she lives with a forty-two-year-old moronic son on a pension of twenty-eight dollars a month. Fourteen dollars of this goes for rent.

We come to another home. We do not stay long. With a gracious smile we excuse ourselves. We hurry down the street. There we have a hard gagging spell. Smelling that odor, seeing that filth and watching those snuff-users spit that "slop" across the room, practicing their marksmanship, was a little more than our stomachs could take.

After one sees where several drunks have disposed of the contents of their stomachs and runs into someone using his front yard as a rest room, one becomes so nauseated that he gladly returns home, sacrifices his lunch and lies down to rest.

A telephone call comes. I am to notify a lady that her husband is near the point of death. She is to report to the hospital immediately. With a lump in my throat, I hurry down the road, dreading the moment when I am to deliver the fateful message. Courageously I knock; tactfully I tell her. Boldly she steps forward. She shall not see her husband! He is only a drunkard! Good riddance! Let him die!

And then there is the service man who returned home to find his children alone, his mother-in-law dying and his wife a drunken prostitute.

These are "only" a "few" scenes from the panorama of life in "Hell's Half Acre," and "Hell's Half Acre" constitutes only a small section of the area in which I work. No man is too hardened to forgive, no woman too immoral to uplift, no sin too great to pardon. God helping Christian folk, "Hell's Half Acre" shall not be there long. May we through God's help, transform it into an "Acre of Diamonds!"

In doing this work, the clubworker spends her mornings preparing for her club activities, visiting, writing business letters, making business telephone calls, filing records and addressing all types of organizations throughout the city in behalf of her community.

Monday afternoon forty-three boys, between the ages of nine and twelve meet for woodwork classes. Usually six boys work in the shop at one time. During this time the other boys do library work or engage in individual or group play, both quiet and active.

Tuesday is spent in community visitation. In the afternoon twenty-two Girl Scouts meet with a well trained troop leader.

Sewing school meets on Wednesday afternoon. At the present time we have forty-seven enrolled. The clubworkers sees that all sewing machines are clean and in good working order. She purchases supplies for the entire group, cuts and fits all garments. She acquaints herself with the sewing ability of every individual. Having this knowledge, she assigns each one to a definite project under a specified teacher. We have five groups at the present time and are making aprons, slips, pajamas, jumpers and dresses.

Because the clubworker is regarded both as missionary and social case worker, she is expected to attend prayer meeting regularly, and not only attend, but be very active in the meeting, sometimes carrying the sole responsibility of it herself.

On Thursday afternoon two women from the local power board conduct cooking classes for teenage girls. The clubworker sees that kitchen, dinning room and social room are ready for use. She is responsible for all supplies exclusive of food. This includes clean linen, dishes, silverware, hot plates etc.

A pastor from one of the city's Methodist churches with the help of six volunteers, holds evangelistic services Thursday nites.

Thirty-seven primary children meet Friday afternoon for musical expression, Bible instruction, story hour, dramatic interpretation, play and handwork.

Recently we have opened a Christian Youth Fellowship. This club congregates late Sunday afternoon. Thirty minutes is spent in worship, one hour in recreation and another thirty minutes is reserved for dinner.

Always the clubworker strives to help the individual live at his best, to bring him into a vital relationship with Christ and to train him for Christian and social leadership.

We Present "The Youth Supplement"

Repeatedly young people have expressed a desire for a young people's paper, partly because they felt they were not given sufficient space in the Mennonite. However, it should also be said that we as young people have perhaps not cooperated sufficiently with our editor in supplying material for the space which was given us. We realize, too, that a separate paper would involve a large additional expense as well as a complete editorial staff. With the present paper shortage and other conditions as they are, suggestion was made that the Youth Section in the Mennonite be enlarged and that we prepare a special Youth Supplement each quarter.

At the Young People's Union business meeting at the General Conference a resolution was passed to the effect that the Y. P. Executive Committee appoint an editor who would be responsible for the "Youth Section" as well as for the "proposed Youth Supplements of The Mennonite." It is our aim to acquaint all the young people in the Conference with various phases of Y. P. activity as actually carried on.

With this issue of The Mennonite we are introducing to you the first of these Youth Supplements, entitled, "G. C. Smoke Jumpers." The Civilian Public Service work is an important activity of some five hundred of our General Conference young people. The Smoke Jumper's work is only one phase of CPS, but it is a unique way of rendering a worthwhile service to our country and at the same time giving a positive peace testimony to the world. Special recognition for this supplement goes to Mr. Leon Ratzlaff of Henderson, Nebraska, a member of the Smoke Jumpers Unit at Missoula, Montana, and to Mr. Arthur Wiebe who serves as Educational Director of this unit. We wish to thank them for the pictures as well as for making themselves responsible for the write-ups.

The Y.P.U. Executive Committee hopes to be able to secure an editor for the Youth Section and Supplements in the near future. We trust all of you young people will be looking forward to the next issue of the Supplement which will perhaps deal with Retreats. May we also ask for your cooperation in submitting articles which might be of special interest to all the readers.—Ruth Ewert, Secretary-Treasurer of the Y.P. Union

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

AN ANONYMOUS GIFT

The other day, in a remittance from our Secretary-Treasurer, was an anonymous gift of Rs. 575-00-00 and it was marked "For relief." I thought to myself, "Well, God is very likely providing for some need about which I do not as yet know. So, I'll just put this away and await His Leading." Thereupon the money was put into an envelope, sealed, marked "an anonymous gift of Rs. 575-00-00 for relief" and put it into the safe.

Soon after that a little boy at Bomindih, one of our outstations, died of small pox. His parents are Christians of only a few years standing but they have a simple child-like faith and in that faith they prayed desperately and then did all they could to provide their sick boy with necessary food, treatment and care. In so doing they pawned all of their belongings except the very clothes they were wearing. Then the little boy died.

There they were grief stricken and heartbroken. As if that were not enough, with their security gone the thread merchant would not give them any thread on credit with which to resume their weaving and weaving is their only means of livelihood.

The Evangelist in charge came to me saying that if I had some way of helping these people it would certainly be a great blessing as they were desperate. I remembered the 'anonymous gift' and said, "Yes, here is help for them."

Often times inquirers come to our Evangelists' homes to talk with the Evangelists about Christianity and the possibility of becoming a Christian. Frequently such people come from long distances and must be given food and fuel with which to cook it. In these days when food is high priced and fuel scarce, this matter of 'entertaining' is a serious drain on an already insufficient income.

So, one day these Evangelists came to me with this their problem, saying, "We can not turn these people away. We might hinder their becoming Christians if we turn them away. We must show them Christian love and hospitality. What shall we do?" Again I remembered the 'anonymous gift' and this extra item of expense was defrayed.

We do not know who this donor is and we understand that he does not want us to know. But we know that he is being a real blessing and help to people in needy situations for he has "laid up for himself treasures in heaven where moth nor rust doth not corrupt nor thieves break through and steal." And we also know that where his treasures are there his heart is also. Surely "it is more blessed to give than to receive." —Harold Ratzlaff

C. P. S.

End of C.P.S.

Selective Service has decided to terminate Civilian Public Service in its entirety six months after the conclusion of the war. This would mean the complete liquidation of the present form of alternative service for men registered 4-E as provided by the Selective Training and Service Act of 1940. It was pointed out that C.P.S. will end regardless of the number of men remaining at that time in the armed forces for occupation purposes.

Conscientious Objectors in Canada

The Wartime Information Board of Canada, in its June 7 issue of Facts and Figures Weekly, announces that between May, 1943, and April, 1945, a total of $1,784,259.95 was contributed to the Canadian Red Cross Society from the earnings of conscientious objectors in Canada.

This same release indicates that as of April, 1945, Canadian C.O.'s numbered 10,700. They are distributed throughout the provinces as follows: Prince Edward Island, 3; Nova Scotia, 29; New Brunswick, 2; Quebec, 28; Ontario, 2602; Manitoba, 2948; Saskatchewan, 2320; Alberta, 1157; British Columbia, 1611. Seventy per cent are engaged in agriculture and the remaining number have been placed in various forms of industry and hospital work.

1945 C.P.S. Canning Folder Distributed

A new folder, "1945 C.P.S. Canning Program," has been printed and is being distributed to the churches. They are being sent out in sufficient quantity to make one folder available for each home. Additional copies of the folder may be obtained from the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania.

Summer Visitors and Speakers

During the summer months several speakers and teachers from the churches at large, will visit C.P.S. camps and units. G. S. Klassen, dentist from Hillsboro, Kansas, who spent a year in dental relief service in Paraguay, will visit camps and units in Colorado, Nebraska, and South Dakota, June 20 to July 7. Walter Yoder, music instructor at Goshen College, will provide a series of lessons in hymn appreciation and chorister training at the Colorado camps, June 25 to 28. Anna Wiebe, music teacher from Beatrice, Nebraska, has consented to devote her summer to the teaching of music in seven hospital units in the East. She will spend one to three days in each unit as she makes a circuit of the units four times during the summer.

Correction

The C.P.S. unit in King County, Washington, has not been approved by Selective Service for an increase to twenty men, as incorrectly stated in the C.P.S. Notes released June 13, 1945.

PEACE SECTION

Witnessing in Washington

On June 11, 1945, Harold S. Bender, as appointed representative of the Mennonite Central Committee, presented a statement concerning peacetime conscription to the House Select Committee on Postwar Military Policy. Brother Bender was accompanied by Albert Gaeddert, Director of Mennonite C.P.S. A full account of this witness and the statement presented has been released to the various church papers for publication.

Tydings Amendment Vetoed

Quite some time ago, President Truman vetoed the Tydings Amendment. This was the farm deferential rating in the draft. To what extent this will affect the drafting of farmers is not known at the present, but agricultural workers no longer have the privilege of deferment on an occupational basis. Released June 20, 1945

RELIEF

Relief Worker Returns to Europe

Farewell services were held, June 15, at Akron Headquarters for M.C. Lehman who is departing for relief service in Northwest Europe. Brother Lehman's particular assignment relates to the establishing of contacts with Mennonites in Switzerland, France, Holland, Germany, and other areas as the Lord may lead. Brother Lehman has had considerable association with Mennonite groups there as a result of his former relief service on the Continent. He served as director of Polish Mennonite relief with headquarters in Berlin from November, 1939, to June, 1942. The prayers of the churches in behalf of the work in Europe are solicited.

Mennonite Nurse Arrives in Middle East

Martha Eiman left the States by plane, May 16, and arrived in Cairo, Egypt, in commendable time according to a letter received from her, June 14. The cable, sent upon her arrival, was never received at Akron. At the time of writing Sister Eiman was awaiting definite assignment. Though U.R.R.A. has been rejecting all passport requests for relief workers to enter the Middle East, Sister Eiman has been sent to replace an U.R.R.A. nurse transferring to the Continent.

Nursing Tubercular Refugees

Helen Moser, member of the M.C.C. unit in the Middle East refugee camps, has been assigned to nursing on a tubercular ward for refugee patients. The following excerpts are taken from a letter, received from Sister Moser, June 13, 1945:

"Picture my dilemma with my seventy tuberculous patients living in seventeen open tents. Whatever constructive therapy we may try to initiate for the patients is simply negated by the exhausting heat and flies. I had scarcely learned to associate the proper names and faces of the T.B. patients until I discovered that my supervisor and co-workers were quietly withdrawn and the unwanted job of being 'in charge' fell into my unsuspecting lap. Some times it seems like utter hypocrisy to even pretend to be supervising your 'bolnecarka' (The Yugoslav girls who are being taught the essentials of nursing) when you can't even speak to them except in monosyllables and isolated words. The Nurse Matron tells me the biggest job we have on our ward is fighting discouragement!"

Sister Moser was informed, May 2, that her lost trunk had been recovered—but empty, following a burglary at the U.R.R.A. warehouse in Algiers.

Relief Briefs

Willard Smith, in company with two ministers from the Mennonite colonies in Paraguay, were unable to begin their good-will visit to Brazil, May 14, as previously announced. The brethren were detained until June 6 for lack of necessary traveling permits.

Wilma Lehman, North Lima, Ohio; Ruth Burkhardt, Orrtanna, Pennsylvania; and Pauline Knight, Wauseon, Ohio, are assisting at the Ephrata clothing center for the duration of their stay at Akron Headquarters as members of the Women's Summer Service Unit.

CHURCH CHRISTMAS PACKAGE PLANS

Half a million Christmas packages will be sent from Christian groups in the United States for distribution through the churches of liberated areas in Europe and Asia. The Mennonite and Brethren in Christ churches have been asked to cooperate in this program. Christian groups in the devastated areas will cooperate in distributing the packages to churches located in communities where congregations are least likely to have Christmas cheer.

Individual cartons, similar in size to overseas cartons, will be sent without cost to anyone requesting one or more. Requests should be sent to the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania, before July 15. The parcels will need to be packed and returned to the Mennonite Central Committee by August 15. Shipment for overseas will take place in October.

The cartons will be packed with such items as bouillon cubes, dehydrated soups, baby food, powdered milk, cereal, and hard candy. Crevices and spaces may be filled with needles, thread, washclothes, a towel, mittens, or gloves, socks, a small toy, pencil, paper, or crayons for children. A Christmas greeting should be enclosed with every package. Gifts should not be purchased until the carton and an accompanying instruction sheet (giving types of certain articles which have government approval for export) are received.

Attached to the outside of each parcel should be a three-cent stamped envelope containing one dollar to cover cost of handling and shipping overseas, plus a checked list of items that have been placed in the parcel.

IN MEMORIAM

John F. Geiger, eighty-six, Pandora, Ohio, died at his home May 9. Funeral services were conducted at the Grace Mennonite Church. His wife, and ten brothers and sisters have all preceded him in death. He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Hattie Hilty of Bluffton, Ohio, and Mrs. Lydia Hardt of Orchard Lake, Michigan, and four sons, Eldon Geiger of Decatur, Illinois, Millen Geiger of Bluffton, Walter Geiger, Grover Geiger and Elmer Geiger of Pandora.

Staff Sergeant Elbert E. Hilty, twenty-seven, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hilty of Pandora, Ohio, died April 25th of wounds sustained thirteen days previously on Luzon, Philippines. He is survived by his parents, two sisters, Mrs. Alice Casali, of Toledo, Mrs. Lenora Lehman of Pandora, and three brothers, Glenn Hilty of Delta, Mervin Hilty of Otawa, and Dwaine Hilty of Swanton, Ohio.

Memorial services were held June 3rd at the Grace Mennonite Church.

Mrs. Marie T. Hirschler Voigt was born in Franklin Center, Iowa, the sixth of nine children of Rev. John S. and Christina (nee Schmidt) Hirschler. In 1884 the family moved to Hillsboro, Kansas, where her father organized the Hillsboro Mennonite Church. On August 6, 1908, she was married to Adolf F. Voigt, who passed to his reward on February 11, 1914. She then stayed in the parental home until 1937 when she made her home with one or the other of her sons, Melvin and Adolf. Her health failing more and more during the past year she submitted to a serious operation on May 23rd. After two weeks her condition became worse and she succumbed on June 8 in the University of Minnesota Hospital.

Daniel John Brand was born at Summerfield, Illinois, April 19, 1871, where he grew to manhood. Having lost his parents very early, his home was made with his uncle and aunt. He received his earlier education at Bethel College, Newton, Kansas, his A.B. degree in 1905 from Baldwin-Wallace College, Berea, Ohio, and later his M.A. degree from the Divinity School at the University of Chicago in 1915. He was ordained into the ministry in 1905 by Rev. Christian Kaufman in the Salem Mennonite Church at Wisner, Nebraska, and was here married in 1907 to Marie Boehr. The charges he served over a period of nearly twenty-five years included the Salem Mennonite Church, Wisner, Nebraska, the Hereford Mennonite Church, Bally, Pennsylvania, and the West Zion Church, Moundridge, Kansas. He leaves to mourn his wife, two sons, Waldo D. Brand of Findlay, Ohio, but now serving with the U.S. Army; Orlando H. Brand of Bremerton, Washington; one daughter, Miss Elizabeth Marie Brand at home; and one granddaughter. He suddenly passed away on June 8, 1945, in Jacksonville, Florida, where he had made his home for the last five years with his wife and daughter.

CORRESPONDENCE

GRACE MENNONITE CHURCH Pandora, Ohio

At an evening service the Peace Club of Bluffton College presented a drama, written by one of its members.

The two girls' missionary societies of the church entertained all the women and girls of the church at an evening meeting. Miss Edna Ramseyer of Bluffton College, was a guest, and spoke on the Women's Summer Service Program of the M.C.C.

An informal reception was held in the church parlors for the new members of the church during Page Twenty-two which several talks were given on the subject "What Grace Church Means to Me."

The Men's Fellowship of the church held its spring meeting with a pot-luck dinner. Rev. William Alexander of Arcadia, spoke to the men and boys on the subject "The Search for Happiness."

Mother's Day was observed with a special service for the consecration of children, a service in which parents brought their little children and pledged to train them in the way of Christ.

At the weekly prayer services the past three months, our pastor, Rev. Forrest Musser, has been giving meditations on the Psalms.

A member of our church, Ralph Althaus, spoke of his experiences as a prisoner of war in Germany at an open meeting of the Intermediate C.E.

A number of our young people and Rev. and Mrs. Musser and children attended the All-Mennonite Retreat held at Camp Mack, Indiana, in June.

One evening service each month is sponsored by a Sunday School class. At one such meeting, a program commemorating Mother's Day was given and at another the subject, "Pioneers in Missionary Endeavor" was presented.

Recent visitors on the campus have been: Ernst Harder, of Paraguay, who recently graduated from Bethel College; Rev. Ernest Bohn of Bluffton College; Rev. Paul E. Whitmer of Bluffton; Carl Lehman who spoke and showed pictures of the La Plata region in Puerto Rico; and M. C. Lehman of the M.C.C., Akron, Pa., who spoke on the subject "Plans for Relief and Reconstruction."

THE EMMANUEL MENNONITE CHURCH Moundridge, Kansas

We are thankful to the Lord for having given us the privilege of conducting a daily vacation Bible school session of two weeks this year. We had thirty-two pupils enrolled in three classes, with teachers, Ella and Marie Wedel, and Lila Koehn.

We were also privileged to remember our Lord's sacrifice on Calvary's Cross till he come, by coming to the Lord's table in Holy Communion on June 10. Rev. Philip A. Wedel from the Alexanderwohl officiated at this service. We received many spiritual blessings. —Marie Wedel, Corr.

REPORT ON WORK AMONG MIGRANTS

Leonore Friesen, who did migrant work in Michigan last summer under auspices of the Mennonite Women's United Service Committee, is doing similar work this summer at South Holland, Illinois, about fifty miles from Chicago. She writes that Katherine Andreas, who also went out under appointment of the M.W.U.S.C., was to be sent to Breckenridge, Michigan, first and then to Grand Junction, and that her work would most likely be nursery work. The South Holland community is predominantly of the Reformed faith. The migrants in this area work sugar beets and onion sets. The following quotations are from cards and letters to her parents.

"Yesterday was our first day on the field and we made many valuable contacts. Today we will visit more families. They are so scattered that group work will be a real problem. Possibly only about fifteen families can be reached in this particular area.

"There are five Reformed churches in town: Christian Reformed, Dutch Reformed, Protestant Reformed, etc. Every group considers itself just a little more spiritual than the others.

(From a conversation with a local minister:) "We all agree on the fundamental doctrines of the church and the meaning of the Gospel message and the necessity of it for those without." He asked me the main difference of the Mennonites. The fact that I'm a Mennonite helps immensely. He said he felt the C.O. position was nearest to Scriptural teaching.

"I've been in several Mexican homes. They are much cleaner and have more complete furnishings (than in last year's work). Some even have curtains in the windows. They live in box cars and chicken houses. There are a number of Christian families here. A group of their own accord meet on Sunday P.M. and one of their number gives the sermon. They are Pentecostal. We are going over Sunday. They meet in one of the farm homes.

"Miss White (director of the work) says this is the hardest place they have."

Please pray for the work Katherine Andreas and Leonore Friesen are doing among these needy people.

"ON SEQUOIA TRAILS"

Frequently articles have appeared in church periodicals which have portrayed Civilian Public Service to the Mennonite people. Some of these stories have come from one of the most valid sources of interpretation, the men who are themselves in C.P.S. Some publications of a more permanent nature, such as annuals and pictorial magazines, are being produced from time to time to depict the attitudes and thinking of the men in this unique experience. One of this latter type is coming out early this fall. It is entitled ON SEQUOIA TRAILS and is being published as an interpretation in pictures and writing of the work and thinking of men in C.P.S. No. 107, at Three Rivers, California. This camp is doing work in the beautiful Sequoia National Park. Subscriptions may be purchased by sending $1.00 now for each copy desired to ON SEQUOIA TRAILS, C.P.S. No. 107, Three Rivers, California.

THE READER SAYS

WAS OUR CONFERENCE SINCERE?

Our Conference reiterated its 1941 Peace Resolution at its recent session at North Newton. In that resolution we read, "We can have no part in carnal warfare. . . . We believe that this means that we cannot bear arms personally nor directly aid those who do so, and . . . we cannot accept service under the military arm of the government, whether it be combatant or noncombatant."

In view of the fact that only 27 per cent of our drafted men were classified as IV-E, with one district conference having only 6 per cent in C.P.S., does the above resolution sincerely express our belief? It can hardly be assumed that the percentage of those who refused to purchase war bonds or work in war factories, is larger than the 27 per cent. We wonder why the Conference reaffirmed the above resolution?

It is sometimes stated the noncombatant takes his position because he wants to be in the war camp with one foot and in the pacifist camp with the other. May it be that the majority of our conference would like to stand in full support of their government's wishes with their practical foot, and in obedience to Peter's suggestion, "We ought to obey God rather than man" with their idealistic foot? Doesn't it seem somewhat difficult to serve God and mammon at the same time?

When one of our ministers made a rather forceful talk in defense of full support of our Mennonite peace teachings, rumors were later on heard that this brother is "radical," the speech was "uncalled for." When that sentiment prevails at a Mennonite conference, what justification remains for us to continue as a separate denomination? Do not other Protestant churches also have peace teachings? Was our Conference sincere when the above resolution was re-affirmed? —J. M. Regier

Increasing Approval of C. O.'s by the Public

American approval of conscientious objectors has shown an actual increase of 7.9 per cent over the past year, it was reported last month by the Office of Public Opinion Research.

In answer to the question "In general, do you approve or disapprove of conscientious objectors?", 26 per cent of a nationwide sample poll said they approved, 65.1 per cent said they disapproved and 8.9 per cent had no opinion.

In March, 1944, the same question put to a national sample by the same office yielded 18.1 per cent approval, 74.0 per cent disapproval and 7.8 per cent no opinion.

Both surveys were conducted under the supervision of Hadley J. Cantril, director of the OPOR and a recognized authority in sample polling methods. (The OPOR came within one half of one per cent in the 1944 Presidential election, closer than Gallup and several other national polls.)

The later survey showed also that clear majorities of the American public felt that CO's should be allowed overseas service, should receive pay and dependency allotments, and should be employed according to their individual talents and skills, rather than being given manual work in labor camps.

Specific Questions

Percentages on the various questions were:

"Many conscientious objectors are willing to be sent overseas to help in relief work in war areas. Do you approve or disapprove of their going?" Approve 75.3; disapprove, 18.5; no opinion, 6.2.

"At present conscientious objectors who are drafted by the government for work receive no pay for their work. Their dependents receive no financial aid. Would you approve or disapprove of their dependents receiving some federal aid?" Approve, 67.1; disapprove, 24.4; no opinion, 8.5.

"Would you approve or disapprove of conscientious objectors, receiving some pay for their work?" Approve, 60.8; disapprove, 30.3; no opinion, 8.9.

"Should conscientious objectors, who are drafted for work, be assigned to manual work in labor camps, or should they be assigned to jobs which make use of their skills and training?" Manual work in labor camps, 16.8; skilled jobs, 70.9; no opinion, 12.3.

The OPOR findings were briefly interpreted by Dr. Leo P. Crespi of Princeton University's Psychology Department who, though a non-pacifist, has long been interested in public reaction to CO's. (See Reporter supplements, Jan. 15, Feb. 1, Feb. 15, 1945).

Interpretation

Regarding the increase in approval of CO's over the past year, Dr. Crespi commented:

"These returns can be termed nothing short of remarkable. . . In view of the popular stereotype of extreme disapproval of CO's, it is certainly a surprising show of strength to discover deep in a war over a quarter of the American public approving of them.

"But what is even more remarkable is the direction of the change of opinion since March, 1944 . . . The significant fact emerges that 7.9 per cent more of the American people approve of CO's today than they did a year earlier in the war, and 8.9 per cent fewer disapprove.

"It is not the absolute size of this change which is noteworthy, though this is far from insubstantial; it is the fact that with the progress of the war there has been a substantial gain in approval. Such a finding is directly in opposition to any of the expectations that the writer has encountered in the matter. These expectations without exception, were that with the on-going of the war with its pyramiding casualty lists and multiplying home-front frustrations, COs would be the target of greater and greater disapproval. That precisely the opposite has occurred has implications whose significance cannot be gainsaid."

Dr. Crespi called the returns on each of the four policy questions "clear and unequivocal," pointing out that in each case the public supported the case for reforms by majorities ranging from two-to-one to four-to-one.

"It is widely agreed that public opinion is the major determinant of policies for treatment of COs," he concluded. "Now that the will of the American people has been democratically and impartially ascertained on certain of the major grievances of CO's, it is up to the CO's and agencies interested in their welfare to see that this will is recognized and implemented."

The Denominational College

By L. L. Ramseyer

An excellent article on the denominational college, written by Dr. W. W. Charters, is published in the May, 1945, issue of the Association of American Colleges Bulletin. Dr. Charters is one of the best known of American educators. He was formerly head of the Bureau of Educational Research, Ohio State University, and is now Director Research Service, Stephens College. He states in this article that the chief religious function of the church college is "to train students to be good Christians." He points out five ways in which this is accomplished. (1) Through a Christian faculty. (2) Through courses in Bible and religious education. (3) Through Chapel services. (4) Through the student activity programs, including the YMCA, the YWCA, discussion groups, retreats, welfare projects, social service, etc. (5) Through the department of religious instruction.

The matter of a Christian faculty is of primary concern to Mennonite Colleges at this particular time, as they attempt to prepare for the post-war enrollment increase. Charters recognizes the importance of a Christian faculty. Concerning this he says, "Unfortunately for Christian education, faculty members are usually selected for scholarship and secular teaching ability. Patience is not exercised to discover men who have not only scholarship and teaching ability but an interest in religion. Whether they are hard to find or not is an important consideration. But if they are not found, Christian education is thwarted to the extent that the faculty is a factor in an educational program.—If a Christian college pays no keen attention to the religious attitudes of its appointees, the spectator can be assured that the objective of Christian education is merely a paper objective."

As Charters suggests, faculty members of high scholarship and teaching ability whose religious convictions correspond with those of the institution are indeed difficult to find. In Mennonite colleges the problem is complicated by an inadequate salary scale. When one considers that we have experienced faculty members, very near their Ph. D. degrees getting less than $1500 per school year, one can understand something of the difficulty of this problem. In addition, the church has never made provision for adequate recognition of the place of the college faculty member as a servant of the church, nor has it made any provision for taking care of faculty members after retirement or during prolonged periods of disability. Men and women are willing to sacrifice, but there is a limit even to such sacrifice. One must consider the welfare of his family. Scarcely a faculty member in our church schools who is not sacrificing at least $500. per year in salary for the sake of Christian education.

A letter has just come to my desk from a young man who has turned down an offer of $5200 per year and is planning further preparation looking toward affiliation with one of our Mennonite schools. Anything like comparable sacrifices on the part of others would eliminate the financial problems of our colleges.

Some method should also be worked out for giving church recognition to the members of our college staffs. They are church servants just as clearly as are ministers or missionaries. Theirs is an educational mission. Their influence is far-reaching. Yet at a recent church conference where missionaries with five years experience had the privilege of discussion from the floor by virtue of that period of service, college faculty members who had given twenty-five to thirty years of their lives to the service of the church through education were in no way recognized and were not granted the privilege of taking part in the discussions. Is there no form of ordination service in the Mennonite church through which its teachers can be consecrated to their task and recognized as giving their lives to this important phase of church work?

This lack of recognition on the part of the church of the service of its educators makes the problem of securing the right type of faculty members even more difficult. The Mennonite church is not unique in this neglect. We, however, are deeply concerned that our colleges be an integral part of our total church program. Pioneering in this field of church recognition to faculty members would be an excellent way to strengthen this tie.

Dr. Charters is correct in placing a Christian faculty at the head of his list of influences which help to make a college Christian. Mennonite colleges recognize the importance of this factor. Much thought is needed on the problem of how to secure and hold faculty members of this type. The above seemed to be pertinent problems in this connection.

EDITORIALS

IF YOU WERE EDITOR what would you do with The Mennonite?

That is what we would like to know. We want to see the paper from your point-of-view. Therefore we plan to submit a questionnaire to you in the next issue of this paper. We hope that many will fill out this questionnaire and return it. A wide range of response from lay readers, young and old, should be very helpful. Usually the "reactions" that come are from ministers. These are very valuable—and we hope that all ministers will return the questionnaire—but these may not give us a cross section of the lay reader's response. Be sure to fill out as much of the questionnaire as appeals to you and then mail it to us. We have faith that the improvement of your church paper is worth to you ten minutes of your time and a three-cent postage stamp. If the paper means much to you, let us know it. If it means little to you, let us know that and the possible reasons for it. A paper, like individuals, needs to grow. It cannot be satisfied with its present status. Watch for your opportunity to put on paper the constructive thoughts that you have been accumulating. We desire your prayerful cooperation in this phase of Kingdom work. Look for the questionnaire in the next issue.

PEACETIME CONSCRIPTION? No. So says Ernest Fremont Tittle, renowned Methodist minister of Evanston, Illinois, in a magazine article. He asks America not to adopt a system "we have traditionally hated and deplored and which millions of our people came to this country to escape."

Peacetime conscription is not essential for our national security in the present state of the world. Against whom should we arm? Germany will be impotent for at least a generation, and Japan undoubtedly will be. Must we arm against Britain, France, or China? That hardly seems likely. "Russia would guess right that we were arming against her, and she would start arming against us" (italic ours). Russia wants to recover from the terrible wounds she has suffered in this war. But we are wrong if we think we can handle Russia with a big stick. The Russians are not afraid of big sticks. Why should they be after Stalingrad and Berlin? They have demonstrated that they can themselves make big sticks and can use them effectively." Furthermore Russia may gather into its sphere of influence much of Europe and much of Asia. If we start arming, Russia may not only arm itself but may form a combination of nations against us, including the countries of Eastern Europe and an industrialized China. Peacetime conscription might then take our country into a war that "might well be disastrous for us."

Peacetime conscription would not lead other countries to believe that we had a desire for peace. It would goad them into arming. "It is bad enough that Russia should have permanent military training. But peacetime conscription in Russia, which has long had it, is not at this time calculated to put as much fear into the world as would be the case with peacetime conscription in the United States, which has never had it." America's adoption of conscription would cause widespread fear and dismay.

Peacetime conscription would "gravely jeopardize our democratic way of life." by subjecting millions of American boys year after year to a system of unquestioning obedience, by gearing industry to a war basis, by creating an officer caste, by pushing our schools and churches into the military leaven, by endangering the rightful freedoms of minority groups and the rights of labor. A conscript army is not democratic because it "treats everybody alike." Everybody can be treated alike under a totalitarian government.

Peacetime conscription is not the road out for solving unemployment, or bringing about health, literacy, and moral character. These are of civilian concern and need civilian means.

"Instead of adopting peacetime conscription and thus dashing the hopes of the rest of mankind, why should we not urge the UNIVERSAL ABOLITION of peacetime conscription? In 1927 Russia was ready for this, even went so far as to propose it. Now is a good time for those who profess themselves Christians to give God a chance to show what he can do." (See Christian Advocate, June 28, 1945)

JUSTICE FOR WAR CRIMINALS is refreshingly discussed by Robert Maynard Hutchins in the July 4th issue of the Christian Century. Hutchins, who was secretary of the Yale law school before he became president of Chicago University, speaks with no inferior legal training when he says: "I insist that criminals must be punished. Justice demands that none of the guilty escape. At the same time it must be clear that the characteristic of criminals is that they are individuals, not nations or races. They should be punished for what they individually did. What they did, to deserve punishment at the hands

Letter From Ferd and Anna Isaac

(As written to relatives at home)

Mauhadi, via Champa, C. P., India
April 17, 1945

Dear Parents and Aunt Elizabeth,

Now we have been a month at Mauhadi. P. W. Penners stayed with us two weeks. They took us in their car to several of the new churches, and they told us everything about the work. They gave us the station and church accounts. Then they left us to ourselves. One of the first things we did was to go to the one remaining church to which they had not gone with us and there, too, we observed the Lord's Supper. This trip was done with a buffalo cart. It was slow. On a Friday morning we started across the river. Went four miles south to Beltikri where there is a church. On the way we visited a short time at a Christian's house in the village of Belha. Spent the heat of the day at Beltikri and about 5 p.m. we started off again in the cart. This time we went three miles to a village by name Pawni. Here we had our evening meal at a Christian's home and slept under the stars in our camp beds. At this village of Pawni there are nine Christians and there was a lively meeting that evening. At 4 a.m. Saturday we were on our way again. This time our destination was Sukli six miles from Pawni. Here there are two Christian families. By 7 a.m. we were within two miles of the village. There a man told us not to take our animals to that village because buffaloes were dying there of a kind of Pox. We therefore told our cart driver to take the cart to another road to our evening destination and we would go on foot to Sukli as well as to Manakoni where we were to spend the night. So to Suckli we took only water. We visited the Christians there, ate with them, rested in their homes during the noon hour, and at 4 p.m. started the five mile walk to Manakoni. It was rather hot, but we got there before sundown. At Manakoni there are several Christian families and there is a church. It used to be a school house. Now it has been dedicated as a church. Here, after a good night's rest, we celebrated the Lord's Supper the next morning. A couple of baptismal candidates were expected, but they did not show up. That evening after sun down we started for home in the cart. Had spread enough straw and a mat so that we might sleep some as the cart slowly moved on. During the night it is much easier for the animals. However, we had not gone far when a storm and some rain came on. We had to stop until the worst was over. Then we moved forward. We passed a village, and then our men lost the way. They moved more or less in a circle for half an hour. Finally they got back to the village and asked a vallager to show them the way. He did so very kindly. In another hour we got onto a main road which was well known. After going till about 2 a.m. the animals got tired. It was muddy there. There had been more rain. So we stopped at another village and all slept till daybreak. Anna and I could not sleep well because stray cattle continually came to get a bite of straw from the back end of our cart. Well, in the morning the going was better and we got to Pawni by 8 a.m., then to Murpar another village with several Christian families by 10 a.m., and to the river by 11 a.m. At twelve o'clock (sun time) we were at home, tired but well.

We are now expecting to go to the hills soon. Perhaps on the twenty-fourth. We are going to Landons where we have been many times. One reason for going there is that our Mission has bought a rest house there and we want to see it. Our health has been good since the new year, generally speaking.

With much love,

Ferd and Anna

HOME MISSIONS

A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

TORONTO MISSION NEWS

Recently the members of the Toronto United Mennonite Mission took a step in faith in the purchasing of a nine-room brick house to be used as a meeting-place for future Christian services. We are specially thankful to God for His wondrous leading in directing us to this new undertaking. This has been a source of creating new interest in our group, and we are looking for still greater things in the future.

During the past few years our meeting-place for worship has been in the hall of the First Lutheran Church, 116 Bond St. We have been grateful to this church and its pastor for granting us the use of this hall. But because we are not able to make use of the premises until 11:15 a.m. on Sunday when the Lutheran Sunday School classes close, and due to the fact that we have not been able to have any regular mid-week services, we have felt that we needed a church building which we could call our very own and make use of without depending on others. Many prayers have gone up and the Lord has answered them.

This purchased building is a three-story, solid brick house. The first floor can suitably be altered to make a large hall. This floor will serve us as a regular place of worship. At present there are occupants on the second floor and they will be there for some time until they find convenient quarters elsewhere. The third floor is already serving as the pastor's parish. As time goes on we hope to make a number of changes in the basement to make out of it very convenient Sunday School classrooms.

We are greatly indebted to the Home Mission Board of the General Conference for assisting us financially in this project. A substantial gift in money has been gratefully received as well as a loan. At the present time we are concerning ourselves with the payments which need to be met and in the alteration work, as well as the expense involved in buying a piano and church pews. Since we are only a small group, it will require that we sacrifice in order to make possible this project. To reduce the cost considerably, our people are willing, and have shown it already, to supply the necessary labor for these changes to be made even though their regular employment keeps them sufficiently busy.

Considerable progress has already been made in the alteration work. Measurements of the entire building, including the size of each room, windows, doors, etc., have been taken. Plans have then been drawn showing the floors of the house as they are and then also the proposed plans as we hope the building will appear after alterations are complete. These plans will be submitted to the city housing officials for their approval. The third floor is in the process of redecoration to make it a more convenient living apartment. At the present time a steel beam is being installed in the basement to strengthen the first floor due to the fact that more people will occupy this floor than formerly.

In the meantime our services will be held at 116 Bond Street until all necessary changes have been made. When we do take up our new Mission quarters the address will be: 140 Victor Avenue, which is also the present address of the pastor. We would be pleased to have you send us the names and addresses of relatives or friends whom you know are living in Toronto, or else tell them that we heartily welcome them to our services at the above given address. We will appreciate your continued prayers for our work here.—Arnold A. Fast, 140 Victor Avenue, Toronto 6, Ontario.

REV. A. J. NEUENSCHWANDER, TO VISIT
HOME MISSION FIELDS IN CANADA. REV.
JOHN J. PLENERT TO TAKE CARE OF CORR-ESPONDENCE.

At the board meeting in February, an urgent request from Rev. David Toews, for a member of the Board to come and visit the Canadian Home mission stations in the cities and in the rural districts, was carefully considered. The Board took action, asking that the Secretary spend approximately six weeks looking over the many mission projects and to confer with some of the leaders on problems that present themselves in the fields.

The three councils of the Swamp Charge Churches, agreed to let the pastor go if a good substitute was secured.

We were fortunate to secure Rev. Paul R. Shelly, Professor of Bible at Bluffton College, as the substitute. There are several times when two men are needed at the same time, and for those occasions Brother Arthur Keiser, Quakertown, Pa., home from Biblical Seminary, has consented to serve.

The Lord willing, I am leaving Quakertown on Sunday afternoon July 1st and expect to get to attend the Canadian Conference at the Eigenheim Church, near Rosthern, on the last day. July 5-8 the schedule calls for three messages at the Young People's Retreat, at Rosthern. From there on the Canadian men will make the plans.

Arrangements have been made that all correspondence for the Home Mission Board should be addressed to Rev. John J. Plenert, 7319 Whitaker Avenue, Philadelphia 11, Pa.

We solicit your prayers and the Lord's guidance in this work.—A. J. Neuenschwander

"Your Hands Are Full of Blood"

By Frederick J. Libby

Do you realize that we, the people of the United States, who like to call ourselves a Christian people, as contrasted with our "pagan" enemies, are waging a war of extermination by fire against the people—not merely the armies of Japan? Has your favorite newspaper told you how many civilians our Army believes we have burnt alive in Tokyo alone? The New York Times said on May 30:

"It is possible that 1,000,000 or maybe even twice that number, perished... It took only three hours for fifteen square miles of the city to become a raging inferno and the only exits were a few bridges over the nearby river."

In two nights 8,500 tons of bombs loaded with liquid fire were strewn over hitherto unburnt areas of the city where the population ran "between 75,000 and 110,000 persons per square mile." The burning of workingmen's homes and household "factories" may "shorten the war and save American lives," but there is a far better way. Altogether in six attacks our American aviators have burnt up 51 square miles of Tokyo with a large percentage of its civilian population—men, women, children, and babes in arms.

Results of Raid Termed "Excellent"

After the last of these raids the commander in charge was quoted in our Sunday morning papers as saying that the results had been "excellent." And with this assurance devout Americans went to church to pray. Where were the courageous Pastor Niemoellers that Sunday morning, the Jeremiahs and Isaiahs, to lift up their voices in protest against this huge atrocity? Monday's papers reported one New York preacher as having declared that the German people will have to suffer for the cruelties which the Nazis practiced in their concentration camps. Then what about us?

It is doubted if many Germans realized what was going on within their concentration camps, so one of our Army commanders told members of the Congressional investigating committee. And if anyone had protested, he would quickly have found himself in one.

The Guilt Is Ours

We Americans are in a different position. We know what we are doing, for our press and radio tell us. We actually can see our atrocities enacted in newsreels, except that we don't hear the screams of women and children, any more than do our aviators who pour down the fire bombs on their heads.

These aviators are among our finest men. Many of them have wives and little babies of their own. But we have conscripted them, selected them carefully, trained them, and commissioned them and their superior officers, to win the war against Japan, and they are trying to win with the same barbarity practiced against the cities of Germany. Their sense of duty, their accountability to us and to their superior officers, drives them on their awful missions. Were any of them to heed the promptings of pity, they would be court-martialed and shot. The guilt is ours.

One of the men who bombed the cities of Germany vowed in a letter to a friend that he was going back after the war to help rebuild what he had destroyed. But he would never be able to bring the dead back to life. Upon our heads must rest forever the responsibility for our agents' deeds.—Peace Action

How General Conference Guests Were Fed

Preparing a meal for guests is always an important and pleasurable incident in the life of a family, but when the expected guests are counted by hundreds and the family includes an entire community, it becomes more than a mere incident, but a none the less important and delightful event. Thus, when permissions had been granted to hold the General Conference at North Newton, the committee appointed by the entertaining churches to the task of serving food to delegates and visitors went to work with zeal. When the Bethel College Women's Association was asked to assume the responsibility for organizing and directing the work, they gladly consented because they saw in it an opportunity to be of service not only in furthering the cause of Christian education but that of the church at large as well by ministering to the physical needs of those who would gather to plan the program of the General Conference. Mrs. J. J. Siemens, whose efficiency in planning and serving meals is well known, was appointed by the association to assist Miss Hill, dietitian at the College, as co-chairman with Mr. T. A. Mueller of the Foods Committee. These met with representatives from the surrounding churches to plan menus, order food, arrange for rationing points, and

Isaiah's Message to America

"To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices unto me? saith the Lord... When ye come to appear before me, who hath required this at your hand, to tread my courts? ... And when ye spread forth your hands, I will hide mine eyes from you: yea, when ye make many prayers, I will not hear: your hands are full of blood... Put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes; cease to do evil; learn to do well... Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow... But if ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be devoured with the sword: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it."

Many churches made liberal donations of food, and various church groups took turns at serving the noon and evening meals. The two local churches prepared and served breakfasts. A small staff of men and women were employed for regular duty in the kitchen. These worked in two shifts. If anyone noticed three tired looking young women in white uniforms leaving the dining hall after breakfast, he might have learned upon inquiry that the ladies had just finished baking two hundred pies.

All meals were served in the dining room of Memorial Hall. Although all menus had been planned in advance, it became necessary to change them occasionally in order to avoid waste. Similarly it seemed economical to use cafeteria service at the morning and evening meals.

Many have expressed amazement at the way this big task was accomplished with such dispatch. Loyal support and fine cooperation and many willing hands can accomplish great things.

BETHESDA MENNONITE CHURCH

Henderson, Nebraska

The Northern District Conference convened in our church on May 26-29. Nearly all of the churches belonging to the Northern Conference were represented. South Dakota had the largest representation, namely forty-one delegates and guests.

The 122 guests and delegates were listed as follows: 38 ministers, 6 missionaries, 51 delegates and 47 guests. The women of the church served the noon and evening meals in the church basement. Approximately 150 people were served at each meal. The Sunday noon meal was served in the form of a basket dinner. Many took part. Everything went over well, and the tables were cleared before the afternoon session began.

To have a conference in our midst is a blessing. Generally only the ministers and a few delegates attend conferences. But when the local church has the opportunity to entertain a conference, more get acquainted with the various workers of the field. The tendency is to be detracted from our own work in the church, due to the many other worthy causes and appeals that are made to us by outsiders. Our work is first, and then there will be some who find that they have a mite or two for other causes that are worthy of support.

Most of the ministers and some of the guests left the next day for the General Conference which was held at North Newton, Kansas.

SWISS MENNONITE CHURCH

Alsen, North Dakota

"The Lord hath done great things for us whereof we are glad."

This testimony certainly has been true for us this spring, spiritually speaking. We have enjoyed many blessings. The crowning point probably came when we had our union evangelistic services the last week in May with Rev. Theo. H. Epp, radio evangelist, as the visiting speaker. The four Mennonite churches from this community participated. "The Lord's hand is not shortened that it cannot save." We are thankful for the salvation of precious souls, and others who came in complete surrender to Him. May they grow in the grace and knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ day by day is our prayer for each one.

Another event of blessing was the joint Sunday School convention and youth conference, also in union with other Mennonite churches here. Dr. C. H. Suckau and Brother Victor Graber from Delft, Minnesota, were the guest speakers. Another special feature was the girls' quartet from the Grace Bible Institute. Everyone enjoyed their fine spiritual testimony in song. Sunday evening Dr. Suckau showed pictures entitled the "Marvel of God's Grace," depicting student life and work at the institute. We are truly grateful that the Lord raised up such a school in answer to our and many other prayers. May He continue to bless it as He so marvelously has in its beginning.

Our D.V.B.S. will continue throughout this week. It was postponed a few weeks because Rev. and Mrs. Flickinger and family attended both the Northern and General Conference. They also visited, for a few days, with relatives and friends in Kansas, their former home.

Memorial services were held in our church for Pvt. Clarence Klein, Sunday, June 24. He was killed in action in the Pacific theatre of the war on April 8.

Five children were dedicated to the Lord on Mother's Day.

Rev. Paul Barkman held a young people's meeting here Saturday evening, June 9, during the absence of Rev. Flickinger, and reports a nice time of fellowship.

We have had a late cool spring this year. However now everything is nice and green, and growing rapidly. The last few days (written June 29) we have had showers off and on with cool weather. —Mrs. W. J. Flickinger, Corr.

BRUDERTAL MENNONITE CHURCH

Hillsboro, Kansas

This summer again as other years during the months of July and August the five churches, namely, Brudertal, Johannestal, Lehigh, Hillsboro Mennonite and Evangelical, Hillsboro, join in outdoor union meetings, held on the lawn of the Hillsboro Mennonite Church. The juniors take over one evening and give a fine program. The young people of these churches also give a program or are responsible for a program. One evening is usually a musical program, while for the rest of the meetings we usually have guest speakers. We think these meetings help to promote fellowship and goodwill.

Golden Wedding of Rev. and Mrs. Benj. Ewert

Friends and relatives of Rev. and Mrs. Benj. Ewert of Winnipeg, Manitoba, were fortunate to help them celebrate their golden wedding at the Brudertal Church on Sunday June 17. Dr. C. E. Krehbiel of Newton delivered the anniversary address. Musical numbers were given by relatives. A reception was held in the church basement after the program.

Brudertal Vacation Bible School started April 23 and closed May 18. Thirty-five pupils were enrolled in vacation Bible school. Miss Helen Ensz and Miss Edna Penner from Beatrice, Nebraska, were the teachers. School closed with a program by the pupils. Dinner in church basement and picnic in afternoon. We combine Sunday School picnic and school close. The day usually ends with a lunch of ice cream.

We have had a number of visiting ministers in our midst lately. On June 3, Conference Sunday, Rev. H. D. Raid of Fortuna Missouri delivered the morning sermon. One June 17, Rev. Benj. Ewert of Winnipeg, Manitoba delivered the morning message. On June 17, in the evening, Rev. and Mrs. Albert Jantzen were in our midst and told of their work in China and of their internment in the Philippines.

Then on July 1, Rev. Arnold Nickel from Mountain Lake, Minnesota gave the morning sermon, while our minister Rev. A. E. Funk was called to Turpin, Oklahoma.—Corr.

THE FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Newton, Kansas

Your correspondent was away part of this last quarter and may therefore have omitted some incidents of which he has no knowledge.

May 3, Dr. G. S. Klassen of Hillsboro, Kansas, showed pictures of South America. People do not become sleepy when Dr. Klassen speaks in his humorous way.

Ascension Day was observed by our church in having morning worship service. According to the custom of the church, the Articles of Faith were read on May 13. That surely is a good practice. All members should avail themselves of the opportunity to receive a copy of these Articles of Faith and study them.

The crowning act for our church was the baptismal service on May 30 when twenty candidates were baptized and received into the church. All of these had given satisfactory evidence that they had become God's children by receiving Jesus Christ as their own personal Saviour.

Besides Dr. Wm. Evans, who spoke to our congregation at the time of the Bible Conference, we have had Dr. Abr. Warkentin for one Sunday morning service and one Bible study hour. Also Rev. Erland Waltner one Sunday morning.

Our young people had their picnic Memorial Day.—Corr.

JOHANNESTAL MENNONITE CHURCH

Hillsboro, Kansas

Visiting ministers at the Johannestal Church during the month of June were Rev. Harry Yoder and Rev. J. J. Plenert. Rev. Yoder delivered the message on conference Sunday. Rev. Plenert brought the morning message to his home church on June 17.

The Sunday School had its picnic on June 18.

Our pastor Rev. J. M. Regier, and Mrs. Regier are leaving us for two months to take up work at the C. P. S. Camp at Colorado Springs and Denver.

The harvest is drawing near and by the time this will appear farmers will be busy harvesting.—Corr.

EINSIEDEL MENNONITE CHURCH

Hanston, Kansas

We have recently passed another milestone in the life of our church. On May 27th we celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of the founding of the church.

The usual morning worship and Sunday School Services were followed by a fellowship dinner in the church basement. The anniversary service was held in the afternoon. At this service we heard greetings from former ministers of the church and Conference leaders who were unable to attend—as well as greetings from neighboring churches. The struggles and efforts of the founding fathers in establishing regular worship services and a church here, were graphically portrayed, as Prof. E. E. Hirschler read the account, and John Lingenfelder developed the scenes in color crayon, all to the accompaniment of favorite hymns of the church.

Many friends, and sons and daughters of the church, who now live elsewhere, came to share this day with us. Special choral music numbers had been prepared for the morning and afternoon services. God's glory and beauties of nature were evidenced in the many beautiful bouquets of flowers which lined the entire pulpit platform. Surely, it was a day of great spiritual blessings, to encourage and inspire this church to ever press forward, to carry on and increase the work so nobly begun by the "Faith of our Fathers" sixty years ago.

This spring, a Bible Story and catechetical instruction class has again been started in our church. Likewise we were glad that a few of the laity of our church were able to attend a portion of the General Conference session. It is as the layman attend, and are inspired by the conference sessions and receive a greater vision of the work and services of the church, that the work of the Conference and of the individual churches goes forward on a higher plane.

On Easter Sunday, our church began using the church bulletins as prepared by the Bethel College Secretarial Bureau. We appreciate the valuable information we gain from them, and feel that their use tends to create a more worshipful attitude in our services.

A CHRISTIAN CONSCIENCE ABOUT WAR

How can any of us avoid the conviction that this colossal and ominous question of war, upon the answer to which the future of man depends, is in particular a crucial affair for Christianity? It has been said again and again that if another war befalls us and shakes civilization to its foundations, as it surely would, the Christians of the world will be to blame. Surely that is true. The continuance of war will advertise that the 576,000,000 professed Christians on earth have not had an earnest conscience about their Master's view of life. It will bear evidence that while they have called Him "Lord, Lord," they have not been willing to do what He said.

The old appeals for war, in the name of "good cause," fall coldly now on the instructed ear, and cease to carry conviction to thoughtful minds. "Would you not go to war to protect the weak?" men ask. The answer seems obvious. A modern war to protect the weak—that is a grim jest! See how modern war protects the weak: 10,000 known dead soldiers; 3,000,000 presumed dead soldiers; 13,000,000 dead civilians; 20,000,000 wounded; 3,000,000 prisoners; 9,000,000 war orphans; 5,000,000 war widows; 10,000,000 refugees. What can we mean—"Modern War"! The conviction grows clear that modern war is no way to protect the weak!

The spirit of Christianity is not narrowly nationalistic, but universally inclusive. When the world therefore organizes itself on the basis of belligerent nationalism, the very genius of the Christian gospel is at stake. Once more we can have our old war systems with their appalling modern developments, or we can have Christianity, but we cannot have both. They worship irreconcilable gods.

When Christianity joined with the state, and forgot its earlier attitudes, it bowed to the necessities of imperial action and became a sponsor of war, blesser of war, causer of war, and fighter of war. Since then the Church has come down through history, too often trying to carry the Cross of Jesus in one hand and a dripping sword in the other; until now when Christians look out upon the consequence of it all— this abysmal disgrace of Christendom making mockery of the Gospel—the conviction rises that we would better go back to our first traditions, our early purity, and see whether those first disciples of the Lord were not nearer right than we have been.

We cannot reconcile Jesus Christ and war—that is the essence of the matter. That is the challenge which today should stir the conscience of Christendom. War is the most colossal and ruinous social sin that afflicts mankind. It is utterly and irremediably unchristian; in its total method and effect it means everything that Jesus did not mean and it means nothing that He did mean. It is a more blatant denial of every Christian doctrine about God and man than all the theoretical atheists on earth ever could devise.

Like gravitation in the physical realm, the law of the Lord in the moral realm bends for no man and no nation: "All they that take the sword shall perish with the sword."—Selected.

YOUTH JOTTINGS

IOWA YOUNG PEOPLE'S RETREAT

The Wayland Church will be host to the Iowa retreat this year. The date is July 28, 29. These two days of Bible study, discussion of life problems and of Christian fellowship are always a source of guidance and inspiration to our young people. The program promises to be most helpful. Rev. R. L. Hartzler, Bloomington, Ill. will be guest speaker.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH Newton, Kansas

The Young People's Christian Endeavor of the First Mennonite Church of Newton, recently had a discussion program on "The Young People and the Church." Eight members of the society each spoke for two minutes on various topics dealing with the young people's part in the Church and Sunday School and also their relationship with one another such as the girl-boy relationship. Miss Joanne Unruh, daughter of Rev. D. J. Unruh is the president of the society, and Mr. Menno Schrag is the advisor.

Having decided to have a social each month to foster Christian fun and fellowship, fifty-two young people enjoyed a social Friday evening June 22 in the Athletic Park. Following several hours of swimming, baseball, and tennis and after having been refreshed with cake and ice cream the group gathered together for a period of planned entertainment consisting of stunts presented by various members present. The evening of fun was brought to a close with a short period of Christian fellowship which consisted of a singspiration and a message by Rev. Homer Sperling.

Rev. Sperling is directing the young people's choir for the summer months. He is on the teaching staff of the Oklahoma Bible Academy and while at home with his parents in Newton is attending the summer session at Bethel College.

ACTIVE SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS

Berne, Indiana: Our Sunday School class of about thirty or thirty-five girls, taught by Miss Inda Sprunger, has been accomplishing much in developing a missionary spirit. We have been conducting mission studies off and on since 1933, and since the past three years, have been holding them on a quarterly basis with the class divided in four groups, each group responsible for planning a meeting during their quarter.

The second quarter group this year chose to have Miss Elda Amstutz tell of her camp experiences during her three years internment in the Philippines. The little sheet we edit tells about her and features our program. We do have quite an outstandingly active class, along missionary lines.

The meeting we had last evening was based along the theme of Mrs. Cowman's book Streams in the Desert which so many of us enjoy in our daily devotional life. It was also our annual mothers and daughters meeting which was preceded with a carry-in-supper. This supper and program took place in the basement of the First Mennonite Church. The program after supper was open to the public.

Daily Devotional Messages

By Jacob T. Friesen, Beatrice, Nebraska

JULY 31—Suggested Reading: Mark 1:14-18. Come ye after me, and I will make you to become fishers of men. Mark 1:17 R. V.

Let us center our devotional thoughts for this week around a few experiences of the Apostle Peter. Jesus directed these simple words to Peter and Andrew and without hesitation they "left their nets, and followed him." They had likely spoken with Jesus before this time, but even though they were friends of Jesus, they had to make a decision to become his disciples. This decision opened the door to discipleship and service through which Peter passed accepting the challenge of becoming a fisher of men. This challenge comes to us daily, and we have the privilege of accepting or rejecting it.

AUGUST 1—Suggested Reading: Matthew 16:13-20. But who say ye that I am, And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Matthew 16:15-16

Jesus desires to know what we personally think of him. The opinions of the multitude are secondary to this heart searching question. Simon Peter gave an answer. We often speak of impetuous Peter. Whether he was that here or not is not as important as the fact that he said just what he thought. This he had gained from his intimate experience with his Lord. A testimony of this nature is rooted in a genuine personal experience with Jesus and in a life of constant communion with him. Is this also our testimony?

AUGUST 2—Suggested Reading: Luke 22:54-62. "And they seized him, and led him away, and brought him into the high priest's house. But Peter followed afar off. Luke 22:54

Here was one who knew the truth, who had given his life and his talents to learning more of it, but who lacked the power to live up to what he knew was right. In the hour of testing he lacked that which would have turned defeat into victory. We don't know all the reasons why, but we know that when Peter denied his Lord he was not near his side. Untold temptations loose their power over us the moment we draw into the intimate presence of our Lord. It is dangerous to "follow afar off." Every Christian who would live a victorious life over sin must remain in the intimate sustaining presence of his Lord.

AUGUST 3—Suggested Reading: Acts 2:22-38. But Peter standing up with the eleven, lifted up his voice, and spoke forth unto them." Acts 2:14.

Peter had been a follower but not a fisher of men. Jesus' call challenged him to become both. Sincere efforts on the part of Peter had repeatedly encountered defeat. But Peter had only begun to plumb the depths of Christian experience. After Pentecost Peter became "the rock" as his name suggests. He became the symbol of true, early Christianity. The power of the Holy Spirit taking possession of Peter transformed former defeats into victories. Our defeats become victories when we live in the power of the Spirit.

AUGUST 4—Suggested Reading: Acts 10:23-33. "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness is acceptable to him. Acts 10:34-35.

It was very hard for a Jew to think of God as a God for all peoples. Peter was one of the first to become convinced that the Gospel was for the Gentiles as well as the Jews. This realization gave to the early Christians the challenge of evangelizing the entire then-known world. Today we all believe that God is no respecter of persons, but we often fail to associate this with the challenge of evangelizing the entire world. This is part of our task as Christians and we should work and pray with this goal in view.

AUGUST 5—Suggested Reading: I Peter 3:13-16. "Be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear." I Pet. 3:15b.

"After having sanctified the Lord God in your hearts," then also "be ready to give an answer." They who first read these words were living in a pagan environment and were often asked why they lived as Christians. Why they refused to do certain things which were done by all others. Along with an irreproachable life Peter encourages them to be ready to give a reasonable answer to all that sincerely desire to know. A sincere testimony given "with meekness and fear" is one of the most effective means of winning unbelievers.

AUGUST 6—Suggested Reading: I Peter 3:8-12 "Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time." I Peter 5:6.

In his old age Peter wrote two Epistles to remind Christians of the teaching that had been brought to them. One of the most frequently mentioned exhortations is to humility. Augustine once said, "Humility is the vessel of all graces." Humility is necessary in all of life's experiences if they are to be acceptable to God. God resists the proud but giveth grace to the humble. Peter learned this lesson through hard experiences and therefore places it high on the ladder of desirable Christian virtues.

IN MEMORIAM

CLARA MAE MOSER, daughter of Peter and Anna Loganbill, was born February 3, 1873, in Moniteau County, Missouri, and died June 19, 1945. She became a member of the Bethel Mennonite Church (Fortuna) in 1891. In 1895 she was united in marriage to S. J. Moser, who now survives her after nearly fifty years of married life. Besides her husband she is mourned by three children: Mrs. Ira L. Gerber and Mrs. Alvin L. Elliot of Versailles, and Harold of Des Moines, Iowa. She is also survived by two brothers and two sisters.

MRS. KATHARINA WIEBE MATTHIES was born July 13, 1857, in South Russia. She was baptized in 1876 and accepted as a member of the Mennonite Church. In 1877 she married Franz Matthies, who preceded her in death in 1912. Together with eight children they came to America in 1893. Two more children were born here. Those now living are: Mrs. Katherine Dyck and F. F. Matthies, Buhler; Mrs. Anna Dalke, Aberdeen, Idaho; Mrs. John R. Regier, Moundridge; Henry, and A. W. of Hutchinson, and George of Halstead. She answered her summons on June 29, 1945.

Dutch Mennonite Leader Appeals for Help

Dear Brethren:

This week a ship is sailing to America and I wish to take the opportunity to send word of our welfare. Throughout this country we have passed through a most severe time the past five years, and the Almighty has submitted us to a hard trial. We are, of course, very thankful for the liberation by the allied forces, but, nevertheless, we are in many respects living on the ruins of our former existence.

Our communities received heavy blows. Rotterdam was first in turn. The Germans destroyed on May 14, 1940, the whole, old city and some suburbs, also our beautiful, old church which you know so well. We gather now in small buildings and halls; we are now using the seventh! Four more Mennonite churches were destroyed in Wageningen, Flushing, Nymegen, and Arnhem and many others damaged. When and how these can be rebuilt lies entirely in the dark. Many of our members have been carried off as forced labourers or prisoners to Germany, and a great number of them have died in the concentration camps; we fear that two of our ministers belong to the latter. A student of our Mennonite college died there. . .

In material respect we also went through a very difficult period, especially the past winter and this spring, when all of us were tormented by a constant hunger. Many members of our communities, particularly here in the western part of Holland, died, especially old people. There remains a heavy shortage of all kinds of living necessities, such as clothes, shoes, furniture, bicycle tires, etc. But we have come through those terrible years and in our communities a strong revival could be noticed. Seeing that this world disappointed, and men showed themselves from such a bad side, there were a great many people who looked elsewhere for their consolation and returned to God, Who withheld His blessing! All this will interest you. But I write to you, also, to ask your help. In a previous period we could give; now our Netherlands brotherhood is in the greatest need itself. Brother Lehman (Akron) has been informed already about the southern part of our country which was liberated in 1944. We appeal to our personal friendship and relations during the years of our relief work—Canada, Mexico, Brazil, Paraguay—and the Mennonite Congresses. I address myself to you in the name of the community of Rotterdam and of the ALGEMEENE DOOPSGEZINDE SOCIETEIT of which I am the vice chairman. The headquarters of the Mennonite reparation work will be there. (Secretary: H. Craandijk, Amsterdam, Corellistraat 8.)

We feel sure, that you will support us to the measure of your powers. I shall be pleased to furnish you any additional information concerning the actual conditions here.

Receive my hearty greetings, also from my wife. God be with you all. I hope to receive good tidings from you and your communities. With brother greetings, believe me,

Yours very affectionately,
(Signed Ds. S.H.N. Gorter)

of human judges, must have been illegal at the time it was done. If the judgment is to command the respect of Americans, it must be shown that the act was one which a patriotic American would not have committed if he had been a patriotic German. Punishment for illegal acts must be meted out legally, with a fair trial and adherence to the Anglo-Saxon principle that every man is presumed innocent until he is proved guilty. We must remember the ancient doctrine that no man is a good judge in his own cause. And it would do us no harm to apply the maxim of equity that one must come into court with clean hands."

RELIEF

Letter from Russian Mennonites

Recently the M.C.C. received a letter from Cornelius C. Reimer, a Mennonite from Russia, who was living in a camp in Germany "with other poor and homeless people of Russia." Reimer states that he with his daughter were evacuated from the East Russian front in March, 1943, and that he is destitute and has had no information from his wife and son since the beginning of the war in June, 1941. He sends his greetings to all friends and relatives in this country. The letter was addressed to Alvin J. Miller, formerly director of American Mennonite Relief in Russia. Cornelius Reimer had served as head of the financial and accounting department in the office of A.M.R. in Moscow from 1922 to 1926. His letter was conveyed and sent to this country by an American soldier who recently met Reimer in Germany.

Confer with Mennonites in Holland

A group of Dutch Mennonite leaders met with O. O. Miller and Sam Goering in Amsterdam, June 24, to confer regarding relief needs in Holland. The cable announcing the meeting reports further: FOOD NEEDS WORSE WEST HOLLAND, PROPERTY DESTRUCTION SOUTH AND EAST HOLLAND, DESPERATE NEED FOR CLOTHING, SOAP, FUEL ALL SECTIONS.

Chapel to Be Built in Puerto Rico

Brother and Sister Joe E. Brunk, Goshen, Indiana, left Akron, June 17 for Miami where they will wait for the earliest available passage to Puerto Rico. Brother Brunk, a contractor and builder, will give his service for a period of six months to assist in the building of a proposed chapel for the relief and C.P.S. unit in the La Plata Valley. The present quarters used for religious services have become cramped by the attendance of unit personnel, numbering over forty, and local Puerto Ricans.

C.P.S. members of the La Plata unit have recently completed the construction of a barn to quarter the dairy cattle contributed by the Brethren Service Committee. Priority has also been granted to build a small home for the H. Clair Amstutz family and construction is under way.

Mennonite Clothing Centers

Four centers, quite centrally located to the larger Mennonite communities in the United States and Canada, are now established for the collection and processing of clothing for relief. For the information of contributors to the clothing program the four centers and their supervisors are listed here.

Ephrata Clothing Center, Akron, Pa., Anna Snyder
Newton Clothing Center, 220 N. Main Street, Newton, Kansas, Selma Linscheid

Kitchener Clothing Center, 223 King Street, East, Kitchener, Ontario, Clara Snider

Winnipeg Clothing Center, c/o G. F. Klassen, 165 Cathedral Avenue, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Margaret Froese

Office Personnel

The following five secretaries have joined the relief and C.P.S. office staff at Akron within recent weeks either as replacements, or as additional workers in the program: Laura Metzler, North Lima, Ohio, secretary in the Relief Research Office; Mary Hepner, McAlisterville, Pennsylvania, secretary in the C.P.S. Hospital Division; Miriam Weaver, Lancaster, Pennsylvania, secretary to the general director of M.C.C.-C.P.S.; Fern Grieser, Meadville, Pennsylvania, secretary to the director of the C.P.S. and Relief Canning Program; and Cora Garber, Goshen, Indiana, secretary in the C.P.S. Education Office.

Steps to Aid Dutch Mennonites

A license has been granted to send $3,000 to Holland immediately with an arrangement to send a similar or larger sum each month for the next six months. Another license permits an aggregate sum of $20,000 to be sent to England within the next three months to be used for the purchase of supplies to be sent to Holland and France. The ten tons of baled clothing shipped to Holland in March, 1945, have arrived in a Dutch port, it is believed. Other clothing shipments are being arranged. Besides the food shipment now enroute, permission has been given to ship a donation consisting of one hundred cartons of commercially canned tomato puree.

Within the past two weeks the Akron office has received two letters from Dutch Mennonite elders, representing congregations in Zeeland and the Rotterdam, which confirm the desperate need as reported by cable from Orié Miller, after meeting with Dutch Mennonite leaders in Amsterdam, June 24. The letter from Rotterdam has been released for publication in the church papers.

Canned Foods Shipped to Holland

Contributions consisting of twenty cartons of home-canned fruits and vegetables, two cartons of canned meats, five cartons of commercially canned peaches (No. 10 cans) and 400 pounds of lard were transferred from an M. C. C. collection center, June 30 to an eastern port for shipment to Holland. This preliminary shipment to the Continent has been carefully packed according to approved shipping methods. The condition of the contents will be reported at the time of arrival and distribution in Holland, so the M. C. C. may check, and improve if necessary, methods of shipping canned goods overseas.

Relief Appointees Complete Special Study

The Relief Training School, conducted at Goshen College, June 11 to 30, has now terminated and the nine appointed relief workers who attended have transferred to Akron. At the Headquarters office they will get their visas and permits in order and otherwise prepare to leave for their assignments in France and England. Until they leave they will concentrate on a study of the French language.

Island Government Grants Subsidy

The Puerto Rican government, through the Public Health Department, has granted the Brethern and Mennonite relief and C. P. S. units at Castaner and La Plata a subsidy of $40,000 for the use throughout the coming year. The amount will be divided equally between the two units to carry on their community health projects.

Foods for Relief

The churches of both United States and Canada are showing a gratifying interest in producing food for relief. Orié O. Miller's contact with Mennonite leaders in Holland confirms the reports of desperate need for food as well as other supplies. Latest information from U. N. R. R. A. officials indicates that canned vegetables of all kinds, particularly tomatoes and rhubarb, will be very useful. While concentrated sweet fruits in the form of jams, butters, and preserves are most needed, canned fruits of all kinds are encouraged. If sugar or syrup cannot be obtained, fruit may be canned unsweetened. Our U. S. and Canadian constituencies are encouraged to give themselves unstintingly to this program.

"Service for Peace"

Members of the C.P.S. camp at Fort Collins, Colorado, have prepared and published in book form the story of the work they are doing and also an interpretation of the larger Mennonite peace witness. The book contains pictures of members of the camp and many excellent photographs and sketches of camp life and work. It probably represents the most serious and accomplished efforts on the part of C.P.S. men to date to place on record, the work they are doing. Copies may be secured for two dollars each by ordering from C.P.S. 33, Fort Collins, Colorado.

Atypical Pneumonia "Guinea Pigs"

After almost three weeks of isolation, members of the C.P.S. "guinea pig" unit at Pinehurst, North Carolina, were inoculated with the pneumonia virus. So far the project has developed satisfactorily without any serious complications on the part of the subjects of the experiment. One of the biggest tasks is to keep the "pigs" busy and contented in their isolation. John Hostetler, educational director for the unit, writes: "I have been busy supplying the men with books and magazines, crocheting, weaving, carving, and rug-making materials. We think it is better than any camp or hospital unit. The attendants are well satisfied and everyone seems to be happy so far." The members of the unit have started a newssheet which they call the Pigs' Pen. A second experiment upon the arrival of forty new volunteers will begin July 15.

C.P.S. by Administrative Agencies

The following summary indicates the number of men in C.P.S. under the direction of the various administrative agencies. Statistics are as of June 15, 1945.

Mennonite	4,018
Brethren	1,949
Friends	1,703
Selective Service	417
Catholic	106
Methodist	70
Baptist	31
Disciples of Christ	22
Evangelical and Reformed	15
Detached Service	95

Discharge of Men over Forty

Members of C. P. S. camps and projects were notified by Selective Service on June 14 that assignees forty years of age and over were eligible for discharge. Previously all men forty-two years of age or over qualified for release. This new order will affect twenty men in Mennonite camps.

Crafts in C. P. S.

C. P. S. men have always taken quite an interest in crafts, but more recently this type of activity has been encouraged from the Akron office and has been growing. Particularly during the summer months, when formal camp activity is disrupted by side camps, fire fighting, and furloughs, the carrying out of craftwork is an excellent type of diversion.

To train a number of C. P. S. men to teach crafts, a three-week's school is in progress at the Denison Camp with David Kope, an assignee from North Fork Camp, in charge. The members of the school are given training in leatherwork, wood and chip carving, weaving, plaque making, ceramics, and the use of plastics.

Foreign Relief Service Off for Another Year

Again this year, as in 1943 and 1944, a rider, prohibiting C. P. S. men from being used in relief work abroad, was attached to and passed with the War Department Appropriations Act. The amendment was added this year again in spite of the fact that Congressman Starnes, the author of the rider in previous years, is no longer in Washington and, also, over the protest of the War Department against its presence.

Anniversary Review

Members of the C. P. S. unit at Harrisburg State Hospital, Pennsylvania, have published an annual presenting their work at the Hospital, and in a larger way emphasizing the need for proper care and treatment of mental patients. The book is an excellent representation of the interest C. P. S. men are taking in applying Christian concerns and methods to the welfare of the mentally ill. The price of the book is one dollar per copy and may be ordered from Gerhard Peters, director of the unit.

Union at the First Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana. —The Grace Mennonite Church of Lansdale, Pa., is the subject of an article in the “Know Your Churches” series that has been running in the North Penn Reporter of Lansdale. An interesting short history of the church is given and along with it a list of organizations and services and also pictures of the church and of the pastor, Rev. Olin Krehbiel. Because of its general interest we reprint the short history below.

HISTORY

A group of Mennonites, many of whom had moved to Lansdale from Bucks county and thus were some distance away from their home churches, felt the need of having a church of their own here in town. So on February 2, 1928, and every Thursday evening thereafter, they met in the various homes for Bible study, prayer and fellowship. This group was given direction and assistance by Rev. Allen M. Fretz and the Home Mission Committee of the Conference.

In July, 1929, arrangements were made to rent the former Evangelical Church building on Mt. Vernon Street, and Sunday services were started. This building was purchased in November of the same year. Rev. D. J. Unruh was called to become the first pastor, January 1, 1930.

Grace Mennonite Church was formally organized, February 26, 1930. Forty-five persons were in the original group of organizers but twenty more were included as charter members. Rev. Unruh resigned as pastor in 1936 and the present pastor was called.

The present active church membership is 252 and the Sunday School has an enrollment of 250 with an average attendance of 194. The church building lot and parsonage are valued at $15,500.00 and are debt free. Plans are being made for a new church building.

Last year $2881.41 was contributed for Missions, Conference and Charitable endeavor, while $4662.96 was given to carry on the local work. Three missionaries, three ministers and two ministers' wives have come from the membership of this congregation.

Persons are received into membership upon profession of faith in the Lord Jesus Christ as their Saviour and baptism or by transfer from another congregation. Members are expected to live in accordance with New Testament standards.

—“a dynamic and challenging message of Christianity” is a phrase taken from a short newspaper clipping sent in from Wadsworth, Ohio, by G. A. McBride who faithfully sends us the bulletins of the Wadsworth Church. The full article reads:

REV. SMUCKER LEAVES

While Wadsworth people are sorry to see Rev. Donovan Smucker leave his pastorate here, they are unanimous in their expression of best wishes for his continued success as he goes to Princeton for more study. In his four years here, Rev. Smucker brought a dynamic and challenging message of Christianity. Particularly interested in preaching, Smucker is an outstanding pulpit speaker.

Too few ministers in these days have the interest in preaching the Gospel that Rev. Smucker has and no community can help but be inspired and uplifted by a fine preacher.

Rev. Smucker has left his mark on Wadsworth, because of his adherence to his creed, because of his high intelligence and because of his constant search for truth.

Again, Wadsworth wishes him well, and sends with him and his family, best wishes and thanks for a job well done.

Brother Smucker ended his pastorate at Wadsworth with a communion service on July 1. He will make a speaking tour of C. P. S. camps in Montana and California from July 18 to August 23.

Cordier, a technical expert in the division of international security affairs, Department of State. Dr. Cordier resigned from the chairmanship of the Brethern Service Committee in order to take this job. He is on leave of absence from Manchester College, a Church of the Brethern institution in Indiana.

Penner; The Nazis Interned Me by Henry Buller; Eternment Echoes by Wilhelmina Kuyf; Champa Hospital in the Making by Dr. Ella G. Bauman; A New Macedonian Call by Gerald Stucky; Puerto Rico—Island of Sunshine and Need by William H. Stauffer. This church is also promoting the sending of "Christmas Parcels" to the church people of war-torn Europe.

—Rev. Marvin Dirks, who has visited churches in Minnesota and South Dakota since about the middle of June, is to visit other churches in Dakota and Montana until towards the end of July when he is to serve at a young people's retreat to be held at Topeka, Indiana. Then he will return home for a stay of a week or so. Mrs. Dirks is at present staying with her parents, Rev. and Mrs. Abraham Albrecht, Newton.

—Burns, Kansas: On July 15th Winton Stucky showed his pictures of "Smoke-jumping."

—Jon Edmund Miller entered the home of Rev. and Mrs. Edmund Miller, Lind, Washington, on June 19. Jon, born April 3, 1944, is undoubtedly very happy with his new parent.

To Our Western District Conference Churches: Greetings:

The building up and strengthening of new and outlying groups of our faith with the intent of establishing them as growing churches is a definite part of the work of our conference. We rejoice at the progress made at Burns, Kansas. In organizing the church there and in the splendid efforts they have and are making toward securing their own meeting house. However they need assistance. For that reason the Home Mission Committee has agreed to recommend to the churches of our Western District Conference that when they are approached by the First Mennonite Church of Burns, they graciously receive the appeal of this church and respond to it as the Spirit shall lead them. This too is the Lord's Work.—The Home Mission Committee; W. F. Unruh, Chairman; Arnold E. Funk, Secretary.

—Mountain Lake, Minnesota: The Young People's Retreat of the General Conference churches of this community will be held at the Bethel Church, August 19 to 22, with Rev. Andrew R. Shelly of Kitchener, Ontario as the visiting speaker. The Bergfelder Church, of which August Ewert is pastor, has voted to change the name of the church to Gospel Mennonite Church. The choirs of this community and surrounding Mennonite Churches gave a concert in the village park on Thursday evening, June 28. This is an annual affair in which churches belonging to different Mennonite branches participate.

—Rev. Henry Franzen, Pastor of the Buhler, Kansas, Mennonite Church, plans to visit churches in Minnesota, North Dakota, and Montana during July and August in the interest of Bethel College.

—Buhler, Kansas: On July 15 Rev. Walter Gering showed his pictures of Puerto Rico and Winton Stucky showed a film on the life of a "Smoke Jumper," Mr. Stucky having formerly been a member of the unit.

—Rev. Paul R. Shelly, who is serving the Swamp Charge in Pennsylvania from July 8 to August 19 while Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander is in Canada, has as the main theme for his messages the subject "The Teachings of Christ for Our Day." Brother Shelly is making his home with his parents at Pennsburg.

—Flatland Church (Pa.): At the Union C. E. meeting on July 1, Rev. Ellis Graber, Pastor of Zion Church, Souderton, showed pictures of Mennonite churches. Rev. Graber has collected a large file of pictures of Mennonite churches throughout the General Conference.

—A slip. From one of our exchanges: "Where there is a wholesome interest in farming, there is likely to be little difficulty on the matter of immortality and drinking."

The latest news about the two remaining General Conference missionaries in China, Miss Elizabeth Goertz and Miss Marie J. Regier, has come in a recent letter sent to Rev. and Mrs. H. J. Brown by Pauline Foote, another missionary in China. Miss Foote in turn quotes the relevant information from a letter written by Louise Schrag on October 3, 1944. Louise Schrag writes: "Miss Goertz has been laid up with a bad leg-a-long-time, better now. She and Miss Regier join in sending greetings to you all from her. Would you please, pass this news on to her friends and also to Misses Goertz and Regier's relatives." Miss Foote wrote her letter to the Browns on May 4, 1945.

—The Bureau of the Census has published information about the incomes of ministers who worked twelve months in 1939. Figures were available from 112,509 of the men who were clergymen. It is indicated that 51 per cent of these men received salaries of less than $1200; 90.8 per cent received incomes of less than $2500 a year. —Town & County Church —Springfield Church, Pleasant Valley, Pa., Mrs. Henry Buller was the guest speaker on the evening of July 8th. Mrs. Buller works at M. C. C. headquarters. Seven new members were received into the fellowship June 24.

—A "Seeds-of-Goodwill" project has been adopted by the Brethern Service Committee, which also originally sponsored the "Heifers-for-Europe" project. Under the new project garden and farm crop seeds are being sent to Europe. A shipment of 1,000 pounds of vegetable seeds has already gone across. This is to be distributed in the area around Paris.

—Rev. Paul Schroeder wrote from Drake, Saskatchewan, on June 29: "For the past few days we have had general rain, refreshing fields and gardens. It's yet some time before the golden grain will be garnered, if the Lord will bless, we shall have an abundant crop. On the evening of June 28th we had Bro. J. H. Langenwaller in our midst. By scripture and illustration he made very clear the need of proped encouragement. Especially the children and the young people need to be encouraged and helped."

—We are having some more unusually pleasant summer weather in Kansas as this is being written (July 11). Here at Newton we have not had a severe hot spell.

The Draft Status of General Conference Men in World War II

By J. Winfield Fretz

About the Census

The Peace Committee of the General Conference in connection with the MCC undertook the task of making a complete census of all men of draft age within the conference churches. The purpose was to find out how men of draft age were classified and if possible some reasons for these classifications. These three classifications which are provided for by Selective Service and which are used throughout this study are 4-E (Civilian Public Service), 1-A-O (Non-Combatant), and 1-A (full military service). The study also revealed the number of men with deferments, such as 2-C (Farm deferment), or 4-F (physical disability). With statistical information it is possible to see exactly where the General Conference stands with regard to its peace witness. Because all other Mennonite bodies are taking the same kind of a census, it will eventually be possible to get a picture of the total Mennonite church in the United States in World War II. The results of the census for all Mennonite bodies, as well as for each conference, will be published by the MCC Peace Committee in a separate pamphlet at a later date.

What the Census Includes

The figures in the following tables will show the findings in 100 per cent of the General Conference Churches in the United States as of May 25, 1945. In addition to information as to the draft standing of each church member between the ages of eighteen and forty-five the pastors were asked to give the age of each man at the time he was drafted, the number of years of education completed, the church standing, occupation, and suggested reasons why men entered military rather than Civilian Public Service. This article will deal only with the results pertaining to draft status, church standing and educational status. A second article will deal with the reasons why men entered military service.

Table one shows figures regarding the totals for each district conference as well as for the entire General Conference. The totals for men in each classification are given by numbers and by per cents. The per cent figures under each number will be the per cent of the total in each district conference. Only the figures in the bottom line are for General Conference as a whole.

Comments on the Meaning of the Table Below

(1) The General Conference has three-fourths of its drafted men in military service. Of those in military service one-fourth are in limited service as non-combatants.

(2) Out of every ten General Conference men drafted—

Three take the 4-E position

Two take the 1-A-O position

Five take the 1-A position.

(3) There is great variation from conference to conference as to the nature of draft status. It is ranging from 43 per cent in CPS in the Western District to 6 per cent in the Eastern District; or conversely stated, 86 per cent are in military service in the Eastern District and 57 per cent in the Western District. The other three districts range between these two extremes.

(4) The figures clearly indicate that the General Conference Mennonites are in serious danger of losing their distinctive peace witness.

5) There are approximately as many men of draft age deferred as there are men drafted.

(6) In view of the provision by the government for non-military service for those with religious objections to war, it means that 73 per cent of the drafted men from the General Conference rejected this provision in whole or in part. Of this group 55 per cent chose straight military service.

The following table will show the correlation between a man's draft status and his church standing. The table should be read like this: Of the men in the 4-E classification 97 per cent were in good standing when drafted, 3 per cent in poor standing, and none were back sliding.

TABLE II

Correlation of Church Standing and Draft Status
	Good	Poor	Backsliding	Total
4-E	97%	3%	0%	100%
1-A-O	71%	19%	10%	100%
1-A	54%	33%	13%	100%

The following table will show the educational level of drafted men in each of three draft classifications. The table should be read as follows, Of the men in 1-A, 15 per cent had a grade school training, 66 per cent had one or more years of high school, 18 per one or more years of college, and 1 per cent one or more years of graduate training.

TABLE III

Correlation of Education and Draft Status
	Grade School	High School	College	Graduate Work	Total
4-E	15%	54%	30%	1%	100%
1-A-O	19%	60%	20%	1%	100%
1-A	15%	66%	18%	1%	100%

It will be noticed that there are approximately the same proportion of men with grade school education in each of the three categories. It will be further noticed that those with th high school training tend to take the I-A position more readily, while those with a college training tend to take the 4-E position more consistently. It will also be noticed that almost one-third of the men in 4-E classification have had one or more years of college training while only about one-fifth of those taking military service have had college training. This rather clearly indicates that men trained in Mennonite colleges adhere to the traditional position of the Mennonite Church on the question of war and peace.

QUOTE

Martin Niemoeller, German pastor, imprisoned under Hitler:

Pastor Martin Niemoeller has urged that Christians in the United States and Britain mobilize to help the German people through the coming winter. It will be a terrible one. "I do not believe that the government of the Allied nations are able or willing to do sufficient in this respect," he said, stressing the need for American and British Christians to send food to Germany through their churches.—Christian Advocate, July 12.

Lew Ayres, movie-star who went IAO and is a chaplain's assistant:

"... there is more than one message wrapped in the Christian Doctrine—indeed, it solves ALL of man's problems... Curious how modern education gives us a knowledge of all things, except the one thing that is most needed: How to dwell in harmony with one another. You'd think that it was a mystery. To my mind, the psychology of human relations should be the basic subject from kindergarten up—covering everything from the wisdom of honesty and integrity in business and international treaties to good manners on the ball field... if Christianity was ever intended to be anything, it was meant to be a brotherhood."—"Cincinnati Enquirer" in "The American Friend," July 12.

"Avoid arguing. Disagreeing with a person and arguing your own beliefs accomplishes nothing, particularly when the other is wrong. The fact that a person knows he is wrong is likely to cause him to argue more strongly... The art of conversation is the ability to avoid inflicting one's own opinion upon another."—"Christian Advocate," June 14

E. Stanley Jones, just returned from South America:

"It was in Valparasio (Chili) that I first struck this appreciation of frankness. I spoke to a luncheon group of intellectuals on "The Seven Hesitations of American Democracy." I talked about our struggles with the word 'all!' A leading citizen arose at the close and said: 'Now the mists have rolled away. We see the real soul of America and we are satisfied.' When I confessed my country's sins they began to confess theirs. Their reaction was: 'You think you have national problems? They're nothing. You should know something of ours.' Then they would take the lid off. But if I had acted as though we in the United States had attained something close to perfection and everyone should copy us, I am sure they would have retorted, 'We are as good as you—and better.'—"Christian Century," July 18.

EDITORIALS

THE SPIRITUAL LIFE cannot flourish in a poorly prepared seed-bed. The best seed in the world is always handicapped by soil that is unfavorable to growth. Soil must be prepared if it is to be conducive to the germination of the seed and its growth to full maturity. Three kinds of soil! The road, which has become hardened from repeated selfish action, does not afford God's word of love a chance for germination. It sees no need for the softness of receptivity. The stony ground permits the Word of God to germinate, but the plant withers in the hot sunshine of a test. For beneath the surface this soul is essentially like the road. However, looking at the surface it may judge itself to be like the very best soil. The third kind is deep and rich, but it affords growth to both weeds and the Word of God, with the result that the weeds of self-concern never let the God-planted love come to full maturity. The Word of God will never produce a hundredfold until the hard road is made friable, the rocks dug out, and the weeds destroyed. The first step towards the removal of growth-retarding factors is the honest recognition of their existence. "The first step toward complete mental and spiritual health is complete honesty," says a great evangelist. At this we tend to balk. For in being utterly honest with ourselves we do not get very far without discovering impulses in ourselves that we would hesitate to hang on a hyena, no matter how noble our life has been. We tend to suppress out of consciousness those evil tendencies which arise in us but are out of harmony with the ideal that we strive to be. And so the hardness, the rocks, and the weeds remain. The first step is complete honesty.

COOPERATION is the God-willed relationship for human beings. We are made to live with and for one another. Live and let live, yes. It is much truer, however, to live and help live. No one can truly live without being helped to live, and helping others to live. "The weakness and the limits of the individual human being make it impossible for him to ensure his own aims in isolation. If he lived alone and tried to meet his problems by himself he would perish. He would not be able to continue his own life; he would not be able to continue the life of mankind. He is always tied to other men; and he is tied because of his own weaknesses and insufficiencies and limits. The greatest step for his own welfare and for the welfare of mankind is association." (Alfred Adler, What Life Should Mean to You) We realize today that a Germany in ruins and chaos is not conducive to our own economic welfare. Germany must have its economic vitality restored if we are to benefit from economic relationships with it. A Germany of rubble does us little good. We could disregard the physical and spiritual welfare of our neighbor's children, but it would be difficult for us to insure the welfare of our children when the neighbors have physical and spiritual diseases that are contagious. Prosperous people in big cities are beginning to see that the slum areas affect them as well as the people who live in them. It would be too bad if God had made the world with more than one human being and then made life so that they did not have to get along with each other for the highest welfare of each concerned. With gratitude we can know that life works out best when lived in harmony with the central law of human relationships as taught by Jesus: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

PROPER CARE FOR THE MENTALLY ILL is receiving an increased emphasis which will probably grow by bounds in the near future. This emphasis is presented in a comprehensive and inspiring way in a booklet of 104 pages, called The Attendant's Guide and edited by Edith M. Stern. Over 800 men are members of Mennonite administered C.P.S. units serving in mental hospitals. What constitutes some of the very best service that these men can render as they serve as attendants? The reader who wants to know the answer will find this booklet very interesting. He who wants to explore what is today a new frontier of Christian service needs this booklet. The closing words of the book, addressed to those serving as attendants, contain these significant statements: "With the whole mental hygiene movement (concern for mental health) little more than a generation old, general respect for the attendant's job hasn't caught up with its real dignity, value, and importance . . . With the rapid strides that have been made in care of the mentally ill, the day is not far off when attendants will be honored members of a skilled craft . . . You are in on the ground floor of a coming profession. Make the most of it."

The booklet is easy reading. Edward Hutchings Jr., of the Liberty Magazine passed on the script for reader-interest. The booklet may be had from The Commonwealth Fund, 41 East 57th Street, New York 22, N. Y., or from the Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kansas.

OBEDIENCE

By Olin A. Krehbiel

"He became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him," Heb. 5:9

Should Christians stress faith and believing more than obedience? Have we given enough consideration to this matter of being submissive to God?

Disobedience brings grave results. Sin came into this world through the disobedience of Adam and Eve. God told them not to eat of the tree in the center of the garden. The real sin was in their disobedience and not that the tree was harmful. When Moses struck the rock the second time, his sin was disregarding God's instructions. Disobedience is the root sin and in the present state men are the children of disobedience.

Judgment fell upon men because they refused to listen to God. When Israel rebelled against Jehovah their enemies over-ran their land and oppressed them. That was also the reason for their captivity. The flood came because men refused to walk in the ways of God but followed their own sinful inclinations. Spots of leprosy stood out upon king Uzziah because he disregarded the divine order that only priests should burn incense on the altar in the temple. Disobedience has brought a great deal of suffering and sorrow to this earth.

Men lost their freedom and became slaves through disobedience. Adam and Eve no doubt thought they were shackled because of the one limitation God put upon them. They expected to be free by throwing off all restraint, but instead they found themselves in bondage to Satan who proved to be a hard master. Men today have the mistaken idea that the commandments of God bar them from living a happy life, so they throw restraint to the wind and then find out too late that once in the prison house of vice, there is no liberty.

The importance of obedience is clearly taught in the Scriptures. To obey is better than sacrifice is what Samuel told king Saul after he spared the sheep of the Amalekites under the pretense of using them for sacrifice when God had commanded that they be destroyed. Some people's religion is one of sacrifice rather than obedience. All the sacrifices and self-denials of the Lenten season are not to be compared with an obedient heart. Even the sacrifice of Christ on the cross is valueless to us until we obey the invitation of God to receive its benefits.

To obey is also better than to make promises. Jesus said, not every one who saith, Lord, Lord, will enter heaven, but he that doeth the will of the Father. You remember the parable of the man who had two sons and he told them to go work in the vineyard. The one promised but did not go, while the other refused to go but afterwards obeyed. Which one did the will of the father.

To obey God is better than to obey men. Peter made this clear to the Jewish rulers when they ordered the disciples not to speak in the name of Jesus. There was a little boy who was always getting into trouble. One time he threw a stone and broke a window because a boy of the street told him to do it. Another time at the suggestion of his playmates he raided a cherry tree. He would rather obey the boys than his parents. Strange that grown folks should make the same mistake and prefer to obey men rather than the Father in heaven. Why put what men say about the Bible above what God clearly states in the Bible? This applies in more ways than one.

Examples of obedience. Christ was obedient as it tells us in Philippians 2:8, "And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, becoming obedient even unto death, yea, the death of the cross." And we learn in Romans 5:19, "For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous." It is because Christ was obedient to the Father that we have salvation.

Abraham was obedient. Hebrews 11:8 "By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance obeyed;" This also shows us that obedience is to go with faith.

Paul was obedient, for he said to king Agrippa in Acts 26:19 "I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision:" No, he followed the directions which Christ gave him on the road to Damascus. Because Paul obeyed he was saved and he also became the great apostle to the Gentiles.

The results from obedience are a multitude of blessings. There is joy and the satisfaction of knowing that one is in the Lord's will. Responsibilities and opportunities to serve are given to the obedient child of God. One is made stronger.

Obedience brings salvation. Noah was saved because by faith he was obedient and built the ark as God directed. Those Israelites in the wilderness who obeyed divine orders and looked to the brazen serpent were healed of their snake bites. In Acts 6:7 we are given the information that a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith and were saved. Paul thanked the Lord that the Roman Christians

Sam Goering Writes from England

England is very beautiful this time of the year. It does not get dark until after ten in the evening. At first that seemed strange to me, and of course it gets light much earlier here than at home. We have plenty of rain and the vegetation is wonderful. There are so many trees and flowers. We have some very beautiful ones in our yard.

Today I stayed at home with the five smallest children; the others all went to church. I could not find a ball so I took two potatoes for the children to play with on the lawn. I explained to them that if they roll them on the grass, they will not break. I went away and after a while I came back to see how things were going. Iris had taken an old knife and cut one of the potatoes into pieces. When she saw me coming she started to run. I noticed why she was running and called her back. Instead of scolding, I suggested that she make potato soup for all of us. That pleased this five-year-old prospective housekeeper. She had us all sit on a long bench while she cut the potatoes into little pieces. Then came the imaginary cooking. We each got a piece of paper for a plate. Before we could eat she had us all pray. She made little three-year-old George stand in the corner because he did not do his part properly. She said, "children that don't pray get bombings; I say my prayers every night so I don't get bombed." We all said our prayers nicely and then got our soup. We all sang, "Thank you for the world so sweet, thank you for the food we eat, thank you for the birds that sing, thank you God for every thing."

This was the Sunday designated for special thanksgiving and prayer. The King and the Queen with their two daughters drove in an open carriage through the streets to St. Pauls. Mabel, Edna, and I went to see the procession. We really went to church but found when we got there, that we had no chance to get in. Thousands of people were turned back. We stood with the crowd to see the royal family and, of course, Mr. Churchill. As he went by in an automobile a lady remarked, "the dear old minister." That I think is the way many of the people here feel about him. The crowd cheered as the procession went by. Soldiers and police lined both sides of the street. Flags, were everywhere. The streets are filled with men in uniform, Canadian, British, American, etc. The boys are all anxious to get home.

Today was my birthday. When I came down for breakfast every one was there and they sang "Happy birthday to you." On a little table they had a large cake with candles. After breakfast they took the cake into my office so the youngsters should not eat the nuts off. After school the eleven children and six grownups had supper in the back yard. The children sang for me and helped to blow out the candles.

This evening I went to hear John Fulton, an UNNRA man, speak about conditions in Germany, at the Morley College. He had a good audience and gave a good lecture. He says Germany will face famine unless either through production or otherwise food supplies are secured for the coming winter. After the lecture I went to a Chinese restaurant and had chop suey. I sat across the table from a Canadian soldier who had just come across from Germany. If things are destroyed as badly as he says they are, then it really must be awful.

The Preacher's Salary

This is not discussed much, is it? The ministers are one group that must gratefully accept what is offered them and not say much about it. If they do, they are hirelings. But even they need more than love and water to live on. Much is being said about the underpaid teachers. But they may speak about their salaries themselves, and yet not be discredited among the people, but it is different with the preacher.

In education the average minister is not below the average high school teacher, but what about his compensation? There are rural teachers with only a year or two of college training who are getting $150 a month. A high school in a community, largely Mennonite, will pay none of their teachers less than $1800 next school year, for nine months of service. Very few high school teachers have such high necessary automobile expenses as the minister has.

But, you say, the minister gets enough to live. Perhaps, he lives, but how has income kept pace with that of his members in recent years? How has he met the rising cost of living? Many ministers have growing children they would like to educate, and for the future they look to the Ministers' Pension Fund, as much as they dislike to depend on that. There is not much to depend on anyway. Here and there you will find an aged minister or missionary who has found part-time employment, and in addition good friends will send him a much-appreciated gift now and then. But it does not create happy feelings to look forward to such an evening of life.

Many pastors are thankful that this is not their problem. Their churches have solved it graciously. An Observer.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE FRIENDS OF P. J. WIENS

Dear Friends:

In compliance with your wishes I will try and let you know concerning the illness of my dear husband, Missionary P. J. Wiens. The infirmity in my right hand keeps me from writing to each of you personally.

In the evening of May 15, 1945, he suddenly had a bad chill, followed by fever and pain in the chest. He had had a slight cough for a few days. The next morning the doctor pronounced it to be pleurisy. After a few days he was much better and on the way to recovery. But he had a set back with a touch of pneumonia added to it. After a few days he again was much better and towards the end of the second week could come to the table for his meals. He fully hoped to attend at least some of the General Conference meetings and to give his report about the work in the Historical Library. But God's thoughts and plans were different. On May 28th he had a dizzy spell at the dinner table, and the next morning a bowel hemorrhage which left him very weak. He was at once taken to the Bethel Deaconess Hospital in the ambulance. On this trip, in spite of his weakness, he looked around and remarked about the lovely roses and flowers outside. It was the last time he had a chance to do that here on earth. He so loved the beautiful outdoors.

The best of care was given to him in our dear Bethel Hospital by doctors, sisters and nurses. Many young people willingly donated their blood for blood transfusions for him. But four more bowel hemorrhages and two per mouth and a number of sinking spells and increasing weakness prepared us for his passing away on June 7th at 1:31 a.m. He was conscious up to the end, and often when I quoted Bible verses or songs to him and emotion and tears kept me from finishing, he would do so. His voice was so to say completely gone almost from the beginning of his stay in the hospital, but we could understand in spite of it what he was saying. His death struggle was only for few minutes. What a loss and emptiness fills the human heart when a dear one dies!

The doctors asked for a post mortem and so found that a cluster of varicose veins had formed at the lower end of the esophagus and burst and caused all those hemorrhages. They also found the spleen quite enlarged due to the malaria fever he time and again had in India. The pressure of the enlarged spleen on the circulatory system led to the forming of the varicose veins. The doctor remarked his weakened voice may have been caused by the pressure of those veins on the wind pipe. The doctors' verdict was, that they could not have helped him, even if they had known the cause of the bleeding. So we can only think and say, that our dear Heavenly Father called our dear one home to the mansions in the Father's house which Jesus talks about. There he and many others are waiting for the rest of us. Yes, he is now in that Heavenly Home that he so often sang about, especially of late. "I am but a Pilgrim here, Heaven is my Home," etc. "Face to Face with Christ my Saviour" and many of the old German songs about heaven.

At this time we would also like to say thank you once more to all, that so kindly lent a helping hand to us in many various ways. What a great comfort stead of flowers for the funeral are to be used to put such Christian love is in times of bereavement!

The donations to the mission fund that came in a Bible into the hands of that student of the Mauhadi school that has been the most diligent in learning Bible verses during the year and also as a stipend for a student in the Bible School of our mission in India. Thank you!

Yours in Him,
Mrs. P. J. Wiens and family

Have You Taken Time to Send in the Name and Address?

Some time ago in a letter from Rev. John T. Neufeld, 4215 So. Rockwell Street, Chicago 32, Illinois, the following sad story was related.

"Recently I went to look up an address which took me out to 7200 West and 6500 North, a distance of twenty miles. We had sent them invitations to the Loop (Mennonite Fellowship) meetings, but with no response. The woman in the house did not open the door when I knocked, but I talked some through the glass door. She said that her husband's folks had been Mennonites, but that they went to the North Shore Church. That same day I called on a family that came from Moundridge, Kansas, about four years ago. They also live on the North Side. These also were attending the North Shore Church. The sad thing about this is that the North Shore Church, Rev. O. Hair, pastor, is an extreme dispensational church. They teach that the teachings of Jesus have no application for this dispensation of Grace. This is certainly far removed from the Mennonite point of view. We wish so much that ministers would let us know when their people move into this city.”

Both of our ministers, Rev. Erwin A. Albrecht, 1500 West 72nd Place, Chicago 36, Illinois and Rev. Neufeld, have been cooperating and making a determined effort to contact all scattered Mennonites in Chicago. Again and again they come across experiences similar to the sad story related above.

When anyone from your church moves to Chicago, please send their name and address to one or the other of our ministers there, who will make it their point to contact them and keep them in a vital relationship with Christ and their church. Thank you.

Correspondence

SALEM ZION CHURCH Freeman, South Dakota

“And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are called according to his purpose.” That verse brings to my mind a service held in this church Monday evening July 9th. Returned missionary, Marvin Dirks used that verse as the basis for a talk on his later experiences while he was interned in the Philippines. He told of his earlier experiences on Sunday evening in the Salem (South) Church. Those who heard him Sunday were anxious to hear more and brought others. Thus the church was filled with an eager audience. None went home disappointed, for his realistic report stirred the hearts of all and made one wonder, “What would I have done in those conditions?”

The annual Sunday School picnic of the South and North (Salem and Salem-Zion) Churches was again held on the Fourth of July. A program was given in the college gymnasium during the forenoon. After all finished their bounteous picnic dinners, the men and boys played ball. The others watched and visited.

Because of the busy season, shortage of help, and the tire and gas rationing, only one week of Bible School was held this summer.

Quite a number of young people have left this community—some for the summer, others for indefinite periods. Many of the boys have been called to service in the various camps. Some of the girls are attending summer school; others are taking up nurses' training, and still others are working in mental hospitals. Truly, there are many fields of service. “The highest service we can perform for others, is to help them to help themselves.”—Horace Mann

May 25 marked the day of the Young People's Banquet held in the college gymnasium. The young people of the South (Salem) Church joined us in this new undertaking. Rev. Clyde Dirks of Hutchinson Kansas, who later went to the Northern District Conference, was the speaker of the evening. Several musical numbers and readings were also rendered. Approximately 125 people were served. All those present enjoyed the evening, in spite of hesitant hearts before the final day.—MTG, Corr.

INMAN MENNONITE CHURCH Inman, Kansas

Our congregation is again participating in the Sunday Evening union out-door meetings held at the Grade School Park. These services are inspirational and help to bring the churches of the community closer together. The community Vacation Bible School conducted earlier this summer was also well attended.

On Sunday evening, June 17, the Ladies Mission Society was in charge of a praise and thanks giving service, commemorating its twenty-fifth anniversary. Rev. and Mrs. Albert Albrecht, who assisted in organizing the society, were the principle speakers. Mrs. Ewert also made a few remarks and other numbers were given by members of the society.

The Junior Choir and Sunday School classes presented an interesting Children's Day program entitled, “The Golden Chain.” Sunday evening, July 1, after the program the children were special guests at a social hour where refreshments were served to all.

Ten young people were baptized and added to our church membership Sunday morning, July 1.

Our pastor, Rev. J. E. Kaufman, is planning to attend the Interdenominational School for Rural Leaders held at Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, Illinois, July 23 to August 24. Church services will be conducted by neighboring ministers of the community during Rev. Kaufman's absence.—Corr.

EMMAUS MENNONITE CHURCH Whitewater, Kansas

On Pentecost Sunday four girls and four boys were baptized and were received into the church. In the afternoon we, together with the Swiss Mennonite Church, had a love and praise service thanking God for keeping Rev. and Mrs. Lester Wutherich through the three years they were interned in the Philippines and for permitting them to return to us.

June 3 we had as our conference guest speakers Rev. J. J. Schultz, Winnipeg, Canada, who made the introduction, and Rev. Alfred Waltner, Marion, South Dakota, who brought the message.

We were again privileged to observe Holy Communion on June 10. In the evening the C. E. had a mission program, and Rev. and Mrs. Lester Wutherich spoke to us.

Dr. C. H. Suckau and a girls' quartet from the Grace Bible Institute were with us Tuesday evening, June 12. The quartet brought a message in song and a testimony, and Dr. Suckau gave a short talk after which they showed pictures of Omaha and life at the Institute.—Corr.

By R. L. Hartzler, Editor of the "Christian Evangel," the official paper of the Central Conference of Mennonites.

The following impressions of the Newton Conference are those of one visiting the sessions of General Conference for the first time and are thus those of an interested observer, rather than of a direct participant. They should accordingly be rated as such. Longer contact with and more intimate knowledge of the conference organization and program of service might have added much to their real value.

1. Eagerness to make Christ central and magnetic. From the very first the centrality of Jesus Christ and the necessity of keeping Him central in conference deliberations, plans, and programs was emphasized. What ever variation may have appeared in the detailed implications and outworkings of that principle, there was an evident desire on the part of all to keep the Master in His rightful primacy. Accompanying this was the purpose to make Him glorious and magnetic among men, that He might draw them unto himself.

2. Scope of the fellowship and activity. It was most interesting and thrilling to meet brethren who came all the way from Pennsylvania or California, from Oklahoma or Winnipeg. Strength is not necessarily in number, but when numbers and the spirit of brotherhood combine, added strength obtains. The number of avenues of activity and scope of the fields thus entered indicate an awareness of human need and consequent sense of Christian obligation.

3. Healthy interest in the problems and progress of the work. The large number of those present, apart from regular delegates, were notably diligent in attending the business sessions. Nor did the interest or diligence wane toward the end of the six day period, as evidenced by the largest daytime attendance at the closing session.

4. Definite and systematic procedures. With such procedures formulated and established, the transaction of the volume of necessary business moved forward unhurriedly but steadily, under the able and tactful direction of the chair.

5. Freedom in expression and action. When matters of import were under consideration delegates expressed themselves freely, even though one's view of a matter might be contrary of that of a previous speaker; and when the question was put, delegates freely voted for or against as their judgment indicated. Only so can they obtain the measure of group thinking and action which is conducive to real progress.

6. Zeal for the Lord's work, for the essentials of the Christian faith, and the peculiar elements of Mennonitism. Without such zest conference plans and actions fall rapidly to the ground when the sessions are over, but when such season of fellowship and deliberation enhances the ambition to be "fervent in spirit, serving the Lord," it augurs well for the exaltation of His Name through the propagation of His truth and kingdom.

(The following account of a 1944 C.P.S. canning project was written by Herbert Schmidt and appeared in the church news letter of the Gnadenberg Church, Whitewater, Kansas. This article is especially addressed to the church members in C.P.S.)

So often we think of you and so seldom we write. But we mean well and at various times during our busy summer the womenfolks will tuck away some of their choicest canned stuff for you. Aunt Lizzie's perfect pear halves. The golden applesauce came from our very new bride (she says its the pineapple that gives the color). The cherries from a home where such things are quite a rarity. Maybe the relish will give your meals a little pickup. It would be a good idea to save the spiced peaches for Thanksgiving Dinner.

Later, when the frost was on the pumpkin, we brought them to a collection center. Quite naturally, the conversation turned to you. We recalled how Benny was always a fast milker, how Aaron filled my wife's woodbox, how Arthur built up a nice livestock project, how Henry gave the boss more than was asked of him, and how could Alvin be such a good boy in school?

Early one morning we loaded the cases into Carl's jalopy and took them to the crating center. Working together with the office personnel and packers from other churches was a fine opportunity for enlarged fellowship. Now, "Lasz gut schmecken!" Oh, yes, for this food too, as is required today, tokens must be included. We want to send the kind Paul speaks about; "For even in Thessalonica ye sent once and again to my necessity, not because I desire a gift, but I desire fruit that may abound to your account." Phil. 4:16-17.

May these little love tokens help to produce the good fruit of the spirit in the giver as well as the receiver.

Till next we meet,

Herbert Schmidt

My father nurtured three children, but my father's God has brought to breath upon this planet countless billions, and every last one of them has been a great adventure, an experiment. For while all of them have been born of the flesh, not all of them have been born of the Spirit. As there is no possibility of companionship between two who do not walk together, so there is no possibility of companionship between a spiritual father and a permanently carnal son. Similarly there is no possibility of companionship between a spiritual God and a permanently carnal man. "Except a man be born again," said Jesus, "he cannot see the kingdom of God. Except a man be born of the Spirit he cannot enter the kingdom of heaven."—David W. Soper in the Christian Advocate

WESTERN DISTRICT RETREATS

Two retreats have been planned for this summer by the Western District Retreat Committee. Rev. David C. Wedel, pastor of the First Mennonite Church at Halstead, Kansas, will direct the first annual Intermediate Retreat. This retreat will be held on the Bethel College Campus, August 6-10 and is arranged for young people of junior high school age, or twelve to fourteen years.

Dr. J. H. Langenwalter, young people's counselor, and Rev. Walter Gering, pastor of the Eden Mennonite Church at Moundridge, Kansas will be the Bible instructors. Mrs. S. F. Pannabecker, missionary on furlough from China, will have a course in mission study. Dr. P. A. Penner will bring the evening messages on "What It Means To Be a Christian." Music will be directed by Miss Marianne Toews of Inman, Kansas; and Mr. Eugene van der Smissen of Buhler, Kansas, is in charge of the recreation program. Mrs. A. M. Lohrentz, McPherson, Kansas, President of the Women's Missionary Societies of the General Conference and former missionary to China, will be girls' counselor.

The twentieth annual Young People's Retreat is scheduled for August 11-16 and will again be held at Camp Wood, Elmdale, Kansas. The director is Rev. Herbert E. Miller, Pastor of the Deer Creek Mennonite Church, Deer Creek, Oklahoma. Assisting him will be William Juhnke, McPherson, Kansas, who will act as assistant director and boys' counselor. "Bill" has had experience in young people's work, both in the district and as secretary treasurer of the YPU of the General Conference. He has also taught in the high schools of Kansas and has participated in the HiY program. Bible instructors for this retreat are Dr. J. H. Langenwalter and Rev. Arnold Funk, Pastor of the Brudertal Mennonite Church, Hillsboro, Kansas. The missions course will be taught by Miss Helen Nickel, missionary on furlough from India. The evening messages will be given by Rev. William Stauffer, Pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Sugar Creek, Ohio. Mr. Alvin Reimer of Buhler, Kansas who has had much experience in the field of teaching music, will be the music director. The recreation will be directed by Rev. Jacob T. Friesen. "Jake" graduated from Bethel College in 1944 and spent the past year at New York Biblical Seminary. This summer he is acting as assistant pastor at the First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska. Mrs. Willis Rich of North Newton, Kansas will be the girls' counselor.

The purpose of both retreats is to make possible a vital experience of God through Jesus Christ, to provide fellowship, to promote spiritual growth, and to challenge young people to dedicate their lives to Christ.

All young people who are interested in the kind of program offered, should make arrangement to attend the retreat held for their age group. Registrations are to be made in advance. Blanks are attached to the folders which have been sent to the pastors of all churches in the district. These should be filled out completely and sent to the secretary of the retreat committee, Helen Hiebert Mueller, North Newton, Kansas.

AN ECLIPSE

"The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth His handiwork."

We read, "All things were created by Him, and for Him. And He is before all things and by Him all things consist." What majestic grace when He placed the sun, moon, and stars in the heavens, and appointed to each one a course! So perfect, that astronomers may accurately inform us of spectacular movements such as we beheld this morning. To see the moon suspended there between earth and sun, brings forth the cry, "How small is man, how great our God."

As the shadow slowly slipped away, leaving the sun to shine forth in all its brilliance this somber thought remained: How many Christians are experiencing a spiritual eclipse? Jealousies, pride, worldliness and unconfessed sin overshadow our entire being that others do not see that lovely Lord and Saviour, whom we took one day as our own. Hence our testimony is lost, and we are miserable.

Our Lord knows our weaknesses, and calls down through the years "If my people, which are called by my name shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked way; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land." Again, "If we confess our sins. He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." Shadows will be removed, communion reestablished, and the blessed Holy Spirit free to reveal Christ in all His beauty.

Let us then with the Psalmist pray, "Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me. THEN will I teach transgressors thy ways; and sinners shall be converted unto thee."
—Mrs. Ted E. Claassen

OBEDIENCE.

who had been servants to sin obeyed from the heart the doctrine delivered unto them and thus were rescued from sin. See Romans 6:17.

The Holy Spirit is given to those who obey God says Peter in Acts 5:32 and in I Peter 1:22 he tells the strangers scattered abroad that their souls are purified in obeying the truth through the Spirit.

How does one obey the Most High? Not by gritting one's teeth and saying, "I will," but by submitting to the Lord. This war came because men would not submit to God so now they find themselves being ordered about by men. We need the attitude of Mary when she said to the servants at the wedding feast, "Whatsoever he (Christ) saith unto you, do it."

Daily Devotional Messages

By Victor Sawatzky, Butterfield, Minnesota

AUGUST 7—"Rejoice in the Lord . . ."—Phil. 4:4

Rejoicing in the Lord is the dominant experience of the Christian as set forth in the epistle to the Philippians, and this experience is shown to be in Christ the Lord. The worldling cannot have this experience because he does not know Christ. The Christian moralist who seeks to live up to a certain standard of ethics does not have this experience of joy because he is looking to himself and his own works, and he must ever say, "O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death." This joy is to be had only in the Lord, not in self. Only the one who truly trusts Christ can and will rejoice in the Lord.

AUGUST 8—"For who can eat with joy and delight himself apart from God?"—Ecc. 2:25 (Luther's Translation) all of which ended in disappointment, before he discovered the secret of satisfaction. He sought first to gain an understanding of his conditions (education), then to disregard his conditions (indulgence), and finally to improve his conditions (reformation), before he learned the secret of satisfaction which is to be content in our conditions (faith). Men today are pursuing these same three false courses in search of happiness. Only comparatively few seem to find the true secret of happiness. Only comparatively few seem to find the true secret of happiness, namely, trust in God.

Solomon sought satisfaction in three general ways,

AUGUST 9—"In everything give thanks . . ."—I Thess. 5:18

How real our personal problems seem at times, how insurmountable the difficulties that confront us! Our consciousness is crowded with problems, perplexities, private worries, and responsibilities to tinge with bitterness the best thoughts of a glad day. It is easy enough to rejoice when crops are full and prices are high, when health is good and friendship is strong. The irreligious and ungodly rejoice when all is well, and even feel a measure of gratitude. But the highest good we enjoy is not material, and therefore the highest thanksgiving is not for material blessings. We cannot thank God for everything—we cannot thank God for the present war. God does not ask us to give thanks for everything but in everything.

AUGUST 10—"Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin."—Rom. 4:7,8

"Blessed," what a soothing word! The same word is translated variously in the Scriptures as happy, saved, and blessed. The German word is "selig." The man who is saved is happy. Heaven is a place of happiness. The greatest blessing that God can bestow upon man is the forgiveness of sins. Our text does not say, "Blessed is the man who has never sinned." The fact of sin does not present a hopeless situation. Jesus Christ came into this world for the express purpose of seeking and saving sinners. Too many people despair because of sin when they should be rejoicing because of sins forgiven.

AUGUST 11—"Happy are thy men, and happy are these servants, which stand continually before thee, and hear thy wisdom."—II Chron. 9:7

The Queen of Sheba noticed that the servants of King Solomon were happy men and women. We have in our text a picture of the Christian standing before his King waiting upon Him, ready to do His bidding. The service of Jesus, who is our King, is in no way tedious. Solomon's servants were happy in their work because their king was happy having been highly exalted in his kingdom, and because their king had made rich provision for his servants. Even so may we, as servants of the King of Kings, rejoice with Him in His exaltation, and enjoy the rich provision which He has made for us in giving us the Holy Spirit and the Word of God.

AUGUST 12—"They on the rock are they, which, when they hear, receive the word with joy; and these have no root, which for a while believe, and in time of temptation fall away."—Luke 8:13

Strange as it may seem, exuberance, or vigor, or good appetite are not necessarily signs of a good state of health. Very often just prior to suffering a stroke or heart failure men have remarked how unusually good they felt. In this day we usually make the appeal to the unsaved on the basis of the joy they will experience by accepting Christ. Our text speaks of those who find joy in receiving the Word, but their joy is not a good sign. We make a mistake when we picture the Christian life as an easy path. The true reception of the Word seldom begins with joy, but rather with sorrow which worketh repentance.

AUGUST 13—"And Israel said unto Joseph, Now I will gladly die, since I have seen thy face, because thou art yet alive."—Gen. 46:30 (Luther's Translation)

The reason why men as a rule do not rejoice at the thought of dying is that they are not satisfied that they have attained to the highest and best that life has to offer. The patriarch Jacob thought that his entire life has to offer. The patriarch Jacob thought that his entire life had been marred through the apparent loss of his son Joseph (Gen. 37:35). When Jacob, therefore, after experiencing this great grief, again found his son alive and well, he was fully satisfied—he had attained the highest good conceivable to him. Men look for the highest good in the natural life only to meet with disappointment and failure. But if one who is thus weighted with grief will look up and see the risen Saviour, he will receive new life, and will be glad to part with this world.

RELIEF

Canadian Clothing Shipment

Ten tons of clothing, bedding, shoes, and soap were shipped, June 22, from the Kitchener Clothing Center to the Mennonite Clothing Center in London, England. From the England headquarters it will be transshipped to Holland for distribution in connection with the Dutch Mennonite relief program. The shipment was valued at $22,251.00.

French Relief Work Planned

Definite plans for a Mennonite relief program in France were shaped in Paris, July 4, when O. O. Miller, Sam Goering, M. C. Lehman, and Henry Buller conferred regarding the actual relief situation in France and what Mennonites might do to bring a ministry of relief, especially in behalf of Mennonites in Alsace. Eldon Burke, representative of the Brethern Service Committee, was also present at the meeting.

No definite information has been received as to the date of M. C. Lehman's arrival in France, but his coming coincided providentially with the meeting at Paris. A more recent cable indicates that since the time of the Paris conference, Brother Miller has arrived in the Middle East.

Refugees Continue to Leave

Recent correspondence from our Mennonite workers in the Middle East indicates that "flight teams" or home-ward migrating refugee groups, are a weekly occurrence. Grace Augsburg, Ervin Hooly, G. Richard Yoder, and Henry Detwiler have had several assignments with "flight teams" to Yugoslavia. Henry Detwiler writes: "I have been assigned to work as assistant to the repatriation officer here in camp. In this work it is our duty to supervise the necessary preparations for the flights that leave this camp. This varies from the final clothing issue to the working out of the truck-loading plan at the time of departure and the loading of the box-cars from the trucks." Another letter indicated that in a recent assignment Bro. Detwiler had charge of the refugees on one of the trains going from the El-Shatt camp to Port Said where a group of refugees boarded a French ship.

List of Workers Available

A complete list of the names, addresses, and assignments of Mennonite relief workers is available from the Akron office upon request. Such lists have been compiled to meet requests from Sunday-school classes, young peoples' groups, and others desiring them.

Relief Briefs

Bro. and Sister J. E. Brunk, who are on their way to Puerto Rico, were detained in Florida until July 8, because of crowded traveling conditions.

Adella Blosser, Salem, Ohio, is a summer service volunteer assisting in the Newton Clothing Center.

C. P. S.

Camper Drowns at Camino

Willie G. Ensz, assignee at the Camino, California, C. P. S. camp, drowned July 8, in the American River near Placerville. Willie was at home at Beatrice, Nebraska, and was member of the General Conference Mennonite church there. His death was the twentieth in C.P.S. and the ninth in Mennonite camps.

Protest C. P. S. Demobilization

When the information became public that Selective Service had intentions to demobilize ten per cent of the men in C.P.S. during the coming year, considerable unfavorable reaction resulted. Veterans' organizations and patriotic groups brought pressure to bear, claiming that in fairness to servicemen, C.P.S. assignees should not be discharged until the War Department began to demobilize all branches of the armed forces. To date servicemen have only been released from the army.

Congressman Winstead of Mississippi has introduced a bill in the House asking that the demobilization of C.P.S. take place on the basis of a point system equivalent to that of the armed forces. Should this bill be passed, it would mean that a C.P.S. man would have to attain eighty-five points to be eligible for discharge and that no points would be given for a wife or for more than three children. To C.P.S. men who are not fathers this would mean practically seven years of service.

Summer Speakers

Don Smucker, Mennonite misinter from Wadsworth Ohio, is scheduled to spend a month, July 20 to August 22, speaking at Terry, Missoula, and the California camps on subjects such as "Modern Pacifism and Biblical Nonresistance." J. S. Schultz, dean of Bluffton College, will visit camps in the Mid-West, July 16 to August 19, and lecture on the Christian home and related subjects.

IN MEMORIAM

RUDOLF GOERZ, son of David Goertz, one of the founders of Bethel College, and Helene Riesen Goertz, was born October 17, 1876, at Halstead, Kansas, and died July 10, 1945. In 1918 he began the erection of the Goertz milling plant of which he became president and general manager. He was a graduate (1892) of the Mennonite Academy, Halstead. For many years he served on the Bethel College Board of Directors. He was a charter member of the Bethel College Church. He is survived by his wife Martha Krehbiel Goertz, whom he married in 1900; one son Harold, Moundridge; and one daughter, Frances Garrison, Wichita; three brothers, Orlanda Goertz, Pasadena, California; Willard Goertz, Sacramento, California; Robert Goertz, Forrest Home, California; and two sisters, Mrs. Emma Kaufman, Ontario, California, and Mrs. Bernhard Krehbiel, Newton.

WILLIAM GERHARD ENSZ, son of Gerhard and Barbara, nee Jantzen, Ensz, was born near Beatrice, Nebraska, December 8, 1918. He attended the local Bible Academy. In 1937 he was baptized by Rev. Franz Albrecht and received into the First Mennonite Church. The past several years he served as caretaker at the Mennonite Hospital in Beatrice. Called into C.P.S. in May of this year he entered the Camino, California, camp, near which he was drowned on July 8.

MINOR THUT died suddenly at his farm home near Bluffton, Ohio, July 8. He was born August 10, 1896, the son of Amos and Susanna Thut, and was married December 27, 1941, to Carrie Motter. He is survived by his wife, parents, two sisters and two brothers. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. N. Smucker at the First Mennonite Church and burial was in Ebenezer Cemetery.

BIG DEMAND IN INTERNMENT CAMP FOR "MENNONITE HYMNARY"

Shortly before internment by the Japanese, Bro. Albert Jantzen received two copies of the Mennonite Hymnary, one of which he brought into camp. Workers of other denominations also brought their hymn books. Bro. Jantzen permitted us to use his book in the worship services and in preparation for the same. It was always on one of my box shelves where anyone needing it could find it easily. Its pages are considerably worn. Already it has more than fulfilled its purpose.

It inspired many fine comments by the workers of other denominations, such as: "This is the finest hymnal I have ever seen," or, "I wish our church had a book like this."

We made copies of many of the chorales and used them as special choir numbers. The book was constantly in demand as a source of special quartet numbers.—Marvin J. Dirks

JOTTINGS

—Rev. Felix Schrag, son of Rev. and Mrs. John Schrag. Parker, South Dakota, recently received his Ph.D. degree from the University of Chicago.

—The Brethern Service Committee hopes to send 150 dairy heifers to Poland during the month of July.

—Roy A. Burkhardt, who has written the book entitled The Church and the Returning Soldier and who has twenty per cent of his 3,200 church members in the armed forces, is "one of the active supporters or financing CPS in Ohio."

—Mennonite Church, Butterfield, Minnesota: Our pastor, Rev. B. J. Nickel, and Mrs. Nickel attended both the Northern District Conference and General Conference. Miss Marian Ruth Stoesz, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Stoesz, and Carl Pankratz, son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Pankratz, were united in marriage on June 8. On June 30th Mr. and Mrs. Rudolf Linscheid celebrated their Golden Wedding. On August 5th there is to be a young people's rally with Rev. J. J. Regier of Freeman, South Dakota, as speaker.

—The First Quarterly Conference of the Eastern District is to have a presentation and discussion of proposed improvement plans for the Mennonite Home for the Aged at Frederick, Pa., at its session on July 30. In the evening Loris Habegger is to show pictures of C.P.S. work in mental hospitals.

—Nappanee, Indiana: The primary department of vacation Bible school had an interesting missionary feature, which consisted of stories about the American Indians, China, migrants, and lepers, the first week. The second week they had lessons on India, relief, people of other races, men in C.P.S., and a general survey. From a recent bulletin: "We meet at the church at 7:30 and go out in several groups to visit out shut-ins and have a brief service with them. Everyone is invited to share in the service with an appropriate poem, Bible verse or anything that may be of interest to our shut-ins. It is our Christian privilege as well a responsibility to visit the sick... Boys and girls may share in this too." The pastor was gone over the weekend of July 15 in the interests of Middle District Y.P. work in the Bluffton area. The C.P.S. quartet from Ypsilanti sang on June 24. Rev. Jacob Enz adds on bulletin, "Best men's quartet I've heard."

—Rev. and Mrs. Henry Harder, who have accepted a call from the First Mennonite Church, Aberdeen, Idaho, left Newton, Kansas, on July 13th for Aberdeen. They expected to take a week for the trip, stopping off at Denver. Rev. Harder will spend his first Sunday in Idaho in serving at the Aberdeen young people's retreat which will be held in the mountains, a hundred miles from Aberdeen. The Harders have served pastorates at Enid and Geary, Oklahoma, Geary being the last one.

—Rev. Victor Sawatzky, pastor of the First Mennonite Church, north of Butterfield Minnesota, for the past seven years, has resigned as pastor. Rev. Sawatzky plans to attend Bethel College this coming year and work for his A.B. degree. He hopes to serve some small church during the time that he is attending college. During six of the seven years that he served as pastor, he also taught in the Mountain Lake Bible School.

—Says the Methodist Church: "Believing that in the long run any people have far more to gain by cherishing freedom of conscience than by any regimentation that takes away freedom, we approve the taking, in such of our churches as desire to do so, of voluntary collections for the support of such objectors who are in Civilian Public Service camps."

—Nappanee, Indiana: Ten layettes and kits for infants up to boys and girls for both summer and winter, have been prepared for relief. The supplies were purchased with money from the Lenten relief offering.

—Bulletin, First Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: "Rev. Martin Schroeder, field secretary of the Midwest Synod of the United Lutheran Church, who spoke here on June 3 writes, "The sermon gave me an opportunity to bring before a group like your own the gratitude of C.O.'s belonging to other than historic peace churches and what a great mission your church is doing right now. Rev. and Mrs. Schroeder have three sons in C.P.S."

—Bluffton, Ohio: Rev. J. N. Smucker and family are spending a month at Souderton, Pa. Rev. Smucker will supply the church at Souderton during the regular pastor's absence. He will visit other Conference churches in eastern Pa., as well as some of the C.P.S. hospital units. Rev. Don Smucker, Rev. J. J. Benz, and Rev. and Mrs. J. P. Suderman were guests at the church July 15. Rev. and Mrs. Suderman spoke at the morning service.—Corr.

—Rev. Walter H. Regier, pastor of the Friedenstal Mennonite Church, Tampa, Kansas, has accepted a call from the Eicher Emmanuel Mennonite Church, near Wayland, Iowa. He and his family expect to take up their new work sometime in September.

—Rev. Olin A. Krehbiel has received a call from the First Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana, to serve it as permanent pastor. Rev. Gerald Stucky is serving the Berne Church as assistant pastor, pending the opening of mission work in South America. Rev. Krehbiel, who has been pastor of the Grace Mennonite Church, Lansdale, Pa., since 1937, tendered his resignation of that position on July 15. From 1934 to 1937 Brother Krehbiel served as pastor of the Lorraine Avenue Church, Wichita, Kansas. The Berne Church is the largest church in the General Conference. See the article by Rev. Krehbiel in another part of this paper.

—Six 4-minute recordings on nutrition, prepared by the War Food Administration, are now available for free use by churches. According to Rev. Seward Hiltner, Executive Secretary of the Commission on Religion and Health of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, many churches will find these recordings helpful in connection with programs of social and health education. While they last, these recordings may be secured free from the nearest office of the War Food Administration. Send your requests to the Marketing Reports Div., Office of Marketing Services, War Food Administration—at the following addresses: 150 Boardway, New York City; 5 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Illinois; 821 Market Street, San Francisco, California.

—Rev. John P. Suderman, who has served the Berne, Indiana, church as supply pastor from January 1, 1944, to the present, will terminate his services in this capacity after Sunday, July 29, to return to the mission field at Oraibi, Arizona, by September 1. Application blanks will be sent out to all Rev. and Mrs. Suderman have served thirteen years on this field. Before returning to Arizona they plan to visit in several states, including their parental homes in Kansas. When the Mennonite Men's Chorus of Berne gave their recent concert they designated that the offering to be received go for the digging of a deep water well at Oraibi. The offering amounted to $500.99.

MENNONITES OF THE UKRAINE

When the German Army had occupied the Ukraine some Mennonites were transferred to Western Europe. Now that all Europe is under Russian, British and American occupation they are being sent back to Russia. Some letters have been received in which they express hope of being permitted to come to America (Boite, June 13, 1945). A certain Johann Dyck writes from New York that he has been shipped from France to New York as a prisoner of war. He is a Mennonite from the Ukraine. It is our prayer that it may be possible to save many from being sent back and to find for them a more promising home. —Cornelius Krahn

HERE'S YOUR CHANCE

In recent issues you have read about a questionnaire for the improvement of "The Mennonite." Here it is. CONFERENCE GLIMPSES

By Jacob H. Janzen, Waterloo, Ontario

I have an ill foreboding that some people will resent the appearing of my article in our Conference Paper. They will, perhaps, think me to be of very little consequence, and will deny me, the newcomer, foreigner and greenhorn, the right to react on happenings of common concern. They may think I should be glad to be here, accepted into the fellowship of the Conference, and being allowed to sit in on its meetings; I should take things as they are and leave it to others to publish their views on matters which concern a body that was in existence and in blessed work long before I arrived on the scene.

They may be right, but I feel that, inasmuch as I have been accepted into the fellowship of those who work together in this Conference, I have my rights as well as my duties in the same. I am often at a loss to see where my rights end, and my duties begin. I consider it both, my right and my duty, to share with the readers of our Conference papers the impressions which the Conference session made on me, and the blessings and the joy which were mine at the same, as well as the sorrow which it caused me, for I love my Conference as my very own, to which I owe allegiance and full cooperation, and for which I must be willing to bear sacrifice in carrying our common burden, and sharing in the sorrows and afflictions which come our way.

I am glad that it was granted me to attend the last session of the Conference. God alone knows how many more sessions will be held before I pass away. I longed to see old friends and to make new ones, and to get once more in close touch with the great work that our Conference is doing.

My prayers to that effect were heard in every detail. I could go, I could travel in comfort, I was received with cordial friendliness wherever I went. Good people opened their home to me and kept me in the best way thinkable. Good meals could be had in the basement of Memorial Hall. God gave me strength to attend practically every meeting of the Conference, and to participate in the deliberations to my heart's content. Opportunities offered themselves to learn about so many new things, ideas, aspects of Mennonite life, and human life in general, that it was impossible to take advantage of all of them.

I enjoyed as many of them as I could, Dr. Krahn's slides, the Bethel College Archive, the Chapel Services, the Prayer Meetings,—and I tried hard to see once more the interesting items which Brother Charles Kaufman has collected in his Museum, as I had done before, but there was always something to keep me away from it, and many other things had to be left undone. If I ever again should have a chance to visit Newton, I would not feel lonesome because there are many things for me yet to explore in that city "at the crossroad of the nations."

My heart was filled with joy and satisfaction in my meeting so many friends, old and new. I was glad to see that there is still so much love among our people, love that embraces even me, and I am grateful for every cordial handshake, for every affectionate word and for every warm look out of good, shining eyes, that was afforded me.

Love is a beautiful thing, and life would be worthless without it.

I have again admired our Chairman, Brother C. E. Krehbiel, for his dexterity in leading the discussions. He kept a tight hand over us and over himself, never overlooking a parliamentary rule or custom, holding back his own reflections, and letting the others have the floor, and fight it out, and thus come to an understanding among themselves, enabling him to put the question, and to have the Conference vote intelligently on the motion under consideration.

And the young people cooperated in tellers and business committees, and wherever help was required.

As soon as a motion was carried, a tall figure would emerge with the accuracy of an automaton from the stage door to the right, and the young man would present his writing tablet to the mover and the seconder for their signatures.

"Die Alten zum Rat, die Jungen zur Tat." (Counsel from the old, action from the young). The punctual appearing of the young minister was but a sample of the spirit in which the young cooperated with the old. It seemed, all were one to find and to walk the way to the advancement of the cause of the Conference.

I was once more convinced that our churches and our Conference still have a future, and when the old will be gone, the young will take over and continue in work and in battle for the building of the Kingdom of God.

It puzzled me when some of our young pastors and missionaries demanded that a book of doctrine should be composed and published which would serve as a guide in the education of our young people in the principles of peace, as held by our churches, and as a means to stand our ground when attacked from without.

As a new comer and greenhorn I cannot understand the underlying causes for such a demand. It seems to me that it is the duty of our schools to teach their students to do a little thinking of their own under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, on the basis of what God's Word has to say, as we have it in our Bible.

But now the graduates from these schools ask us to tell them what to think, instead of setting forth every effort to think freely and logically for themselves, and to arrive at the right conclusion, being well founded in the Word of God, and enlightened by the Holy Spirit, being "scribes which are instructed unto the Kingdom of heaven . . . like unto a man that is an householder, which bringeth forth out of his treasury things new and old" (Matthew 13:52).

The Bible is the basic and the best book of doctrine and dogma, and when our forefathers had to set up, on the request of their secular Government, their first "Confession of Faith," they did so; but handing it over to the authorities they made it clear that, in spite of this written "Confession of Faith" the only infallible guide and rule of conduct was, and would forever remain, the Bible, the Word of God.*

"Articles of Faith" are subject to change in compliance with the demands of changing times, of different places, and alternating conditions, under which the Church of God moves and has its being. Only the Word of God is like unto the sunlight, the same always and everywhere, and shows conditions as they are, and the way out. The Bible teaches us how to cope with all situations, and how to travel from where we are toward the perfection which Christ demands of us saying, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect."

*I state this on authority of the text book on church history, composed by the scholarly men Wilh. Neufeld and Korn. Unruh, which was in use in the "Zentralschule" when I was a student in the same. I do not know where these men got their information, but Oehninger quotes Menno as saying in his writings, "Das wahre Christentum ist nicht ein System von Lehren und Dogmen, sondern Nachfolge christi, in wirklicher Veraenderung des Herzens und Gottseligkeit des Lebenswandels." (True Christianity is not a system of doctrines and dogma but the emulation of Christ in a genuine change of heart, and in the godliness of our conduct in life.) (OEH-NIGER, Geschichte des Christentums, page 336, the last sentence).

Leave it to the Roman Catholic Church to fix doctrines and dogmas, and let us be well founded in the Word of God itself. We will be all right if we leave the doctrines and dogmas to them and strive to be of the best conduct, and to find our own way to the Father.

I wonder how our appointed committee will discharge its duty. On what interpretation of the biblical truth will it found its "General Conference Mennonite Book of Doctrine and Dogma"? So far we have no generally accepted "Articles of Faith," and can agree on none.

We would be spared many unpleasant and harmful complications if we only would follow the clear instructions of the Bible. It tells us, among many other things, minutely, how to deal with sins in our churches and conferences. Our Chairman pointed that out at the last Conference session. The instructions are given in Matthew 18:15-17, and they are concise and to the point. No case should be brought up to public attention unless the complainant has proceeded up to this point according to the rule given in that scripture passage.

Never should anything be brought up for discussion in public in the form of inference or allusions.

How can a conference understand things not knowing who the accused is, and what he has done?

If anyone sin against our Conference, he thereby sins against every member of the same, and the one who knows all about it is duty-bound to try his best to win the sinner over to see things eye to eye with church and conference, and if he succeeds, the hatchet must be buried then and there. If not, witnesses must be called in and another attempt must be made to win the sinner over; and only if that also fails must the matter be put at the discretion of church or conference, and the unruly must, eventually, be excommunicated and held as a publican and a heathen.

We have no right to discuss the sins of our brethren in gossiping conventicles, and then bring them up for discussion before a Church or Conference meeting, withholding from the same the names and facts involved, just casting unfavourable reflections on someone or something, putting many innocent under suspicion.

Someone said to me we would get nowhere following the rule which Jesus Christ laid down.

Well, if someone knows better than Christ, let him show what he can do. As for me, I shall follow Christ who so far has known better than I in every EATING is something we have in common with all people. As we bow our heads in thanksgiving before partaking of nourishment, we may think of the two billion other people in the world, who to sustain their God-given life, engage or seek to engage in the very same act that is so necessary to us. It is truly an "us" that needs to be given daily bread. And the bread is given from God more than earned by man. For how have we earned it so much more than the unfortunate Mennonites in Holland who have a very meagre supply of it? Food comes through the grace of God. His love embodied in the motives and acts of man makes it possible. Where there is fear, hate, selfishness, there is obstruction to God's giving of bread. There has been and is such obstruction in Europe today. That's why it is so important that Christians in America let God give bread through them to the needy of Europe and the world. God would give. We decide whether we will let him give through us. The Mennonite Central Committee is sponsoring a program of canning for relief and of shipping packages of food and supplies for Christmas gifts. Congregations of the Church of the Brethren are sending carloads of rolled oats, cornmeal, and wheat flour to Europe. This whole program is cooperation with God as He seeks to feed the multitudes of today. It is very definite worship of our Father in Heaven. It is doing His will upon earth.

DID YOU fill out the questionnaire which appeared in last week's issue? Thank you if you did. If you did not, then we invite you to do so still. A wide response from different types of readers, mothers, laymen, young people, men in the armed forces, men in C.P.S., and ministers, ought to give us a much broader basis for our decisions. Here is your chance to pray in action for your conference journal.

LOOKING AT OURSELVES may not be so pleasant and easy as it seems right off-hand. We may not mind seeing our features in a mirror. But we generally are very reticent about taking a thorough, searching look at ourselves in the mirror of the spirit. It is usually a little painful to know ourselves well, for we sometimes are not quite so ideal as we appear to be on the surface. A great Christian minister, who has led many to Christ, warns against the attempt to enter into the fullness of the Christian life without first having learned to know ourselves as we really are. He points out that unless this first, essential step is taken, the abundant life just doesn't come. It simply can't. We need to know how we are wrong and how wrong we are, before we can and will embrace the right pattern of life. Those who have seen themselves and then have fixed their look upon Christ are the people who walk joyfully and usefully through life, clasping hands with God.

AN EDUCATION has not always been highly esteemed by all Christians. It has been felt that a rich spiritual life is possible without it, and it is true that the disciples of Jesus as a whole did not have years of formal training behind them. They were great characters, but undoubtedly education would have enabled them to have been even more effective. The Apostle Paul is an illustration of how learning does greatly expand the bounds of the Spirit. Therefore it is with interest that we note what has happened in a sister denomination, the Church of the Brethren. Edward Frantz in reporting upon their recent conference writes, "The Conference of 1882 decided against all schools and departments of schools having for their purpose the training of young men for the ministry. The language of the decision is very strong. The Conference of 1945 was held on a college campus, gave Bethany Biblical Seminary permission to make extra solicitation to meet her needs, beyond what is in the general budget, took the colleges in a small way permanently into the Conference Budget, and in other ways gave the utmost encouragement to Christian education, taking for granted the special preparation of young men for the ministry." This shows a decided change in sixty-three years. One can ignore or decry an education but not without suffering hurt from such an attitude. Sixty-three years have undoubtedly substantiated this for our sister church. In this increasingly complex world an excellent education comes in very handy. It is especially essential for those who would be leaders in the Church. They very much need an education which brings out the glory of God and which ripens them in His truth and love.

THE READER SAYS:

Two Questions Receive Consideration by Late Conference President

1. Was the General Conference sincere in adopting the resolution which set forth its attitude on war?

2. Why does Conference not accord floor privileges to college staff members as it does to its missionaries?

As to the First Question

This doubt was not expressed at the session. But evidently our Peace Committee, which presented this resolution, rightly sensed the sentiment of the session, for the statement was adopted with few if any dissenting votes.

As published, there were misleading omissions in both part "A" and part "B" of No. 78, the resolution in question. Whether the men in the draft would have voted the same way, one may doubt; but that is beside the point. For even if they did not so vote, that would neither prove nor justify a charge that the conference delegates were insincere. Sons have been known before now, not always to think and act as do their elders. And if conscience is to be the arbiter rather than some human overlord, we dare not crush it. Mennonites especially have reason to remember that regimentation—whether political or hierarchical—can be equally brutal and unjust toward Christian conviction and conscience.

In this connection one should not overlook "B" of the resolution, which acknowledges "common guilt in not having taught and lived more fully our Christian life..."

Regarding Floor Privileges

Why are these not accorded college staff members as they are to our conference missionaries?

Answer: Because the cases are not parallel. Our missionaries are accredited and made our missionaries officially by the respective conference board, which is so authorized and is directly answerable to Conference. But neither the General Conference nor any of its boards has anything whatsoever to say, as such, as to who is or is not to be on any college staff—Mennonite or non-Mennonite. More than that, in the memory of some, a college president was asked at a session: If the General Conference gave $100,000 to his college, would the Conference then be given a share in choosing the teaching staff? And the answer was definitely, No!

Under the circumstances the answer was technically correct. For so long as there is no recognized, official, mutual agreement as to organic relation or interrelation of two separate corporate bodies, naturally neither has the right to expect to be permitted to interfere in the conduct of the affairs of the other. Submitting reports is not enough.

Any organization that expects and receives financial or moral support from our Conference should also covet and seek its spiritual welfare. It is no more justifiable for any school to say to a church: You furnish the capital, and I will feed your youth with the academic, moral and spiritual food I think good for them, than it would be for a farmer to say to his neighbor: You let me take over your farm, then I'll be in a position to feed your children what I think they should eat.

The General Conference has need of schools that want not only its financial support, but that above all else are equally concerned to supply the proper moral and spiritual food which is basic for the existence of our Church. That is a sine qua non; no matter what the school calls itself. And schools that are really set up for that purpose—as I think some aim to be—will doubtless equally need and covet the support of the Conference which they purport to serve. And they will be concerned to establish amicable relations.

The practical problem is, how to provide a system by which the best interests of all concerned will most effectively be served. To that end a suggested procedure was presented at the last session (where it was tabled) and is to be acted on at the next session.

There are three or more approaches that might profitably be discussed. But for now this must suffice.—C. E. Krehbiel.

Mignonette's Secret

*Old Gravel Walk drew in his breath
The air smelled fragrant . . . sweet.
"What is your secret, Mignonette?"
She answered softly, "Feet."*

*"How can that be?" gasped Gravel Walk.
"Just listen, I declare,
Whenever I am trodden down
My fragrance fills the air."*

*"Well, bruises don't affect me thus," Old Gravel Walk replied,
"I just grow harder every day;
But I don't care," he lied.*

*"Yes, each of us has different tasks
And bruises do their part
To help us," nodded Mignonette,
"Cheer up, be glad of heart."*

Why Mennonite Boys Choose Military Service

Part II

MCC Draft Census Results

By J. Winfield Fretz

Pastors of all Mennonite Churches were asked to comment on why each man classified 1-A and 1-A-O entered the armed services. The suggested reasons given by the General Conference pastors were tabulated and grouped according to the following eleven categories:

Reasons	Number	Percent
1. Associates	321	26.7
2. Family influence	201	16.7
3. Sense of Duty	147	12.2
4. Lack of Peace Teaching	107	8.9
5. Finances	107	8.9
6. School Influence	64	5.3
7. Spiritual Indifference	62	5.2
8. Occupational Advantage	38	3.2
9. Away from Church	26	2.2
10. Lack of Information	23	1.9
11. Draft Board	19	1.6
12. Miscellaneous	86	7.2

All of these reasons were correlated with other factors such as the age of the draftee, his educational level, his church standing, and his occupation. The General Conference Peace Committee will likely make the full results of this census available for ministers and lay members. Only a few comments will be in order here as to the meaning of the "reasons" given for entering military service.

It is of utmost importance to remember that all Mennonite men as well as all other citizens had the freedom of choice in the matter of draft classification. It was not a matter of doing military service or being shot, or even of doing military service or going to jail. The Selective Service and Training Act of 1940 made provision for all men with a religious objection to war or military service. All men at the time of registration may state their objections to war and ask for classification as a non-combatant (1-A-O) or as a 4-E. If the local draft board refuses to honor these requests the registrant has the right to appeal locally and following that a presidential appeal. It is clear, therefore, that Mennonite drafted men chose military service. They were not forced to it by the government.

A second point of significance is that the General Conference ministers feel that a large number of their members join the armed forces because of social reasons. This is the most significant of all reasons given, twenty-seven per cent, or more than one out of every four men who take military service, do so because of the influence of their associates. If other reasons such as "family influence" (16.7); "school influence" (5.3); and "away from church" (2.2) are added to "associates" we have a total of fifty per cent taking military service for social reasons. This means that the influence of friends, school companions, fellow laborers in factories and offices, and the close relatives are more important than any other reasons in accounting for the rejection of an alternative to military service. This clearly illustrates the influence of environment on Christian ideals. Rather than retain the historic Mennonite ideals and convert others to them, seventy-three per cent of the General Conference Mennonites accommodated themselves to the values and thinking of their associates by accepting some form of military service.

A third fact of major importance is that 12.2 per cent of the General Conference men took military service because of a sense of duty. The men in this category felt it was the patriotic thing to do, that to refuse military service was to be not only disrespectful but also ungrateful to one's country. They concluded that military service and Christianity were not inconsistent and thereby repudiated the position of Biblical non-resistance as traditionally held by Mennonites. Such men seemingly saw no higher loyalty than loyalty to the State. Of all reasons given for accepting military service this one is farthest removed from the traditional peace teaching of the Mennonite Church. Closely related to this reason is that of "occupational advantage." Those who take military service because it offers them a chance to learn to fly, learn more about radio operation, to get medical experience, to continue their education, or to have a chance to travel and have adventure, completely avoid the central issue. They relegate the religious principle of non-resistance and the evil of war to a secondary place and look upon military service as offering personal advantage.

It is significant that relatively few pastors thought the reason for their members joining the armed forces was because of a lack of information, lack of peace teaching, or because of the need for financial support for dependents. Had these reasons weighed more heavily it might be concluded that church members entered military service due to unawareness of alternatives. Allowance must of course be made for the protective inclinations of the ministers who would normally not say that members took military service because they as ministers failed to teach adequately on the subject. It is a fact, however, that most Mennonite ministers were woefully negligent in stressing the Scriptural teachings on peace prior to this war.

One important reason why church members rejected the Civilian Public Service and chose one from or other of military service is the attitude of many ministers. There are a surprising number of ministers who are neutral as to which draft classification their members take, and some even refuse to support the Church program of Civilian Public Service. In a very real sense, then, the position of the drafted men in general reflect the attitude of the pastors. It is assumed that ministers, like their members, have been influenced in their environment to the point of being confused, indifferent or in opposition to the doctrine of non-resistance. Ministers too have been influenced by the opinions of their associates, by opinions of hostile members, and by community propaganda.

Finally, the census reveals that the General Conference is losing its doctrine of Biblical non-resistance. It is rapidly and almost identically following the steps of Mennonites in Switzerland, Holland, and Germany who have completely lost their peace witness. During this war Dutch Mennonites were active in the political underground, and German Mennonites were fighting an all-out war for Germany and against the Allies among whom were American Mennonites. In America, as in Europe, it is an open question as to how long the government will respect the peace witness of the Mennonite Church when a large fraction of its members renounce this position and accept the authority of the State as ultimate in time of war.

BEHOLDEST MOTE—CONSIDEREST NOT BEAM

Over and over the teachings of Jesus and the unique manner in which He put them, testify to His keen insight into and understanding of human nature. One such case in point which we now call to mind is the question which He put, "And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?"

Note His apt use of terms in stating the two propositions. In the first, He speaks of seeing, perceiving, observing, taking note of; in the second, He puts the case in terms of considering, trying to conceive, giving thought to, pondering over. Why did He thus change the terminology? Because He knew that in some way or other the shortcomings of others seem to become apparent enough to us; but not so with our own. We do not see them. Something seems to hide them from any casual or superficial view. If we ever become conscious of them, it is because we give careful and honest thought to the matter; i.e., we must "consider."

So by the very way in which Jesus put His searching question, He really did two things. He laid before us the necessity of self-examination, and then asked us why we do not do that, instead of so much critical observation of others. May it be that this is because we do not want to become aware of any shortcomings of our own, or that any consciousness of that sort which we may have is eased in its pointedness as we set out the imperfections of others and fix our gaze on them? By thus making a comparison in which our tricky nature casts the advantage in our favor, we feel less disturbed and go on our way all too complacently. The spiritual danger in so doing is at once apparent. So the Master's question still presses, "Why do you take note of even small defects in those about you, but do not give thought to make certain that greater ones are not found in yourself?" —R. L. Hartzler, Editor of The Christian Evangel, organ of the Central Conference

HOW TO PLAN AN ENJOYABLE LORD'S DAY

1. Stay at home Saturday night. Enjoy the evening with the family and retire a little earlier than usual.
2. Get up a little earlier Sunday morning and help do the necessary work of the home. An honest division of labor helps to oil the wheels of the household.
3. Plan to go to Sunday School and Church Worship Service. Religion and worship are necessary to a full-grown life.
4. Plan for a little time of quiet before you start for church. Remember that you are going to the Sanctuary to meet your God.
5. Plan to spend the entire day in a way that will bring cheer to others, relaxation to yourself and honor to your Lord and Redeemer. —Bulletin, West Zion Mennonite Church

THE C.P.S. SEMI-STARVATION EXPERIMENT

Among the wide variety of forms of service being rendered by C.P.S. men, the experiment being carried on with thirty-four men at the University of Minnesota is attracting much attention by Government officials and others concerned about doing relief work with hungry and starving peoples.

Right now these men are eagerly looking forward to July 29, the day on which they shall be eating their very much reduced meal. After three months of very limited diet, allowing them only about 1,100 to 1,700 calories instead of the necessary 3,500 required by the average person normally. Their weight is being reduced by 25 to 30 per cent during these six months, ending in late July. After that follow three months of building up to normal weight.

Nine of us from historic peace colleges, who attended the N.C.A. work shop or University classes this summer visited these men at several occasions and found them in good health and spirits. Hungry? Yes, indeed. If it weren't for a cause of being used to test just what happens to human organisms being starved when they can be clearly observed they would gladly eat. If they weren't conscientious, they wouldn't of their own account agree on a "buddy system," never going out alone, but they yield to rules of fasting. UNRRA is already using every bit of information as fast as it becomes available. Their service, too, helps to bring life, not death.

WHERE THE MAIL COMES ONCE A WEEK

(Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary of the Home Mission Board of the General Conference, pictures in vivid words life at Barnes Crossing, Saskatchewan, which lies "way up north." Brother Neuenschwander is visiting outlying home mission stations in Canada.)

Barnes Crossing, Saskatchewan, July 12-15, 1945: The location: This finds us 366 miles north of the International Line. Many of you remember the location of Saskatoon, having attended the General Conference there in 1938. Barnes Crossing is 225 miles northwest, mostly north from Saskatoon.

As I am laboring here in the Immanuel Church, Rev. Isaac Epp, minister with three places of worship: Beaversdale, mother church, log-structure, built in 1930; Daisy Meadow, five miles across the Beaver River to the north; and Champion, fifteen miles southwest, certain thoughts and impressions come to me.

First, mail comes to Meadow Lake, northern end of the Bees Line, Via C.P.R., twice a week, and it is brought to the local post office about twenty miles north-westward, once a week—on Friday by motor truck. On that day almost every family arranges to get their mail. Members of the family take time off to read the letters and papers.

Second, wheat, barley, and oats fields look good and give promise of a large harvest if a few more rains come. Wheat and barley is starting to head just now. Gardens are nice. Potatoes, lettuce, peas, and other garden produce grow nicely. Flowers are blooming. Yesterday and today I enjoyed ripe wild strawberries as well as jam made from these berries. Wild raspberries grow abundantly.

Third, even at this date, three weeks after the longest day, I am told the sun shines about eighteen hours out of the twenty-four per day. I know the sun sets at 9:30 o'clock, but I have not been up early enough to see it rise at 3:30 a.m., so I gladly take their word for it. These long days cause rapid growth.

Fourth, family life is the same as elsewhere. Last evening I was in the home of Grandfather and Grandmother P. N. Friesen, Darintosh. After the evening service (no lights used) the children with their families came home, and we had a delightful lunch together. The grandchildren enjoyed the run of the house just as they do in the States. At about midnight one of the girls noticed a brush fire. We went out to see it. Indians were cleaning up some brush about a quarter mile away. The light of day had not disappeared, I noticed. I took out my watch and easily saw that it was exactly mid-night. I was told it does not get darker at any time on clear nights.

Fifth, religious life and devotion to Christ are vital to these Mennonites. In the Daisy Meadow Church we sang: "There is a Name I Love to Hear" and "My Jesus I Love Thee," with great sincerity. I told the people about our home mission work and brought a gospel message besides. True to form, a song had to be practiced by the children for the Sunday School Convention on Sunday, July 15.

Sixth, the Sunday School Convention and Annual Bible Conference, July 15-22, are further evidence of the energetic Christian efforts that are made in this community. This is a united project carried on by a number of churches, and in order to accommodate the crowd, a large tent was erected on the Beaversdale Church lot. Rev. Chas. B. Dirks, home mission worker, and three other ministers will be the Bible Conference speakers. Rev. Janzen, Rev. J. C. Schmidt, Rosthern, President Saskatchewan Youth Committee, Rev. Magnus, and Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander spoke to the Sunday School Convention. Approximately three hundred people were present, representing ten Sunday Schools. The people came on foot, in big trucks, autos, buck boards, and farm wagons.

Seventh, although far removed from other Mennonite churches—even though the mail comes only once a week—these people are busy and happy in the land. They are content and rejoice in the many good things the Lord has done for them. They read The Mennonite and Christlicher Bundesbote, the Missionary News and Notes and consequently are quite well informed about General Conference mission and relief work.

The brethren David Toews, Benjamin Ewert, and J. J. Thiessen arranged my itinerary and sent me to visit and labor with these far-removed fellow believers. —A. J. Neuenschwander, Visiting Home Mission Stations in Canada

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

THE STATE OF OUR MENNONITE CHURCH IN INDIA

(Extracts from Rev. S. T. Moyer's last report)

As I attend these church conferences, and meet the thinking of the Indian leaders, I always come away much encouraged, and with a glowing faith in the essential soundness of the present program. I believe that our Christian work in India is about a dozen years behind in developing a genuine leadership developing program. I glory in the fact that Mission Conference finally passed in 1943 a budget allowing Rs. 2000/- to this end. This program in some details may still be quite flimsy. At least our faces are set to the future.

I am under no delusions. It will take about fifteen years for any boy now finishing Jagdeeshpur School to begin to shoulder responsibilities in a creditable way (i.e. by 1960); and it will take two or three generations after him to be able to rise up and do the work that the Indian worker, PLUS the foreign worker is now doing. We cannot withdraw from India within fifty or seventy years (the time of the Hebrew captivity) and have the work properly gone on. We are just on the fringe of the task. There is a tremendous amount of land yet to be possessed. Nothing above precludes an early return of our Lord Jesus, in Whose glorious return I sincerely believe and preach.

Nevertheless to see the Church Conference NOW at work, to sit in its Governing Body and work shoulder to shoulder with nine Indian brethren (and seven missionary members)—with the pick of the eight Indian pastors and the best of the laymen, as the brethren Nundy of Korba, Banwar of Champa, W. B. John of Jagdeeshpur,—and to have sat through three years hammering out a constitution, and have tested it clause for clause, I personally am very happy that the church is now set to carry on: the task of Evangelism, plus all pastoral and church work, plus holding of property, plus primary education.

At the last Mauhadi Conference we had present two outside guests, as leaders: Rev. C. Bhan Singh, pastor of the large Methodist Church at Jagdalpur, and about to become District Superintendent of an area with Christians in about 250 towns and villages; also Rev. Meyer of Khariar, Evangelical-Reformed Church. Both men were taken off their feet in glad surprise at what they saw of our work. They never dreamed that we had such an organization, nor such a church, nor such a body of Indian leadership, with the missionaries not in control. And when two months later Dr. D. A. McGavran heard that in Phuljhar-Deori alone we had a Christian community, up and going, of 3,500 souls, he wanted to send a team down to get first-hand reports and spread the news all over Chhattisgarh.

In conclusion, these words as greetings,—“we have obtained mercy—we have this ministry—we faint not,” II Cor. 4:1. I dare not elaborate on Paul's wealth of meaning of the three words, “mercy and grace,” “this ministry,” “faint not.”

Yours for Christ and His blood-bought Church,
S. T. Moyer

PROMISING YOUNG CHRISTIAN FROM CHINA MISSION FIELD WRITES LETTER

(Wang Shu Ying is a talented Christian girl from the General Conference Mission in China. She is one of five orphan children which were cared for by the mission. Now serving a Baptist church, she is interested in coming “back to our church” to “take care of orphans.”)

The Baptist Church

Dear Rev. and Mrs. Brown:

I was very glad to get your letter a few months ago and know that both of you have been getting on very well. It was a great happiness to get a letter from you.

After my graduation from the West China Union Theological College, I came to work in the Baptist Church in Chengtu. My great hope is to go back to our church and take care of orphans. Because of this I intend to go to the West China Union University to study one or two years on children welfare. I hope God may guide my way. Dear Rev. and Mrs. Brown, please do remember me in your prayers.

I want very much to know more about our church and its characteristics. If possible please tell me the history of our church in China. I hope I can write down the history of our church in China some day in remembrance of you two.

We were very happy to know that the European war was ended. We hope the war in East Asia will end very soon. We tremble to see the war carrying on.

Rev. Pannabecker has not reached China yet. We hope he may have a chance to come to Chengtu. Dear Rev. and Mrs. Brown, we don't know whether you will have a chance to come to China again or not. I am sure we shall be happy to meet you.

Sincerely yours,
Wang Shu Ying

A New Frontier

by Rhea Krehbiel Blythe

The subject of "Should Churches Establish and Maintain Hospitals for the Mentally Ill" is one of vital importance, not only to our church, but to the post-war nation. It is a problem that the war has greatly magnified, as such it will have to be faced in the future.

In the early institutional care of the mentally ill the church (Quakers) took a leading part. Other social inheritances however hindered the church from taking hold as it did in the field of medical hospitals.

The individuals that conquered and settled the soil of our country brought with them from Europe many of the prejudices in regard to the cause and treatments of insanity. Insane persons were held in shame, to be locked out of sight, if not out of mind. Insanity was referred to as "the sins of the father," and the "devils with-in!" These pioneers thought of insanity as a "punishment for sins" of either the individual or the parents, and not as an illness. Except for a few religious groups the great majority of people did nothing for the insane.

Social workers such as Dorothy Dicks (not the columnist) and many others pioneered in the field, and brought the problem before the government units. Hence state institutions were established, and in many states administration of them was combined with the "Poor Relief" administration. Funds for these departments have always been appropriated on a bare maintenance basis only. Because insanity is a sickness of the rich as well as the poor, some private hospitals (mostly detaining homes) were also established where large fees were charged.

The advancement of the medical and psychiatric sciences has also advanced the conception of insanity by the laymen. A mental case today is taken to a specialist in mental diseases. But here is where we are confronted with a new problem. Where institutional care is needed a patient's family has a choice between a few very expensive and almost prohibitive private hospitals, and the state operated hospitals where in most states a commitment from the Probate Judge is needed. The first is financially impossible, and the latter frequently brings life long social condemnation to the patient. Then too, state institutions have been pawns in the hands of politics, with the jobs in the institution being given to the best political workers. Yes, the professional jobs were chosen with care, but the ordinary ward jobs, the people who contacted the patients day after day, were given to inexperienced and untrained people. Had the states looked for trained people they would have been able to find only a few, such a few that their presence in an institution would be negligible. The present war has through its labor shortage, etc. focused the attention of people on the problem which has always existed. Added to this is the fact that almost every state hospital in the United States is crowded and overflowing. People who need treatment, either short or long term, are not being accepted. Feature a person with a bursted appendix waiting months for treatment! But this is happening every day with the equally serious mental cases.

The church has an obligation and a duty in the field of establishing and maintaining hospitals for the mentally ill. The church through its other institutions, medical hospitals, and schools, will be able to train the personnel for the operation of mental hospitals. The church can provide the personal and religious touch that only a religious group can give. It can provide a hospital for the vast group of middle-men who can not afford the privately operated mental hospital, or who hesitate to accept the free service of the state hospitals. It can give new lease to life to many condemned mentals. It can give its youth a new field in which to serve humanity. Here, the church can carry out the wishes of The Son of Man. Indeed, here is a new frontier!

REPORT OF SASKATCHEWAN RETREAT

held at Youth Society Farm, near Rosthern, July 5-8.

As in previous years the young people of northern Saskatchewan rallied to follow the invitation for a season of fellowship and study. Representatives from Ontario, Manitoba, and British Columbia were present. "Working for Jesus" was the motto.

Thursday evening the committee welcomed the gathering young people with appropriate scripture verses and remarks. Rev. J. W. Nickel, youth worker from British Columbia expounded with the help of a projector the parable of the Good Samaritan.

Morning devotions were conducted in groups divided according to age. When weather permitted these classes were held out of doors.

Friday and Saturday were marked by lectures on different topics: "The Sermon of the Mount" by Dr. J. H. Langenwaller; "Home Missions" by Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander; "Mennonite History" by Rev. J. G. Remple, Rosthern; "Foreign Missions" by Verney Unruh. Addresses were delivered by Bishop David Toews, Rev. J. B. Dirks and John Unrau.

The singing of hymns under direction of Prof. Hohmann contributed toward making the retreat a real Christian experience. Surely there is nothing that expresses the deep devotion and adoration, the peace and the joy of a Christian as adequately as these hymns "that are old because they are good, not good because they are old."

Upon the invitation extended by Rev. Neuenschwander in two evangelistic messages, several souls were led to make a definite decision for Christ, while many others felt strengthened and encouraged in their fight for the good cause.

Saturday afternoon the Youth Society held its business session. It is very encouraging to see how the Lord has blessed, materially and spiritually, the undertakings of the young people and is opening new fields of service. A projected children's home besides the Invalid Home, Summer Bible School and evangelistic work provide ample opportunity for youth to work for the Master.

"The King of Kings" was shown on two evenings of the retreat.

Sunday, the last day, brought many visitors from neighboring churches to attend the song festival. Several choirs, including a retreat choir, participated as well as ladies' choruses and male quartets. I feel sure that no one that took part in the practicing and rendering of such selections as "Now let every tongue adore Thee," "My God and I" and "God so loved the World," shall ever forget them.

To our Youth Committee, who has spared neither time nor effort toward making this retreat a mountain-top experience for many of us we extend our heartiest thanks and appreciation.

To our bountiful heavenly Father we give praise and thanks for the wonderful fellowship with Him and with fellow-Christians, both of which we were privileged to enjoy especially these few retreat days.

WHAT THE ADULT RETREAT AT MENNO-LAN MEANT TO ME

The first adult retreat at Menno-Lan, July 13 to 15, has come to a close. The reality of God was demonstrated in a real way by the women and men who were chosen as the main speakers. In their humble yet forceful way expounding to us the word of God to the extent of sinners being convicted and believers strengthened in the faith. The theme "Christ liveth in me" was felt throughout the whole of the retreat by the way the retreaters responded in song, devotion, heart searching to the extent of tears, and last but not least in prayer to God in thankfulness that Christ does indeed live in us the hope of glory. God does make himself manifest in nature, in a wonderful way, when we look at the beauty around us, how we can worship God in the quiet out of doors away from the hustle and bustle of every day life. "The heaven declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth his handiwork." How wonderful! Man has ingenuity but God alone can make a tree. Sweet indeed was the fellowship of the Saints, men and women of like faith, with one goal in mind, and that to serve God and their fellowmen. Men in all walks of life, the farmer, banker, business man and preacher all on the same level; housewives, teachers, missionaries all came together to this first adult retreat in order to be strengthened, spirit, soul and body. We received the spiritual food so necessary for our growth in order to fit us better for the task ahead, when we come back from our mountain top experience to the valley of duty, sacrifice, and service. Our homes, churches and community should reap the blessings for this, our sitting together in heavenly places. To me it has meant a deeper devotion to Christ and His cause. God be praised for the blessing and benefits of our retreats at Menno-Lan.

Work

Thank God for the might of it,

The ardor, the urge, the delight of it—

Work that springs for the heart's desire,

Setting the brain and the soul of fire—

Oh, what is so good as the heat of it,

And what is so glad as the beat of it,

And what is so kind as the stern command,

Challenging brain and heart and hand?

Work

Thank God for the pride of it,

For the beautiful conquering tide of it,

Sweeping the life in its furious flood,

Thrilling the arteries and cleansing the blood,

Mastering stupor and dull despair

Moving the dreamer to do and dare

Oh, what is so good as the urge of it,

And what is so glad as the surge of it

And what is so strong as the summons deep

Rousing the torpid soul from sleep.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Mrs. P. R. Schroeder, Mountain Lake, Minn.

AUGUST 14—“Yea, they spake against God; they said, Can God furnish a table in the wilderness?” Psalms 78:19

Do we speak as Israel did when we consider the great want in the world today and hear from every side, “America must feed the nations?” Will there be enough for us and them also? Read the rest of the Psalm. Verse 25: “Man did eat angels’ food; He sent them meat to the full.” At this time we again hear of bountiful harvests. God has fed us and still does as no other people. Can God furnish a table in the wilderness if we are true to Him? He not only can, but He will.

AUGUST 15—“The Lord our God made a covenant with us in Horeb. The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us who are all of us here alive this day.” Deuteronomy 5:23

God made His covenant with Abraham, with Isaac, with Jacob, with all the faithful down the line. But Moses tells his people that that is not enough. God also covenanted with them, with each one hearing his voice. We often are tempted to depend on the faith of our fathers. Let us treasure that, but let us not neglect to go a step farther. God has made His covenant with each one of us; we must individually, keep our covenant with Him.

AUGUST 16—“Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved.” Acts 4:12

Jesus is the one and only indispensable man. Many a family has said of a loving father, we never could do without him. Death took him, and, to their own surprise, they found they could do without him. A church has a faithful pastor; the people say, we could never give him up. He takes another charge and the church goes on much as before. A community looks to one or two of its key-men whom they deem indispensable; they are removed and the community goes on. Death takes a Roosevelt from our nation; he was often heralded as the indispensable man. Our nation can and does go on without him. But here is one absolutely indispensable man, the Lord Jesus Christ.

It is over the judgments of God that Christians often stumble. Webster gives many definitions for this word. It means, first, the act of judging, weighing in the balance, deciding between right and wrong. Can we not trust God to do that for us? It also means punishment. Who should know better than God when and how to exercise that? The German word “Heimsuchung” (Home-seeking) is the most satisfying definition of all. In all of God’s judgments He seeks to bring us Home.

AUGUST 18—“How great are His signs and how mighty are His wonders.” Daniel 4:3a

God’s creation is a marvelous wonder before our eyes. When He struck down Ananias and Sapphira for their sin, it was a miracle of judgment. When He healed the lame man at the Beautiful Gate through Peter’s word, He performed a miracle of healing. When He met Saul on the Damascus road a miracle of redemption and transformation was achieved which made of him the great Apostle Paul. No wonder Joshua admonishes Israel: “Sanctify yourselves, for tomorrow the Lord will do wonders among you.” Josh. 3:5

AUGUST 19—“Then Peter and the other apostles said, we ought to obey God rather than men.” Acts 5:39

In our present world conflict men tell us that we must make a difference between essentials and non-essentials in the Bible. Who will determine what is essential and what is non-essential? The same Christ who said to Nicodemus: “Except a man be born again, he can not see the kingdom of God” (John 3:3), also said, “But I say unto you, resist not evil” etc. (Mathew 5:39). The same Paul who said to the Philippian jailer, “Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved and thy house” (Acts 16:31), also said, “Avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath; for it is written, vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord.” The same apostle John who tells us in his first epistle, chapter 2, verse 2: “He is the propitiation for our sins: and not for our’s only, but also for the sins of the whole world,” also says, John 3:23, “This is His commandment, that we should believe on His Son Jesus Christ, and love one another, as He gave us commandment.” One is as binding as the other.

AUGUST 20—“The secret things belong to the Lord our God, but those things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children forever, that we may do all the words of this law.” Deuteronomy 29:29

We often fret about the things that we can not know. It is a great comfort when we once come to the place where we realize and admit that there are secret things with God too big for our finite minds to grasp. Then we cease going around in circles and not getting anywhere, and, instead, concentrate on the things which He has revealed to us and busy ourselves to do all the words of His law.

case. If we would follow the advice of Christ as given in Matthew 18:15-17, very few cases would ever have to be considered in public at Church and Conference meetings, and those that might come up for discussion would be disposed of quickly and efficiently.

Judgments passed on our members by other churches, conferences, or other religious bodies, should not be used in our meetings as evidence against them. Naturally other denominations differ from us, and in their eyes we are either modernists or reactionaries, and what they hold against one of our brethren they hold against us, and try to strengthen their position against ours by pointing out what is wrong with us. We cannot help that. But if a brother sinneth, whether his sin is an offence only to us, or to us and incidentally to some other religious body, the case must be treated according to Matthew 18:15-17, or it cannot be brought up before our churches and conferences.

We should stand one for all and all for one, if we wish to survive. No outside assembly has a right to intermeddle in our own affairs.

One thing I miss in our triennial Conference sessions: discussions of our Articles of Faith on principle.

We are so busy with solving all the problems that have arisen along practical lines that we can spare no time for such discussions.

Would it be entirely impossible to get together and to discuss our stand toward war and peace, toward our interpretations of the biblical truth, toward methods of evangelism, etc.? Even if this would not lead to a complete unanimity on all of these and other matters, it would still help us to understand the other fellow, if we only would be led in such deliberations by God's Holy Spirit of Love. And we would find the basis on which we could work together harmoniously, even if we do not agree on every doctrine and dogma.

Such discussions would also enable us to be "ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh us a reason of the hope that is in us with meekness and fear." (I Peter 3:15) They would serve us much better than a voluminous "Book on General Conference Mennonite Doctrine and Dogmas." Here we still could learn although we are past our school age. And we would find how much common ground we still have to stand and to work on, in spite of our doctrinal and dogmatical differences.

We have still much to learn about why we conscientiously object to war, and how we could live up to our convictions in war as well as in peace time. A thorough education in this subject is needed not only by the young but by the old as well. The problem of the young is not how to understand the reasons for our aversion to killing men and to participate in war in any way at all. Their problem is how to understand the conduct of the old people in the light of their noble principles and ideals.

We old fellows know perfectly well that we must live up to them, but please, tell us how to do it,—and how to do it not only in critical times but how to live in times of peace in order not to spoil things for us when upheavals come along. How can we live up to our convictions and still render a service to King and country that would mean no material privilege for us above other citizens of the country? How can such service be worth while in such a way that outsiders can understand its value and grant us the exemption which we enjoy?—The Word of God bids us to "walk toward them that are without." (Colossians 4:5)

In this Land of Liberty we have a right to ask for other services in war than killing and destroying the life and property of friend or foe, but we must bear the burden of critical times together with our compatriots which have another view on the question of peace and war than we have. Our service in war may be different but by no means easier or less dangerous than the service of the men in the army. We may not kill but we may, and should be willing to die for the country in which we live, and which grants us religious liberty in its bounds.

My remarks at the Conference, to the effect that old people need education in our peace doctrine as badly as the young, were met with deadly silence.

Are we dodging the issue? Are we moving along the line of least resistance? Do we wish to get off as cheaply as possible? Are we set on having our youths confess to the doctrines of peace while we sit at home cashing in on war profits, and comforting ourselves with the sophistic philosophy that it does not matter where the money comes from as long as we spend in a way that pleases God?

"Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

There is much room for us in the Conference to grow, to improve, and to mend our ways.

The hour that impressed me most and quickened my good hopes for us of the Conference, was the one which showed that we still repent our sins, and that God restores us to our stand as children of His when we come to Him with a contrite heart and beg His forgiveness.

"O come, let us worship and bow down: let us kneel before the Lord our maker. For he is our God; and we are the people of His pasture and the sheep of His hand. Today if ye will hear His voice, harden not your heart, as in the provocation."

RELIEF

Appointees EnRoute to England

Farewell services were held at Akron on July 17 for three workers who have been commissioned for relief service in England. George Neufeld, Waldheim, Saskatchewan, according to present plans will work with John Thut in behalf of German and Italian war prisoners in England. Susan Peters, Niagara Falls, Ontario, and Evangeline Matthies, Virgil, Ontario, will fill vacancies among Mennonite personnel in England caused by the transfer of several workers to projects in Holland and France. It is significant to note that the above three workers were recipients of Mennonite relief in Russia during the famine of 1919-23 and when their families migrated to Canada.

Changes in Middle East Unit

For some time the refugee camps in Egypt have been in the process of liquidation and Mennonite relief workers were uncertain as to when they would serve further. O. O. Miller arrived in Cairo, July 10, and after discussing the rapid changes with the Mennonite personnel it was decided to send five members of the unit to Italy during the coming month as part of the U.N.R.R.A. mission there; two workers are to proceed to Ethiopia; three workers will continue work in Egypt among displaced peoples; and four remaining workers continue to serve in refugee camps.

Helping Refugees to Go Home

Bertha Fast, a children's recreational director at the Tolumbat convalescent camp, recounts in a recent letter a phase of the refugee migration:

"Several weeks ago I felt fortunate to be chosen as one of the people to escort the refugees (from Tolumbat) to El Shatt in preparation for returning to Yugoslavia. Nancy (Hernley) also went along. It was one of those experiences I shall treasure: the refugees piling up their baggage, driving in the big lorries to the station where every one settled themselves on their luggage to wait for the order to enter the train, walking through the cars at night, stepping over sleeping children and trying to cheer them with my limited vocabulary, Nancy handing out aspirins and bandages, all of us crossing on a ferry, filling the boat to capacity with bundles, babies, and all. Back and forth we were on the way thirty hours, but I was ready for more. So tomorrow I am going again!"

Canning Labels Available

We have received a supply of the 1945 C.P.S. canning labels from the printer and requests for these labels should be sent to M.C.C. Only the new label should be used for marking contributions of food for C.P.S. this year. The "Food for Relief" label should be used when marking contributions of relief foods and these too may be obtained upon request from the Akron office.

Church Building Among Paraguay Mennonites

Mennonite colonists in the village, Ruckanau, in Colonia Friesland, have just completed the construction of a new combined church and school building. The structure, measuring 52 feet by 23 feet, is now the largest building in that colony.

The Fernheim colonists plan to begin the construction of their second church building within the near future. This new house of worship will occupy a space approximately twenty-six feet by sixty feet. Their first building, designed exclusively for church use, was built in the village No 11 recently.

C. P. S.

C.P.S. Responsibility Increases

The number of men in Mennonite camps and the responsibility of supporting and administering the program steadily increases. The termination of the war in Europe and plans for demobilization of inducted men, have not affected C.P.S. as yet. In fact, prospects for discharge of C.P.S. men by the point system have waned considerably since the introduction in Congress of the Winstead Bill. Even if the bill does not pass it will postpone the beginning of demobilization for at least several months. Selective Service will not begin discharges while the bill is pending. In the meantime inductions into C.P.S. continue. Reports for the past month reveal that from May 31 to June 30, ninety-six new men were inducted into Mennonite camps bringing the total number up to 4,164.

Mrs. Roosevelt Visits Unit at Poughkeepsie

The wife of the late President spoke to members of the C.P.S. unit and the Women's Summer Service unit at the Hudson River State Hospital on July 9, telling about her interest in relief work and pointing out the most crying needs of the world and how they might best be met. Mrs. Roosevelt commented on her visit in her widely published column, "My Day" for July 12. "The superintendent of the hospital told me that they (the conscientious objectors) had undoubtedly raised the standards for the care of the patients, and that they had been of tremendous help in disclosing certain practices which existed there and about which we were never before able to get any real evidence. He said if they would stay longer they would probably improve standards even more... This kind of work for the conscientious objectors is, of course, much better than many of the occupations which they have been given to do in the public service camps. Many of them are preparing to travel for their churches after the war and undertake relief work in different parts of the world, and what training they get in hospitals here will be of value in the future."

1945 Women's Summer Service Program

Eighty young women have volunteered and are serving in the M.C.C. Women's Summer Service Program during the present season. Besides ten, who are assisting at the clothing centers and headquarters office at Akron, seventy are serving in mental hospitals as follows Poughkeepsie 29, Cleveland, 18; Ypsilanti, 16; Wernersville, 7. They represent the following denominations: Conservative Amish Mennonite, 1; Brethern in Christ, 2; Central Conference Mennonite, 2; General Conference Mennonite, 20; Mennonite Brethern, 4; Mennonite (Old), 49; Methodist, 2. Members of the units come from thirteen states and from one foreign country. Ohio, Kansas, Indiana, and Pennsylvania have ten or more representatives.

CORRESPONDENCE

BETHEL MENNONITE CHURCH

Langdon, North Dakota

The hymn writer says, "Count your blessings, name them one by one." I shall do that—thus sharing them with you.

May 1-6 we were privileged to have Rev. J. A. Peterson from St. Paul with us for a week of meetings. Then the later part of May four Mennonite churches met at the Alsen Church for a week of union meetings with Rev. Theo. Epp, of the Back to the Bible Broadcast, as evangelist. Souls were saved.

Our daily vacation Bible school was held June 4-15. Forty-five enrolled, and a number of the children saved.

July 5th Missionary P. A. Penner was here for an evening service. July 8th Missionary Frank Shortridges were here for both morning and evening services. They have served one term in Africa and are waiting to return. They are serving now in the South until the way opens again. On July 15th Rev. Erwin Brueckner and family were here for morning service. He also participated in the annual song Festival held that evening at Bethel. They are missionaries to the Indians at Fort Totten, North Dakota.

Since I last wrote there have been five young people baptized and received into the church.

A well has been dug near the parsonage, and the church building has been painted on the inside and outside.—Corr.

GOSPEL MENNONITE CHURCH

Mountain Lake, Minnesota

June 24: The regular morning message was not brought, but instead the pastor gave an interesting report of the District as well as of the General Conference. He also reported to have enjoyed a blessed time of fellowship at all the conference sessions.

Children's Day program was given on July 1, with Miss Helen E. Nickel (a missionary to India) as guest speaker. A fellowship dinner was served at noon.

In the afternoon a home and foreign mission service was held with the Rev. Ben Nickel and Rev. Marvin Dirks as main speaker. On Monday night Rev. Dirks continued to relate of his internment experiences in the Philippine Islands.

The young people enjoyed a lake side meeting with the Rev. Dan Friesen bringing the evening message.

Rev. and Mrs. August Ewert, accompanied by a ladies' trio, went to the C.P.S. camp, Denison, Iowa, to conduct the Sunday morning and evening services.—Corr.

Statistical Report

Statistician Report given to the General Conference in the last session held at North Newton, Kansas, by the Conference Secretary, Rev. Phil. A. Wedel

Data of our Churches

130 churches have ladies missionary societies.
86 churches have regular prayer meetings.
32 churches use both the English and German languages in their worship.
23 use only the German language (the greatest number being in Canada).
53 churches have bulletins.
117 churches have young people's societies.

Churches and membership:

According to the most recent statistics 67,000,000 of the people of the United States belong to some denomination; the rest are more or less irreligious and churchless. How many of our Mennonite-born never become members of our Mennonite Churches? How many never become Christians? How many joined other denominational churches?

194 churches belong to the General Conference. The present General Conference membership is 37,781. This does not include the membership of the ten churches accepted into the Conference this session.

AN OPEN LETTER

Dear Friends of Christ and Youth:

The fiscal year of Bethel College ends with July 31. If Mennonite individuals as well as Sunday School Classes and congregations will continue to give liberally until then, we hope that the old college debt can be paid by August 1, 1945. However, our people are not urged to give now with the idea of relaxing in their giving for several years thereafter. Bethel needs about $25,000 per year in gifts to balance her educational budget of about $100,000. Besides, various other post-war financial needs will have to be met by our college. The world needs well-trained Christian workers for post-war reconstruction who can distribute food for hungry bodies, minds, and souls. The Lord has richly blessed our College in the past. In gratitude let us not grow weary in well-doing and in giving cheerfully.

In behalf of the Board of Directors of Bethel College—

Gratefully and sincerely yours,
 D. C. Wedel, President
 P. A. Wedel, Vice-President
 A. E. Funk, Secretary
 C. H. Goering, Treasurer

P. S. Address your gifts to the Finance Committee, Bethel College, North Newton, Kansas.

—Grace Church, Pandora, Ohio: The religious drama "Living Characters," a vivid portrayal of how the Bible came to be, was given July 1. On July 8 the First Church of Bluffton presented the drama "Simon, the Leper." This drama which portrays the healing ministry of Jesus had been given at Camp Mack. A Social Action Committee is to assist the pastor in meeting the problems of the Post War era in the community. Five thousand dollars are already available for additional Sunday School rooms, etc. Pastor's recent sermon on "The Genius of Neighborliness" was sent to the men in service.

—The Fourth Annual Conference on Mennonite Cultural Problems will be held on the Bluffton College Campus, August 24 and 25. J. D. Unruh from Freeman, South Dakota, will preside at the opening session, Friday. Among the papers for that morning is one on "A Review of the Practices in Required Courses in Bible with Suggestions as to Desirable Procedures—in Four Year Colleges" by Dean Jacob S. Schultz of Bluffton College. In the afternoon Rev. A. E. Kreider will give a paper on "Evangelism on the College Campus." In the evening there is a paper on "Recreation among Mennonite Youth" by Melvin Gingerich. Saturday morning, Paul Shelly of Bluffton College will give a paper on "An Evaluation of Methods of Transmitting Mennonite Ideals" and J. P. Klassen of Bluffton College will deal with the subject "Expressing Mennonite Ideals in Art." "The Scriptural Teachings on Church and State Relationships" is the subject that will be treated by Rev. Erland Waltner at the Saturday evening session. The papers mentioned here are only some of the papers that will be read.

—Berne, Indiana: A farewell, with cafeteria dinner, was held for the J. P. Sudermans on July 29. A letter by Gerald Stucky, assistant pastor, written to all absent members, states that Rev. Olin Krehbiel is to assume his duties at Berne around November 1. This letter points out that about 150 men from the Berne Church are in service and that in addition to these there are about 125 absentee members.

—A total of $112,750,000 is being sought by sixteen religious bodies for postwar world relief, restoration and reconstruction.

—Bulletin, Reedley, California, Church: "Many of our young people are earning good money this summer. How many of you young people would like to give a day's wake, or perhaps even more, to your Church for its building program. In this way you can feel that you have a definite part in the life of the Church."

The Mennonite Seminary and Bible School

TO OPEN IN CHICAGO, SEPTEMBER 4, 1945

"Bless the Lord, O my soul; and all that is within me, bless His holy name."

These words of Psalm 103 express the feelings of joy and gratitude of the Seminary Board at the close of its recent meeting in Chicago.

The aim of the General and Central Conferences to resume a program of Seminary and Bible education as set forth by the resolutions adopted in recent sessions of said conferences is now to be realized.

A Special Committee of the Board which had made a prolonged study of the matter, submitted a report of its findings to the Board in session at Chicago, Ill., on July 31, 1945, and definite plans for the Mennonite Biblical Seminary and Bible School were worked out.

After much prayer and consideration the Board felt that the most practical way at present would be the affiliation with an accredited seminary, looking, however, toward the establishment of our own independent institution as soon as possible. For such an affiliation, the Board agreed, that an institution should be chosen which has a Bible-centered curriculum, which emphasizes the Biblical peace principle, which stresses rural life and church music, which is so located as to enable our students to get their practical experience in church work during their school years in our own churches, and which also has a Bible School.

Canvassing the situation in the light of the above considerations the Board definitely felt led by the Lord to accept the opportunity of affiliating with Bethany Biblical Seminary and Bible Training School in Chicago and to open our own Seminary and Bible School in connection with said institution on September 4, 1945, under the name The Mennonite Biblical Seminary and the Mennonite Bible School, with Dr. A. Warkentin as president. Other faculty members have been contacted and their names will be announced in the near future.

Through this affiliation our students will be able to continue their education and earn the degrees of Bachelor of Divinity, Master of Religious Education, and Master of Theology. The three year Bible School gives young people with high school training an excellent opportunity to deepen their Bible knowledge, to grow in spiritual fellowship and to prepare for services in the church. The school issues a Bible School certificate.

A deep and dominant concern of the Board and the administration is that the institution shall be thoroughly Biblical, Christ centered, and evangelical, in harmony with the doctrinal statement as approved by the General Conference in 1941.

An encouraging measure of interest has already been indicated in the enterprise of young people who have consecrated their life to the Lord and who are looking forward to continue their preparation in our schools for Christian service.

As an aid to students who are qualified and approved for seminary work, the Board voted a scholarship of $150.00 each for the year. In addition to this financial help there will be opportunities to earn the rest of the year's expenses.

The Board is deeply convinced that the Lord has been leading toward the establishment of this our own Conference Seminary and Bible School and therefore is happy to make this announcement to our churches.

We are well aware of the fact that without our Heavenly Father and our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ we can do nothing and we humbly pray for the continued guidance of the Holy Spirit.

The Board herewith asks the members of our churches to make this important cause a special matter of prayer, and at the same time urges all those who are interested in attending a Seminary or Bible School to give our own school due consideration.

For further information and catalogues write to the Mennonite Biblical Seminary and the Mennonite Bible School, Dr. A. Warkentin, President, 3435 Van Buren St., Chicago, 24, Ill.

The Mennonite Central Committee in the Far East

by S. F. Pannabecker

In company with P. P. Baltzer of the Mennonite Brethren, and various others of our Mennonite Central Committee staff, I have traveled for monotonous days over endless seas. Now we find ourselves in Calcutta with a small but growing staff of M.C.C. workers. J. Harold Sherk of the Mennonite Brethren in Christ is director of the unit, while other members are Lawrence Burkholder and Clayton Beyler of the Mennonite (Old) and R. C. Kauffman of the General Conference group. Brother Baltzer and I are also located here temporarily, for a length of time depending on the difficulties in negotiating entrance into China. Two more workers are now en route, one a male nurse, Titus Lehman, and the other Wilhelmina Kuyf of our China mission. (Lehman has now arrived in Calcutta, according to a June 1 cable.—Ed.) At the present time it is impossible to distinguish the India and China staffs but from this pool workers will be drawn into China as conditions permit and the work warrants.

The work here was inaugurated two years ago in connection with the Bengal famine which was then raging. The original impetus for the famine was not scarcity of food but government buying, perhaps for military use, and an accompanying rise in price. At what seemed high prices, farmers and others who had grain were tempted to sell their food stocks in the hope of buying later at "normal" prices. In some such manner grain supplies began to get into the hands of dealers who hoarded for higher prices. Thus in the midst of a supply of food there was the anomalous situation of people unable to buy, and rising prices. Outside imports which would normally have helped to control prices were kept out due to war conditions and because the Bengal government was crippled by the death of the governor and seemed incapable of remedial action. It is estimated that one to three million people died.

The crest of the disaster is long past and famine conditions are no longer seen but the effects continue. A larger number of widows are left without support, for it was not uncommon in those days for the man to go off seeking food and never return. The woman, staying at home, with less exertion and perhaps greater reserve, survived the famine only to find herself without a provider. Another effect of the famine days is the sight of dilapidated and collapsed houses. Being built of bamboo poles, thatched roofs, and mud walls the houses need repair at certain critical times in order to stand the rainy weather. Necessary roof and wall repairs were neglected in famine years and the houses now lie in ruins. A further significant effect is found in the fact that many of the poorer farmers have been unable yet to replace animals and necessary farming equipment, which were sacrificed to buy food.

Several factors further aggravate the situation. War prices keep rice, the staple food, at a price four to five times normal without a proportionate rise in wages. Government incapacity and graft in the system or administration prevents remedial action. For instance, there are now available large supplies of powdered milk, which it is impossible to get to children in the villages because of the lack of reliable distributors. In a nearby area a flood of sea water temporarily ruined the land for cultivation. The general ignorance regarding hygiene and sanitation and subsistence on marginal level opens the way for epidemics. Unsatisfactory housing conditions in a war time crowded city further complicate matters. Just now a cholera epidemic of no small proportions is raging, fifty or more new cases being reported daily last week.

Under such conditions there is obviously work to be done. The government is providing much relief and is willing to do considerably more if honest agents can be secured. All missions in the region are cooperating in such efforts as milk distribution and inoculation. The Bengal Christian Council, with American funds, is working on relief and rehabilitation plans under the direction of one of our own M.C.C. men, R. C. Kauffman. The Friends also have widespread activities.

Our M.C.C. work underwent a change at the end of last year. Large scale distribution of free rice was stopped; the government took over hospital and industrial work formerly operated by the M.C.C., and the staff borrowed from the various Mennonite missions returned to their regular work. Since then the newly arrived workers have been seeking for activities which fit into the needs of the community. A small amount of rice and cloth distribution was found necessary. This was mostly by sale at reduced

C. O.'S are the topic of a fair and interesting write-up in the section on religion in Time magazine of July 30. It points out how C.O.'s are serving as "human guinea pigs" "to help science save lives." It talks of the C.P.S. men in mental hospitals and in base camps. It makes clear that they do not receive pay for services rendered, neither insurance for injuries, nor pay for dependents. It recalls that "There were C. O.'s in both the Revolution and the Civil War, when members of Christian groups like the Quakers, Mennonites and Brethren, in the belief that Christ commanded Christians not to kill, refused to fight in armies." It suggests that "In World War II the attitude toward C.O.'s and their treatment has been enlightened." The article concludes with the paragraph: "But the question that nearly every C.O. asked last week was: with the war over in Europe, will Congress release C.O.'s for foreign relief work? Most of them would welcome the chance." The Life magazine of July 30th devotes several pages of pictures to C.O.'s undergoing the starvation experiment. It is an objective treatment.

"PARENTS usually show sympathy for the finger that has been pinched or the ear that is aching. But often the same consideration is not shown for the emotional pressure that expresses itself in temper tantrums, thumb-sucking, stubbornness, whining or shyness. Few parents really appreciate the importance of trying to understand the child and his behavior in the light of his previous experiences." So reads a paragraph in a bulletin on "Applying Nursery School Methods of Child Guidance in the Home," put out by Kansas State College, Manhattan. Evidently this bit of good sermon for parents was not written for the commemoration of Mother's Day or Father's Day, but it seems very much in place if we but stop to think a little. Parents have been much impressed with the need for orange juice, vegetables, fresh air, etc., for the physical welfare of the child. But they are not so sure at all what the equivalents of these "necessities" are when it comes to the emotional growth. And so we may continue to provoke our children unto wrath. "O God, our Father, forgive us for paying so little heed to the spiritual problems of little boys and girls who sorely need understanding and wise guidance if they are to develop into cooperative adults who are at peace within themselves and with all mankind."

ABOLITION OF COMPULSORY MILITARY TRAINING throughout the whole wide world is the aim of a resolution introduced in the House of Representatives by Congressman Joseph W. Martin on July 17. The resolution urges "that before the United States adopts compulsory military service, the President of the United States, the Secretary of State and the personal representative of the President on the United Nations organization, Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., be and hereby are urged to work unceasingly for an immediate international agreement whereby compulsory military service shall be wholly eliminated from the policies and practices of all nations." Already churchmen are giving strong support to the resolution. It remains to be seen whether one "peace-loving" nation will take this resolution seriously enough to act upon it. In 1927 Russia proposed the abolition of compulsory military training. Perhaps it is our turn now. If we were a Christian nation we might at least remember that "They that take the sword, shall perish by the sword."

THE DAY OF EVANGELICAL OPPORTUNITY in South America is at hand. So says E. Stanley Jones in a report upon his recent trip to our southern neighbors. We quote: "It was also revealing to note that in the V-E Day parade which was allowed in Rosario (Argentina) the crowd booed the Roman Church and cried 'Down with clericalism!' as representatives of that church passed. Something was happening: the Roman Catholic Church was being identified with reaction and fascism and the Evangelical movement was being identified with freedom and democracy. The pope had called Mussolini 'the man of Providence' and had backed the fascist Franco against democratic Spain, and the Roman Church was backing the fascist regime in Argentina and other parts of Latin America. This was producing a very significant situation: The Evangelical movement had moved from the edges of the national life to the center and had become a national issue. It stood for something that Latin America, deep down, dearly loves—freedom and democracy; and it stood for these two things not from policy but because of its inherent nature.

"This means that the greatest opportunity the Evangelical movement has ever had is now before it. It has a chance, a very real chance, of winning the liberal elements of Latin America. These elements may now look to the Evangelical movement as their natural spiritual home. With courage and humble faith that movement may sweep the continent. This is possible because it is no longer a foreign-led movement with a foreign stamp on it. It has become truly naturalized and has able national leaders . . .

"The stage is set, physically and psychologically, for the greatest period of advance the movement has ever dreamed of—a Reformation that may run through Latin America." (See Christian Century, July 25)

Since the General Conference is thinking of opening a mission field in South America, these conclusions are of special importance to us. Whether Colombia is as receptive as Chile, Brazil, and Argentina is not stated by Jones, but probably something of the same spirit prevails throughout South America. At least, it seems natural that the people of South America would eventually ask questions even in the field of religion.

THE BOOK REVIEW

OUR MISSION AS A CHURCH OF CHRIST by Ed. G. Kaufman, Mennonite Central Committee, 1945; price, 20 cents; single copy, 15 cents for ten or more.

This is the title of a new booklet by Dr E. G. Kaufman. It completes the series of six booklets of about the same size (60 pages), published by the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pa. on the general theme "Mennonites and their Heritage," designed for use in Civilian Public Service Camps.

Having been a missionary himself, and having previously written a book of some four-hundred pages on the "Missionary Interest among Mennonites," the author is eminently qualified to write on this subject. The fact that he chose this subject indicates that he considers missionary activities as the chief purpose of the church. This helps to explain the great pains he has taken to give as complete a picture of the subject as the limited space of sixty pages would allow.

It is astonishing how much information he has been able to crowd into such limited space. This comprehensiveness is perhaps the outstanding value of the booklet, because it helps one to appreciate the importance of our Mennonite church, an importance which is out of proportion to its numerical size. This is inspiring to the careful reader, who does not get tired of the many names and dates. The rapid growth of mission activities in our churches, ever since oppression and persecution ceased sufficiently that they could recover their strength, is inspiring, as also the overflowing abundance and comprehensiveness of information, which the book contains. Such inspiration is just what our young people (and older ones also) need in these trying times, when we are in great danger of underestimating the importance of such a small denomination as we are and to get discouraged and afraid that after all our sacrifices for the "Faith of our Fathers" may be in vain. No, they are not in vain. "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom," says Christ. This book helps us to understand these comforting words, because it shows a certain bigness in our numerical smallness. It reminds me of a S. Sunday School Superintendent of a small Sunday School who had attended a Sunday School convention, and wanted to give a report of it to his Sunday School. He began, "I never thought that the Sunday School was such a great thing." That was all he could say, because he broke down in tears. But to me that report was long enough, because inspiration is contagious. Yes, greatness naturally inspires, especially young people, only we do not always see the greatness in outwardly small things and need the help of such books. American Mennonite Foreign Missions employ over three hundred missionaries on the various fields, and Home Missions many more. There are over one hundred home mission fields, twenty-six institutions for the aged, orphans, and sick, nineteen institutions of higher education, forty-three publications, etc. Yes, let old and young read this book and be inspired for all our mission activities at home and abroad as the fruit of the faith once delivered unto the saints.

LET'S GO CAMPING—by Raymond R. Peters; Brethren Publishing House, Elgin, Illinois; 1945; price, $1.25.

A valuable book, inspiring and informational, for retreat leaders is this little valuable volume. The author is General Secretary for the Board of Christian Education of the Church of the Brethren, and has had many years of experience both as camper and camp leader in young people's camps sponsored by his church. This book is an outgrowth of his activities in this field during the past two decades.

Dr. Peters begins by giving a brief history of camping generally, and more particularly of the development of this phase of work in the Church of the Brethren. This introduction is followed by a chapter on "The Philosophy of the Camping Program" which gives a definition of organized camping and outlines goals for camping, basic principles in camping, and tests for a camp. The author says, "Good camping requires an appreciation not only of nature but of human nature." And further, "Campers hope to have a good time but should realize that the camp program is especially designed to further Christian growth."

In considering types of camps, the author lists age-group camps—children's camps, intermediate camps, young people's camps, adult camps, and special-purpose camps—training schools, family camps, and summer assemblies. Summer assemblies are camps for all age groups. In this type of camp some activities are planned for all age groups, and others are planned on the various age levels. Week-end camps, overnight camps, day camps, and picnics are mentioned as other types of camping which may be employed to help carry out the program of the church.

Of particular value to camp leaders are the chapters which deal with administration, the daily camp schedule, and elements in the camp program. Special attention is given to discussing the art of counseling, its technique and the qualifications of the counselor. Leaders need to obtain a "high level of objectivity."

The final chapter, "Resources for the Camp Program," contains suggestions for vesper services, campfire meetings, and other types of programs which lend themselves to the atmosphere of the camp. There is an excellent bibliography.

The suggestions contained in this volume will help many camp leaders to the solutions of their problems.—Mrs. Helen Mueller MENNONITE COLONIZATION IN MEXICO by J. Winfield Fretz; Mennonite Central Committee, 1945; price, 20 cents; single copy, 15 cents for 10 or more.

Most of us are acquainted with the Old Order Amish but know little about the Old Colony Mennonites. All Mennonites in this country can be roughly divided culturally and linguistically into two main groups: those of Swiss or Pennsylvania-German background and those of Dutch or Low German background. Among the former the most conservative wing is the Old Order Amish and among the latter it is the Old Colony Mennonites. That we know less about them than about the Old Order Amish is due to the fact that they have lived in greater seclusion than the Amish who settled mainly in Pennsylvania.

The Old Colony Mennonites received their name from the Old Colony, the first settlement of Mennonites in Russia. When during the seventies one-third of all the Mennonites of Russia came to this country, the Old Colony Mennonites chose Manitoba for their home because the Canadian government was more liberal in granting them their requested privileges. The more progressive Mennonites from the Molotschna settlement came to the United States, where they were Americanized with comparative ease. The Old Colonists and related groups from Canada were very slow to make adjustments. They maintained religious, cultural, and economic practices the way they had known them from Russia. When after the World War their independent status was threatened, a large number of them moved to Mexico while many of the closely related Sommerfelder went to Paraguay. They were willing to give up their homes and life in a democratic country, which means so much to us, to search for new homes in countries that have different types of cultural and economic life. What made them willing to take such risks? The answer is that they did not want their children educated in public schools which in the long run would undermine the religious and cultural status quo. They say, "As the school, so the church." Are we surprised at this? For these very reasons our parents and grandparents came to this country.

We are learning to appreciate some of the characteristics of the Old Order Amish. In a similar way we should learn to understand the Old Colonists. They can teach us a few things, and perhaps they may not be entirely unwilling to learn from us. We are so much the same family that we should be able to get along.

A move in the right direction was made when the MCC under the Section for Mennonite Aid, delegated Dr. J. Winfield Fretz to go to Old Mexico to study the Mennonite colonization efforts in that country. Dr. Fretz has written a forty-three page survey, Mennonite Colonization in Mexico, which has been published by the MCC. It may be surprising for us to learn that there are 12,000 Mennonites in Mexico, located in several compact Mennonite communities. We are told in what manner they solve the problem of securing land for their ever-growing population. These methods, although not so stated by Dr. Fretz, were developed in Russia. It is regrettable that the Mennonites in the United States with the Molotschna background did not use them extensively. If they had been, and would be, applied Mennonite history in this country would have and could take a different course. Our Mennonite communities have come to a standstill. The overflow is scattering and hardly any new compact Mennonite communities are founded. If we cannot settle the boys in compact communities when they return from camp but let them scatter all over the country, we may be testifying to the world for a while, but our home base, our solid communities, will disintegrate. Where there is no growth there is decay. The churches and the boys in the CPS camps should cooperate with the M. C. C. to find ways and means to make the Section on Mennonite Aid fulfill its purpose.

Today the Old Colony Mennonites are willing to open their doors as Dr. Fretz has experienced it. The writer of these lines had the privilege of having some of them as guests in his home and sent some Ger-

THAT OUR CHILDREN MAY KNOW

It was a most interesting experience to be present at the closing exercises of the Mennonite Collegiate Institute at Gretna, Manitoba and to visit the campus of German English academy—henceforth to be known as the Rosthern Junior College—after the school was closed. The interest shown in both places in the future training of young people was most heartening. A large tent at Gretna was not roomy enough to receive all of those who had come. The building at Rosthern had been too small to receive all of the young people who had wanted to enter there last fall. At both places an outstanding topic of conversation was, "We must build more greatly."

At both places there was evidence that words were to be translated into actions just as rapidly as circumstances would permit. Considerable material had been gathered at Gretna in the hope that actual work might start soon. A large basement had been dug and forms built for actual construction at Rosthern. There were difficulties, of course, but there was a will to do the thing that ought to be done.

Aside from the material evidence there was a great deal of human evidence. There was the sense of a need. Young people are facing a world full of trouble and they need to know how to meet its problems. This feeling was shared by youth and adults. Naturally they did not see everything from the same angles, but they saw the need and were not looking for excuses. People who had had little schooling were sometimes the ones who were most urgent in trying to meet the existing need. They did what they could.

Those who cannot hope to attend schools any longer were not forgotten. The youth have undertaken to provide for the needs of such through the purchase of a Government Experiment Station and a former summer resort along the shores of a beautiful lake. Some of the venturesome spirit of youth was manifested in these undertakings. However, it is not blind adventure. There is a real purpose behind these undertakings at Rosthern and at Swift Current, Saskatchewan. Lessons have to be learned and mistakes may be made, but there is progress toward giving the coming generations a better chance to know what they will need to know of life in order to meet their opportunity-responsibilities.

The energy which has gone into all of these efforts might have been spent for selfish ends, and youth would have paid the price. Many of the most acute problems which exist among our people today are due to the fact that these opportunities were not met sooner.

One appreciates the spirit of those who lend a helping hand to those who do their best so that our children may know, whether it is through schools, retreats or discussion groups.

prices to poor people. A house repair and rebuilding program was inaugurated whereby assistance was given in materials and in some cases also in work of construction. The houses, similar to the dwellings of the majority of the villagers, are simple, thatched bamboo, tent-like structures that can be erected at a cost of about $25. To date this year forty of these houses have been built, ten more have had the roof reconstructed, and in 150 more cases assistance has been given in materials for repair.

Work has been provided for poor women and children in rice-hulling, evaporating salt, spinning, and rope-making. This is being enlarged to include weaving, and to serve more people. The project holds promise as a rehabilitation measure if it can be adjusted to a long-time program and training in skills that will be of permanent value. Attempt has been made for some time to secure a government issue of powdered milk for distribution. This has been approved recently and this week the first consignment is to be delivered. It is sufficient for serving 350 children daily and can be increased as the work grows.

Other projects are under consideration and will be started as conditions warrant. A region about twenty miles southeast of Calcutta, which was flooded with salt water, needs help in various ways; the government is willing to finance the work if we can administer it. Other nearby regions need assistance in agricultural training, in draining, and in dike repairing. Assistance in the replacement of farm animals and tools, probably by loan, is contemplated in certain needy cases. Medical work on a small scale is attempted but its extension awaits the arrival of trained workers.

It would seem that there is plenty of room for relief efforts in this area and, that carried on efficiently and honestly and "in the name of Christ," they would be an invaluable Christian testimony. This is our aim.

There will probably be some further delay before getting into China. The difficulty for Americans seems particularly great because of the hesitancy of our State Department to authorize passports. Very few Americans not in government service are going into China. In the past month I have come across only four, one relief and three medical workers, who have been given permission. The fact that a few are moving is encouraging.

Information regarding conditions in China is very limited, even at this close distance, and much that we hear is not reliable. The general impression seems to be that there is improvement in morale and stability though occasional Japanese threats of invasion westward give cause for apprehension. It would seem that such moves will have increasing difficulty of success as time goes on, and we hope the tension may soon be relaxed. Of our former places of work and our friends in occupied China we have received no word here as yet.

We have made contacts with several people of importance in various China relief organizations. All of them welcome our participation in the work of relief. The American Advisory Committee, which represents the Church Committee for China Relief, is helping us, and we will of course cooperate with them and other relief agencies. We expect to apply soon for the necessary permits and hope that we may be successful. We appreciate the many kind thoughts and the earnest prayers which are being raised in our behalf, and believe that God will open the way.

PASTORAL VISITATION PROGRAM "AND YE VISITED ME"

In Christ's prophetic description of the future judgment many kinds of service are enumerated. One is "Ye Visited me." Those on the right hand wondered when they visited the Christ. The answer was: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Surely, when we consider the more than five-hundred General Conference young men in the C.P.S. Camps and Hospital Units, who serve for "Conscience Sake" in the fields of "National Importance," and when we consider that most of these are far from home, it is most essential that we consider and plan for a systematic way of visiting these young men.

The plan is to select about fifteen or eighteen men who will be assigned to visit all of the camps and units. Sufficient time is allowed so that each man can get in personal conference with a pastor that has a sympathetic understanding of the problems that confront these young men. In addition these pastors will offer systematic Bible Studies for those who are interested, whether they belong to the General Conference or not. In this way the parents may feel assured that someone who is deeply concerned in the spiritual welfare of their son has visited him as a representative of all the General Conference boards.

After the camps and units have been visited the workers are to visit the home churches. The spirit and experiences that were found are to be shared with the home folks.

A new group of workers is being selected to do their work for which they will be carefully trained. Sponsored by—All the General Conference boards.

PRAYER—THE NEED OF THE DAY

By Alfred Regier, Pastor

Calvary Mennonite Church, Quarryville, Pa.

Prayer as has well been said, "releases the energies of God." "And this is the confidence that we have in Him, that, if we ask anything according to His will, He heareth us: And if we know that he hears us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of Him."

The church of Jesus Christ is built upon prayer. In Luke 24:69 Christ says, "Behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you: But tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high." And in Acts we read, "These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication . . . and when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all in one accord in one place." The descent of the Holy Spirit upon the believers at Pentecost and the power with which they were endued after the Holy Spirit had come upon them was all conditioned by prayer.

The power, influence, and spirituality of the church is likewise conditioned by prayer. It has always been custom with most churches to have a mid-week prayer service; however, in the present day when we are governed by wartime restrictions on tires and gasoline many churches have dispensed with the prayer service.

Are we justified in dispensing with the prayer meeting in order to conserve these war materials? To many the cause would seem justifiable. None of us want to be wasteful in using these materials, but I say we cannot afford to dispense with the prayer meeting because we can only do it at the expense of not only wasting but losing our spiritual power which is far more precious to the church than gasoline and tires to our government. It is indeed sad that our government officials do not realize that the most powerful weapon America has, yea more powerful than armies or navies or all machines of war, is the weapon of prayer. But it is sadder still when Christians and Christian Churches fail to realize this fact and are willing to lay down this weapon at the expense of spiritual power. My heart was warmed and encouraged by the hour of prayer each morning before the opening session of the General Conference.

The mid-week prayer service at the Calvary Mennonite Church was dispensed at the time gas rationing began. Our people are scattered out very much, and at the present time some members do not have enough gasoline to attend the worship service regularly. It has become impossible to have the prayer meeting in the church, but other channels must then be sought.

We started Cottage Prayer Meetings this spring, and it works very successfully. We have eighteen homes represented in our congregation, and these we have divided into three districts with six homes assigned to each district. Each district meets once a week, and would meet. Two districts meet on Wednesday and and it was left for each district to decide which day of the week they would meet. Two districts meet on Wednesday and one meets on Friday. Since it is impossible for the pastor to attend three meetings a week it becomes the responsibility of the members of the home where the meeting is held to lead the prayer service which goes in routine from one home to another each week.

The primary purpose for our meeting is prayer. Besides that it serves two secondary purposes: first, it stimulates interest in the work of the church in that each home is called upon to lead in the prayer service every sixth week, and second, it cultivates Christian fellowship which is essential to unity in the church.

"Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need." Heb. 4:16.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

"THE BABY SHOW"

It was in the middle of April when the Infant Welfare Committee of Champa (a municipal organization) sponsored the first Baby Show held in Champa for many years. Two hundred twenty-seven babies ranging in age from fifteen days up to two years were examined during the three days preceding the Baby Show proper. There are at least one hundred more babies below two years of age in Champa, but Hindu parents refused to bring their babies. They were afraid the gods might see that they were proud of their babies and might cast an "evil eye" upon the child, and who knows, what kind of bad luck would befall them then.

As we examined babies during those days, one of the questions we asked the parents was, "Is your child vaccinated?" It was sad to see how many children were not vaccinated. Often it is a caste regulation which prevents them from taking their child to the vaccinator. Others answered this question with pride saying, "Yes, the child is vaccinated." Then the answer to the next question, "Do you feed your baby opium?" Often came with equal enthusiasm, "Yes." However, when this latter question was asked of the Christian women, they laughed as if to say, "What a question," for the majority of them had learned that a child grows better physically and mentally if it is not given opium.

In America one of the first questions asked of the parents of a new-born babe is, "What is the baby's name?" In India the baby often is not named for weeks, and even after that, seldom is called by its name. It is given some title such as "little girl," "little boy," "sister," or "brother." Not only mothers brought their babies to be registered for the Baby Show, but sometimes a small brother or sister brought the child, and other times the father appeared with the child in his arms. One father of a nine-month-old when asked his child's name, look helplessly around, and then without shame admitted he had forgotten the child's name. Fortunately a small sister remembered what the baby's name was. Another problem arose when we asked for the name of the father of the child. Wives refuse to speak their husband's name. That is Indian etiquette and out of respect for one's husband, one never mentions his name. Unless there was a friend along or an older child, it was difficult to find out what the father was called.

The day of the show brought a large crowd to the open courtyard. A Hindu crowd knows nothing of sitting quietly, of listening attentively, and of doing things in an orderly fashion. As a result no one heard the program which was given because it was impossible to get the crowd quiet. In order to foster interest in this new enterprise we had promised every child who entered a prize. This was a grave mistake as we found out when we began distributing the gifts. The crowd began pushing and squirming and squeezing until it resembled a mob and I trembled for fear someone would fall down and be trampled under foot. No one could get order out of that crowd for they all acted like they were sure there wouldn't be enough prizes for all. We were proud of our Christian women at this time. They waited until the rush was over, and then quietly and orderly they came up to get the little shirt or dress we had to give them. Truly they have learned something about discipline through the years.

Nine main prizes were given—1st, 2nd, and 3rd in each of the three age groups. Of the nine prize winners, six were Christians. On the whole the Christian children ranked much higher than non-Christians. Out of the 227 children examined, twenty-seven were Christians. Of these twenty-seven, twenty-one had a score of eighty per cent or above. Out of the two hundred non-Christians examined, there were only thirty-one who had a score of eighty per cent or above. So we feel that our Christians have advanced considerably in their knowledge of how to keep their children healthy.—Mrs. Harold Ratzlaff

The Museum As a Place of Recreation

By Charles J. Kauffman

(Mennonite young people are now taking the necessity for recreation quite for granted. They are exploring various possibilities for recreation. Therefore, we have asked Mr. Charles J. Kauffman, who has devoted a life-time to building up a remarkable museum, to tell us what he feels the museum has to offer as a place of recreation. Not all Mennonite young people have access to museums, but we know of at least three areas that have, namely, the area around Freeman, South Dakota, with the museum at the College; the Pennsylvania area with Dr. Elmer E. S. Johnson's museum at Pennsburg; and the Kansas area with the Kauffman Museum at North Newton. The following article suggests what one of these institutions can mean to young people in the way of recreation.—Editor)

"What has the Museum to offer, as a place of recreation, to our Mennonite youth?" A timely and proper question to be asked and I shall be glad to answer, as I see it from my point of view.

Should we investigate the different places of recreation that are open and within reach of our young people at this time, we would be surprised how limited and one-sided they are in themselves and that even the best would not solve the whole problem of Christian community recreation. All they can do is to make a contribution in their own special way towards this end. Such is also the case with the museum. It is with this understanding that I venture to point out what a wonderful contribution the museum can make in its own peculiar way for that purpose.

First of all, let's ask ourselves: what are the requirements that we would want a proper place of recreation to possess? I'm sure we can all agree on the following, at least, although many others could be added. (1) It should be a place of good reputation, (2) A place that is quiet and peaceful, (3) A place that is interesting, (4) A place that is educational, (5) A place that is inspiring.

Many places we know of would decidedly not come up to these requirements, and some would to a few, but isn't it amazing how the museum, as only one place, meets all of them to a remarkable degree? Let us examine each one separately and see.

First: As a place of good reputation. The museum is a clean place with a wholesome atmosphere, not polluted by the smell of liquor or darkened by tobacco smoke. A place free from all demoralizing influences. Surely no one should feel ashamed to be found here.

Second: A place that is quiet and peaceful. Never before has a place like this been more needful than now in this confused and dizzy age. If we would ask ourselves the question, "Where do we go from here?" the answer given "to pieces" would express the truth quite well. We need a refuge where we can escape the disturbing influences, at least for a while, but whereto shall we flee? The museum is one place that is quiet and restful. It is not a commercialized place where you are hounded by high-pressure sales talk and propoganda. Here you can browse around leisurely and look and meditate on the things of the past and thus you will come to view life with a better perspective. You may learn to embrace the past with remembrance and the future with longing and though you came tired and bewildered you may leave refreshed and composed.

Third: A place that is interesting. For a place that is interesting where would you look for one that can offer more? We have two big floors filled up with just such treasures. Things that are unique, old and rare, many so rare that they could hardly be replaced any more, and all are fascinating. They can attract your interest by the story they can tell, by their brilliant colors and markings, or by their sheer oddity of shape and construction. Altogether it makes a most varied collection of things.

Fourth: A place that is educational. Perhaps it is on this point, where the museum can do most. Everything on display is correctly identified and labeled, and records are kept of important facts. If for example, you have a group of children that want to study birds. You may say the best place to study them is to go out into the woods and fields. That is true if you want to study their habits, actions and different songs, but in other respects the museum has many advantages.

To learn to know and to identify a certain bird your group might have to walk very far to find it, and if found it may disappear before they could hardly get a glimpse at it. In the museum we could show them over three-hundred species of native birds and about one-hundred species of foreign birds, all in one building, and what's more, these birds will let you look at them and compare and admire them as long as you want to. They won't fly away. For nature study groups we also have some fine specimens of large animals and many smaller ones, besides several cases of sea life and mineral specimens. For those that are interested in things of transportation, we have a large assortment of old vehicles; some that could hardly be replaced any more. For those that wish to study different races of people and cultures, we have many articles collected by missionaries from China, India, and Africa. Several cases are devoted also to our North American Indians. For those that are artistically inclined, we have pictures, statues and a great variety of samples of different arts and hand crafts. All this awaits those that are looking for the educational requirement, but right here we must also recognize the need of educating our young people more in Mennonite history. For this purpose many good books have been written, courses with teachers and speakers have been provided, and the results have been very gratifying as far as they go, but you may ask what contribution can the museum make towards this need? This is my answer. I can just open a door and say, "Boys and girls, walk right in," and behold, they will find themselves in a real Mennonite home of seventy years ago. Here they are brought face to face with real life and real things. The home is furnished with handmade furniture. Quaint old kitchen utensils can be seen in their proper places, an old clock and only a few decorations. The whole exhibit is worked out in every detail even to the extent of clothing styles. This part was achieved by carving out of wood a family, life-size and dressed in real costumes of that time. Would this not speak louder than words? In addition to this house, we also have a big display of handmade tools and implements and many other items of Mennonite historical value.

Lastly, let us look at the museum as a place of inspiration. Many museums are merely collections of dead material and scientific facts. They are dry and uninspiring. I have always felt that a museum should express more: it should have life, sentiment, or better said, a soul. I have, therefore, during all my years tried to emphasize this, and I hope my efforts were not in vain. All our birds and animals are mounted in characteristic, lifelike attitudes and placed against colorful painted backgrounds, exhibiting them in their natural surroundings. Thus our wild creatures simulate life conditions.

The antiques and historical treasures will speak to you of by-gone days. As you look at them many may seem to you unimportant, but much beloved, for they served their purpose well during hard and trying times, but they were too simple to survive in this complex world and you will loiter with them with a tender feeling of farewell.

Many museums with much money may have many more valuable things than we have here, but they may lack that local touch that makes everything so dear to us.

It is said that human personality is made for creation. To inspire this desire to do and to create, our art department can suggest many new ideas for handcrafts, arts and hobbies.

Now all this the museum has to offer you as a place of recreation, and I can hardly conceive that anyone could go forth without a greater appreciation of the beautiful, a greater reverence of our fathers, and most important of all, a greater vision of God and his wonderful creation.

Eastern District Representative to Y.P.U.

Stanley was born in Spinnerstown on December 8, 1924. He attended public school there and graduated from Quakertown High School in Quakertown in 1942.

He holds a keen interest in church and Sunday School work. On April 22, he became a member of the West Swamp church. From February, 1943, until the time of his induction he worked as a dairy tester in Bucks County. In 1944, he was the C.E. President of West Swamp.

On December 5, 1944, he entered C.P.S. and was stationed at Powellsville, Maryland.

Due to a siege of sickness he has been at home most of the time since February 4.

He is interested in full time Christian service and expects to continue his education at Bluffton College. He has been and is active in District C.E. work for several years. At the last C.E. Convention he was elected as Eastern District Representative to the Young People's Union of the General Conference. —Write-up and cut, courtesy A. J. Neuenschwander

By Paul Albrecht, Three Rivers, California

AUGUST 21—"And he said, A certain man had two sons, and the younger . . ."

"Read Luke 15:11-24. In this story, one of Christ's parables of the kingdom, we have portrayed the prodigal sons. Both sons walled themselves off from the right relationship with their father, this relationship being the essence of the kingdom. We see the younger son—full of life, impatient of restraint, tired of the restrictions of his father's house—wandering off into a "far country." And who of us has not felt the same tug? The "far country" took gladly of his resources but could give the younger son nothing in return when they were exhausted. Despite the fact that he came back only because he ran out of money, because his friends had deserted him, and because his employer didn't give him enough to eat—still, his father restored him to the relationship. What a gracious father!

AUGUST 22—"Now his elder son was in the field: . . . and he was angry . . ." vs. 25-28

Most of us have not tasted to a great degree of the "flesh-pots of Vienna." Rather we are like the elder son who has never been three fields away from home. Yet we find to our horror that he too had walled himself off from his father. Suppose in his anger he had met the younger son first and had said, "Why are you coming back? You took your father's goods, squandered them in foolishness, and left all the work to your father and me. Now that you are broke, you're whining to be home!" Would not the son have supposed his father felt the same, and have returned to his swine trough? Have we ever represented our merciful and loving God like that?

AUGUST 23—" . . . therefore came his father out, and intreated him." vs. 28

We see the loving father, not only receiving a repentant son, but going out to seek another prodigal. We find no trace of impatience or wonderment that his son should be so blind. In Francis Thompson's

"I fled Him, down the nights and down the days;

I fled Him, down the arches of the years;

I fled Him, down the labyrinthine ways

Of my own mind; and in the mist of tears

I hid from Him, and under laughter."

And in the last stanza:

"Ah, fondest, blindest, weakest,

I am he whom Thou seekest!"

Perhaps when we say we seek after God, we only stop our running away from Him!

AUGUST 24—"Lo, these many years do I serve thee . . ." vs. 19

And one can feel from this what years of drudgery they must have been. The elder brother mistakenly thought he could buy his way into the right relationship with his father. The kingdom is like a family. There are only two ways to enter a family—by birth and by adoption. We all agree that we enter the kingdom by "grace" and not by "works" and then oft times we set up myriads of rules of conduct and behavior. When the "younger son" stubs his toe, we say that he forfeits his right to the kingdom, as much as to say that the membership must be earned. If this be true, how then can we ourselves enter? Have we no sin?

AUGUST 25—"But as soon as this "thy" son was come . . ." vs. 30

We see one reason here why the elder brother was also in the "far country." He repudiated the family relationship. He didn't say "my brother" but "thy son." Upon closer reading we find that he used "my" only when speaking of his friends—persons outside of the family. How easy it is when one of our brothers has done wrong (particularly when the wrong has been done to us) to turn and display our "righteous indignation" and say, "this, thy son."

It seems we are prone to think that in order to show our disapproval of evil we must repudiate the evil-doer. Or perhaps by pointing to evil in another we feel by that a little less guilty ourselves.

AUGUST 26—" . . . thou hast killed for him the fatted calf." vs. 30

Don't we feel here a tinge of pity for the elder brother? Yet, upon closer observation we see something that the Teller may have been trying to point out. The "home prodigal" thought his brother had got the best of the two worlds. He had enjoyed the "riotous living" and now he had a joyous reception home. Secretly the elder brother longed for the "far country." "If I had known," one can almost hear him say, "that it could be done like this!" Ah, so he was serving his father for reward, not out of a loving relationship. He might as well have followed his secret desires; perhaps, then he too might have realized his need. It would seem that in the kingdom we don't serve in a strained, punctilious way—as a slave fearful of his master.

AUGUST 27—"And he said unto him, Son, thou art ever with me . . ." vs. 31

The joy which the younger son was now experiencing (which was intensified because he knew what it was to be away) had been in the elder brother's reach all the time. Haven't you noticed a certain freshness and vigor to the kingdom life of those who have run sin to its inevitable dead-end and then come home? That is not to say that the "far country" experience is the only way to the Father. Still we must realize that the "back-yard" experience may make us complacent and may not drive us to a sense of need. We may have dim eyes and jaded ears for the joyful relationship which we have always known but never really experienced.

Everyone wants to read them and when they bring them back others get them. They are fine Bible stories and other wonderful stories." Are we looking for mission fields far away? MEDITATIONS ON THE MENNONITES

A MENNONITE TEACHER'S DISAPPOINTMENT

One of our Mennonite young women recently related the following account of her experience as a school teacher. She had been teaching school until recently in one of the mid-western states in a non-Mennonite community. In this community she was urged to join the various scrap drives and she was expected to urge her students to do so. All of the teachers were expected to buy war bonds, and all of them did, but this one Mennonite teacher who because of her refusal to buy prevented the school from being awarded the pennant for being 100 per cent behind the war effort. Her superintendent while not agreeing with her views on war, nevertheless, very much admired her courage in being loyal to her convictions.

To a Mennonite Community

The young teacher who told her story to me said she decided to seek a position in a Mennonite community where she could be among her own people; where she thought she would have students, colleagues as teachers and friends in the community who would share her religious ideals and her belief in the doctrine of Biblical non-resistance. She found a Mennonite community where there was an opening for a teacher in her field. The school superintendent, the principal, all but two of the teachers, and ninety per cent of the students were Mennonites. The majority of the people in the town and the surrounding countryside were likewise members of the same church. All summer long she looked forward to her teaching experience in a strong Mennonite community.

A Surprise

Some time after the opening of school in the fall our teacher friend was unexpectedly called into the office of the superintendent. She wondered what the reason might be. Might her work be unsatisfactory? Had she offended anyone? Was she negligent in her duties? none of these. Cautiously the superintendent came to the point. It was that she had talked to some of her students outside of class room hours about participation in war. She had expressed her feelings and convictions as a Christian against participation in military service. That was why she was being called in. Her Mennonite superintendent told her she might hold those views but that she should not share those convictions with her students. He said he did not want his school or his town known as "yellow" because of any pacifistic teachings or teachers. The young men in school were practically all in the army or the navy. Those who were to C.P.S. camps were looked upon with disdain. The teachers on the staff had no peace convictions or astutely kept them to themselves. Her experience was a keen disappointment. She had been taught in college that a teacher should develop Christian attitudes and influence her students. She was shocked to discover the most distinctive teaching of her people definitely taboo.

JOTTINGS

—"Women have superseded men as the nation's leading civilian cigarette smokers. They bought sixty-nine per cent of the 329,000,000,000 cigarettes a year manufactured in the United States for civilian use, Fleming-Hall, Company, New York cigarette manufacturers report on the basis of a survey among 18,000 cigarette retailers."—Gospel Messenger

—"Senator Hugh Butler (Neb.) has introduced in the Senate a resolution calling for a national referendum before Congress acts upon proposals for peacetime military conscription."—The Protestant Voice

—The American Friends Service Committee has called upon congress, the President and government officials for eight changes in the Selective Service Law, which would provide for "allowance to dependents of men in Civilian Public Service, compensation by the government for men injured or killed in the performances of duties in CPS, and remuneration and maintenance for men serving on government projects in CPS or employed by private agencies." The report also calls for assignment of C.O.'s to foreign relief service and assignment to private as well as government agencies. It proposed that sincerity rather than religious training and belief be the test of conscience. More administration through private agencies and civilian departments of the government was advocated.—The Protestant Voice

—"If CPS men were paid $50.00 per month base pay as the army, value of their work would be $8,033,265.00 as of March 1, 1945. The total cost to the Churches as of the same date, of Civilian Public Service operations, is $5,137,728.27. A rough survey has shown that with 8,000 men in CPS, 2347 men have wives, 833 children, and 524 other dependents. Only 8 per cent of the time since the beginnings of recorded history has the world spent entirely at peace, according to official statistics. In 3,521 years, only 286 have been warless. Eight thousand treaties have been broken in this time."—Mennonite Farm-unity

—Lorraine Avenue Church, Wichita: This church recently received a gift of $1,000 from the Home Mission Board of the General Conference for the new church building that is to be erected. Very happy for this gift, the church arranged for a basket fellowship supper on the evening of July 29, with Rev. C. E. Krehbiel as speaker and representative of the Home Mission Board. Rev. Krehbiel was instrumental in getting this church started and served it as pastor for a number of years.

—The Salem Church, Freeman, South Dakota, has ordered fifty-five "relief packages." It costs about $3.00 to fill one of these.

—The words of "Eternal Father, Ruler of Creation"

(354 in ^{is} ^{sas} ^{le} ^{ary}) were written soon after the last war.

—Bulletin ^{is} ^{as} ^{owa} ^{Ringwood} ^{Church}, Nappanee, Indiana: "I ^{Mrs.} ^{Franz} ^{Albrecht} order to help understand what our Mennonite Church stands for a brief statement based on the Constitution of the General Conference of which our church is a member is found in this bulletin." Then follows a short clear synopsis from the Constitution. Seems like a bit of good education. Boys and girls of this church were invited to a "fellowship day" at the church on July 27. They found out about "Soldiers for Peace," who engage in soil conservation, smoke-jumping, and in mental hospital work. The program included stories, handwork, and lots of fun. Each one brought his own lunch.

—Sixty-seven of the young men who have attended the Oklahoma Bible Academy are in the country's service. Thirty-three of these are in C.P.S. and thirty-four in the armed forces. The school is again offering training in two departments in 1945-1946: "1. The High School, offering four years of state-accredited academic work, with some vocational training, in which successful completion of one hour of Bible study per day is required, leading to a diploma; 2. The School of Bible, offering: a Two-year General Course, designed to give general and effective Bible knowledge, leading to a diploma."

—A recent bulletin of the Fairfield, Pa. Church showed our national expenditures in graph form. Alcoholic beverages took $7,100 million; War $86,000 million; and Churches and Church Charities $910 million.

—Bluffton College is offering a new two-year Bible course "to train young people who do not plan to pursue a four-year course to take their place of leadership in their home churches."

—First Church, Summerfield, Illinois: La Verne Basinger, son of Rev. Elmer Basinger brought a very helpful and inspiring message to the congregation on the subject of "Forgiveness" on July 8 when he and his family visited at the parental home. Mr. Basinger spoke as a layman.

—Herald Church, Bessie, Oklahoma, observed communion and also a feet-washing service on July 22. Dr. P. A. Penner brought the morning message. The bulletin of this church features an appeal for additional contributions for C.P.S.

—The need for additional gifts to C.P.S. during the present three-month period is strongly emphasized in a letter received from L. J. Horch, Treasurer of the General Conference Peace Committee (all such funds should be sent to Mennonite Headquarters, however). Brother Horsch points out that the M.C.C. budget for C.P.S. is $68,458.00 monthly for the period of June to November 30. He states that recent monthly quota payments have not reached the $60,000 a month mark, and that the C.P.S. reserve has declined in the past six months from $150,000 to $70,000. So "in the light of this situation it was moved and passed (by Executive Committee of the MCC) to ask the constituency for one extra monthly fifty cents per member quota payment during the quarter July to October."

Fifteen new members were added to our church roll, on Pentecost Sunday. Twelve by confession of faith and baptism and three by letter.

We surely enjoyed the recent visit from Martha Burkhalter. She showed pictures and spoke on Sunday evening. On Monday afternoon the Women's Missionary Society was blessed by the fine answers to questions asked. In response to the need of a Bible school, offerings amounting to a little over $30 were given.

Nineteen young folks, accompanied by Rev. W. Harley King, attended the retreat at Whitworth College, Spokane.

The Lord has been gracious to us this summer. With the wheat harvest starting this week, we see prospects of a good crop. May we remember that we are "partners" with Him in material, as well as spiritual blessings.—Corr.

As given in the Reports of the 1941 Conference Session

(Since many readers of this paper may be interested in the history of the new Conference-sponsored Mennonite Biblical Seminary and Bible School, we herewith quote a brief, historical statement from the Witmarsum Seminary Report as given in the official reports and minutes of the 1941 Conference session.—Editor)

In 1935 the General Conference in session at Upland, California, by resolution No. 51 asked the Board of Education to study the possibility of again offering seminary training under Mennonite auspices. Thereupon the Board investigated different angles of the problem, contacted our ministers, considered the experience of other denominations, and worked toward the reorganization of the former Witmarsum Theological Seminary on a basis of more direct conference representation.

In 1938 resolution No. 58 was adopted by the Conference in session at Saskatoon, which in part reads: "That the Board of Education together with the Executive Committee of the Conference be authorized to work with the Witmarsum Board toward the organization and the opening of a Bible School and Seminary with such modification of the proposed Witmarsum plan as may seem desirable in the light of continued careful study of Evangelical Bible School and Seminary needs of our people."

The proposed plan for the reorganization of the Witmarsum Seminary as originally presented by that Board provided that smaller branches of the Mennonite church participating be entitled to three representatives each on the Seminary Board and the larger bodies, such as the General Conference to six; that the Witmarsum Alumni Association have two and any Mennonite College have the privilege of one representative. All members were to be chosen by the bodies they represent.

To root the proposed Bible School and Seminary more directly in the church as such, the Executive Committee of the General Conference and the Board of Education recommended that the above plan be modified so as to give the Witmarsum Alumni Association and the Mennonite College representatives on the proposed Board only advisory standing without vote. This recommendation was accepted by the Witmarsum Board on November 2, 1938.

The next step was for the Executive Committee and the Board of Education to choose the six representatives for the General Conference. Since the Seminary is of great importance and in order to secure continuity and make long-range planning possible, this was done with the understanding that any General Conference member be considered eligible irrespective of whether or not he holds any other Conference office; that on the first ballot each member submit six names, from which list twelve should be chosen and from them six should be elected; that in the final election the two receiving the lowest number of votes should serve up to the 1941 Conference session, the two receiving the next highest number of votes serve until the 1944 Conference session, the two with the highest number of votes serve until the 1947 Conference session, and that when these terms expire the Conference will fill said places by electing two members for nine years at its regular triennial sessions.

The first ballot was completed April 26, 1939, which resulted in the listing of 43 names, which list, as above indicated, was reduced by further balloting, and finally on August 1, 1939, six were elected.

The Central Conference, three Mennonite Colleges, and the Witmarsum Alumni Association also having elected their representatives, the reorganization meeting, when the old Witmarsum Board turned over its library of 2,000 volumes, endowment Fund of a little over $11,000, Alumni Association of 45 graduates, charter and records, as well as everything else pertaining to the organization to the newly created Board in the presence of legal counsel, was held at Bluffton, Ohio, February 13, 1940.

August 26th Is Christian Education Sunday

At present (1941) then, the Witmarsum Bible School and Seminary Board (Now in 1945 changed to the Mennonite Seminary and Bible School Board) is composed of fourteen members. Six of these represent the General Conference, who, pursuant to resolution 58 of 1938, were elected jointly by the Executive Committee of the Conference and the Board of Education, with terms of service according to the number of votes received Three members on the Seminary Board represent the Central Conference . . . two represent the Witmarsum Alumni, . . . and three colleges are represented by one member each . . . Alumni and college representatives, however, have only advisory status without vote. There is also provision for other conferences which later might wish to participate.

In order to secure continuity and to make careful, long-range effort possible in this important and far-reaching work for the future of the Mennonite Church, it is recommended that the General Conference elect its members to the Bible School and Seminary Board, irrespective of whether or not they hold any other conference office, for a period of nine years by electing two members at each triennial session beginning with 1941, and that the other members now on said Board continue as above indicated until 1944 and in 1947 respectively. (This was done. Two were elected in 1941 and two in 1945).

If the Conference approves the action thus far taken the Executive Committee of the Conference and the Board of Education would consider the work entrusted to them by the last session of the Conference regarding the reorganization of Witmarsum Seminary as finished and would expect the Bible School and Seminary Board hereafter to carry forward its work and report directly to the Conference.

May the Lord richly bless our Bible School and Seminary, in its work for Christ's Kingdom and the Mennonite Church.

Respectfully submitted,

C. E. Krehbiel, for the Exec. Com. of the Conference
Ed. G. Kaufman, for the Board of Education

(Since 1941 a Special Committee of the Board has made a prolonged study of the matter, and the Board has had repeated meetings. At its last session in Chicago, as reported in the issue of August 7th, the Board came to the following decisions: 1. To affiliate with Bethany Biblical Seminary and Bible Training School in Chicago 2. To change the name from Witmarsum Seminary to The Mennonite Biblical Seminary and the Mennonite Bible School. 3. To call Dr. A. Warkentin to the presidency. 4. To open the school September 4, 1945. For further information and catalogues write to Dr. A. Warkentin, 3435 Van Buren Street, Chicago 24, Illinois.)

Suggestions for Observance of Christian Education Sunday

on August 26, 1945

Worship Service: A special sermon stressing the place and importance of Christian education in the life of the individual, in the program of the church, and in our nation.

Special prayer for our church schools and for those about to enter upon a year of school work. Ask God's guidance for those who have in their charge the destinies of the school.

Request and stress continued prayer throughout the year for education and for those being educated.

The Sunday School: A special program for the opening exercises of the Sunday School might be arranged, stressing the importance of Christian education.

Special decorations for the day can be arranged, including flowers, posters, and pictures. Catalogs and picture bulletins could be on display.

There could be a farewell service for those going away to school. Our young people need the interest and prayers of the church and need to feel the interest which the church has in them.

Special programs could be arranged in the junior, primary, and intermediate departments for those about to begin another year in public schools. Pupils should be led to appreciate the privilege of education and to see its importance. The relation of education to Christian living and to opportunities for service could be stressed.

Young People's Meetings: Evening young people's societies could select a special discussion topic dealing with the need for and difficulties of Christian education in such a day as this. The need for education of Mennonites in the principles of the church could well be stressed. Information could be given regarding the provisions Mennonites have made for the education of their children.

In the Home: Education Sunday is to be essentially a day of prayer for our educational institutions and for guidance for all connected with them, either as students or as staff members. Parents can give due recognition during family worship to the importance of Christian education.

SEMINARY AND BIBLE SCHOOL TRAINING under Conference auspices is now available. The Mennonite Biblical Seminary and Bible School will open in Chicago on September 4, with Dr. A. Warkentin as President. This new conference institution is in affiliation with Bethany Biblical Seminary and Bible Training School. The Seminary Board feels that the most practical way at present is affiliation with an accredited seminary. Under this arrangement students can earn the following degrees: Bachelor of Divinity, Master of Religious Education, and Master of Theology. Furthermore, young people with high school training can deepen their Bible knowledge by attending the three-year Bible School, which issues a Bible School certificate. A scholarship of $150.00 is available to students who are qualified and approved for seminary work. In addition there are work opportunities for earning the rest of the expenses. In arranging for the training of its own leadership, the General Conference, in conjunction with the Central Conference, has taken a very important step. Coming years should show: 1. Leaders with more years of training for their God-given vocation than that generally held in the twenties and thirties. 2. Leaders more free and happy because their education is well-rounded out. 3. Leaders who enjoy working together in Conference activities because they have learned to cooperate in the intimate life of a common schooling.

THE QUESTIONNAIRE which appeared in the issue of July 24 has been partially or entirely filled out by some of the readers and sent in, but the total number received has been comparatively few. We hardly dare believe that the paper is as satisfactory as the small number of returned questionnaires would seem to indicate. Perhaps, we did not make it plain enough that even though readers are comparatively well satisfied with the paper as it is, we would still like to get their best thoughts on what they like in the paper and what they would like to see in future issues. From the questionnaires which have been returned we have already gotten some valuable suggestions, and we thank every reader who has returned his. We still hope to receive some more replies now that the busy harvest season will soon be over.

RECEPTIVITY is the first law of life. Without it there can be no life and no growth. An organism cannot expend more than it takes in. A plant cannot produce flower and fruit before receiving from the soil moisture and nutrition. Take in and give out is the God-ordained way. Blessed are those who feel spiritually poor; blessed are those who mourn; blessed are the meek; blessed are those who hunger and thirst after righteousness. They, and not the proud self-assertive, shall because of their willing receptivity take in the deep, rich truths of life. Self-assertion makes for a spectacular showing, but emptiness is the inevitable result. Receptivity makes for deep roots and luscious ripe fruit.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION SUNDAY has been set aside as a day on which the churches of our conference can give special emphasis to the importance of "Christian education." The necessity of education is becoming increasingly evident—we mean secular education. Life is becoming more and more complex. Once the man with brawn could turn as many acres of sod with a walking plow as the man with brain. Today mere muscular exertion no longer enables a man to compete. This is a day of "knowing how with the mind." This is acknowledged by the great mass of people in our land and by increasing numbers in such lands as China and India. Education is the magic key for "making a living," which is a fundamental problem that human beings born on this globe must face. Modern education is facing that problem in a wonderful way by providing us with refrigerators, cars, airplanes, radio, television, etc. But there is a second problem that all human beings must face, and that is the matter of living together in a cooperative way. Here modern education is so faulty that we have one world war after another, race riots, strife between capital and labor, and a general protest against being our brother's keeper. Without Him, who is Love, this second problem cannot and will not be solved. We need Christian education to solve it. We need God. Pious platitudes of loving God while kicking one's brother will not do. "And this commandment have we from him That he who loveth God love his brother also." We need Christian education that emphasizes love of God and love of neighbor. Christian Education Sunday, which falls on August 26 this year, should be a day of deep thought and prayer.

WHY STUDENTS LIKE BETHEL COLLEGE:

"Bethel is large enough to supply fine friends from many communities near and far; it is small enough that we can learn to know them all."

"Bethel is like a big family; the parents sometimes scold, but we know they love us; the children sometimes quarrel, but we enjoy studying, worshipping, working, and playing together."

"The faculty guides, but they make us do some of our own thinking."

"There is intellectual honesty at Bethel. We are not forced to believe certain things. God's spirit is given opportunities to influence us."

"The daily chapel services give us time to meditate."

"I like the sacred music from the Vibra-harp and chimes."

"I miss the Singing Tower when it doesn't play."

"There are a lot of fine recreational opportunities at Bethel."

"Most of the students at Bethel are swell kids. They are Christians, but not 'goody-goodies.'"

"The Bethel spirit of helping others is contagious. Some of the students come with lots of ego, but they usually leave more humble."

"Bethel is fully accredited."

"I like Christian Life Week, Bible Week, deputation work, evening devotions and the numerous other opportunities for spiritual awakening and growth."

WHY PARENTS LIKE BETHEL COLLEGE:

"The moral standards at Bethel are much higher than in our own Mennonite community."

"My children get to associate with choice young people from many communities."

"I'm happy that we have so many well-trained consecrated faculty members at our own college."

"Bethel helps to keep young people from getting one-sided. A wholesome mixture of study, work, and recreation is good. Studying Bible with other subjects keeps the students well balanced."

WHY SOME STUDENTS, PARENTS, MENNONITES AND OTHERS DON'T LIKE BETHEL COLLEGE:

"Bethel students play folk games."

"I didn't get the recognition which I deserved."

"Bethel faculty members are not all premillennialists."

"Students shouldn't hear speakers nor read books which are not 'fundamentalistic.'"

"Bethel is too conservative."

"Bethel is too liberal."

"My boy learned some bad habits when he was in college."

"The professors are not strict enough."

"The deans are too strict."

"My husband said that he saw 'Revolution' in one of the books at Bethel."

"They have shown moving pictures in Memorial Hall. No Christian can go to see a movie."

"I am praying for Bethel...praying every day that Bethel will go bankrupt."

"E. Stanley Jones spoke at Bethel. He is not a man of the Faith."

"I have a letter from a graduate of one of our own colleges which contains heretical ideas."

"Bethel doesn't help the war effort."

WHY MENNONITES LIKE BETHEL COLLEGE:

"Bethel isn't ashamed of her heritage."

"I'm glad that Bethel doesn't train her students to carry the Bible in one hand and a gas bomb in the other. I know one prominent college to which some Mennonites have been very loyal, which advertises its fundamentalistic teachings in the catalogue in which it also announces a course in 'Chemical Warfare.'"

"Our church teaches that faith without works is dead and works without faith are futile. It's good to know that Bethel helps us to keep this light shining."

"I know of no school on earth where I could send my children and feel they were in a more wholesome Christian environment than at Bethel."

"I like Bethel because she welcomes criticisms and is willing to acknowledge her faults."

WHY OTHER FRIENDS LIKE BETHEL COLLEGE

"More conservative in its social life, but not prudish."

"Bethel teaches a meaningful, practical Christianity—not just a lot of pious looks and man-made doctrines."

"You don't see students lighting up cigarettes when they leave their classrooms."

"Teachers who have graduated at Bethel are usually cooperative and dependable."

"Her total influence is positive and Christian."

"Bethel is basically sound. She keeps on the straight and narrow way with God as revealed in Jesus Christ as her foundation. This may make her frequently unpopular, but always a stabilizing influence upon society."

"When the whole world has gone mad with bitterness and strife, I'm glad that I know of a little Mennonite school in Kansas called Bethel College, which has kept the torch of Christian love for friend and foe lighted—even in the darkest hours. Christian idealism is the only realism."

BETHEL FACES THE OPENING OF ANOTHER SCHOOL YEAR WITH THESE THOUGHTS IN MIND:

1. We must work more energetically to preserve, purify, and strengthen our Christian heritage lest God should take the torch from the Mennonite Church—lest we become salt which has lost its savor. To do this we must put on the whole armour of God (Ephesians 6:10-17) and preach the full Gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

2. We shall try to maintain a well-balanced, Christian college with high academic standards.

3. We humbly recognize our many human frailties and must not only repent for sins of thought and action, but also for having been too indifferent to the needs of our fellowmen. We pray that we shall become more effective instruments in God's hands to train youth for the tasks of feeding hungry bodies, minds, and souls.

If I Were a Student Again!

By J. D. Unruh

If I were a student of high school or college age and belonged to a Mennonite Church in the Northern District Conference area I would certainly explore all the possibilities offered at Freeman Junior College and Academy. I would, of course, in spite of all the enticing job prospects, lay the foundation for a thorough preparation. I would be somewhat skeptical about "short-cuts." I would rather feel that when the "splurge" is over and people begin to think more sanely that there might be an advantage in being well prepared. By this I would mean all of high school and as much of college as possible—preferably all.

I

I would firstly look to Freeman because it is one of our own schools. I know that many people have sacrificed much to make it what it is. Here I would expect an atmosphere that would make me feel most at home.

II

I would look to Freeman because of its spiritual foundation. All faculty members subscribe to the doctrinal statement given in the catalog. All are convinced that without a new life in Christ the best education is incomplete. To this end the College promotes Bible study, prayer groups and meetings (faculty has a weekly prayer meeting), daily devotional chapel exercises, personal counseling, an intimate fellowship with surrounding churches (there are a dozen Mennonite Churches near Freeman), and above all a deep concern for the personal spiritual welfare of each student.

III

I would choose Freeman for its continued emphasis on the historical and spiritual significance of the Mennonite Church. In these days of compromising morality I would receive much comfort in getting a Biblical interpretation which would point not only to the saving power of the Christ but also to His way of life as revealed especially in the New Testament and exemplified by many thousands since the days of the Anabaptists. I would certainly gain strength through the continued emphasis on love as the ruling force in all situations of life—among others, certainly my peace testimony would be strengthened.

IV

At Freeman I would find an adequately prepared, congenial, and spiritually sound faculty—now consisting of twelve full-time members. Four of the group are now in summer school continuing their graduate work. Seven have advanced degrees. All firmly believe in the necessity of Christ-centered education. Half of them have been at Freeman at least eight years or more.

V

Both in the Academy and College there is an increased emphasis on preparing young people to fit themselves more adequately into their own communities. Without losing the value and the balance of the academic courses, I appreciate the larger attention to the practical courses in Shop, Home Economics, Mechanics, and Agriculture.

VI

Lastly, I would look to Freeman because of its physical facilities. Since the College is debt free, constant improvements are being made. New shop machinery is being installed. The number of useful volumes in the library is constantly increasing—two new encyclopedias were added this summer. A new sixteen mm sound film projector is on the way. New typewriters have been ordered. A reserve has been set aside to purchase additional needed equipment as supplies will be made available.

Bluffton College and the Fine Arts

By L. L. Ramseyer

Mennonites have long been interested in good music. The congregational singing in our church has been one of the strong points of our services. While our people at one time frowned upon the use of instruments, in recent years large numbers of Mennonite young people have become proficient in their use.

Very early in the history of Bluffton College there was a tendency to reflect this interest of the parent church in music. Almost from the beginning of the college, the music department has been a strong part of the school. The college has long been known for the excellence of the musical organizations which it sent out into the churches. At the time when men's glee clubs were common, Bluffton for a number of years placed high in the Glee Club contest among the colleges of Ohio, even though it was among the smaller schools. Numbered among its alumni are a large number of public school music teachers who have given the college an excellent reputation in that field. Many of these also direct church choirs. Other alumni are ministers of music in the churches, church soloists, and college music teachers.

In normal times Bluffton is represented by a Vesper Choir which makes annual tours through the constituency and sings for the regular vesper services on the campus. Since the war this chorus has given way to a Girls' Choir. Traveling has become difficult and concerts have been limited to those given near home. As soon as travel conditions permit, extended trips will again be resumed.

The annual Messiah concert has become a tradition in Bluffton. While this is sponsored by the college and directed by the head of the music department, Prof. Russel Lantz, it is in reality a community product. The common comment of alumni after leaving Bluffton is "I heard the Messiah this year at _____ but it didn't compare with the concerts at Bluffton." Outstanding soloists are secured for this event, either from the alumni group or from other sources. The chorus is accompanied by the College Orchestra, which for many years has been under the capable leadership of Prof. Sidney Hauenstein.

Another of the faithful members of the staff of the music department is Mrs. Pearl Bogart Mann, teacher of piano. She has been the friend of many generations of music students and in addition to her work with college students has many pupils of grade and high school age. Prof. Otto Holtkamp has capably served for more than twenty years as Professor of Organ and Theory.

Another area in the fine arts is emphasized at Bluffton which has not been so generally recognized by American Mennonites. That is the area represented by the work of Prof. John P. Klassen. He is really a great artist, and in the more than twenty years that he has been associated with the college he has been able to impart his fine feeling for art to many of his students. Art works by him or by his students adorn many parts of the campus. Among these are busts of Menno Simons and Dr. Hershey, in stone, carved by Prof. Klassen; the Horse and Fallen Rider, in bronze, by Dietrich Remple; the Beavers, in stone, by Rev. Forrest Musser; campus scenes, photo-enlargements, by Paul Soldner; and a number of plaques by Mr. Klassen, such as Swords into Plowshares, Love Your Enemies, and Jesus with the Children, not to mention many others. In recent years much work in ceramics has been done in the art department. Some excellent wood carving has also been made recently.

The Christian theme and the philosophy of the Mennonite church runs through much of this art work. Part of it is drawn from the experiences of the Russian Mennonites in their native land. Last summer Mr. Klassen made a tour of C.P.S. camps, where his work was much appreciated.

Christian emphasis is also strong in the music department. Practically all of the choral work is with religious music. Improved church music is one of the important objectives of this department. Gospel team quartets are coached by the music faculty. Mr. Lantz is assisting in the C.P.S. camp at Tiffin, Ohio.

The art in the college has a lasting effect on the student who spends four years on the campus. It helps greatly in reaching the objective which has been set as one of those toward which the college should strive, to develop in its students "an appreciation of and a desire for the good and beautiful." It has been reflected in the general campus atmosphere and spirit. It has found outlet in the planning of the campus, the beauty of which is the result of years of careful study. The fine arts at Bluffton make unique contributions not only to the campus, but to the community and the church.

The Place of the Liberal Arts College

By P. S. Goertz

Liberal Arts is a concept of long and dignified standing. The liberal arts curriculum served as the basis for the schools as early as the Middle Ages and was the foundation of all our schools and colleges established and organized by the Pilgrim Fathers in our own American Commonwealth. The words are somewhat new in our own fellowship because until rather recently the medium of our expression was almost wholly the German language. Again we have not so long ago emerged from pioneer days when there was little room for the broader aspects of education. Also in one way or another we are sometimes led to associate the term and content of the liberal arts with "liberalism," a concept that carries with it many distasteful and forboding associations. Consequently, there are those among us who look with unfriendly eyes upon the liberal arts ideal, unless the distinctions are made clear so that the truth may prevail. By others the matter is completely ignored as none of their concern not realizing that this kind of education has a vital bearing upon the very existence of the most priceless possessions we cherish.

It is my purpose very briefly to set forth the purpose, meaning, and significance of the liberal arts education as an ideal for young men and women of today in order that it be seen as a means for preserving the best in our heritage and insuring for the future a sane and vital Christian life in our society.

First, the term "liberal," in this connection is not organically related to "liberalism," for it simply means education for freedom. And that in turn means education for understanding. How important it is to understand! Without understanding, people are bound by ignorance, often they are superstitious, and usually we find them beset with fears. Freedom comes only when we understand the function, meaning, and significance of the forces of nature, historical events and social and religious movements with which we come in contact. Thus the purpose of a liberal education is to set a youth free from everything that is frustrating to a joyful and victorious inner life and free him unto that which leads to the full realization of the potentialities that God has laid within him.

Second, a liberal arts education is designed to, and where successful, actually does, train the student to think for himself as well as to know the grounds upon which he bases his conclusions. He comes to see things in wholes rather than in parts, in universals rather than only in particulars. Thus he comes to synthesize as well as to analyze. This kind of an education is distinct from specialized knowledge and the "cash value" skills however important the skills may be in getting certain things done. Liberal arts training makes for a general and broad education. How impoverished a one-sided, purely specialized training leaves a man over against an education that includes all areas of life. A real education helps a man to see "why" things are and not only "how" things are done. He comes to see all things in their proper relationship.

Men and women with the benefits of a liberal arts education seldom are victims of propaganda, they are not likely to fall for cults that parade up and down the high ways of our land seeking for adherents, and all high powered advertizing is usually critically examined by them. If students have this profounder training we can look forward to a generation which has found its bearing in the bewildering complexity of the problems of our times. And this is necessary in order to give firmness and calmness in a crisis which permeates and threatens to shake the very foundations of all our traditions. They will then better understand that tolerance will not lead to abuses, that tolerance does not mean libertine thinking, and that liberty and rights are not given to be abused.

Special and cash value skills do not supply such understanding and wisdom. Nor does science, as only a science, supply these needs. These do furnish us with means and methods but not with ends.

In the third place, a liberal arts education constitutes the best soil for high type, sane, stable, and profound Christian living. Here we find a place for religion. In fact without religion a true liberal education would be a misnomer. It is not in the liberal arts that the religious and spiritual values are being disregarded. The disregard for religion is nowhere more felt than in the specialized fields because there religion has no "cash" value. Witness our technical schools. What place does the consideration of religion in any form have in their curricula? How keenly do we feel the difficulty of persuading students to make room in their program for Bible courses if they plan to transfer to some technical school at the end of the sophomore year, simply because Bible does not get any consideration at such institutions. No liberal education, on the other hand, can be regarded as complete without a cultivation of this all important area of man's experience, the spiritual, the relation of the human and the divine, man and God. One senses that every liberal arts college faculty even in a secular state institution is much more sympathetic to the field of religion than are faculties of specialized and technical curricula.

More than giving a definite place to religion in a liberal arts education such training can be and often is permeated through and through with spiritual consideration. Here facts and figures are important but meanings are more important. Means are valuable but final ends are still more valuable. Immediate causes and effects come in for thorough consideration, but final causes are never lost sight of. Students are taught to face what actually now is but also to look at it in the light of what ought to be. Not only do they consider how things are done but why they are done.

And so it is not surprising that the liberal arts college is a child of the church. It is well known that our early colleges were organized principally for the training of an educated ministry. Records indicate that of the 40,000 men who graduated from American colleges prior to 1855 at least 10,000 were ministers of the churches. These men were on the whole safe and sane leaders in the religious, political, and cultural life of their times. That may well be the reason for the spiritual greatness of our American past. Would it not be well to encourage that kind of an education also for our lay women and lay men of the future?

The Challenge of Christian Education Today

By Paul R. Shelly

The scriptural background for this meditation is found in Deuteronomy 6: 6-7: "These words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart: And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children . . ." As we think of this scriptural background in relationship with the subject under discussion there are three facts that should be pointed out.

I. The Mennonites possess a heritage in the field of Christian education. This heritage, first of all, is one which we possess in common with the whole Jewish-Christian tradition. The Jewish people have always felt that they had to train their children in their way of life. Thus, the synagogue was not only a place where worship was held on the Sabbath but also a place where children were taught during the week. Religious education is still a vital part of the whole program of the Jewish people today.

Our Christian tradition, too, has a similar heritage. The Catholic Church has always been concerned with the education of children, taking the words of Prov. 22:6 seriously: "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old, he will not depart from it." Other groups too, as the Lutherans and Friends, had as one of their special concerns the training of their children. We are also reminded that practically all of the first schools of higher education in this country were founded primarily to train Christian leaders.

The Mennonites too have a rich heritage in the field of Christian education. Soon after the Mennonites arrived in Germantown, in 1683, provision was made for the training of the children. The Mennonites participated in establishing a school in Germantown in 1702 with Francis Daniel Pastorius as the teacher. The work of Christopher Dock, the "Pious Schoolmaster of the Skippack" is also well known. He taught both at Skippack and at Salford, beginning his work around 1718 and continuing every year, with the exception of one period, until his death in 1771.

Paul R. Shelly is Professor of Bible at Bluffton College. He wrote his doctor's thesis on a theme dealing with religious education.

The pioneer work in the field of higher education in 1868 at Wadsworth, Ohio, is also a part of our heritage. The permanent institutions of higher education were also established because the Mennonites felt that they had to train their young people in the Christian Faith.

II. This heritage has been seriously threatened in this generation. There is a sense in which the Christian Faith has always been threatened. I am thinking now particularly, however, of the situation in America in recent years. It was when education was taken out of the hands of the church and placed into the hands of the state that this threatening influence began to take form. The whole process has been a gradual one until now much of our education in our public high schools and in many of the colleges and state universities has become identified with our secular way of life.

The problem has been accentuated in the present world crisis. The program of our public schools and colleges is geared to the present. This is evidenced by both curriculum trends and the present extracurricular activities. One writer, in speaking of Christian colleges that have turned over their facilities to the war effort, says: "This means that Christian higher education in cases where such men guide the church-related colleges has been saving its body while losing its soul."

III. The challenge comes to us to meet this need for Christian education. A number of encouraging events are taking place in the Mennonite church in this area. Those of us who attended the recent sessions of the General Conference felt that there was an earnest search on the part of most of the delegates to find ways of transmitting our heritage in the present world crisis. Our colleges too are deeply concerned with this whole problem and are emphasizing our distinctive Christian principles more and more in their total program. The renewed interest by the Mennonites in establishing high schools is another expression of our present concern.

Much more needs to be done, if we as Mennonites—as Christians—are to meet this challenge today. I will mention a few of these: 1. We must emphasize anew the fact that the Christian Gospel must be at the center of all of our work. 2. We must become acquainted with the facts as they exist in regard to the world situation, our community, the public school system, the program of the church, and the program of our colleges. 3. We must emphasize again the place of intercessory prayer, for this whole program is not ours, but God's. 4. We must emphasize anew the importance of the home in Christian education. 5. We must strengthen the program of our own local churches. I am convinced that if we have an active, dynamic, and vital program for all age groups in our local churches that our young people will be able to put their Christianity into practice in all of their experiences of life. 6. We must support our educational institutions with our prayers, interest, money, and students. Education by itself may do more harm than good. It is Christian education that our young people need. This is the greatest heritage that we can pass on to future generations.

CHRIST AND CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

By Erna J. Fast

A contemporary church leader has said that Christian education is the hope of our world today. To accept this premise means that we must realize the place and importance of the educational phases of our church work. What a challenge and what a responsibility! Too many people limit their conception of the educational work of the church to the work of our colleges or the teaching within the Sunday School on Sunday morning. All areas of activity within the church—worship, study, fellowship, service, and personal relationship to Christ as Saviour—are a part of the educational responsibilities of the church.

Christ must be at the center of such a program of Christian education; without Him it becomes routine religious education. It is He who has given us the great commission to carry on this all-important work within the Church; we remember His words, "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." (Matt. 28: 19-20) Not only has He given us the commission to carry on this work, but He has provided us with a pattern which we are to follow. He is "The Great Teacher;" He spoke "with authority, and not as the Scribes and Pharisees." His methods were practical, personal, and authoritative. When we desire to learn the best methods for reaching the soul of a child or adult, it is the Bible which provides us with these methods. No educational program is valid unless it is founded upon pertinent and comprehensive aims. When Christian education is aimless it is useless. Our Lord Jesus Christ had His aims as teacher while here on earth; His essential purposes were to reveal God as Father and thus to bring men into perfect fellowship with Him, to develop the Christian personality to its highest degree, and to bring men to a satisfying and worthwhile relationship with their fellowmen and all of society. There are no loftier goals than these; it is well for the leaders in the field of Christian education to appropriate them for their own work.

As members of the Mennonite Church it is our desire to follow the example Christ has set for us and to make the educational work of our church truly Christian. Surely, we want to carry on the work of our church in such a way that we will fulfill the aims which Christ has given us. We desire to emulate His methods and to respond to the ringing challenge which He has left us. The degree to which we will be successful in this endeavor will depend upon our sincerity of purpose, our willingness to cooperate and serve, and the greatness of vision which we will manifest. There are agencies within our Conference delegated to deal with the program of Christian education. Let us support them with our interest, our prayers, and our means.

Twenty Years of Retreats

By J. H. Langenwalter

Twenty years is long enough to take a brief look into the past in order to see what has come of the dreams which had their first realization in August, 1925. Small groups had discussed the possibilities of Mennonite retreats for some time. There were the usual misgivings, but there was also the determination to do what would be of real help to the youth in the midst of the trouble-burdened post-war years.

The first experiment worked out so well that it was not long before we had retreats from coast to coast and now we have them in Canada as well. Everywhere one finds that this growth is due to the fact that retreats meet certain needs. They afford opportunities of becoming acquainted under favorable circumstances. For a relatively small group whose people are scattered over wide areas this is a real boon.

The time has been lengthened from mere short week ends, in some cases, to from five to ten days. Different age groups have gradually been provided with opportunities which were at first thought necessary for young people only, even by friends of the movement. The interesting thing is that older folk and younger children all take to the idea of spending at least a few days each year with others of their age.

The programs have always been worthwhile. Leaders, both young and old, took the matter seriously and were willing to learn from other groups who had begun earlier. The desire to make the programs just as valuable as possible has grown with the years. In some ways we have just begun to take hold of the opportunities which retreats offer to Christian groups.

A suggestion made nineteen years ago that local or district conference groups provide themselves with places of their own is being carried out quite rapidly of late. Camp grounds which belong to a group offer opportunities which one cannot expect in leased grounds.

They also add interest through the opportunity to improve such places of retreat. It has widened the interest in that older people have helped in providing for a place of Christian fellowship for youth, for childhood and also for those in the prime of life. Men-O-Lan in Pennsylvania was an outright gift. The retreat grounds at Rosthern and at Swift Current, Saskatchewan, are being paid for through gifts from young and old. Other groups are casting about for suitable places and are being encouraged by young and old.

Aside from the regular programs offered there have been opportunities for the informal discussion of problems. These have had a wholesome influence upon human relationships in the light of the teachings of our Lord and Master, Jesus Christ.

Making the Most of Our Inheritance

By Gerhard Toews

Our Mennonite heritage is at times over-emphasized. Some recipients even accuse it of being too formal and think it should be replaced with more vigorous evangelistic activities. This leads to a disregard for the good things in the inheritance.

To minimize the value of it is just as serious an offence. Does not the true Mennonite faith and doctrine subject itself entirely to the way and spirit of Christ our Saviour? Vital Christian living and quiet obedience to all that the Master would have us do and be ought to receive our acclaim.

Our Mennonite schools have conscientiously tried to avoid going with either extreme. The Mennonite inheritance has been exalted only to the extent that it serves in making Christ's way our way. They have not always succeeded and may have, at times, gone off on a tangent, but today more than ever are they resolved to teach and live the testimony of salvation and peace as found in the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Our inheritance is varied and rich. One part of it is the initiative and industry of our fathers and the way they taught it to their children. There is much of it in our communities today. But much has been lost. So many have left their home community to find jobs elsewhere. Perhaps we are neglecting to stress the value and importance of this desirable trait. We do not intend to sell our inheritance for a mess of pottage or weaken our testimony by internal disruption!

To deal more directly with this problem Freeman Junior College and Academy has introduced courses in farming and industry to interest and train young people to greater self-reliance and efficiency in home life.

Gerhard Toews teaches industrial arts at Freeman Junior College. He believes that Mennonite young people who want to live on the farm should have the opportunity to learn in school some of the skills which are necessities in farming.

Farming may be a dull and wearisome occupation for some, while it is interesting, exciting and profitable for others. It depends on the purpose, attitude, and training of the people that live on the farm. And so it is in industry.

Our Mennonite communities could and should have more industries owned and operated by its own members. We need factories of various kinds, construction plants, experimental stations, laboratories, power plants, bakeries, etc. And our own people can operate them as well as anyone. These shop courses are designed to encourage such initiative besides emphasizing the advantages of rural home life.

There are practical courses in carpentry, mechanics, welding, electricity, crops and soils, animal husbandry and others. Girls may take shop if they wish to do so. They have regular home making courses in their departments.

The first endeavor of Freeman, along the mechanical line was two years ago when a course was given in the city blacksmith shop. Last year an improved and enlarged course was taught in the school shop. For the coming year new power tools and other equipment has been installed, and more pleasant working quarters have been arranged. Most any boy and girl will enjoy this learn by doing school work.

Some high school age boys do not care too much for book learning but would greatly profit in practical shop work. This shop could probably fill something important to their life.

One endeavor not to be overlooked is that this training is done under Christian instructors who are deeply concerned to give the student every inducement to accept Christ as Savior and to form Christian habits of living.

This is following up only part of our valued Mennonite heritage. It is an important part and we do not want to neglect to offer it with all appeal to our young people.

The Future of Christian Education

By Russell L. Mast

(The following is the talk given by Rev. Russell L. Mast at the young people's session of General Conference. Rev. Mast will soon leave the pastorate of the Deep Run Church in Pennsylvania to become pastor of the First Church, Wadsworth, Ohio.)

To indicate the lines along which I wish to approach this subject I call your attention to a passage in the book of Ezra (7:10) "For Ezra had prepared his heart to seek the law of the Lord, and to do it, and to teach in Israel statutes and judgments." There is good reason to make reference to this ancient Jewish teacher. As we today, so Ezra stood at the end of an era, and was about to step into a new world. The era of captivity was at an end. Permission had been obtained for the Jews to return to their native land and to rebuild all that had been destroyed. As Ezra faced that overwhelming task he considered thoughtfully what part religion should play in the rebuilding of Jewish civilization. The observation which Ezra made, we ought to make for ourselves in these days. Religious education must play a central role in the rebuilding of civilization.

With the insights of this wise Jewish teacher we face the uncertain future. But we can never know much about the future without some reference to the past and the present. The future can never be fully isolated. Life is a continuing experience. Let me say, then, that the future of Christian education depends on our understanding of three things.

I

First, the heritage of the past. What is this heritage? It is nothing other than the Christian faith rooted and grounded in Jesus Christ, the chief corner-stone. It is mediated to us through the Holy Scriptures which bring us Christ, and it makes our faith an historic faith, not subject to the whims and fancies of idle thought. This is the heritage of the past. I submit, therefore, that unless some things are carried out of the past into the future there will be no future worth having. As I have observed the tendencies among some of the religious educators of our day, I see that they have been too eager to cut themselves from that historic stream. They have tried to be "creative"— a worthy objective indeed—but they have tried to be creative without a fixed point of reference. Some things do not change, and some things must be carried out of the past into the future.

Among Mennonites the problem has been somewhat different. We have been too much rooted in the past. We have made of the past a hitching post rather than a guide post. We have been too hesitant, especially in our Sunday School procedures, in availing ourselves of the best educational methods. There are those who hope that in the future we may adopt better methods. But that does not alter our plea to understand the heritage of the past and to build solidly on the foundation of Christian faith.

II

Second, the future of Christian education depends upon our understanding of the need of the present. We cannot isolate the future from the past, neither can we isolate it from the present. Sometimes Christian education fails, not because it does not understand the heritage of the past, but because it does not understand the need of the present. It must focus on the specific needs of persons and actual life situations. So much teaching in the Sunday School fails because these specific needs are not realized or understood.

Speaking generally, I would say that one of the needs in our teaching program is to press home to every department of the Sunday School exactly what the claims of Christianity are. Do we know what it means to be a Christian in terms of the specific choices which confront the average young person? Never before have young people been forced to make such momentous decisions at such an early age. At the ages of sixteen, seventeen, and eighteen we are asking mature decisions of our young people, decisions of far-reaching import. Have we at the same time prepared them to make these decisions?

Here is a startling fact revealed in a report made by Ruth I. Seabury. In a questionnaire sent to 4,000 students the following questions were asked: "Do you think there is anything required of you in attitude, conduct or activity because you are a Christian? If so, what?" One thousand students stated that nothing was required. Others said that they were required to live by the standards of respectable society. Most of them said that the claim which the Christian religion made upon their lives was to go to church! Now that is a straw which shows you which way the wind is blowing. That is the need which faces us. We are living in a time when the light of the Christian witness needs to burn brighter than ever, and we do not even understand the ethical claims of Christianity. We do not know how to put Christ at the center of all our relationships.

Finally, the future of Christian education depends upon our understanding of the task of the future. On the basis of the heritage of the past, and the need of the present, what is the task of the future?

For one thing, we must have a vision. "Where there is no vision a people perish." Where there is no vision Christian education will perish. This is taking place before our very eyes! Everywhere we read of the decline of the Sunday School, of the falling off of attendance. It is not the war that is doing it. It is our lack of vision that is doing it. Give us more people with a vision for this task.

Then, we need to train our leaders. I am not now speaking of professional leaders, though we should encourage our young people to take up the work of Christian education in the Sunday School as a profession. An industry will frequently train its own workers. A church or Sunday School can do no less. Is it any less important to train our Sunday School teachers than it is to train public school teachers? We are told that only eight per cent of the Sunday Schools of the General Conference have teacher training courses.

Again, we need to build a more adequate curriculum. The question of curriculum is a vast study in itself, and we can but mention a few relevant points. An adequate curriculum should take into account the specific needs of each age group. It should consider what the child is really ready for at a given age. It should be systematic, with a thread of continuity running through the years. It should be inclusive, requiring not only a thorough and intelligent understanding of the Bible, but also church history, Mennonite history, and missionary education, to mention but a few. In short, we need to realize that we can do much more in the future than we have done in the past.

This brings us to that ancient teacher who stood at the end of an era ready to rebuild a tottering civilization. There was a man who saw the heritage of the past, the need of the present, and the task of the future.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

By S. T. Moyer

One of the signs of the times in India is the way Education is going forward by leaps and bounds.

For example, about a dozen years ago there was started in the city of Jubbulpore a co-educational high school as a private venture. It started at scratch with the primary grades. In ten years time, just a couple of years ago, they had enrolled one thousand students, co-educationally, clear through from high school in spite of many other government, city, and mission schools already in existence, and in spite of the aversion of Indians and Hindoos to co-education.

For instance, a few years ago a Miss Mahanty, a Christian, started a private school for girls in the English medium of instruction in the city of Bilaspur. She started with primary grades and catered only to non-Christians. She uses a staff entirely of Indian Christian Women Teachers, and pays more than mission schools pay their teachers. She runs her school on fees received and, of course, caters only to the rich and the well-to-do gentry of the city. She now employs a staff of some eight teachers, has a crowded school up to high school. All is in English; all is self-supporting. She plans on a branch school in the adjoining city of Raipur—to meet a vocal demand

THE DOOR TO COLOMBIA NOW OPEN FOR OUR MISSIONARIES

This good news came to us a few days ago by a letter from our friend Dr. Seel in Bogota, Colombia. He is a Presbyterian missionary there and has been much interested in helping us get this permission. He now writes that the Minister of Foreign Relations has for about half a year held up all applications of missionaries to enter Colombia, even some of those who had lived there before and wished to return. But now some very important changes have taken place in the higher offices of the government. The minister (whom we here call Secretary of State) has recently returned from the Peace Conference at San Francisco, and has again taken charge of the matter of visas, and has changed his attitude. He has now authorized their consul in Los Angeles to issue a visa to the two missionaries, Bro. and Sister G. B. Stucky, who had made a second application last winter. As soon as their family affairs will permit, they plan to go, and the other four co-workers are to be sent later as soon as their applications have also been acted on. Thank the Lord for answering the many prayers for an open door to Colombia, where mission work is so much needed, although it will not be easy, and prayers are called for continuously.

—P. H. Richert

from the rich and gentry of that city.

For example, Hislop College is the only Christian College under mission and Christian auspices in our province. A few years ago it had 350 students, many of whom were non-Christians. That seemed to be the limit of the demand. Two years ago the number had risen to seven hundred, with another eight hundred turned away for lack of accommodations.

There seems to be a new wild craze on the part of Indian youth and their elders for education, which was unknown twenty years ago. Why cannot mission schools NOW be self-supporting like Miss Mahanty's? She caters to the upper classes. Under God's providence thus far, it has been the province of Christian missions to go to the lost, the down and out, the slum classes of India. We are a salvation army on a nation wide scale.

Another sign of the times is the rise of hospitals, in which mission Christian hospitals have generously shared. I can remember twenty years ago when Tilda, Jagdeesphur and Mungeli were not known. The mission hospital in Bilaspur was then an ordinary hospital.

Now to visit any one of these four institutions is an experience to be remembered. People come in droves. Mungeli has hundreds coming daily for treatment, and statistics, whether of operations, cataracts, in-patients, out-patients, and income all reach astounding figures. You ride on the trains and meet people who know some one or another of these hospitals. They may show you pictures of the missionary doctor which they carry in their wallet. Figures no longer run in hundreds and thousands, but in tens of thousands.

The Christian Hospital of the Disciples of Christ,
Bilaspur,
The Christian Hospital of the Disciples of Christ,
Mungeli,
The Christian Hospital of the Evangelical Mission, Tilda,
The Christian Hospital of the Mennonites, at Jagdeeshpur,—
all are institutions which are bulging with activity and growth.

Ten years ago we heard very little of young Christian girls going in for training as nurses. Perhaps this statement is too strong, for Miss Loretta Lehman did some fine work training such some dozen or more years ago. But it is probably true thus it was twenty years ago. Now every possible candidate is snatched up by mission hospitals, welfare agencies, government hospitals, the army. If we think this is a war-time phenomena, without permanence, we might consider the matter more carefully.

The above list is not exhaustive. I hear big things from the Christian hospital of the American Mennonites, at Dhamtari, and elsewhere. Unfortunately, while the mission hospital at Champa has been doing excellent work, it has been handicapped by not having a missionary doctor during the past few years.

Another sign of the times is the appearance of "book fairs." You know what a cattle fair is. In the same way book fairs are being set up over India. Raipur recently had one in which a score of publishers from Raipur, Nagpur, Jubbulpore and perhaps other cities, and book dealers displayed their wares on long tables. The display continued for a week or ten days. Tens of thousands of books must have been sold, and thousands of rupees of income must have been realized. The Christian Book Depot of Raipur, under the auspices of the American Evangelical Mission, had space reserved for their books, and thus Christian books were on display and sale, side by side with the books of modern and ancient India.

What do all these things presage for post-war India? For avenues of service for young Indian Christian men and women? In the battle of books, which book or Book will win out? He who has ears to hear, let him hear and act.

RELIEF

Eighth Worker Arrives in India

Wilhelmina Kuyf, who attempted to get passage to India from various ports in the Mediterranean area for approximately twelve weeks, has now arrived in India. The director of the Mennonite unit in India, J. Harold Sherk, cabled on July 29 that Sister Kuyf had landed and would arrive in Calcutta, August 1. The same cable indicated that O. O. Miller was leaving India, July 31, returning by way of Africa.

Relief Activities in Holland

Akron Headquarters was assured, July 29, that the first contingent of M.C.C. workers, Peter and Freda Dyck, had arrived in Holland and had begun initial relief operations. A previous cable from England had indicated that Bro. and Sister Dyck would be ready to leave England, July 20, to enter Holland. The Dyck's cable from Amsterdam contained the following urgent request:

SEND ALL AVAILABLE CLOTHING, BEDDING AT ONCE. MOST URGENTLY NEEDED SHOES ALL SIZES, MEN, WOMEN, CHILDREN. ADDITIONAL PERSONNEL WANTED IMMEDIATELY. SEND OR BRING TRUCK OR VAN.

Swiss Mennonite Relief Committee Cooperation

M. C. Lehman is now located in Basel, Switzerland. He arrived immediately after the July 4 conference in Paris with Bros. Sam Goering, O. O. Miller, and Henry Buller. Bro. Lehman has had opportunity to meet with the Swiss committee to which Fritz Gerber refers in his letter of June 8, "It is almost with impatience that I am awaiting the arrival of an M.C.C. representative, since our Swiss committee would very much like to have your counsel and direction as to how and where to proceed efficiently."

Bro. Lehman's letter, dated July 18, reports:

"I had a meeting with the Relief Committee of the Swiss Mennonite Conference about relief work in Alsace Lorraine. They have some funds ready for such work, and (Fritz) Gerber has about 6000 Swiss francs remaining of the funds received from the M.C.C. With this money on hand, and the additional amount that we will yet want to put into that work, a sizeable program should be possible for the Mennonites and others in that very needy (Alsatian) region... I believe it is highly desirable to do this work cooperatively with Swiss brethren for they are experienced and know the people there and have able and dependable leadership among themselves. Fritz Gerber and Fritz Goldsmith, both pastors, were appointed to go to Alsace Lorraine with me just as soon as we all have our governments permits to go..."

Serves on Refugee Ships

One of the Mennonite nurses in the Middle East M.C.C. unit, Grace Augsburg, has been assigned to attend groups of Yugoslav refugees returning to their homes. Intermittently she has brief periods of waiting if embarkation schedules are disrupted. The following excerpts are taken from her letter dated July 2, 1945:

"I have spent very little time at El Shatt since May 11, on which date I left on my first Yugoslav flight. The first trip was made in five days. We remained in the harbor of Split, Yugoslavia, twenty-four hours, just long enough to unload our refugees, bags, and baggage into smaller boats which took them to their various villages up and down the coast. On our return trip our ship let us at Taranto, Italy, ... from there we proceeded up to Bari, where after a two-day stay, we returned via air to Cairo.

"The second flight is one which shall go down in flight history as a most difficult one. We took sixty-nine tuberculosis patients on this trip, eleven chronic medical patients, and 1300 refugees. Our working hours were long, we had many new difficulties and problems arising continually. After an eight-day journey we cast anchor in the harbor of Split.

"Flight teams, as you probably know, are composed of the following: an officer in command, an adjutant, a doctor, and two or three nurses, depending on the number and kind of refugees taken."

The Winstead Bill

The Winstead Bill as amended and recommended for passage by the House Committee on Military Affairs is as follows:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that no point system shall be applied in the release of men assigned to work of national importance under civilian direction pursuant to section 5 (g) of the Selective Training and Service Act of 1940, as amended: Provided, That nothing herein shall prevent the release of such men because of undue hardship."

The original Winstead Bill had asked that C.O.'s be demobilized on the same point system with the same point values as are applicable to the discharge of men from the Army. The Winstead Bill as amended was not acted upon before the adjournment of Congress but had the effect of postponing the plans of Selective Service to release C.O.'s by the point system at least until Congress convenes in October.

Firefighting

Word from Missoula informs us that C.P.S. parachute firefighters are having a part in combating the large fires which raged in several parts of the Pacific Northwest during the past two weeks. The biggest fire the C.P.S. smoke jumpers have ever fought occurred recently in western Montana. This fire, known as the Meadow Creek fire, was brought under control after a week of fighting and more than 150 jumps from the air by C.P.S. men. Army paratroopers and civilian recruits were also used to fight fire in this region.

C.P.S. Briefs

John Byas, C.P.S. assignee, disappeared from the Elkton, Oregon, camp on July 20 after leaving a note indicating suicidal intentions. On July 24 his body was found in a river at Portland. His death is the first suicide in C.P.S. and the twentieth death.

Camino Camp, since July 25, has been under quarantine for scarlet fever.

D. H. Richert, retired Bethel College instructor, has been touring the camps in Colorado, South Dakota, Nebraska, and Iowa, giving a lecture on astronomy, entitled, "The Heavens Are Telling."

JOTTINGS

The Mennonite Biblical Seminary Chicago, Illinois

President A. Warkentin reports on August 11: "The first students of the Mennonite Seminary have arrived; others have asked for transcripts for the Mennonite Seminary. A. Warkentin.

—Herold Church, Bessie, Oklahoma, has $872.50 in cash and pledges for the building of a church basement.

—Rev. and Mrs. Orlo Kaufman, Paso Robles, California, are the happy parents of a baby daughter.

—Rev. and Mrs. Gerald Stucky and their fourteen-month-old daughter Judith may possibly leave during August for South America to open the mission work there. The long awaited permission to enter Colombia for this purpose has been received. It is expected that the visa will also be issued. The missionary couple will go to Medellin, Colombia, to study the Spanish language. Rev. Stucky is now serving the Berne, Indiana, Church as assistant pastor. Since Rev. Suderman left, he has been in full charge of all pastoral work. Rev. Olin Krehbiel, the new pastor, is to take up the work by November 1. Miss Mary Becker, Miss Janet Soldner, and Laverne Rutschman, who had also intended to go to South America about a year ago are reported not to have made their second appeal for entry. However, it is expected that their appeal would also undoubtedly be granted. Miss Janet Soldner is at Wheaton College, Miss Mary Becker in the M.C.C. office at Akron, Pa., and Mr. Rutschman has been attending Central Baptist Seminary in Kansas City.

—Fifty-nine boys and girls took part in the Western District Intermediate retreat which was held on the Bethel College Campus, August 6 to 10. This was the first one of its kind.

—Fairfield Church, Fairfield, Pa., has its C.P.S. quota paid up to May 1946 and also its conference dues up to that date. The conference treasury shows that the church has contributed $1,035.38 for War-Sufferers Relief.

—Pennsylvania churches recently gave to Bluffton College $3,143 in cash, pledges, and old pledges.

—Bedminster, Pa. Thirty-nine people from the Deep Run Church attended retreats this year. The membership is about 190.

—Letters from members are a unique feature of the newsletter of the Gnadenberg Mennonite Church, Whitewater, Kansas. From this same news letter we glean that at the last General Conference session a total of 9,347 people were served, an average of 1,245 per day. The noon meals ranged from 183 to 1,250.

—Registrations for the young people's retreat of the Western District were up to 175, full capacity before the retreat ever opened.

—First Church, Burns, Kansas, is giving thought to building a new church.

—Rev. and Mrs. Ellis Graber returned to Souderton, Pa. this week after a "harvest-vacation" in South Dakota. Rev. J.N. Smucker filled the pulpit during their absence.

—Bethel Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, has one Sunday School class that has raised over $700.00 for relief to our suffering brethren in Holland.

—Married: Miss Evelyn Regier of West Zion Church Moundridge, Kansas, to Loris A. Habegger of Berne, Indiana, on August 9.

—Rev. Homer Leisy is to conduct evangelistic services in the Berne, Indiana, Church in October.

—Mountain Lake, Minnesota: Rev. Andrew R. Shelly will be the guest speaker at the annual young people's retreat, August 19-22.

—The Sunday School service as well as the regular worship service appears on the August 5th bulletin of the First Church, Nappanee, Indiana. The Souderton, Pa., Church has this as a regular feature.

—First Church, Reedley, California, holds regular offerings for the work of Publication and Education. Rev. B. H. Janzen from Lehigh, Kansas, brought the message in the First Church, Reedley, on July 22, and Professor B. Borgen of North Newton, Kansas, on July 29.

—"How we need to humiliate ourselves that we have sinned against the most holy God! How we need to repent for our sins and to confess them, so the gracious God can pardon them. How we need to believe that Christ took upon Himself our own sins and died on the cross to atone for them... In our church life we are endeavoring to preach and teach this truth and to make Christ pre-eminent."—Rev. P.P. Wedel in a letter to church members in the service of the country.

—Rev. Hugo Mierau is serving the Bethany Church, Freeman, South Dakota, during the summer months. He writes that the church has a wonderful young people's choir of thirty-two voices.

—Ted Schmidt, principal of the Mennonite Bible Academy, North Newton, attended the Nebraska University Summer School.

—Henderson, Nebraska: Two hundred gallons of lard for C.P.S. and Relief, 336 quarts of beans for C.P.S., and $83.00 for Christmas packages to be sent to families in Europe, all constitute evidence of Christian activity in the Bethesda Church.

—Donnellson, Iowa: Dr. E.G. Kaufman, president of Bethel College, has accepted our request for a week of Bible lectures in October. It is planned to have Dr. Kaufman with us for a full week closing his lectures with our Harvest Festival on October 21.

—Burrton, Kansas: Rev. Marvin Dirks filled the pulpit on August 12, and Rev. Karl Friesen will fill it on August 19.

—"Personal Interviews with Jesus" is the title of a series of sermons which Rev. Edmund Miller of Lind, Washington, is presenting.

—Dean J. S. Schultz of Bluffton College has been visiting C.P.S. camps, giving a series of discussions on the Christian Home.

—Rev. J. M. Regier writes from the C.P.S. camp at Colorado Springs that he and Mrs. Regier are enjoying the climate, the fellowship, the work, and the scenery. Rev. Regier, who has served this camp as visiting minister this summer, spoke on "The Changeable and the Unchangeable" on July 29. He sends a "church" bulletin from this camp, which puts one out every Sunday.

—Wadsworth, Ohio: On the evening of July 28 the youth group had a singspiration. Rev. Boehr led the singing and played several selections on his musical saw.

—Miss Bertah Fast, relief worker is to be transferred from Egypt to Rome, Italy.

—Bethel Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, recently sent about two hundred chickens to the Hill City, South Dakota, C.P.S. camp. Rev. Erland Waltner and family attended a Bible conference at Winona Lake recently.

—Rev. Walter Gering, who visited Puerto Rico last fall, has shown his slides taken at that time to fourteen churches in the past eight months.

—Delvin Kirchofer, M.C.C. relief worker, has transferred from Egypt to Rome, Italy.

—Nappanee, Indiana: Twenty boys and girls came to church on a recent Friday for a "fellowship" day. Their handwork results included a miniature mental hospital unit, Smoke Jumpers unit, soil conservation, and a dairy testing unit. Rev. Jacob Enz spoke at the Iowa Retreat as the representative of the Middle District Y.P. Union.

—Rev. Donovan E. Smucker is to hold protracted meetings in the Goessel High School, Goessel, Kansas, from August 26 to 31. These meetings will be sponsored by the Tabor, Goessel, and Alexanderwohl churches. Rev. Smucker, who is touring C.P.S. camps in Montana, Utah, and California, visited the Smoke Jumpers unit at Missoula, Montana, and wrote from there, "The Smoke Jumpers have a very spectacular project with marvelous public relations. A total of 213 men are here from almost every base camp. It is a thrill to see them speed down the runway with a load of C.O's laboring for the common good." Brother Smucker was invited to preach in the Provo Community Church in Provo, Utah. The pastor of the church is very sympathetic to the C.P.S. cause.

—Rev. Henry Harder writes the following from Aberdeen, Idaho, where he just recently assumed the pastorate: The many readers of The Mennonite will perhaps appreciate to know that Mr. Michael Wenger, the father of our missionary Paul Wenger, passed away and was buried July 23. We arrived here safe and well on Wednesday night, July 18. The parsonage was all ready for us and we slept the first night in what is to become our new home. The first morning we were reminded of the fact that in this world joy and sorrow go together: the first telephone call was a death message, saying that Mr. M. Wenger had died. My first service in this church was a funeral service. On July 20-22 the young people were in a retreat in the mountains one hundred miles from here. Here I also spoke to them. On my fifth day in Aberdeen I had already spoken four times. So you see there will be no dull moments here.

—Winnipeg, Manitoba: Various conferences, retreats, mission and song festivals, and special public meetings of Mennonites have convened in Manitoba and the other western Provinces of Canada during June, July and August. All were well attended. Dr. J. H. Langenwaller and Prof. Hohmann, both of North Newton, Kansas, visited Mennonite churches, retreats, conferences and educational institutes in Manitoba and Saskatchewan during the month of June and part of July. Their services were appreciated very much. During July Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary of the Home Mission Board of the General Conference, also visited our Mennonite churches, conferences, retreats, missions, and institutes in Western Canada. He has been at different places in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. Especially is he here in the interest of home mission work, which is done here under the auspices of the Home Mission Board of the General Conference. During August he stops over at several places in Ontario, from where he intends to return home.—Benj. Ewert

—"The M.C.C. is urgently in need of two persons to give full-time Christian service at the Akron Headquarters. A brother is desired for service in the clothing center who could assist in the preparation of clothing for shipment to foreign countries and also help in maintenance work. Either a brother or a sister is desired for work in the laundry at the living quarters at Akron. Both of these positions are with remuneration. Anyone feeling a call to such —Rev. John Franz is visiting Camp Downey in Idaho this week.

—Wilhelmina Kuyf has been able to travel as far as Cairo since leaving Lisbon early in June. Correspondence from Cairo, dated June 17, states that Sister Kuyf pleasantly surprised the Mennonite workers there by attending their devotional service. She remained long enough to tour the refugee camps where the Mennonite workers are serving. Mass migration of refugees and to the complications of procuring passage to India.

—A program is being inaugurated by the M.C.C. whereby Mennonites in America will be able to contribute durable tools and utensils for distribution among the Mennonites in Holland and France. Investigations reveal that Western Europe has literally been combed of metallic tools and utensils during five years of war. Relief workers report that hammers and nails, for instance, cannot be found within a radius of many miles in quite a few areas. The absence of spades, forks, sythes, hoes, and rakes is a major hindrance to farm work since European farms are operated almost entirely on a small-tool basis. Instructions will be released soon with regard to the types of tools and utensils to be collected and shipped to headquarters at Akron, Pa.

THE MOUNTAINS TEACH SIMPLICITY AND SILENCE

A Meditation by Rodolphe C. Petter

The above picture of Swiss alpine scenery was taken near Murren, Switzerland. The foreground shows us a high alpine pasture which seems to reach to the very foot of the three giant snow peaks. However a very deep and long valley (Lauterbrunnen) extends between them, in the middle ground, some two thousand feet lower than the foreground. This view of the majestic grandeur of God's handiwork stirs the soul, making us long to wander and wonder thru meadows, passes, peaks and glaciers, breathing the pure, cool and bracing air of that high mountain world, and feasting on the great silence all around us.

In the long ago Job was inspired to say, "Hast thou entered the treasuries of the snow?" Then Psalm 104:13 says, "He watereth the mountains, He causeth the grass to grow for the cattle." These chambers of God and the treasuries of the snow are not only a panorama of sublime beauty to feast on but also an immense reservoir of spiritual and physical strength, a wonderful place of retreat for those who yearn after it.

The alpine pasture in the foreground is called an alp. Such regions lie between the belt of forests and the snows. It is a high summer grazing ground for cattle and horses, sheep and goats. Much higher up are also smaller grazing places, but accessible only to sheep and goats, while the lower grass lands are used for hayfields. You see scattered on this alp some chalets (mountain dwellings). Rather than stay in the village in one of the hotels crowded with tourists, we rent one of these chalets where clean, simple accommodations can be had and one can enjoy to the Rodolphe C. Petter, veteran missionary who was born in Switzerland and who loves the beauty of its Alps, gives us an intimate description and meditation which together with the picture ought to revive wilted spirits on a hot August day. Dr. Petter viewed again the mountains of his native land when on a visit to it in 1939. He writes, "It is impossible to describe to others the tremendous tableau spread before one in this alpine high world; one can only say, 'Go and see.'" Perhaps, the coming air-age will enable a goodly number of the readers to do this.

full the ideal retreat for body and soul and hear the small voice of God.

From here we can make many excursions as we please in to the surrounding alpine world. Such quiet spots in the high pastures are well known and sought after by mountain lovers, who leaving the noise, toil, heat, worries and weariness of the crowded life in cities and plains, long for silence, full relaxation of body and mind in the chambers of God, surrounded by impressive grandeur, drink in the invigorating air of the heights, feasting on the matchless beauty spread all around, in the deep green grass, the many flowers of brilliant colors and penetrating fragrance, the white snowfields and the tremendous glaciers issuing from them, while above them the chain of peaks in dazzling white pierce the blue sky, as if pointing to us the higher blessedness and blissfulness of the "Everlasting hills" of which Jacob spoke. The alp stretched before us is criss-crossed by radiating paths that start out but lead nowhere. Where the cattle have not browsed the grass may be tall and the flowers in profusion. Then it feels good to wander in every direction and from every place. Downward lies the vista of the forest and valleys, while ahead of us tower the white giants. We sit down gazing and feasting on the indescribable alpine world around us. How the mind becomes disencumbered and the soul deeply impressed by it all! Here is the retreat "par excellence," needed by body and soul.

From our chalet we can leisurely ascend from grass to snow by means of paths or passes, which traverse from one mountain to another, affording one of the finest opportunities for contemplating the impressive scenery of the mountains. Those who have walked or gone with "Postautos" over the high passes know how much such trips contribute to the enjoyment and knowledge of the alpine world, for those passes lead generally thru grand scenery, far more so than what is commanded from flanks or peaks of high mountains.

When it comes to high peaks, like the Jungfrau (which is seen at the right top of the picture), it was the privilege of only expert mountain climbers, provided with reliable guides and the necessary outfit to ascend the steep slopes of snow and ice. Now the electric railway system has made the ascension of high and dangerous mountains possible for any one who can stand a high altitude. Here the train starts far below in the valley, reaches the summit of a pass of 6300 feet altitude, climbs higher towards the foot of the giant peak (left top side of the picture) and there enters the five-mile tunnel pierced thru this mountain (Eiger), then thru the next (Monch) and finally lands at the Jungfraujoch, at the east of the Jungfrau peak. There we step out of our train, walk a short distance and face the tremendous panorama of snowfields, glaciers, peaks, domes, fearful declivities, all covered with the pure, white masses of snow and ice, accumulated there for scores of years. The actual summit of this mountain is 1600 feet higher, but the ascent of it, in fair weather and with a good guide is not very hard or dangerous, and is rewarded with an indescribable view of the alpine world all around and far below the meadows, forests, valley, and plains. The view became so overwhelming to the great naturalist Agassiz, that he burst into tears.

On such heights are the treasuries of the snow which turns into hard blue, deep ice. The latter gradually forms a tremendous body which moves imperceptibly down declivities of thousands of feet, at times falling over precipices, then reforming below, resuming the slow march downward into the high valleys, where it ends in a "snout," from under which a river of whitish water bursts forth. It is delightful to follow the course of a glacier, for it exhibits much that is not seen elsewhere in nature.

In wandering over pastures, passes, peaks and glaciers we find out that not a few wild animals, birds and insects live among them. Even on the glaciers which provide no means of food and shelter, there exists the so called snowflea (thirty-nine hundredths of an inch). At night, under thirty subzero they freeze shut in the glacier, but hop out of their ice beds, as soon as the sun frees them the next morning! The marmots cut and dry their hay, dragging it into

THE END OF THE WAR brings abundant cause for thanksgiving. Soldiers at the front have come to that glorious moment when they need not kill or be killed. They can think more hopefully of returning to home and loved ones. Those at home feel very much more confident that their loved ones will return. The war is over. Thanks be unto God that a different pattern of human behaviour shall have more of a chance once more.

But war's end is not erasing the fact of over 1,068,216 casualties with more than 250,000 of them killed, on the part of the United States alone. We know there are many in whose life there is a painful emptiness because someone did not come back. We know that many face life with terrible handicaps. We know that some of the best doctors, scholars, and research workers that this generation would have possessed have been lost in war. No, the end of the war does not change many sad facts.

What a wild demonstration of joy there would be in this world on the part of all peoples if they could know for sure that there would be no more war in all the years to come! The end of this war has not brought that guarantee.

The war's end means an emphasis upon construction rather than upon destruction. For that we rejoice. But how much more cause for rejoicing we would have today if we would look back upon four years in which $300,000,000,000 has been spent for promoting good will with all the peoples of the world and better food, clothing, housing, medical care, education, and recreation in our own country. How much more we would rejoice if some of the same wealth and effort had been utilized to carry on the work of the Christian Church more effectively than ever, so that millions in our own land and in other lands would have been saved from the grip of sin.

War's end is bringing many different reactions from men and women. In a Kansas newspaper we found the following two views expressed: The first, an editorial, declared: "The United Nations cannot afford to allow sentiment to influence cold judgment and the administration of a harsh justice upon the instigators of World War II. To do so would lay the foundation stones of a third world war—something to be avoided at all cost." The second view expressed in an advertisement made this plea: "Give us the courage to write a just and equitable Peace, that we may spare mothers of the future the fears, the anxieties and the loneliness they have felt . . . Give us the strength of God's Love that we may work together in building a better and happier world." We rejoice that not all express the first view but that there are those who pray "Give us the strength of God's Love . . ."

NOT TO RESIST EVIL WITH EVIL but to overcome evil with good lies at the basis of the nonresistant faith. The United States is today rejoicing in a "victory" over evil achieved by fighting bullets with more bullets and bombs with more bombs. The U.S. has outdone Japan in war. It has resisted evil. It claims that it has overcome evil with evil. That it has won a great military victory is true. But should Christians hold that the United States has overcome evil by resisting evil with evil? Does it not rather stand to reason from Paul's words "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good" that since we have not tried to overcome evil with good, we may in the process have been overcome by evil? Have we won the peace as well as the war? Or has our armed resistance to Japanese aggression only served to intensify that aggressiveness in the long run? To be sure, that aggressiveness is to be thoroughly suppressed for all time to come, but history seems to show that those who sit on the lid eventually topple off their seat in one way or another. Consider that after 1918 the Allies were in a most favorable condition to keep Germany from re-arming, and yet it built up a military machine greater than that before the first World War. Theoretically the most powerful nation of any moment ought to remain ruler of the world for all time to come, but history tells another story. Power is said to corrupt; it has decay in it. All the signs of history seem to indicate that America cannot depend upon its atomic bombs to keep peace. There is one way out for America, and that way is the way of overcoming the present hatred and despair in enemy minds and hearts with genuine goodwill. The Bible insists that peace on earth can only come to men of goodwill. Will America choose to overcome evil with good or will it continue to resist evil with evil? What will the answer be? We know that one of the hardest things in life for an individual is to keep from resisting the evil within himself or in others and to overcome it by emphasizing the good. The same holds true of multitudes of people, such as nations. One of the hardest truths for a human being to have faith in is that one must choose to let go that which seems absolutely essential if one is to have any real chance at all of receiving that very same blessing. God help America to lose its life, for only in that way can it ever find the truly blissful life.

OUR MINISTRY OF EDUCATION

By J.H. Langenwalter

A GOOD SCHOOL YEAR

We wish a GOOD school year to those who are who, for the first time, fare forth from their homes into the beginnings of a new way of finding out things. We wish it no less for those who stay at home and feel a new kind of tug at their hearts as they realize that their little ones are no longer babies.

We wish a GOOD school year to those who are looking forward to finishing the work of the grades, whether that be in any one of the years of work before them, or the last. However, we think especially of those who are beginning to wonder about the high school a year away, if there is to be high school or academy for them. We think of these also with thoughts of responsibility.

We wish those in high school and academy a GOOD school year. During these days of uncertainty they are subject to experiences which seem too heavy for them. In too many cases the work of this level of schooling has been seriously disrupted by the major quarrel of human history. They deserve our sincerest interest.

We wish those who are in colleges a GOOD school year. They cannot help but wonder about many things as they return. We are not unmindful of those who would gladly enroll this fall. We know the eagerness with which they look forward to the day when that may happen again. "That will be the happiest day of my life" is heard often about two possible events, the return home and the return to school. That is worthy of careful consideration on the part of us as parents, teachers and maybe or should be fellow students.

We wish those who dare to go forth into graduate work a GOOD school year. It takes courage to do this at this time in the face of all of the discouragements and allurements which confront this group. May they not lose sight of the services to be rendered.

We also wish a GOOD school year to all of those who teach. They will learn more than any of their pupils or students, if they are real teachers. Unfortunately, history will repeat itself. We will find many turning to the schools, in order to have a job, to whom domination means more than service. To such the schools do not exist for the sake of helping youth prepare for the life to be lived in the coming generation. Such will not have a GOOD school year, wishes or no wishes.

Schooling and education are not the same. Schooling is meant to be a help in the acquiring of an education. Education is the leading out from a lower level of thinking, feeling, deciding and living in accordance with the orderly arrangements of God for the good of all mankind. May He bless all of you whether you are in some formal school or in the School of Life.

FORTY-SIXTH ANNUAL SESSION OF CENTRAL CONFERENCE

The forty-sixth annual session of the Central Conference of Mennonites was held at Meadows, Illinois, August 7-9. With a goodly attendance despite the busy season in some localities and travel restrictions, with ideal weather, and above all with an evident unity of mind and heart, it proved to be an outstanding occasion in the entire series of Central Conference sessions.

The 22 churches and missions reported a total membership of 3,185. The financial report for the conference year, ending June 30, showed the following total contributions: church running expenses, $37,461.98; home and foreign missions, $27,353.83; institutions (Mennonite Hospital, Bluffton College, Old People's Home) $14,548.83; civilian public service, relief, and other benevolences, $18,057.66. Grand total contributions for all purposes, $97,422.30.

A principal item of business before the conference was the question of the proposed affiliation of Central Conference with the General Conference of Mennonites of North America. After extended consideration of the matter and special prayer for God's guidance, the delegate body by almost unanimous action voted to accept a recommendation from the Unity and Executive Committees of the conference, which provided:

"(1) That Central Conference make application for an affiliation with the General Conference on the basis of the 'Findings' of the joint meeting of conference representatives, held at North Newton, Kansas, it being understood that any modification of or deviation from such basis of operation shall be mutually satisfactory to both groups; and (2) That when such application is made, it be accompanied by a letter setting out the concern of our people for the undisturbed functioning of our conference mission board, Congo Inland Mission, the Christian Evangel, and other interests we have, some of which are in cooperation with other groups of Mennonites."

This action of conference is now being referred to the churches for their ratification. When such ratification is consummated, formal application will be made.

In the reorganization all conference officers and the Unity committee were retained for another year. Dr. A. Warkentin, president of the new Mennonite Seminary and Bible School, was a conference visitor and presented the need of and plans for the work of that institution. It is anticipated that the 1946 session of the conference will be held in Indiana. (R.L. Hartzler, Field Secretary, Central Conference).

The Church of the Brethren

(Since the Mennonite Biblical Seminary and Bible School has affiliated with the seminary and Bible school of the Church of the Brethren readers may find the following facts about The Church of the Brethren of special interest.—Editor)

The Church of the Brethren, frequently called Dunkers, had its origin in Schwarzenau, Germany, in 1708. After much Bible study Alexander Mack, his wife and six others "covenanted together to walk in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord," making the New Testament the guide of their life and emphasizing especially the teachings of Jesus Christ. Up to the present day the Church of the Brethren has adhered to the New Testament as its creed.

Within a few years the church gained many followers, but soon severe persecutions broke out and they were driven from place to place. Under this pressure they decided to leave their beloved homeland. Encouraged by the Mennonites in Crefeld, Germany, with whom they had much in common and upon invitation of the Mennonites who had settled in Germantown in 1683 practically the entire membership emigrated to Pennsylvania between the years 1719-1729.

The first American congregation was organized in 1723 at Germantown, Pennsylvania, with Peter Becker as first minister. The membership of the church grew rapidly. According to Dr. Rufus D. Bowman, President of the Bethany Biblical Seminary, and one of their historians, their membership of one hundred seventy-nine thousand is scattered now in thirty-eight states.

The Brethren made an initial important contribution to the spreading of Bibles in America when one of their members, Christopher Sauer, in 1743, printed the first Bible in a modern tongue in our country. Some copies of this esteemed publication are still in existence.

As the Mennonites, so the Brethren seek to follow the Biblical principle of peace as taught in the New Testament. Being one of the three Historic Peace Churches, the Brethren support the Civilian Public Service program and are engaged in extensive foreign relief work. Their headquarters are located at Elgin, Illinois. The leadership in their 1,019 churches is consistently being supplied out of their church institutions. The Bethany Bible School opened its doors for the first time on October 3, 1905. "In 1931 the name of the school was officially changed to 'Bethany Biblical Seminary,' which is more in keeping with the educational standing Bethany has attained. In 1940 Bethany Biblical Seminary was granted accreditation as a standard theological seminary by the American Association of Theological Schools."

Extracts from the Latest Statistics from India

The number of villages in our territory is a little more than 3,000. A total of 169 villages in the territory have Christians residing in them. There live scattered 72 Indian helpers in the evangelistic work. Brother P.W. Penner writes, "From the above it can be readily surmised how well our Lord's request still holds, 'The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that He will send forth labourers into His harvest. Not only can the Lord send, but He will equip, provided the labourers are regenerated and dedicated to His cause!'"

There are at present 23 missionaries, 10 men and 13 women. The number of Indian workers is 180, 111 men and 69 women. Besides the above, a goodly number are on half-time schedule. Every phase of work is focused on evangelism, the major aspect in all mission enterprise.

There are 6 main stations occupied by missionaries and 30 stations occupied by Indian co-workers. A total of 478 villages have been visited.

The number of established churches is 15. On March 31, 1945, the total church membership was 3,150. The total Christian community, including unbaptized children, number 5,168.

In the medical field, there are two hospitals, one at Champa and one at Jagdeeshpur, and six dispensaries. The number of treated cases that have been registered is 21,194, and the number of in-patients is 1,543.

In the industrial work, more than 150 acres of land were cultivated or partly so. On this land are raised rice, wheat, linseed, pulses, soy beans, the last named largely for fertilizing. Then there are orchards for oranges, custard apple, guava, and vegetable gardens.

About $2,510 was given by the Christians in offerings. $12,147.00 has flown into the mission treasury from various sources, as sale of literature, government grants, medicines and industrial sources.

Bro. Penner concludes, "When observing the preceding report, our hearts are lifted up with praise to our heavenly Father like Psalm 148 does. Nevertheless there is need to pray the Lord of His field to endue all missionaries, Indian workers and Indian Christians with a stronger desire to lead a life close to the Saviour, having a greater zeal winning and establishing souls for the Master. These prayers are constantly solicited.—P.H. Richert, Secretary, Foreign Mission Board.

THE BOOK REVIEW

SEVENTY TIMES SEVEN. By Rufus D. Bowman. Brethren Publishing House, Elgin, Illinois, $1.50.

Seventy Times Seven, as the author suggests "gets its name from the eighteenth chapter of Matthew, which has probably been the most outstanding Bible chapter of the history of the Church of the Brethren." The 158-page book gives a concise survey of the position of the Brethren regarding war and the relationship of the church to the state; the Biblical basis for peace; and a suggested procedure for peace education.

Matthew eighteen speaks of unlimited forgiveness which the author holds to be the center of the peace doctrine. Bowman reveals that so "far as the official pronouncements are concerned, the Church of the Brethren has kept its teaching clear." Actually, however, he shows that approximately 80 per cent of the Brethren men drafted have gone into the armed services, 11 per cent have taken noncombatant service, and only 8.5 per cent have gone into C.P.S. (July, 1944) From various statistical data it is shown that "propaganda, the economic problem, and the influence of friends and community have been stronger in motivating action than the program of the church." Bowman contends that in the Church of the Brethren there is a "strong minority group holding firmly to her peace principles. This group includes the majority of the outstanding church leaders." All of this, of course, reminds one painfully of the striking similarity to the situation obtaining in our own church.

The second portion of the book deals with the Biblical basis for peace and church-state relationship. While this is largely a condensation of Bowman's larger work, The Church of the Brethren and War, it does give a fairly complete summary of the somewhat generally accepted (by the historic peace churches) Biblical basis for non-resistance. It does seem to the reviewer, however, that sooner or later it will become imperative to give increased emphasis to the economic implications of the peace doctrine. The discussion on the Christian's relationship to the state leaves one not "dissatisfied" but somewhat "unsatisfied," as though something else should be said—not entirely adequate! Personally, I find this same void in Guy Hershberger's very excellent War, Peace, and Non-Resistance.

The last three chapters suggest a program of procedure for making the peace testimony more effective. No one can find fault with this concrete and concise program of education. It gives in outline form what the various agencies of the church can and should do. Here one finds suggestions for the Conference as a whole, the local churches, the Brethren Colleges, the Seminary, the Board of education, and even the home. Epitomized, it amounts to this: let's make clear we know what we really believe, then let's use all the ingenuity we possess, collectively and individually, to get it across to our people—young and old.

While the book is written primarily for the Brethren it certainly would make effective reading for our own church people—especially for our church leaders for whom, in the light of recent developments relative to the Mennonite Seminary, it resolves itself into a "must read" book. I rather feel that with all we say about our own heritage, likely it will be best retained and transmitted if one follows Bowman's admonition to the Brethren:

"Our Brethren heritage will be transmitted by the church losing itself in world service. This means missions and Brethren Service. This means genuine Christian service in the communities in which we live. It involves Christian attitudes and relationships to other races and nations. It includes giving money sacrificially to send young people as missionaries of the cross and to the various countries of the earth as ambassadors of good will. It means sharing the bread from our tables so that the hungry may be fed." (p. 140).—J. D. Unruh

John E. Mott said forty-five years ago:

"Japan is so ripe for the Christian message that if we would send them 10,000 missionaries we could practically sweep the country for Christianity. If we do not, we may some day have to send 100,000 bayonets."

Gould Wickey, General Secretary of the Council of Church Boards of Education, before Committee on Post-war Military Policy as later reported in "College and Church."

"Gould Wickey proposed "that of the billions which would be spent for compulsory peacetime universal military training, only 25 per cent be used annually in scholarships for exchange students and messengers of good will and neighborliness between the United States and the hypothetical enemy country or countries. Within five years, he believed, this plan would assure and guarantee that millions of citizens of this country and of the possible enemy countries would know one another better and would be willing to discuss calmly and constructively international problems. Then we would be assured of a spiritual basis for the democracy of America and of the world of nations.

Dr. C. Horace Hamilton, a professor of rural sociology:

"The philosophy of modern materialism says in effect that the main business of life is the production and distribution of material goods. This materialistic philosophy implies that man's greatest need is for physical comfort and pleasure; and that this need can be satisfied by constantly increasing the consumption of material goods."

Dr. L. L. Ramseyer, President, Bluffton College:

"The purpose of a college education is not primarily to increase one's ability to earn, but rather one's ability to serve. It is exceedingly important for our own good and the good of our children that our leaders, both in secular and church life, secure their education with a Christian emphasis. When you give to a church college, you invest in that type of leadership."

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. MARTHA H. BAER, daughter of Anthony and Catherine Harpstrite, was born near Trenton, Illinois, March 8, 1875, and died July 16, 1945. In 1898 she was united in marriage to Benjamin D. Baer, who preceded her in death in 1944. As a youth she had united with the Methodist Episcopal Church at Trenton, but after her marriage she regularly attended the Mennonite Church at Summerfield. Children who mourn her are: Katherine and Russell of the home; Stanley of Bassett, Wisconsin; Howard of New York City; and Malcolm in the armed forces.

JOHN P. SCHUTZ, forty-four, Pandora, Ohio, died at his home here, June 26, 1945. He was associate general secretary of the Y.M.C.A. of Orange, New Jersey for thirteen years, and in January had been given a leave of absence to regain his health. He was formerly a member of Grace Church. He is survived by his wife; two children, Barbara and John; two sisters, Mrs. Reuben Schumacher, Miss Elizabeth Schutz of Pandora; and three brothers, Rev. Walter Schutz of Sierra Leone, West Africa, and Edward E. and Albert of Pandora.

HENRY G. JANZEN, son of Heinrich and Magdalene, nee Penner, Janzen, was born near Beatrice, Nebraska, December 24, 1889, and passed away July 26, 1945. In addition to district school he also attended the Mennonite parochial school. He was baptized in 1911 by Elder Gerhard Penner and received into the First Church. In 1922 he married Anna Penner, who now with two children, Theodore Fred and Margaret Ruth, survives him.

HENRY J. KREHBIEL son of Henry and Barbara (Galle) Krehbiel, died at his home in Donnellson, Iowa, July 22, 1945, at the age of sixty-nine years, eleven months and three days. He was a lifelong member of the Zion Church. He is survived by his wife, three sons, Nelson H., Ottumwa; Harold L., Salem; and Kenneth in the U.S. Navy, and two sisters, Mrs. Anna Weber, Donnellson; and Miss Barbara Krehbiel Keokuk, Iowa.

DANIEL BERGER, son of Henry and Elizabeth Berger, was born in Buffalo, New York, December 11, 1867, and died June 16, 1945. He grew to manhood at Trenton, Illinois. In 1890 he married Katherine Hearting who died in 1895. In 1902 he married Caroline Miller with whom he shared life until 1930 when she passed away. Most of his life he lived at Halstead, Kansas, where he was a member of the First Church.

ELIZBETH ESAU LORENZ was born to Mr. and Mrs. Dietrich Esau March 22 1885, in Mountain Lake, Minnesota, and passed away on August 5, 1945. She was received into the Bergfelder Mennonite Church in 1905. In 1922 she married P. G. Lorenz, who passed to his reward in 1939. Children who mourn her are: Elizabeth Francis, Peter P., Paul, and Mrs. Ben Goertzen of Mountain Lake; Jacob and Silus of Portland, Oregon; and Mrs. Jack Ingram of St. Louis. Rev. John Esau, Bluffton, is a brother.

MRS. CHRISTINE MILLER RUPP was born in Neuhof Austria, on June 24, 1853. In 1866 she was baptized and received into the Mennonite Church. She was married to John Rupp in 1870, and after thirteen years they migrated to America. For twenty-one years they lived on a farm near Butterfield, Minnesota. She departed from this life on August 2, 1945. Children who mourn her are: Mrs. Arnold Kintzi, Mrs. Rudolf Linscheid, Mrs. Gust Miller, Mrs. Herbert Linscheid, and Edward and John.

PETER W. SCHROEDER was born December 7, 1864, in South Russia. In 1874 he migrated to Goessel, Kansas, with his parents, Peter and Helera (Voth) Schroeder. He and Helena Isaac were married in 1886. During different times of his life he belonged to these three churches: Alexanderwohl, Tabor and Goessel. He passed away July 11 1945, his wife having passed away six years ago. They celebrated their Golden Wedding anniversary in 1936.

MICHAEL WENGER, son of Abraham and Sarah Geil Wenger, was born November 12, 1853, near Edom, Virginia, and died July 19, 1945. When fifteen his parents moved to Morgan County, Missouri, where he became a member of the Bethel Church. In 1879 he married Rosina Welty, with whom he lived sixty-three years until her death in 1943. Four years they operated the Bethel College dining hall. After that they farmed near Aberdeen Idaho. Children who survive are: Ira J. and Frank L., Sadie C. of Aberdeen, and Paul A. Wenger of Korba, C.P., India.

MRS. ANNA W. ENNS was born March 14, 1889, near Inman, Kansas, and died July 3, 1945. She was baptized in 1904 and received into the Mennonite Church. In 1910 she was married to John H. Toews, who died in an accident in 1912. In 1913 she was married to Geo. J. Enns her now bereaved husband. She is mourned by him and the following children: Edward, Meade; Mathilda and Mrs. Harvey Thiessen, Wichita; Mrs. Martha Lemen and Mrs. Anna Volkland, Hutchinson; and Stella and Arnold of the home.

PETER STEFFEN was born May 5, 1861, in Berne, Indiana, and died at the age of eighty-four. When he was very young his parents moved to Wayne County, Ohio, and when he was sixteen they moved to Oregon. Here he became a charter member of the Emmanuel Church Pratum, where he served as Sunday School superintendent and teacher for many years. He was also a deacon for a number of years. In 1892 he married Rosina Liechty. His wife and two daughters, Lena E. and Ellen F., and two sons, Daniel A. and Oliver E. mourn him.

MARIA A. SCHMIDT, daughter of Jacob A. Schmidt and Anna (Unruh) Schmidt, was born October 1, 1881, near Goessel, Kansas, and died August 10 1945. She was baptized in 1901 and received into the Alexanderwohl Church. Later she became a member of the Tabor Church. She worked in the Goessel Hospital and in the Old People's Home and spent some time in mission work in Montana. She is mourned by two brothers: John U. of Hutchinson, and David of Aberdeen, Idaho.

LAVERE D. THUT, thirty-nine, died at the Bluffton Community Hospital August 3, 1945. For ten years he was affiliated with the Economy Clothing Store of Bluffton. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Amos Thut, two sisters and one brother survive. Rev. Paul Whitmer officiated at the service, and burial was in Ebenezer cemetery.

NEEDS and CONDITIONS in EUROPE

III. NEED FOR FOOD

By M. C. Lehman

The destruction of all sources of food supply in every territory is a systematic effort of all warfare. All food-producing and food-processing agencies are the objects of attack. The more complete the destruction, the better from a military viewpoint. After over five years of war in Europe, this process has been effective.

Some of the thirty million displaced people have sufficient food; the majority certainly do not. In addition to these there are many millions who are definitely undernourished. About one-half billion Europeans are now suffering because of the war, the National Planning Association asserts.

The requisitioning of food by strong nations in Europe has made equitable distribution exceedingly difficult. The demolition of transportation systems has made any kind of distribution well-nigh impossible. Breached canals and broken railway systems are in evidence in all but the few neutral nations. Nations depending for food on transportation systems from the outside, as many do, suffer severely. No country, with the possible exception of Portugal, is getting the same food as before the war.

Latest reports of the United States Department of Agriculture indicate that decrease in manpower and machinery, crop failure in some areas, flooding and otherwise destroying crops, and loss of transportation facilities have drastically reduced the availability and consumption of food of large population centers in occupied Europe. "For the first time since the outbreak of the war, there is also an imminent prospect that the impact of military operations upon general production and transportation may have significant repercussions upon the output, distribution, and utilization of food supplies during 1944-45. Unless weather conditions are unusually favorable, these factors may well operate to reduce agricultural production and the subsequent supply of food in continental Europe to a level below that of any preceding war year." (Foreign Agriculture)

The Present Situation

This is not an encouraging outlook. It becomes deeply dismal when one observes what the present situation is. This is to be seen from a country like France.

The National Planning Association in Relief for Europe records that from November, 1940, to April, 1942, the caloric value of the average French adult diet decreased from 1307 calories daily to 1116. In view of the fact that 2500 calories per day is the minimum allowable for health for an ordinarily active adult, this means that the average French adult is getting less than half the nourishment he needs daily.

People so fed can survive but can do little active work. They grow weak and apathetic and have no interest in improving their own or others' welfare. They cannot stay well. The resistance of the body is reduced under such conditions and the individuals soon succumb to some weaknesses that otherwise are dormant. Epidemics become more virulent than when people have their normal supply of food. The vital statistics of Belgium and France indicate also that in areas where food is scarce the death rate has increased by 12 per cent.

Farmers fare better in nearly all areas than town and city dwellers. No emergency feeding on a large scale will be necessary for farmers. In some European countries, however, the rationing of food is applied as rigidly to what producers of food may retain for themselves as it is to the consumption of food by non-producers. In Germany such strict police supervision of all kinds of food-producing agencies is practiced that farmers in many cases are undernourished.

their holes for the winter. Then there are the chamois and steinbok, besides others which all know where to go for feed and shelter.

Our Lord Jesus liked to go into mountains "to rest apart" and commune with the Father in prayer. It was on Mount Horeb that Elijah was comforted by the "still small voice," he heard there.

We leave the alpine world with two great lessons learned there. The first is Simplicity. On the heights one separates himself from the conventional, artificial, fabricated by man's vanity. It is in coming down from the mountains that we realize how far we have been the slaves of the stupid exigencies which deform us and rob us of the best we have. On the heights we came in touch with simplicity and naturalness which refreshed our physical and spiritual health. The other lesson the mountains taught us is Silence, the great silence of the alpine regions, i.e. the absence of all noise, voices and tumult which unavoidably surrounds our ordinary life. On the mountains, the silence of the high regions becomes impressive, an inner ear is opened to what was inaudible, and we become aware that God has called us here "Over the tumult of our life's wild restless sea," in which we are unable to hush the blare of the world, the worries, cares, business, politics, war, pleasures, plans for the future, overactivities and whatnots which ever tug at us, leaving us no time, no freedom, no chance, no place to hear the still small voice of God, sitting at Jesus' feet for that "One thing needed."

The Saskatchewan Retreats

By A. J. Neuenschwander

Two committees planned and directed the Saskatchewan retreats. The Northern, or Rosthern, Committee is composed of Rev. J.C. Schmidt, Rev. Is. Epp, and Mr. H.W. Friesen. The Southern, or Swift Current, Committee consists of Rev. Is. Derksen, Rev. V.E. Nickel, and Rev. Hans Dyck. Others may have assisted, but I learned to know these best.

These two groups work together in the development of the Christian Youth work in Saskatchewan. When it comes to faith in God and courage to undertake great things for the Lord, these men stand well in the ranks of the heroes of Bible times.

The 1945 retreat in the Rosthern district was the fifth held on the grounds of the Mennonite Youth Farm near Rosthern. The sessions were held in a large implement shed which was prepared for the occasion. The girls had their quarters in the roomy hay mow of the horse barn while the boys had a convenient place in the loft of the cow barn. The hay on which they spread their blankets was fragrant, the room was spacious, and the early twitter of the sparrows was a great aid to the rising bell. The meals were served and prepared in a large granary.

The evening meetings were open to the public, and many came from the neighboring communities by truck, automobile, wagons and on foot. The shed was large and easily able to accommodate the retreat-who numbered more than one hundred, but in order to accommodate the large audience a public address system was installed. There was special need for this on Sunday.

The Spirit of the Retreat

That many earnest prayers had ascended to God on behalf of the retreat was evident in each session. The young people entered into the plan and purpose of the whole program with great devotion. Sunday School teachers rejoiced when some of their pupils told them of their decision to accept Christ as personal Saviour, and pastors were deeply moved when life-work decisions were made. Every leader had frequent personal conferences.

The Program and Speakers

The following boards and organizations were represented on the program. The Gretna, Manitoba and Rosthern, Saskatchewan Academies were represented by Rev Paul J. Schaeffer and J.G. Rempel, the Foreign Mission Board by Verney Unruh, candidate for India, the Board of Home Missions by Rev. Chas. B. Dirks and Rev. A.J. Neuenschwander; the Education and Publication Boards by Dr. J.H. Langenwaller; Bethel College by Prof. W.H. Hohmann, and of course the members of the youth organization. The Abbotsford, British Columbia, Bible School was represented by Rev. J. Nickel. Rev. David Toews delivered an address. He cannot be claimed by anyone of these organizations, because he is interested in all, and all claim him as friend and helper. There was a varied and wide range of speakers, but each one represented some definite phase of work in the Kingdom of Christ as carried on by the General Conference.

The Mennonite Youth Farm

The farm, with its more than five hundred acres of good land, promises to be a rich source of income for Christian work in years to come. It is also the seat of the Invalid Home. More than a dozen guests are now being cared for, and others are on the waiting list.

The recreational program consisted of long hikes, a study of various plants and flowers, of which there are many more than is anticipated, and softball games. If one might judge by the cheering, the games were enjoyed as much by the spectators as by the players.

There was a wholesome spirit of fellowship and cooperation throughout the retreat days. The weather was good altho we had a few showers, but even these were enjoyed because of the need of rain for the crops.

The climax of the program was reached on Sunday afternoon, July 8, in the well-rendered and well-attended song festival.

Elim Gospel Beach, Swift Current

Approximately eighty young people from southern Saskatchewan gathered at this place, which was dedicated to the Lord on June 24. Dr. J.H. Langenwaller was the speaker. From this it is quite evident that this was the first retreat held at this place, located on Lac Palletier, eighteen miles south and eight miles west of Swift Current. The Committee had conducted two retreats on a smaller scale at other places in previous years.

Naturally much is yet to be done to develop the physical possibilities of the camp, which are promising. Each retreat from Pennsylvania to California and Canada has its own unique feature; the distinctive one here was that the tables were arranged for the meals among the tall, graceful swaying, poplars on the shore of the lake. Naturally swimming and boating were main features on the recreation program, but volley ball drew a good share of interest.

The retreat was planned by and for Mennonites, nevertheless served about twenty young people that belong to the Norwegian Lutheran Church. This cooperating group fitted well with our Mennonite principles, since they are not liturgical but strongly evangelical in spirit. The parents of these young people have manifested their interest by contributing time, effort, and money to develop the retreat ground. Old time residents, that live in the neighborhood and use the lake as a vacation spot, are loud in their praise of what the Mennonites have accomplished in transforming an erstwhile dance hall into a place of definite Christian inspiration and prayer. The fact that other people than retreaters occupy some of the cabins and camp sites may precipitate administrative problems that will require judicious handling.

The Speakers and Leaders

Since the retreat ground is used as a Summer Bible Camp during July and August, it is naturally to be expected that varied speakers would be secured. Since the retreat is our first interest, we will withhold comment on that phase of the work. Retreat workers and leaders were: Rev. Daniel A. Toavs, Wolf Point, Montana, and his sister Rosella, now from Denver, Colorado who shared their Mennonite convictions with the young people; Rev. and Mrs. Harold Reeves, friends of the Toavs, who made definite impressions on the retreaters—Mr. Reeves in his personal problems class and Mrs. Reeves through her chalk talks encouraged many to nobled Christian living—Rev. Charles Tourney, representative of the Sudan Interior Mission, Africa, who presented the call of foreign missions as a life-service for Christ.

Rev. A.J. Neuenschwander brought three messages on the work of the Home Mission Board and also delivered two gospel messages. Prof. W.H. Hohmann was the musical leader. We feel certain that the young people will long remember his leadership in the singing of chorals and worshipful hymns as well as his emphasis on devotion to Christ if their message in song is to reach the hearts of the hearers. The musical program on Sunday afternoon of July 22 brought an impressive climax to the retreat. In order to accommodate the large number that came from the surrounding communities, a public address system was installed for Sunday. The main building on the ground, thirty-eight by sixty feet contains a fine auditorium and kitchen and dining room for a small number.

It is the hope and prayer of the committee and the leaders that the churches might profit greatly in the future because of the decisions and commitments that were made and the inspiration that accumulated in the hearts of the hearers for Christ and His work.

YOUTH JOTTINGS

—Betty van der Smissen, a high school graduate of Buhler, Kansas, and daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Alvin van der Smissen, was awarded honorable mention for her 750-word statement of "The Case Against Peacetime Military Conscription" in a nationwide essay contest sponsored by The Forerunners a national high school youth organization. Hundreds of young people competed in the contest, the winner of which was given a free trip to Washington with three days entertainment. Twelve prizes were awarded. Senator Arthur Capper was one of the three judges. In her winning statement Miss van der Smissen says, "If we want peace, we must prepare for peace . . . If the money, training, effort and sacrifice put forth for war would be put forth for peace, there would be no more war . . . By inaugurating a policy of peacetime conscription, the sacrifices of this war would be in vain, because the very thing which we are fighting against—the militaristic policies of the Axis—we would not only condone but establish as our own."

YOUNG PEOPLE RUN GARDEN

Beatrice, Nebraska: Young people of the First and Second Mennonite Churches and the Church of the Brethren, Holmesville, are again working a garden this year. They have planted lots of beans, beets, carrots, onions, and corn. Already they have picked twelve bushels of beans. These were divided between C.P.S. camps and the local Mennonite Hospital. Besides providing vegetables for C.P.S. and the local hospital, the project furnishes wholesome fellowship and recreation to the participating young people.

Idaho Young People Have Successful Retreat

Friday morning, July 20th, found about forty-five young people from the Young People's Christian Endeavor Society of the First Mennonite Church, Aberdeen Idaho, anxiously awaiting their trip of some seventy miles into the mountains for their annual summer retreat.

With food for three days, swimming suits, bedrolls, and a happy bunch of faces, the group left from the church at about 11:00 A.M., after being led in prayer and singing by our new minister Rev. H.N. Harder.

The trip was made in two large trucks. We arrived at Lava Hot Springs early in the afternoon, and with a car full of young people from Filer, Idaho, enjoyed a swim in one of the local hot water pools.

From there we went about twelve miles into the mountains, to a spot known as Weston's Ranch. The group arrived just in time to start K.P. duty for supper, and to get their respective sleeping places located either in one of the four cabins, or under some large pine tree.

The theme of the retreat centered about the words, "THE CHANGELESS CHALLENGE," Matt. 16-24-25. Friday evening began with a Fun Hour, which was followed by a half hour of hymn singing led by Arthur Isaak. Closing Moments led by Orlando Wiebe, and Lights Out, closed the evening among the beautiful hills and mountains of Idaho.

Saturday morning came early, especially for those on breakfast K.P. Rising Bell was 6:30 A.M., followed by the Morning Watch at 7:15.

Our breakfast devotions were led by the group from Filer, after which we all enjoyed a large breakfast for our large appetites, sharpened by the mountain air.

From ten until eleven was spent in our first Bible Hour. In the absence of the scheduled teacher, Rev. Leisy, Miss Alice Lehman took over the hour. The group studied the book of Ephesians, Chapter one through three.

Dinner at 12:00 noon, and then the entire afternoon for hiking and recreation. Soon after dinner the groups broke up into small parties, to visit the Beaver Dams, high peaks and other scenic beauty spots.

The group was fortunate in having Miss Ruth Ewert, Secretary-Treasurer of the Young People's Union, with us for the retreat. She led our Saturday evening vespers, after which Rev. Harder brought the opening of a series of three messages, "Come unto Me."

After this service, we again had our evening Bible Hour, followed by a Fun Hour and Closing Moments led by Wilma Harder.

Saturday evening saw the arrival of about ten people from the Downey C.P.S. camp, which is not far from where the camping grounds are located.

Sunday saw another group of young folks and some more campers and their wives from Downey arrive, bringing the total number of the group to about ninety persons.

The same routine was followed for Sunday morning as Saturday, with the exception of there being the Sunday School hour at 10:00 and the morning worship service at 11:00 led by Rev. Harder, the message on "Follow Me."

The afternoon was again set aside for hiking and exploration.

Four thirty was set aside for an Open Forum during which the group learned more about the function of the Y.P.U. of our conference.

Special music by the quartet from Downey, a message on the theme "GO YE," and a final Fagot service concluded the program of the retreat.

Without exception those who attended felt a spiritual renewal and refreshment. The inspirational setting combined with the inspirational messages were a blessing to all.

The group hopes to soon have enough money to buy a retreat ground of their own. An offering was taken for this purpose at the retreat.

Miss Alice Lehman served as Dean of Women, and Orlando Wiebe as Dean of Men.—Orlando Wiebe

AN APPEAL

AN APPEAL TO RETURNING VETERANS TO SEEK A CHRISTIAN COLLEGE EDUCATION

The knowledge of atomic energy will be suicide for men and nations without the Christian motive in the hearts and minds of its users. H. G. Wells wrote some years ago that civilization is a race between education and catastrophe. Many today see that the real choice is between Christian education and Chaos. The "knowledge is power and power is success" philosophy has brought us brilliant men with the lust for power. The "child-centered curriculum" has turned out college and university graduates on a wholesale basis. Too many of these have had no inner, spiritual controls for their egocentric skills and ambitions. The world needs men and women who have surrendered their lives to the Prince of Peace and who will dedicate their talents to the business of rebuilding what has been destroyed.

Some will feel called into agriculture, some into scientific research, and others into business. All will be serving the Lord if their primary motive in living is the extension of His Kingdom on earth.

To live and work most effectively, we suggest that you accept Uncle Sam's offer to give you additional education. But as you make your plans, remember that an accredited Christian college education is an ideal foundation for every worthy vocation. Many "short cuts" will come to your attention: technical training that will put you on the inside track to lucrative government positions or into the "big-pay" industries—plastics and atomic energy for this and that. If you are deeply concerned about the welfare of all mankind seek basic training for this business of living abundantly. This is the purpose of a Christian liberal arts college.

The world needs food for body, mind, and soul. It needs well-trained Christian doctors, chemists, teachers, farmers, and social workers; therapists, engineers, architects, technicians, and secretaries; hospital attendants, ministers, and counselors. One trains to destroy under pressure methods. We believe that a thorough education for constructive work should be sought in a Christian atmosphere which is conducive to wholesome habits of living. It is this kind of spirit which church-related colleges seek to develop and maintain.—Willis E. Rich

Canned-Food Shipment Arrives in Holland

A cablegram sent by Peter Dyck from Rotterdam on August 3 is a favorable report on the arrival of M.C.C.'s first shipment of glass-canned foods to Holland. This shipment of donated foods had left the States June 27: THIRTY-SIX CASES FOOD ARRIVED TODAY GOOD CONDITION, NOT ONE JAR BROKEN. SEND ALL RESERVE SUPPLIES AT ONCE. DISTRIBUTING PRESENT SHIPMENT MENNONITES ROTTERDAM, AMSTERDAM, ARNHEM. SOAP NEEDED URGENTLY. MANY GREETINGS AND THANKS FROM ROTTERDAM, REV. GORTER.

There is much reason for prayerful thanks that this shipment has arrived with such promptness and success. Additional European shipments are being planned as soon as arrangements can be made.

It is suggested that the sugar or syrup, which our people wish to contribute to the relief canning program from their personal allotment, be used in making jams, preserves, and butters. Fruit canning for relief may be done without sugar, as unsweetened fruits keep satisfactorily. All kinds of fruits and vegetables are now acceptable in the relief program, and all that can be spared and preserved for relief will be useful in Europe for the coming winter.

Northwest Europe Personnel Increased

Recent letters verify earlier reports that Ellen Harder, a Mennonite nurse who was serving in England, left there July 19 to join Henry Buller and Vernon Toews in the French relief program.

The announcement of George Neufeld's arrival in London, August 2, was followed by a cable announcing the safe arrival of Susie Peters and Evangeline Matthies on the same date.

Cattle for Relief

Young men with farm background and experience with dairy cattle are needed to accompany shipments of herds to relief areas in Europe. UNNRA has tagged more than 50,000 head for shipment within the next eighteen months. To care for the cattle en route 1,000 men are desired as attendants to water, feed, and care for the herds. Each attendant will have the responsibility to care for about twenty-five head.

The Brethren Service Committee has been given the responsibility to provide attendants during 1945, and already over one hundred young farmers have sailed with cattle to Greece and Yugoslavia. The B.S.C. has extended an invitation to Mennonites, as well as other groups, and any young Mennonite farmer desiring to serve as an attendant should correspond with the Director of Relief, M.C.C., Akron, Pennsylvania. Attendants must be sixteen years of age or over and must secure permission from a draft board if in draft age. The trip usually involves a period of sixty days.

Memorial Service for Relief Worker

The Mennonite Central Committee staff, friends, and guests gathered in the United Zion Church at Akron, Pennsylvania, August 5, to participate in a service held in the memory of Marie K. Fast, the Mennonite relief worker lost at sea on May 2. Sister Fast was appointed for relief service in the spring of 1944 but war conditions prevented her leaving the States until the latter part of July. A year ago, August 3, Sister Fast arrived in the Middle East and began her service under UNRRA as a nurse among the thousands of refugees who had arrived from Greece, Yugoslavia, and other Balkan areas. P. C. Hiebert, chairman of the M.C.C., and J. N. Byler, director of relief, presented brief messages at the memorial service.

C. P. S.

Firefighting Activity

A more complete report on the activities of C.P.S. smoke jumpers in connection with recent fires in the Pacific Northwest has been received. Hundreds of jumps were made on more than fifty fires. Several of the fires were large ones and the men had to spend long periods of time in the mountains. One crew of eighteen was out nine days before they were relieved. This activity has brought considerable favorable publicity to the smoke jumpers. Several of the men sustained serious injuries. Two men caught their chutes in trees and after pulling out hit ground without their chutes re-opening. One of these men had two chipped vertebrae and two sprained ankles and the other man a sprained back. Another jumper dropped onto a snag and gored his leg; another hooked a snag and toppled with it breaking his leg. To bring assistance to these injured men an Army doctor and stretcher man jumped to provide first aid and carry them out.

Congress and C. O.'s

In a recent letter to all C.P.S. men, Paul Comly French, Executive Secretary of the National Service Board for Religious Objectors, pointed out that recent trends in Congress indicate a growing restriction of liberties for C. O.'s:

"I have the feeling that the changing attitudes in the Congress as reflected in retaining the Starnes amendment prohibiting foreign service and in the House Committee approval of the Winstead bill on demobilization, is an indication of a tightening circle around conscientious objectors. It seems to me that we can face this trend by a greater understanding of our spiritual nature and the strength that comes to us from God. Without that, I think we can expect a sense of frustration and unhappiness."

An example, in many ways quite exceptional, of one

Congressman's attitude toward C.O.'s was revealed in a letter Representative Donald O'Toole, New York, sent to Secretary of War, Henry L. Stimpson. Criticizing as ludicrous the idea that C.O.'s be discharged on a point system, O'Toole wrote:

"Rather than discharge these conscientious objectors, many of whom are fakes, I would suggest that you send them en masse as occupational troops to Europe now, and to Japan when the time comes . . . they can no longer object to shedding another's blood. And I would further most emphatically suggest no discharge be given them until every last man who has seen service has been returned home."

Seventy-five Protestants, Jews, and Roman Catholics:

"Land is a very special kind of property. Ownership of land does not give an absolute right to use or abuse, nor is it devoid of social responsibilities. It is in fact a stewardship. It implies such land tenure and use as to enable the possessor to develop his personality, maintain a decent standard of living for his family and fulfill social obligations. At the same time, the land steward has a duty to enrich the soil he tills and to hand it down to future generations as a thank offering to God, the giver, and as a loving inheritance to his children's children."

CORRESPONDENCE

LORRAINE AVENUE MENNONITE CHURCH Wichita, Kansas

This year the church has supplied the smaller Sunday School children with "pictoscript." It contains colorful pictures of Bible stories and also other good stories in picture. This paper is to take the place of the colorful pages in the Sunday newspapers. The church has had supply ministers since the resignation of Rev. P. M. Frantz. Rev. J. H. Janzen from Waterloo, Ontario, brought the sermon on Conference Sunday.

In March our church received a letter from the Home Mission Board of the General Conference stating that an out-right gift would be coming from that source. This became a realization when recently we received a gift of $1,000.00 from the General Conference for our new house of worship. On July 29 Dr. C. E. Krehbiel, who is a member of the Home Mission Board, presented this gift to us officially. In a short talk he told us that the bringing of a Mennonite church to Wichita had first been mentioned fifty-six years ago and then again thirty-two years ago. Those present showed their appreciation for this gift with a thankoffering of $170.16. Dr. Krehbiel was instrumental in bringing the present church here, and he has also served as pastor in this church.—Marie M. Dyck, Corr.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH Berne, Indiana

On July 29, this church bade farewell to Rev. J. P. Suderman and family, as they left the next day on their return journey to the mission field at Orabi. After a year and a half of ministry in this church, these friends have proved themselves as true servants of God, and have won the esteem and love of the church for their faithful and humble service, as well as their Christ-like walk and ministry in the church. At noon a farewell carry-in dinner was given in their honor in the Lehman Park after which a brief farewell program was given in the Park Pavilion. In this service Rev. and Mrs. Suderman each spoke brief words of farewell, and a brief message in words of appreciation was given by one of the church members. Choruses were sung by a children's group, and there was special music by the Male Chorus, of which Rev. Suderman was also a member during his stay here.

The parsonage is at present undergoing some renovation on the inside, preparatory to the coming of Rev. Olin Krehbiel and family on November 1. During the interim Rev. Gerald Stucky, Assistant Pastor of the church at present, will have full pastoral charge.

On this same Sunday Miss Gladys Neuenschwander, member of the church, was ordained as a missionary to the children in the Ozark region, under the "Go-Ye" Mission. Rev. Solomon Moutett of that Mission preached the sermon, and Rev. Suderman performed the ordination ceremony assisted by Rev. Moutett and Rev. John Kauffman of Whitewater, Kansas.—Corr.

HALSTEAD MENNONITE CHURCH Halstead, Kansas

On Sunday evening, May 20, we enjoyed seeing the slides which Dr. Cornelius Krahn of Bethel College showed in our church. The pictures depicted early Mennonite life in America.

The women of the church have been doing a good deal of mending for relief. Much clothing has also been given to send to the many needy and suffering people in war-torn Europe.

At the morning service on May 27 a good audience listened with interest as Ernst Harder, our assistant pastor, told of his own experiences and of those of the Mennonites in Paraguay. This being his last Sunday with us, the noon meal was eaten in the church basement as a church family in observance of a farewell to him.

We were fortunate in being within easy driving distance of the General Conference. So many of our congregation were able to attend frequently. On June 3 we also considered ourselves fortunate in having Rev. Donovan Smucker as our guest minister.

This year again as in former years our church has united with the Methodist and Presbyterian churches in Halstead for union Sunday evening services during the months of July and August.

On July 29 the congregation enjoyed a fellowship meal in the church basement following the morning worship service. This was held in honor of our pastor, Rev. D. C. Wedel, and his family who have now served us nine years. A short program followed the meal during which a gift was presented to them as a token of appreciation.—ERM, Corr.

JOTTINGS

—Dr. A. M. Lohrentz, who is serving as eye, ear, nose, and throat specialist under the M.C.C. in Paraguay, examined 4,852 eyes in a six and one-half day visit to the Menno Colony. About 2,600 people live in this colony. Recently he sent to the United States for a pair of bifocal lenses. The workmanship on lenses in Paraguay is reported as fairly satisfactory, but it takes very long to get the lenses. The order for them is sent in to Ascunson with such products as eggs, etc. The lenses then come back packed into the empty egg cases along with other purchases that the Mennonite buyer in the capital has made for the colonists. When school recessed for a short period recently, Dr. Lohrentz had to perform many tonsilectomies.

—An unusual number of Canadian students have inquired about attending Bethel College, reports Dean P. S. Goertz. Twenty have sent inquiries, and six married ministers from there are planning to attend. Bethel enrollment prospects are about 25 per cent higher now than at the same date last year. School will open September 4th.

—Emmanuel Church, Galva, Kansas: Our regular foreign mission offering for August 12 amounted to $144.75. In the evening Rev. and Mrs. Lester Wuthrich told us of their internment experiences in the Philippines.—Corr.

—Zion Church, Elbing, Kansas: Rev. Lester Wuthrich was with us for morning services, August 12.

—Great swarms of grasshoppers have been vexing the Mennonite farmers in Paraguay. Since the end of February. Not one Mennonite village in the Chaco has escaped the partial or total destruction of precious crops. The repeated swarms that have come into this territory have laid their eggs, thus continuing the plague.

—Dr. Rodolphe Petter wrote from Lame Deer, Montana, July 26: "We are having very warm weather these days together with hordes of grasshoppers. How delightful it would be, could one spend a week or more in the Swiss Alps, close to glaciers and snow!"

—Married: Paul Schmidt, Director of the Colorado Springs C.P.S. Camp and Cathryn Erffmeyer in Kansas City, Missouri, July 19.

—Selma Bartel from Goessel, Kansas, is the new nurse at Colorado Springs C.P.S. Camp.

—Rev. J. M. Regier is serving as pastor of the above camp for the months of July and August.

—Total enrollment at the Oklahoma Young People's Retreat this year was 105.

—Dr. Cornelius Krahn is working out a Mennonite history test, which when completed is to be used by those C.P.S. men who desire college credit for a study of Mennonite history made in camp. On his way to the Cultural Problems Conference at Bluffton, Ohio, Dr. Krahn paid visits to the Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, and Ypsilanti, Michigan, units in the interest of working out the proposed test.

—We have in our home a 200-year-old hall clock that is still keeping perfect time. The old clock was entirely hand-made and, according to a local jeweler, is still good for another 200 years or so. Sometime ago a sister from the local hospital called to see this clock. She had remarked to the jeweler that the modern hall clock in their hospital was so very beautiful, and he had said that in his estimation the only beautiful clock in this community was the one above referred to, which had faithfully served its purpose for so many years. Old age is beautiful when the purpose in life is being faithfully fulfilled.—W. C. Andreas, Beatrice, Nebraska

—Perkasie, Pennsylvania: Deacon Clayton F. Myers has suffered a cerebral hemorrhage. He has been a pillar in the Perkasie Church, one of the smallest congregations in the East. The pastors of this church have been absent several Sundays this summer, ministering at other places, but our schedule has been carried out. We are somewhat disturbed to hear of some of our strongest ministers going west, but we also recall that they were from the Middle West.—Fannie E. Landis, Corr.

—Quakertown, Pa., Rev. A. H. Schultz recently spoke to the C.P.S. unit at the Allentown State Hospital. On August 23 he will be the speaker at the Quakertown Inter-Youth Fellowship Meeting.

—Seventy-four relief Christmas boxes were packed and sent by the Salem-Zion Church, Freeman, South Dakota. These are sent to needy Europe.

—Bluffton, Ohio: The missionary society of the First Mennonite Church has sent forty Christmas boxes to Akron to be sent to Christian families in Europe. Rev. J. N. Smucker and family retruned to Bluffton August 17 after a month's vacation in the East.—Corr.

—First Church, Upland, California: Mrs. Rollin Moser, who is a graduate of Bluffton College with a Bachelor of School Music Degree, has been secured as director of music. The new carpet in the foyer and on the steps to the basement promotes quietness. The S. O. Circle sent 13 Christmas boxes to the M.C.C., the Carita Girls filled two boxes. The women's missionary society is packing a number of boxes to be sent to the relief clothing center in Newton, Kansas. They are also canning for C.P.S. Ella Schmidt is at Akron awaiting order to leave for her field of relief work under the M.C.C.

—The Bethel Mennonite Church, Dolton, South Dakota, plans to commemorate the twenty-fifth anniversary of its new church on August 26, 1945. The program includes a thank and praise service in the morning, a song festival in the afternoon and mission festival in the evening. All are cordially invited.—J. A. Tieszen —Rev. and Mrs. JacobENZ of Nappanee, Indiana, motor-ed to Ypsilanti Michigan, on August 12, to speak to the C.P.S. unit at the state hospital there.

—Dr. D. H. Richert of Bethel College is touring C.P.S. camps and units in Colorado, South Dakota, Nebraska, and Iowa. On August 16 he left New Raymer, Colorado, for Hill City, South Dakota, where he was to stay three days. His last engagement is September 6. Dr. Richert shows slides on astronomy and gives his lecture on "The Heavens Are Telling." He also leads in devo-tions, conducts informal studies of the heavens in the evenings, and goes out on project with the men. At Colorado Springs the men requested his technical lec-ture on astronomy. Mrs. Richert reports that he dis-likes the travel part but is enjoying the men in camp just very much.

—Seven students had enrolled by August 18 in the Men-nonite Biblical Seminary and Bible School, Chicago. Four had enrolled in the seminary and three in the Bible School.

MENNONITE MINISTER IN HOLLAND WRITES TO FRIEND IN AMERICA

Five years ago I received a letter from a Mennonite ministerial student in Holland who inquired what the possibilities were for him to come to this country. Reason: He wanted to marry a Jewish girl and Hitler was about to invade Holland. I replied immediately and re-ceived his answer now, five years later. Meanwhile the student has become a pastor and relates about his ex-periences as such. He is "hungry for contact with peo-ple abroad," especially since they are hardly able to con-tact each other in Holland. He writes that traveling is done by foot. Great tiredness must have overcome the people. The help which is coming is greatly appreciated. But the craving for spiritual contact is immense. Per-haps there are some readers who would like to write to this young minister in English or German. He would greatly appreciate hearing from you. This is his address: Ds. P. J. Lugt, Wieringen, The Netherlands.—Contributed by Cornelius Krahn

MENNONITE LIFE

A New Periodical

Ever since the Bethel College Monthly was disconti-nued there has been a need for a similar periodical. Some time ago a plan for a new periodical was worked out and presented to the Bethel College Board of Directors. Its approval, a budget allowance and the willingness of a large staff of contributors made it possible for this plan to materialize on a much broader basis.

In general Mennonite Life will cover the religious, cul-tural, social, economic, and other phases of the Menno-nites everywhere. Problems and findings concerning the Mennonite churches and communities will be presented by an expert staff in semi-popular, well-illustrated art-icles. Special emphasis will be given to literary and artistic contributions by or on Mennonites. The Scrip-tural basis of Mennonite principles and attitudes and their development in various countries and under dif-ferent conditions will be presented. Reports and sum-maries of the present status of the Mennonite churches all over the world will inform the reader about the inter-national situation of the Mennonites. —Mennonite Life will aim to present Mennonite life as it was, is, and should be.

The Executive Committee that sponsors this magazine consists of Ed. G. Kaufman, P. S. Goert, H. A. Fast, and J. F. Moyer. This committee has appointed the Editorial Board with Cornelius Krahn as Editor-in-Chief and the following Associate Editors: C. H. Smith, A. Warkentin, J. W. Fretz, and Melvin Gingerich. B. Bar-gen was appointed Production and Circulation Manager and J. F. Moyer, Treasurer.

Various Mennonite writers are being selected and asked to serve as contributing editors. The following have been approached and have consented to make regular con-tributions: H. S. Bender, Walter Hohmann, C. E. Kreh-biel, P. E. Schellenberg, J. D. Unruh, Menno Schrag, Reynold Weinbrenner, A. Dyck (Canada), J. H. Janzen, M. C. Lehman, Don Smucker, Robert Kreider, and oth-ers.

The first issue of Mennonite Life which is to appear before Christmas will consist of about 50 pages. This magazine is being started as a semi-annual publication with the subscription rate of one dollar per year. Ad-dress your subscription to B. Barga, Bethel College, North Newton, Kansas.

THE ATOMIC AGE

By L. C. Kreider

It is with great hesitation that I write on this topic for there has been very little authentic information available during the past five years outside of secret government circles about the transformation of matter to energy. However, a brief review of facts that seem fairly well established is in order that our people may gain orientation after coming through the whirlwind of popular newsprint and radio accounts.

History of the Atomic Age

The atomic age really began forty-nine years ago when the French scientist, Becquerel, discovered the phenomenon of radioactivity which simply means the spontaneous release of energy from within the atoms of certain heavy elements. In the next decade his students, Pierre and Marie Curie (French and Polish) succeeded in isolating radium which became the most famous of the radioactive elements. In 1905 Einstein (German), through mathematical considerations, made the guess which has since been borne out by experiment that the tremendous energy released in radioactivity came about by the annihilation of a portion of the matter of the atom and its reappearance as energy. In 1919 Lord Rutherford (English) produced the first controlled atom transformation when he changed a few atoms of nitrogen into oxygen. In 1932 Chadwick (English) discovered the neutron and Urey (U.S.) discovered heavy hydrogen, which yielded the deuteron, both of which provided the tools for Fermi (Italian), the Joliet-Curies (French), Lawrence (U.S.) and many others to produce artificial radioactivity in most of the common elements. In 1938-39 Hahn (German), Meitner (German), and Bohr (Danish) discovered and correctly interpreted an experiment where the heaviest known atom, uranium, was bombarded with slow moving neutrons and thereby split nearly in half with the change of a sizeable portion of its matter into energy. Realizing the possibility in this of a powerful military weapon the leading governments started to develop this field of knowledge with great secrecy and lavish outlays of money. The British and U.S. Governments, teaming together, won the race to produce the atomic bomb. The evidence is good that the German, Russian and Japanese governments were not too far behind. Its discovery seemed inevitable.

Atomic Energy For War

The strict censorship of the past five years has been relaxed only enough to release such knowledge which other competing nations must surely know from their own efforts by this time. The raw materials for the atomic bomb seems to be the relatively rare and expensive uranium. The manufacture of at least one type of bomb involved large outlays of electrical energy. Its manufacture is attended by great danger to those who produce and process the materials for it. Its explosive force is estimated to be nearly 20,000 times as destructive as TNT. The secrets of its manufacture will probably be known to other governments within the next five to ten years through the efforts of their own scientists or through "leaks" of vital information. As expensive as the bomb is to produce, its cost will still not be prohibitive to most of the governments of the world.

Atomic Energy For Peace

It is one thing to use dynamite to blast stumps and quite another to use it as a fuel for automobiles. If atomic energy is to become an industrial power source, entirely new types of engines must be invented to use it. Even though a pound of some new atomic fuel, used in a new type engine, may yield 10,000 times the amount of energy as would the burning of a pound of coal, it will still not be profitable to use it if it costs 100,000 times as much to produce it as it does to mine the pound of coal. It is possible that atomic power may become economically profitable to use but that is by no means assured as yet. If it does become profitable, the best guesses seem to be that it will be transformed into electrical energy in desolate parts of the country and then wired to the consumer as low cost electricity.

What of Future Possible Wars?

If another war should come within a generation it is very possible that most of the nations will be able to produce and use atomic bombs. Defenses against such attacks may be forthcoming but are probably not now known. It is possible that atomic bombs will not be used in future wars. One must remember that air raids with poison gases that would have caused a horrible, tortuous death to the peoples of whole cities were possible in the war just ended and that all combatant nations were abundantly prepared to use them but that no nation did. If atomic bombs are used, they will have a great leveling effect on the military might of nations; in fact, many say the time will soon pass when any two or three of the most powerful nations could possibly rule the rest of the world according to their will. Some see hopes that this will stop all war, but many more see no hope in any change of weapons, however great, but only in a change in the hearts of men. It is likely that a war in which atomic bombs are used could see the annihilation of all the cities of the earth, but wholesale destruction of rural populations is not probable from this weapon.

The Christian and the Atomic Bomb

Christianity is far older than modern science yet many feel that in this day man has become, through science, the possessor of forces which are beyond the power of Christianity to direct to worthy channels. If that idea were true, it would be a terrible indictment of the Christian Church as the servant of Christ. The knowledge of natural things, which is science, is in itself neither good nor evil. It becomes good or evil only as the hearts of those that use its powers are good or evil. To me, the atomic age is an awesome challenge and responsibility of ever increasing intensity for individuals, and through them for the larger society, to take most seriously the power that lies in them through Christ Jesus to walk humbly in the way He made so plain. Through Him all knowledge can be put to good use and without Him all knowledge is dangerous. Truly, in our time, the hope of the world is still Christ and His way.

The days are rapidly approaching when annual efforts toward a better Sunday School will be put forth again. One sometimes wonders why so much of the Sunday School effort should be in the nature of an anticlimax. We begin with high hopes and appeals in October and end up with a summer slump. That gives occasion for seriously raising the question whether, after all, the Sunday School has not lived its day.

Robert Raikes started his work in order to meet a need. There were neglected and under-privileged children who could neither read nor write. He taught them on Sunday, hence the name. It was not a matter of religious training at first, but it was for the good of the children. There were difficulties and mistakes, but the work grew. The Bible was substituted for elementary school books. The International Lesson idea was promoted. It captivated the minds of many by the thought that "millions of people all around the world were studying the same lesson each Sunday."

Then came the graded lessons. It was realized that simply studying the same lesson was not enough. Children and adults are not the same in their needs or their understandings. This was especially true because the lessons were selected with a tendency toward divisive discussion more than toward constructive education. Too often the children received partial and misleading impressions. They lost interest, even with the baits which were used in order to induce them to attend. Too many of them did not see why there should be Sunday schools.

Another problem has been the fact that too many teachers were not prepared for their task and either did not know about opportunities for better preparation, or did not care to use them.

The foregoing is not the whole picture, of course. There are churches which offer real training for the good of their members from the youngest to the oldest. They have well prepared teachers and they use the Bible as though it really were a book of life which can be used with understanding and in keeping with the Spirit of the Christ whose Name we bear. They seek earnestly to prepare people for the Way of Life for all mankind. They are fully as deeply interested in the children of their community as they are, or think they are, in the children across the seas. They seek to give to each according to his needs. That very interest opens the doors of opportunity to better Sunday Schools—better in the sense that they offer real education toward Christian living.

THE NEW MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY AND BIBLE SCHOOL is opening at a time when there is an increasing emphasis upon a thorough preparation for the ministry and other areas of Christian work. Twelve years ago we knew of only about two General Conference men who were attending seminary. Today we could perhaps name more than a dozen who plan to attend this coming year. During the last years it has been taken more and more for granted that a seminary training for ministers is of great importance. Young men with an eye upon the ministry are planning their school years accordingly. Young women from our conference are showing an increasing interest in the field of religious education. Churches want well trained workers. Outside of the religious realm, men are emphasizing the increasing complexity of civilization with the resultant need for ever more education. Leaders in the field of religion are insisting that the Christian Church must be just as much up on its toes. The best training is none too good for those who would engage in the spiritual ministry, they point out. Against this background the Mennonite Biblical Seminary and Bible School doors will open on September 4. This new conference institution presents a very real opportunity. Just before writing these lines, one of the students, already enrolled in the new school, declared her enthusiasm for it and her faith that expenses will not be hard to meet. A nearby church plans to take an offering for this work next Sunday. The General Conference is showing increasing earnestness in the training of its leadership.

THE RESULTS OF THE QUESTIONNAIRE, which appeared in the July 24th issue, have now been tabulated. They show: 1. A strong demand for C.P.S. news items and articles and for articles on "non-resistance" and "peace." 2. A distaste for preachy articles full of pious platitudes. Of the recent articles most appreciated, the one on "Your Hands Are Full of Blood" was mentioned most often. The article dealt with the moral aspects of the then current liquid fire bombing of Japanese cities by the United States. 3. Appreciation for the column "Meditations on the Mennonites." 4. Appreciation for the "Our Ministry of Education" series. 5. That the "In Memoriam" section and the "Daily Devotional Messages" are the least read features of the paper. The great majority replying did not want the obituaries any longer than they now are, and some wanted them shorter. 6. That correspondence should be up-to-date, not too preachy and pious, not full of items that have little more than local interest, and not lengthy. 7. That the majority of articles should not be longer than one page. 8. A substantial demand for book reviews. 9. A strong demand for articles on "Problems in Rearing Children." 10. A very strong demand for articles on "Mental Health." 11. An even stronger demand for articles on "Community and Church Problems." 12. The majority of readers are more conscious of the paper's motto now than formerly. 13. The great majority of readers do not notice mistakes of spelling and punctuation in most issues of The Mennonite. 14. Practically all answering enjoyed the "Quote" column. Heartiest thanks again to all readers who filled out and sent in the questionnaire.

LABOR SUNDAY is suggestive of the fact that the laborer is worthy of his pay and that in general he is a person of worth, one who is to be respected and not exploited. In Jesus' day there must have been those who resisted the proper evaluation of the laborer and his work. Along with the ability to hire seems to go the temptation to exploit the man who has to depend upon the work offered by others for his livelihood. The power that resides in the ability to hire has not always been used for the welfare of the worker, and as a result we today have a counter power, the power of organized men who can deny an employer the labor that he may sorely need. Labor, through organization, has turned the tables. It is not strange that there should be some misuse of power at times on the part of labor. Capital's misuse has called it forth. "The laborer is worthy of his hire." He is worthy (has worth) in general. This is becoming more and more evident in labor's program. Organized labor has vitality today because it is tackling the problems which are vital for millions of men and women who earn their bread in the sweat of their brow. It is seeking to say something about brotherhood, however clumsy its words may be. To many the program of organized labor has something religious about it. The things it represents are some of the highest values of life to millions of men and women. This is evident from the leftist movement throughout the world. Once men and women flocked into the Christian church. It was radical. It emphasized brotherhood. It was for the common man. Today millions of men are caught in a very complex industrial world. Has the Church learned to know that world and through it the problems that weigh upon many a laborer's heart?

C. P. S.—“ IN HIS NAME ”

By J. S. Schultz

On my five-weeks visitation tour through C. P. S. camps and other units I am learning a great deal more about what these young men are doing than I had ever had opportunity of learning in any other way. Not nearly all C.P.S. men in forest service, for instance, are fighting fires;—or irrigation projects under soil conservation are digging and closing ditches;— in mental hospitals are attending to patients, etc.

Men in mental institutions Provo, American Fork, Utah, are looking after the dairy herd, picking, fruit and canning it, baking bread and other products, repairing shoes, laundering clothes, caring for lawns, and many similar types of general institutional work in addition to assisting doctors and nurses and being attendants. Men in park service at Glacier National Park, I found building roads and trails and lookout towers on the very peak of some of the highest mountains, cutting wood, destroying plants that harbor tree pests, fighting fires on the ground, etc. In soil conservation units, concerned with irrigation such as Terry and Downey, only a relatively small number of men are actually on the field directing the water onto the flax and corn field, but I am told by the management, 75 per cent of the men are engaged in skilled and semiskilled labor including welding, sharpening plowshares, repairing intricate mechanisms on caterpillar and other power machines. On the Hill City project the Deerfield Dam is under construction. This involves a great variety of labor, much of it highly skilled. Smoke jumpers, too, are not all in the air, on the fire, or even standing ready at camp to take the next plane to respond to the next fire call. While these men are more keyed up to excitement than these in base camps, they are occupied with building landing fields and runways, preparing ground for new quarters and other general forest service at intervals as I saw them in Missoula and McCall. In agricultural units, (Lincoln) they plant and care for nurseries, survey and grade for contour farming, fill gullies, etc.

This is a fair sampling of basic activities carried on in these several units visited. Be it remembered that about 15 per cent of men in each unit are detailed to so-called overhead which includes office, kitchen, and dining room, building and grounds maintenance.

Should we list all the things CPS men do on their off-duty time, more space would be required than is justified. Let a brief survey suffice. Regular church services, Sunday school, daily devotions, and other religious programs are provided for in the camp unless it is too small, in which case the men are urged to ally themselves with churches in town. Ball games, sports of many sorts, and social gatherings are common. Wood, leather crafts, weaving, and even plastics engage many men in their spare time. One man was building a large motor boat, another a well-constructed complete bedroom suite, as examples, and many of the smaller articles compare very favorably or surpass commercial articles. Libraries with well selected books and a surprisingly good number of well-chosen periodicals are provided and used by many, though not always as generously as leaders wish. Usually some form of publication comes occasionally or periodically from CPS units. Formal study should not be omitted from the list of activities men engage in on their off-time.

While the above is illuminating to readers, the reason for the analysis goes even deeper. The question that has grown on my mind in these weeks is, “How does all this contribute to the young men’s peace testimony or better, to their total witness for Christ?” Just what they make it as individuals and as groups; very much as our witness at home is effective or ineffective according to our words and lives in relation to others about us. An important difference may be that they are being observed much more closely by the public. Repeatedly I have heard it said by camp leaders, “These men are much like they were at home; the fact of their coming to a CPS camp does not change them very much as individuals.” That makes food for very sober thought for us as parents and church leaders back home under whose influence these young men grew up. That fact we at home need to reckon with now and especially when they return home for this and the next generation. Now back to the witness of the boys in camp.

It is often said that we as Christians cannot be neutral. When there is social contact there is bound to be some form of influence. These men—and in many cases their wives, whom the public puts into the same class—are at work under someone’s supervision, whether on farms, in mental institutions or under government foremen. What they accomplish and the spirit in which they work under their supervisors seems frequently to be used as the first measure of their worth. What impression they leave on their patients or fellow employees or on those for whom they do odd jobs on off-time also is often spoken of in favor of C.O.’s.

Their contact with church folk of the community in which they live, their casual association with people on the street or on the highway while on furlough offer opportunities for a peace testimony, which the men in camps mention. The way they keep alive their own spiritual life by devotions and participation in the best of camp life, means much towards the broader Christian influence. “Blessed are the peacemakers” in every sphere of influence. This should become more and more true of not only the men in C.P.S. camps but of all who labor "in His name."

And now that peace is here, how will we in our Mennonite churches in the coming months—church folk at home, C.P.S. men, and men returning from regular service—purify and strengthen our peace testimony and our total Christian witness in a world just relaxing from the most terrible carnage in history?

Diseases Incident to War-Suffering

By M. C. Lehman

The diseases which usually follow in the wake of war are vastly increased because malnutrition, the breakdown of normal health facilities, and sudden, mass population movements are all effective agents in the production of an increased volume of sickness. Infectious diseases spread rapidly because of unsanitary and congested living conditions. In Warsaw in 1940 I visited many half-underground apartments of only one room occupied by an average-sized family of seven. These rooms were usually of concrete and entirely without heating facilities except a single gas-plate stove on which a little rice and spinach were cooked with gas turned on by the municipality for an hour twice daily. Until the water system of the city was repaired after the bombardment of the city, each such family was allowed one large basin of water daily for all purposes. Laundering and bathing were suspended under such conditions.

Typhus

Because of this unsanitary and cold living, lice were abundant and spread to every one because people slept tight against each other to keep warm. The inevitable typhus was virulently epidemic. This effected mostly the Jews who had assembled from all parts of the town in a newly-arranged ghetto in the center of the city. The mortality rate for this disease alone was sixty-four per cent. Typhus occurred also in Russia, Croatia, Rumania, Bulgaria, France, and Spain.

Tuberculosis

Tuberculosis also has increased immensely since the start of the war. "In Warsaw there were 300 per cent more cases in the first half of 1941 than in the same period in 1940." (Relief for Europe). People who have weak lungs or are otherwise predisposed to tuberculosis easily succumb to it under living conditions as described above. The segregation of such patients is frequently impossible because hospitals and sanitariums are non-existent or overcrowded. Children are the main victims of this disease. In some parts of Europe children are not admitted to school without medical certificates showing that they are not suffering from tuberculosis.

Retarded Growth

velop bad teeth or rickets. To see the pinched faces of smaller and adolescent children lacking proper and sufficient food begging at railway stations from passengers is heartrending. The results of under-nourishment among children are graphically portrayed in the following:

"Malnutrition and under-nourishment have resulted in the general undermining of physical resistance. Children show serious loss of weight. According to the reports from Belgium published by Dr. Bugwood at the beginning of 1942, town children, and even country children too, were steadily losing weight. Later enquiries in Belgium led to the conclusion that more than 80 per cent of the boys and girls had lost between eleven and thirteen pounds in weight, whereas before the war adolescent between twelve and eighteen years old normally gained from nine to twelve pounds a year . . .

"Examination in October, 1941, of more than two hundred French children, mostly from the occupied zone, who were given hospitality in Switzerland, showed that even at that time these children were backward in height and weight. Their weight fell short of the normal by an average of 4.6 kilograms (10 pounds) and their height by 8.4 centimeters (3.3 inches); in other words, they were over a year behind children of normal development. The reports of the American Friends' Service Committee in France, relating to a large number of children cared for by the Committee, also showed general backwardness in growth and weight . . . It was noted that children who usually had their meals at one of the Committee's canteens lost between one and three pounds in weight during the fortnight of the Easter holidays, when they returned to home conditions." (The Health of Children in Occupied Europe).

Drugs Lacking

People who regularly require certain drugs to keep up normal health, such as diabetics, suffer severely and soon die when supplies like insulin are exhausted and can no longer be obtained locally. Codliver oil, quinine, glycerine, lanolin, and caffeine are other drugs without which some people suffer. Dr. Henri Bouquet of Paris told journalists later connected with the American Embassy in Berlin that the death rate in France has increased by 18 per cent since the beginning of the war and that much of this could be prevented if necessary drugs were available.

Malaria

Malaria, a disease spread by the Anopheles mosquito, becomes epidemic in war-devastated areas. This is because the mosquitoes breed in neglected water receptacles and in stagnant water which is found in pools resulting from breached canals and the choking of drains from ponds and small lakes. Although not resulting in immediate death, an attack of malaria will so seriously deplete the strength of farmers that they cannot work their land.

Diphtheria

Diphtheria cannot be guarded against under war conditions. Serum for inoculation is often not available for civilians and medically skilled personnel is not adequate to cope with epidemics. In the Low Countries, the increase in mortality from this scourge is 180 per cent.

Venereal Disease

It can be taken for granted that there is an increased amount of venereal disease; there is after every war.

"It is practically certain that an increase in venereal diseases will occur, not only in areas occupied by troops, particularly if they are victorious, but also with the return of demobilized soldiers to their home areas. This is particularly serious in rural areas where no systematic treatments may be available owing to the general chaos and breakdown of the local medical machinery. In several parts of Europe, such as the Uzorod Pass between Poland and Czechoslovakia, Eastern Bulgaria, etc., syphilis has remained permanently in the rural areas, not only from the last war but from the passage and bivouacking of troops as far back as the campaign of the Chimea." (Medical Relief in Europe).

Space will not permit a detailed description of other infectious and contagious diseases which frequently accompany and follow war, such as cholera, plague, dysentery, smallpox, cerebro-spinal fever, influenza, and typhoid fever. Even rabies sometimes become prevalent because foxes and wolves, which can infect humans by biting, are not destroyed.

Relief Implications

Preventive and curative measures need to be taken to help individuals and communities suffering from war-induced diseases. Methods of removing causes and medicinal measures for sure are available in booklets and manuals on relief procedures. Huge quantities of medical supplies of all kinds are necessary. Soap for distribution with clothing and food is needed in large quantities. Medical supplies totaling about 50,000 tons are needed (Relief for Europe). Medically trained personnel are necessary to fit into relief units for a program of meeting such needs. Via M.C.C. Headquarters, Akron, Pa.

Letter of Appreciation to Dr. Rodolphe Petter

(The following letter, sent by Missionary Alfred Habegger to Missionary Rodolphe Petter upon the occasion of the latter's birthday, helps one to sense something of the great work that Dr. Petter has done in the field of the Cheyenne language.)

Busby, Montana, February 14, 1945

My dear Brother Petter:

We want to send to you our best wishes for a very happy birthday, and want to wish you many more happy returns of the day.

As we labor with the Wengers day after day, in the study of the Cheyenne language, we are better able than most of your friends to appreciate the value and the enormity of the work you have done. We count it a privilege to use the copious linguistic material and translations you have made available to your fellow workers, and native helpers. The more we master the use of the Cheyenne language the better we become acquainted with the full significance of your arduous labors. You have successfully scaled the heights of the various "Mountain Peaks" of linguistic difficulties and have viewed the rare vistas of unique thought-forms as they are found in the Cheyenne language, and made them easily accessible to him who wants to follow in your footsteps and also master them.

Your presence has been like that of a guide well-versed in all the linguistic panorama before us, giving us positive information of all the unusual thought-forms lying before us.

Your work has been carefully done, like that of men of science. Every page shows great care and determination to do the task right. You have put in a great variety of forms and shades of meanings, as an artist who delights in bringing out a colorful picture.

But more than that, the messages contained on those pages are living messages, breathing the spirit of the living God, so that they are alive with meaning and beauty as a beautiful live flower is full of fragrance. I like to think of you as of Luther Burbank, who to his old age found rare joy in finding new forms of beauty in nature, in developing new and useful plants by applying the knowledge of nature he had. So you have been bring forth new and useful things in the Cheyenne language for those who appreciate them.

Lives like yours carry a manifold blessing with them. In the first place you have reached many an Indian with the precious Word of God. They who have received it have deeply cherished your friendship and gratefully used the Word of God. Their lives have been transformed by its power. Furthermore you have placed the finished translations into the hands of your fellow-missionaries, who in turn have reached many more precious souls. All these are grateful to you and to God for the Word of God that speaks

Cheyenne plainly and understandably. As long as there will be Cheyenne-speaking Indians and people interested in the Cheyenne language these translations will bring life-giving and soul-saving messages to all who are willing to receive them. Thus your work will continue to bless and inspire.

We are indeed grateful that the Lord of heaven and earth has permitted you to be with us in health and mental vigor to this day. And so rejoice with you on this your eightieth birthday, as only they can rejoice, who love and admire because they are in a position to know well the one they thus love and admire.

May the Lord grant you much joy and peace in the remaining years of your life. May it please Him to spare your health and life so that you can still be a living witness of the grace of God and inspire many

ANNOUNCEMENT OF ORDINATION

The Lord willing, our new missionary to Arizona, Sister Anna Berg, is to be ordained September 9, a. m., in her home church at Frazer, Montana, where Rev. J. L. Hoffman is the leader. He will make the introduction and Rev. A. P. Waltner, member of our Board, will serve with the ordination sermon and the ordination, and Missionary J. P. Suderman will also be present to bring a mission message. Whether other services will be held there on that day, is left for the local church to decide.

All mission friends are invited to participate with intercession that the Lord may richly bless the ordination service, and his servants.

P. H. Richert

more to serve the Lord whom you have loved and served so well all these years.

STATEMENT OF DOCTRINE

The following statement of doctrine, approved by the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America in session at Souderton, Pennsylvania, August 17-22, 1941, as recorded in the minutes of said session on pages 37 and 161, is the official doctrinal statement of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary and Bible School.

“Accepting the full Bible and the Apostolic Creed:

1. We believe in one God, eternally existing and manifest as Father, Son, and Holy Spirit.
2. We believe in the Deity of Jesus Christ, ‘the only begotten of the Father full of grace and truth,’ born of the Virgin Mary, in His perfect humanity, His atoning death, His bodily resurrection from the dead, and His personal triumphant return.
3. We believe in the immortality of the Soul, the resurrection of the dead, and a future state determined by divine judgment.
4. We believe in the divine inspiration and the infallibility of the Bible as the Word of God and the only trustworthy guide of faith and life.
5. We believe a Christian is one saved by grace whose life is transformed into the likeness of Christ by His atoning death and the power of His resurrection.
6. We believe that Christ lived and taught the way of life as recorded in the Scriptures which is God’s plan for individuals and the race, and that it becomes disciples of Christ to live in this way, thus manifesting in their personal and social life and relationships the love and holiness of God. And we believe that this way of life also implies non-resistance to evil by carnal means, the fullest exercises of love, and the resolute abandonment of the use of violence, including warfare. We believe further that the Christian life will of necessity express itself in non-conformity to the world in life and conduct.
7. We believe in prayer as fellowship with God, a desire to be in His will, and in its divine power.

We believe that the Christian Church consists of believers, who have repented from their sins, have accepted Christ by faith and are born again, and sincerely endeavor by the grace of God to live the Christian life. 9. We believe in the brotherhood of the redeemed under the fatherhood of God in Christ.”

DOCTRINAL STATEMENT OF THE BETHANY SEMINARY

The Board of Directors have determined the following as doctrinal tenets of the school:

1. The personality and eternal sovereignty of God, the Creator and Upholder of all things.
2. The deity as well as humanity of Jesus Christ our Lord.
3. The personality of the Holy Spirit.
4. The divine inspiration and absolute trustworthiness of the Bible as the Word of God.
5. That all men have sinned and must be regenerated in order to enter the kingdom of God.
6. The doctrine of justification by faith through the love of God, the atonement of Christ, the forgiveness of sins, the enduement of the Holy Spirit, upon the co-operation of man through obedience.
7. Sanctification, in active obedience and Christian service, through the power of the Holy Spirit.
8. The personal and visible return of our Lord.
9. The resurrection, final judgment and eternal destiny of all men.

Western District Young People's Retreat

By Helen A. Mueller

Truly inspiring messages and opportunities for commitment, consecration, and dedication were offered to 182 young people who, together with a faculty and staff of twenty-six gathered at Camp Wood for the twentieth annual Western District Young People's Retreat, August 11-16.

The retreat was opened on Sunday morning with a communion service. This set the tone for the entire week and let each person feel that these days were to be days of serious thinking and conscientious study.

Daily Program

Each day began at 6:30 with a morning devotional service on the lake shore. The classes met from 8:30 to 11:30 each forenoon. Dr. Langenwalter conducted a study in the Psalms, using a different Psalm each day and explaining it. Miss Helen Nickel, missionary on furlough from India, gave inspiring missionary messages, speaking on the missionary call, stressing the need for more missionaries, and relating moving experiences she has had in bringing the gospel to the people of India. Rev. Arnold Funk led the group in a study of the Gospel of John. The music hour was under Professor Hohmann's direction. He was also in charge of the evening camp fire meeting. The sunset service was directed by Dr. Langenwalter. At this time he spoke on the Ten Commandments, translating them into terms which can help all young people to observe these rules in their every-day lives.

Rev. Herbert Miller, director; William Juhnke, Mrs. Henry Fransen, camp nurse; Mr. Jake Friesen, recreational director; Mrs. Willis Rich, girls' counselor; and the cabin leaders, did much to make the retreat a worthwhile Christian experience for the young people present.

Plans for Own Retreat Grounds

The regret of the retreat committee is that it was impossible to accommodate all those who wished to attend. With plans underway for a retreat ground of our own, we hope that within a year or two all young people will have the opportunity to spend a week of inspiration with those who are like-minded. Genuine interest for this project was shown by the retreaters when they gave the Sunday School offering Sunday morning for the retreat fund which has been started by the C. E. Convention. The offering amounted to $69.14

The Oregon Young People's Retreat

Ninety-six young people enjoyed themselves at another very successful retreat at Twin Rocks, Oregon.

The theme of the retreat was "Christ Our Hope," Col. 1:27, and Titus 2:13, on which all the instructors based the subjects for their classes.

"Christ Our Hope for The Individual," was the theme for the class of the high school group with Rev. Paul Roth of Canby, as instructor.

At the same time a class was being taught for the college age group, by Rev. Clyde H. Dirks of Portland, on "Christ Our Hope for the World."

Two general assemblies were held each day, one by Miss Catherine Niswander of Philadelphia, Pa., who taught missions, and one by Rev. Wilbert Regier of Pratum, who conducted a class on "Christ Our Hope for the Future."

Chapel services were under the direction of the different church groups.

Rev. P. A. Klierer of Albany was in charge of the campfire services each evening. The pastors and instructors conducted the vesper services.

Other retreat instructors were Rev. Homer Leisy, Dallas, Camp Dean; Mrs. Homer Leisy, Dean of Women; Miss Dorothy Leisy, Music; Mrs. R. F. Larsen, Albany, Camp Nurse; and Mrs. William Zehr, Portland, Recreational Director, who had the recreational part of the retreat planned wonderfully.

Mrs. Hilding Anderson of Portland was the president of the retreat committee for the past year, Mrs. Ted Toews, Dallas, was vice president; Elaine Widmer of Albany, secretary; Miss Alma Stauffer of Pratum, treasurer; and Mrs. Gladys Heyerly, Barlow, was the program chairman. The retreat committee for next year remains the same with the exception of Mr. William Zehr of Portland who is taking the presidency.

Mention should be made of the good cooks for the many well-balanced meals. They served 165 with a delicious chicken dinner on Sunday.

A large number of guests visited the camp on Sunday, and all services were well attended. Rev. Leisy gave a very impressive service in the evening.

The aim of the retreat was to make possible a vital experience with God, to provide Christian fellowship and recreation, to foster spiritual growth and to challenge retreaters to consecrated Christian living and service.—Elaine Widmer, Albany, Oregon

Western District C. E. Convention

By Helen A. Mueller

Important issues were discussed by delegates representing twenty-seven societies from twenty-five churches at the fifty-third annual Western District C. E. Convention held August 4 and 5.

The fact that last year's projects had received the enthusiastic support of the young people, no doubt helped them decide that larger tasks could be undertaken for the future. The total income during the past convention year, as reported by the treasurer, amounted to almost $4,000. This was an increase of approximately $1,500 over last year's receipts. All four of the five hundred dollar projects "went over the top" in their receipts. Contributions for relief were also good.

Outstanding among the resolutions which were adopted at the business session Saturday evening, was one authorizing the executive committee of the C. E. Convention to investigate the possibilities of acquiring our own retreat grounds, to set up a fund for this purpose, and to enter negotiations if it seems advisable. In view of the fact that retreat registrations this year had to be closed early because of the extraordinarily large enrollment, and many young people were disappointed because they were not able to attend retreat, the interest for this particular project ran high. It is the hope of the young people that some person who has the interest of youth at heart will be inspired to donate a suitable piece of land for this purpose. Funds which are to be raised could then be used for making necessary improvements.

Sunday's sessions were on the inspirational side. In the afternoon Miss Erna Fast spoke on the subject "Forward with Christ in Christian Education," and Mrs. S. F. Pannabecker spoke on "Forward with Christ in Christian Missions." Simultaneously with this afternoon program, which was held in Memorial Hall, a junior program was held in the college chapel. Following this program, junior sponsors joined in an informal discussion period. They elected Mrs. Henry Goossen as their chairman for the coming year.

The Sunday evening meeting was held in Memorial Hall. The resolutions, adopted at the business session the previous evening, were read by Helen Hiebert Mueller. Dr. Orville S. Walters of Buhler, Kansas spoke on the convention theme, "Forward With Christ." He stressed three points: "One thing is needful"; "One thing thou lackest"; and "This one thing I do," indicating that the portions of scripture from which these verses are taken describe (1) an unintegrated life, (2) a life integrated in the wrong direction, and (3) an integrated life. He then named the elements in the formula for Christian living: (1) The supreme sacrifice (forgetting those things which are behind and counting all things but loss); (2) the incentive (reaching forth, or motivation); and (3) the supreme effort (pressing toward the mark; putting Christ at the center).

New officers elected are: Roland R. Goering, McPherson, president, for one year, to fill the vacancy left by Verny Unruh's resignation; Ronald von Riessen, Walton, vice president, full two-year term, to replace Alvin L. Reimer whose term expired; Ruth E. Krehbiel, Deer Creek, Oklahoma, program committee member, for one year to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Orlando Schmidt; Frieda Claassen, First Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, YPU representative, elected for two years, to replace Ruth Ewert who resigned. Helen Hiebert Mueller was re-elected secretary-treasurer. Mrs. Willis Rich and Rev. Henry Hege replace Alvin J. Reimer and Rev. Herbert Miller as members of the Retreat Committee.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY THE WESTERN DISTRICT C. E. CONVENTION

August 4, 1945

RETREATS:

1. We resolve to support and encourage retreats again for the next year.

2. Whereas we feel the need for more time for retreats than is allotted to us by Camp Wood, be it resolved that we authorize the executive committee to investigate the possibilities of acquiring our own retreat grounds; that they set up a fund for this purpose; and that they enter into negotiations if it seems advisable.

STUDENT AID:

1. Be it resolved that we continue our student aid fund for students of other races at Bethel College.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S TREASURY:

1. Whereas the Y.P.U. of the General Conference has transferred its funds to the central treasury at the General Conference Headquarters, be it resolved that all contributions for Y. P. U. work and for General Conference causes, i.e., any phase of foreign missions or relief work be sent by the local society directly to General Conference Headquarters, and only contributions for district projects be sent to the Western District C. E. Convention treasury.

2. Whereas the Y. P. U. of the General Conference is striving to realize the United Youth in Christ, be it resolved that we give them our whole-hearted support and encourage each member to contribute at least 10 cents to the fund.

C. P. S.

Whereas the statistics put out by the M.C.C. show that a very low percentage of all conscripted young men in the General Conference are in C.P.S. camps, be it resolved:

1. That we as the Western District C. E. Convention reaffirm our historic peace principles as held by our forefathers and as taught in the Scriptures.

2. That we urge our young people approaching conscription age to consider the matter prayerfully, to consult their respective pastors and to stand firm on the Biblical basis of non resistance, irrespective of social pressure or criticism from without.

3. That we support the C.P.S. work financially.

MISSIONS:

Although much of our missions activity has now been suspended due to closed doors resulting from the present war, we resolve:

1. That we continue to help build up the mission fund to carry on the work when the doors are reopened.

RELIEF:

1. Whereas there is an urgent need for relief all over the world be it resolved that we continue our support of relief activities.

RESOLUTIONS OF YOUNG PEOPLE'S DIVISION MIDDLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Pulaski, Iowa, May 26-29, 1945

1. Resolved that we thank the people of Pulaski Church for their kind hospitality and reception during the conference.

2. We recommend that the young people put forth greater effort to attend the Middle District Conference and suggest that each of the nineteen societies be responsible in sending at least one delegate.

3. We encourage our General Conference young people, in accordance with our Mennonite principles, to support prayerfully and financially our C.P.S. camps. Also, that we put forth our united influence against peacetime conscription.

4. Resolved that we remember those of our number in the Armed Service by our letters and in our prayers.

5. We urge each person to support relief and rehabilitation work to the utmost ability and opportunity.

6. We recommend that Mennonite Youth cooperate ate with our denominational schools.

7. Further, we recommend the executive committee to continue to publish the Vine Press, and that each society support the work of the field secretary with contributions, both financially and editorially

8. Resolved that we dedicate anew our lives by more consistent Christian living and by closer fellowship with all Christians.

THOUGHTS EXPRESSED IN C.P.S.

(A mother who has insight into the thoughts and feelings of men in C.P.S. has submitted the following letter from a C.P.S. man for publication because she feels that it "expresses a concern that is quite general among our boys.")

July 7, 1945

Dear _____,

It is indeed with pleasure that I write this letter of appreciation to you folks in regard to the supplies you sent us in the line of soap, tea towels, aprons, etc. To receive supplies so directly from our own folks carries something more than just the current value. It brings us to the realization that our thoughts and prayers are in a measure being realized. Especially now is such a deed very meaningful. C.P.S. has reached its climax and demobilization is not a dream any more. Men are looking toward their future home life with anticipation and yet, a little doubtful. Discussions like—Does your Dad have a farm for you to go to? Are you going to put out your own wheat this fall? How did it feel to be home on furlough? Were they glad to see you home? Or, was it just "That guy home again?"

Do you think they want us home again, now that they have found out that they can get along without us and make more money doing it? These thoughts and many others are coming up daily; and I must say in many localities they are real problems. So let us say it again that just a kind deed like sending us that soap is a wonder worker in erasing many tainted thoughts. Thank you all very much.

In gratitude,

Improved living quarters in a stable for some European war sufferers. Such conditions foster the spread of diseases. See story on pages five and six.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Oswald Schrag, Hartford, Connecticut

Romas 12:3 "For I say, through the grace given unto me, to every man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but to think soberly according as God hath dealt to every man the measure of faith." To take a sane view of oneself is the beginning of wisdom. Here we can see that Paul was right in line with the wisest Greeks. However Paul's approach to "know thyself" was a different approach than that of the Greeks. For Paul it was not man, but the Divine Will was the measure of all things. Today much emphasis is placed upon personality. Everybody wants to have a pleasing personality, but an attractive personality should not be the aim or ambition—it should be a by-product of a right relationship to God and to man. The question should not be how I stand or rate before men, but how do I stand before God in my relationship to my fellowmen.

Romans 12:4-5 "For as we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office; so we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another." We need to remember that society is as one body. If one of the members of the body suffers then the whole body suffers. If the hand becomes infected then the whole body burns with fever. Even though Paul didn't use the term he emphasized that society is a "social organism," in which cooperation, (not just tolerance) must take place. The apostle makes this more pointed in his letter to the Corinthians where he writes, "if the foot shall say, because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body? And if the ear shall say, because I'm not the eye, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body? If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where were the smelling?" Regardless as to creed, color or culture we can all constitute the body of Christ.

Romans 12:6 "Having then gifts differing according to the grace that is given to us, whether prophecy, let us prophesy according to the proportion of faith." It is interesting to note that every individual must excel in one thing or another to have a feeling of security or prestige. This may be anything from being a good president of some big company to being a good checkerplayer. All of us have some gifts or talents which can be cultivated. It may be that some of these talents are still latent and that they need to be tapped just as one taps an oil well. According to Paul whatever special talent a member of the church may possess it is a gift of God, and should give no claim to dignity or pre-eminence in the community.

Romans 12:7 "or ministry, let us wait on our ministering or he that teaches on teaching." Let us wait! This is a hard saying in this streamlined age of 1945. When everything seems to be done in blitzkrieg fashion it's not easy to wait. To be practical in this day and age it seems you have to act first and do your thinking afterwards. But how often have we ministered in haste and then discovered that we have neither the equipment nor the tact to minister efficiently. How often have we taught in haste and then discovered that we have either the authority, nor the knowledge, nor the direction, nor the sincerity in our teaching.

Romans 12:9 "Let love be without dissimulation. Abhor that which is evil: cleave to that which is good." When Paul speaks of love he is not speaking of the kind of love one hears on the radio, sees on the screen, or reads about in the modern magazine. Love in the Greek is "Agape." This form of love excludes jealousy found in the other forms of love. Any form of egotism and selfishness or self-seeking is excluded. According to Paul it is a gift of the spirit. It is of divine nature, but it must find expression towards the neighbor.

Romans 12:10 "Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love . . ." When will mankind learn that there is but one world, one people, and one God. We have heard much about tolerance, but it's not more tolerance that religious bodies need; it's more conciliation. By tolerance we mean to "grin and bear it" which is yet far removed from the Christian attitude. Tolerance means getting along without making concessions or giving up anything. We need more conciliation in which parties or individuals in conflict are both willing to make concessions.

Romans 12:11 "Not slothful in business: fervent in spirit: serving the Lord." How often we become despondent in our daily routine of work! Our tasks often seem so insignificant and the results so intangible. To know how to do our tasks or to have directions in our work is not enough; we need to have the zeal and the fervor to do them.

RELIEF

Mennonite Worker Enters Italy

The first of the six M.C.C. Middle East relief workers, selected to serve with UNRRA in Italian relief projects, has now arrived in Italy. Delbin Kirchofer informed Akron Headquarters that he had arrived in Rome on August 4. At the time of writing UNRRA had released Grace Augsburg and Bertha Fast from their roles of service in the Middle East refugee camps, and the two women were waiting for passage to Italy. UNRRA had not as yet released the three other Mennonite workers. Delvin Kirchofer has been chosen to act as director for the Mennonites in the Italian mission.

Passport for Germany

Samuel Goering, as director of M.C.C.'s Northwest European relief program, has received passport validation to enter Germany. He is advised to travel directly from London to Frankfurt. Bro. Goering has requested entrance in the interest of displaced Mennonites now located in Germany.

Appointments for Northwest Europe

By the end of December, 1945, the M.C.C. hopes to have sixteen workers actively engaged in relief work in Holland, twenty-three workers in France, and three workers in Switzerland. The M.C.C. Executive Committee met on August 6 and made the following appointments for various areas of the Northwest European relief program:

Personnel for Holland include Siegfried Janzen, Vineland, Ontario; John Fretz, Kitchener, Ontario; Ruth Hilty, Pandora, Ohio; and Welma Graber, Wayland, Iowa.

Personnel for France include Delmar Wedel, Aberdeen, Idaho; Charlotte Regier, Whitewater, Kansas; Fred Peters, Vancouver, British Columbia; and Mrs. M. C. Lehman, Akron, Pennsylvania.

Emma Loewen, Kitchener, Ontario, has been appointed for Switzerland, and Cornelius Dyck, Laird, Saskatchewan, has been selected as an additional worker for the England unit.

Dietitian Enters Relief Service

Pearl Kauffman left Akron Headquarters on August 10 and flew from Miami to Puerto Rico on August 13. She has joined the Mennonite unit at La Plata to serve as dietitian for the unit and for the Mennonite hospital.

C. P. S.

Continuing C.P.S. Canning Program

Shall canning for C.P.S. camps continue, in view of the fact that the war has now come to a close? In answer to this question it is strongly urged that canning for the camps continue, with the understanding that any food not needed for the camps will be transferred for use in relief feeding. The food needs in the relief areas during this coming winter will be extremely severe, and the amount of home processed food that can be used is practically unlimited. All canning sugar points issued from M.C.C. must be accounted for in terms of food canned for C.P.S. Any arrangements for transfer for relief must be made with the ration boards who issued sugar after the sugar has been fully accounted for in terms of C.P.S. canned food contributed and on hand.

C.P.S. Conferences

During the coming weeks several conferences related to the administration and work of C.P.S. will be held. The annual conference for directors of Mennonite camps will be held at the Colorado Springs camp, September 9 to 16. The first half of this period will be given over to a study of effective counseling.

The third annual conference for educational directors in Mennonite camps will be held on the Bluffton College campus, August 18 to 23. A conference of the leaders of western Mennonite C.P.S. hospital unit leaders will be held at Goshen College, October 7 to 10. A conference for eastern leaders will be held sometime later at Grantham College, near Harrisburg.

The work done and business transacted at these meetings is a very important part of the on-going C.P.S. program, and the prayers of the constituency are desired for the Spirit's guidance.

C.P.S. Man Held on Charge

A C.P.S. man serving at the State Hospital Norristown, Pennsylvania had the unfortunate experience of driving a truck which got out of control crashed into a tree, and fatally injured one of the twenty-five patients riding in the vehicle. Because of the death involved, Benjamin Bontrager at home at Haven, Kansas, driver of the truck, is being held on a charge of involuntary manslaughter.

C.P.S. Reaction to Atomic Bomb

The announcement of the use of the destructive atomic bomb in the prosecution of the war brought this reaction from the C.P.S. unit at Beltsville, Maryland:

"News of the atomic bomb has been a subject of considerable discussion. Great concern and a reaction of horror is expressed by all. One of the men, while listening to a radio commentator describe its destructive possibilities, took so seriously its implications that he broke down and cried like a child. One becomes more confirmed than ever that Christ is everlastingly right. It is Christ and not the militarist that is a realist. We are sorry that it takes the atomic bomb to verify this fact."

QUOTE

Department of Superintendence of the National Education Association:

"We must teach our pupils to make the passage from love of country to love of mankind, love of humanity, a transition which civilization teaches us to make, but which the spirit of military drill cannot make, but rather tends to prevent."—Peace Time Inscription

Edward Yoder, deceased Old Mennonite writer:

"No one is ready to meet fellow men or face difficulties in life with courage and confidence until he has seen God face to face in sincere confession and self surrender to His will."—The Trailmaker

Sir Isaac Newton, who formulated the law of gravitation:

"I feel like a small boy walking along the beach, picking up a bright pebble now and then while the great ocean of God's truth lies unexplored before me."

Chester E. Shuler, member Church of the Brethren:

"Real humility . . . affects our thought life, and some scholars state that the original word translated 'humble' signifies 'having a low opinion or esteem of ourselves in comparison with others.'"

Dr. L. Meyer describing condition of 50,000 Finnish refugee children in Sweden:

"Try to visualize the following: 8,000 children huddling up with their little tin plates in their emaciated hands, walking on legs that look like thin sticks, bodies with distended stomachs, wan-drawn faces, and big, hollow blue eyes. A fourteen-year-old girl breaks off a piece of bread and chews it into a soft pulp and gives it to a little three-year-old to eat . . ."—American Lutheran

IN MEMORIAM

FLORENCE RICHTER, born September 5, 1900, and died June 20, 1945. She united with the Mennonite Church of Trenton, Ohio, in her youth. She is mourned by her devoted mother, one sister and three brothers.

PETER KENNEL, born December 12, 1894, and died July 27, 1945. In his youth he united with the Mennonite Church. He is survived by his wife; one daughter, Doris Jean; and six sisters and one brother.

P. WALTER BURI, son of Chris. and Elizabeth Kaufman Buri, was born at Colfax, Washington, September 13, 1895, and passed away June 29, 1945. Baptized upon his confession of faith, he was received into the First Mennonite Church of Colfax in 1924. In 1923 he married Mary Aeschliman, who now with the four children, Florence, Lucile, Dale, and Earl, survives him.

JOTTINGS

—Salem Church Freeman, South Dakota: Hazel Senner and Florine Waltner are spending interesting months at the Ypsilanti, Michigan, state hospital, and Belva Waltner is working at the Cleveland State Hospital. The three girls are enrolled in the summer units sponsored by the M.C.C. Seven girls from this church plan to attend Bethel College this coming year.

—Reedley, California: Some men helped the ladies can for C.P.S. The result: 150 quarts of pears and 300 quarts of peaches. Also some grapes have been canned. The church also provides fresh fruit for the nearby C.P.S. camps.

Berne, Indiana: On August 26, Rev. Sylvan Lehman of the Lima (Ohio) Mennonite Church (mission) brought the message in behalf of Home Missions. The offering went for the Lima Church Building Fund. It is expected that Rev. Don Smucker will bring the message on September 9 and that Rev. Marvin Dirks will speak on one of the other Sundays in September. Rev. Homer Leisy will speak at the annual young people's week, October 7 to 14. The Berne Church will have no resident minister during September and October. Rev. Gerald Stucky, who has been serving as assistant pastor, is leaving for South America in the near future and Rev. Olin Krehbiel, the new pastor, is not expected until the end of October. The church has over 150 names on the service list. Two of these have been killed in the war.

—C.P.S. Camp, Belton, Montana: Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, educator and former head of the TVA, spoke July 28 to 30. He pointed out that Christian character can be developed best in the small community. Another outstanding recent event was a lecture on birds and their habits by Charles Albert Harwell, formerly park naturalist of Yosemite National Park and now Western Representative of the National Audubon Society. Mr. Harwell showed a technicolor movie reel of Yosemite Park. The camp now has a religious counselor. It is hoped that this will help solve the problem of adequate pastoral service.

—Not a single church, labor, farm, or educational organization of any importance testified in favor of universal military training at the hearings of the Woodrum Committee declares A. J. Muste.

—Dallas Voran has become assistant and educational director at the Gulfport, Mississippi, C.P.S. unit.

—Rev. and Mrs. Lester Hostetler spent part of the summer in New York City, taking seminary courses. While there they had many interesting experiences, one of which is described as follows by Rev. Hostetler: "Sunday evening we visited a Puerto Rican family that moved to New York recently. They had invited us to dinner and we had a grand time together even though there were language handicaps between us. This family formerly lived in Cayey where they became well acquainted with the Mennonite C.P.S."

unit and speak in highest praise of our boys in the unit. After our meal, which was distinctly Puerto Rican, we went with them to their church where we met the minister and his wife and a number of their members. The service was all in Spanish, except my part in it. I was introduced to the audience and asked to give a short talk, which I did. Over 200,000 Puerto Ricans live in this community on Madison Avenue. Many of them are Roman Catholics, but the family we visited are Baptists. Their church numbers 300 members but with the present rate of growth they expect it to increase to a thousand or more within the next five years. They come here to improve their economic conditions."

APPEAL FOR CONTRIBUTIONS

The General Treasury of the General Conference needs one offering from each of our churches per year to meet expenses such as the printing of reports to conference, conference minutes, travel, postage and other secretarial expenses of conference officers and the Executive Committee.

All pastors are urged to see that offerings for this purpose are regularly scheduled in their congregations.

Any contributions for this purpose should be sent to Mennonite General Conference Headquarters, 722 Main Street, Newton, Kansas. Be sure to designate "For General Treasury."

AMERICA'S ATOMIC ATROCITY

Something like a moral earthquake has followed the dropping of atomic bombs on two Japanese cities. Its continued tremors throughout the world have diverted attention even from the military victory itself . . .

The atomic bomb was used at a time when Japan's navy was sunk, her airforce virtually destroyed, her homeland surrounded, her supplies cut off, and our forces poised for the final stroke . . . Our leaders seem not to have weighed the moral considerations involved. No sooner was the bomb ready than it was rushed to the front and dropped on two helpless cities, destroying more lives than the United States has lost in the entire war.

Perhaps it was inevitable that the bomb ultimately be employed to bring Japan to the point of surrender. (This, however, is contradicted by the astonishing report of the past few days that General MacArthur conveyed to President Roosevelt last January and the President summarily rejected peace terms essentially the same as those finally accepted.) But there was no military advantage in hurling the bomb upon Japan without warning. The least we might have done was to announce to our foe that we possessed the atomic bomb; that its destructive power was beyond anything known in warfare; and that its terrible effectiveness had been experimentally demonstrated in this country. We could thus have warned Japan of what was in store for her unless she surrendered immediately. If she doubted the good faith of our representations, it would have been a simple matter to select a demonstration target in the enemy's own country at a place where the loss of human life would be at a minimum.

If, despite such warning, Japan had still held out, we would have been in a far less questionable position had we then dropped the bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki. At least our record of deliberation and ample warning would have been clear. Instead, with brutal disregard of any principle of humanity we "demonstrated" the bomb on two great cities, utterly extinguishing them. This course has placed the United States in a bad light throughout the world. Our future security is menaced by our own act, and our influence for justice and humanity in international affairs has been sadly crippled. We have not heard the last of this in Japan itself . . . Our widespread use of the diabolic flame-thrower in combat, our scattering of millions of pounds of blazing jellied gasoline over wood and paper cities, and finally our employment of the atomic bomb gives Japan the only justification she will require for once more seeking what she regards as justified revenge . . . The terms of the surrender rightly strip from Japan the empire which she has acquired by force in the past half-century. But the British, French, Dutch, Belgian and Portuguese empires, each created by the same methods Japan has attempted to employ, stand intact. Undoubtedly, Russia will recover some of the rich concessions in the Asiatic mainland which Japan gives up, and it appears likely that China will return to the condition of civil strife which made Japanese economic relations with her a constant source of intolerable confusion. American might, it will seem to Japanese, is re-establishing this state of affairs in the interest of white imperialism. From that view it is not a long jump to the conclusion that any people which plots successful revenge against a nation that uses such methods to serve such ends is rendering Asiatic humanity a service . . . The story of the bomb will gather to itself the whole body of remembered and resented inconsistencies and false pretensions of the conquerors . . . The outlook for the reconciliation of Germany with world civilization is ominous enough, but the outlook for the reconciliation of Japan is far more ominous.

The future is further complicated by the fact that the Christian Church, which holds in it the only power of radical reconciliation, has also suffered a heavy blow. The atomic bomb can fairly be said to have struck Christianity itself . . . It will take endless explaining to the Japanese to dissociate Christianity, the Christian church and the Christian mission from the act of the American government in unleashing the atomic bomb. This act which has put the United States on the moral defensive has also put the Christian church on the defensive throughout the world and especially in Japan.

For this reason the churches of America must dissociate themselves and their faith from this inhuman and reckless act of the American government. There is much they can do, and it should be done speedily. They can give voice to the shame the American people feel concerning the barbaric methods used in their name in this war. In particular, in pulpits and conventions and other assemblies they can dissociate themselves from the government's use of the atomic bomb as an offensive weapon. They can demonstrate that the American people did not even know of the existence of such a weapon until it had been unleashed against an already beaten foe. By a groundswell of prompt protest expressing their outraged moral sense, the churches may enable the Japanese people, when the record is presented to them, to divorce the Christian community from any responsibility for America's atomic atrocity.

EDITORIALS

MAKING A LIVING AND LIVING WITH ONE'S FELLOWS are two major problems which every human being is called upon to solve. God stated the first problem very early in the history of the human race: "And God blessed them and said unto them . . . subdue it (the earth): and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth." The history of man is a heroic record of subduing the earth. Great accomplishments are packed between the striking of flint for a fire and the shaping of a stone hammer and today's television and atomic power. The second problem, undoubtedly a much harder one, was stated clearly much later in God's revelation, when Jesus said: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Like a child puzzled by a very hard problem, so mankind looks at this statement and finds itself incapable of the solution. Charles Clayton Morrison speaks of man's success with the first problem and his failure with the second one when he says:

"Man has not kept pace with the march of science. That is a fact all too evident as we survey the present world scene. The collapse of civilization in this unprecedented and unspeakable war is no essential fault of science. It is the fault of man. He has given little heed to the noblest ethical formula of the faith he has professed: to do justly, to love mercy and to walk humbly before God. He has sought, not justice, but his own advantage. He has not loved mercy, but has allowed his heart to harden in his own prosperity. He has not walked humbly before God, but has placed his ego where only God should be and glorified himself as the Master of Things."

An editorial in Life speaks of these two problems, one largely solved and the other largely unsolved as follows:

"The thing for us to fear today is not the atom but the nature of man, lest he lose either his conscience or his humility before the inherent mystery of things. Atomic science certifies this mystery. Its own laws condemn us to ultimate ignorance; but also to the eternal freedom of choice inherent in an indeterminate universe. No limits are set to our Promethean ingenuity, provided we remember that we are not Jove. We are not ants either; we can abolish warfare, and mitigate man's inhumanity to man. But all this will take some doing, and we are in a strange new land." (italics are ours)

Yes, it will "take some doing" if the "nature of man" is to keep up with "the march of science." It will take a lot more pondering upon Jesus' statement "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" if man is to find the solution to living with fellowman. This second problem needs to be emphasized by the Christian Church in the same intense, persistent way that science has emphasized the subduing of the earth. God is longing to bless us with the answer; of that we can be sure.

SCHOOL DAYS are here again! Mother's heart may swell with hopeful anticipation as she sees her children start off to school—school that wonderful realm of opportunities for development. Yet the children have been in school all along, for the family is the child's first school. What happens to the child in the "family school" in the first five years of its life is of supreme importance. As the twig is bent there so the tree will grow. Oh, he may not get his spelling, geography, and arithmetic in the "family school," but he gets something else there that will influence him throughout life. There he gets his feeling patterns. In the first years of life the child either develops patterns of feeling that will make him a cooperative individual or else someone who is unable to cooperate with others because of a behavior pattern that emphasizes the self, resulting in feelings of inferiority, fear, pride, aggression, etc. In general the home sets the pattern into which is molded the education of the public school. If the parents have been emotionally stable with the peace of God in their hearts and have been at one with the child, then the child is bound to have a foundation of feeling and thinking which will make of school days a period of normal, wholesome development. If the child's feelings and thinking have been warped in the home, then the school finds its task more difficult, but teachers with a thorough understanding of child guidance will still be able to do much to lessen the temper tantrums of Johnnie or the thumbsucking of Sue. Especially, will the teacher be able to help if she can enjoy the full cooperation of the parents. School days are days full of opportunity for development; they are especially so when the right foundation has been laid in the home. Perhaps, the coming years will see an increasing emphasis upon the laying of this foundation.

Dear Friends in the Homeland,

"O give thanks unto the Lord for he is good, for His mercy endureth forever." Psalm 136:1.

The Lord certainly has been good to us. Finally we arrived here at Kalamba after five months, less two days, from the time we left our home in Inman, Kansas. Little did we realize then that it would be so long before we again would have a place that we could call home. But we praise Him for caring for us and bringing us safely to our station.

We were indeed glad to meet all the missionaries on the field and especially for the few days we were permitted to spend with our brother and sister, Frank and Agnes Enns. Also, we consider ourselves very fortunate to have been able to visit all the stations on the field with one exception. This, too, has given us a good idea of the work being done at the different places.

Shortly after we arrived here, the field committee met here at Kalamba. For this reason we did not begin our language study the first few days. Now however, we have been at it for seven weeks and the muddle of syllables is beginning to take a more definite form. It surely is a helpless feeling when a person is unable to talk and understand what is being said. We have been using the little French that we know to good advantage since some of the natives here also speak it. At other times we must have the assistance of the experienced missionaries to make our wants known or to find out the wants of the natives.

Our study has been interrupted several times because of trips that had to be made. The Model A developed some strange malady which forced a trip to Tshikapa. Later, we attended the commencement exercises at Central School where John and Norma Ruth Enns were graduating. Then there was the trip to Port Franciqui when we took Brother and Sister Barkman and their baggage to the river boat. All these trips have certainly been a variation from the routine of study. We hope that we shall now be able to settle down for some hard study.

We were very pleasantly surprised about three weeks ago to receive the news that Miss Lois Slagle was on the way to Kalamba. The surprise was in-

MESSAGE FROM INTERNED MISSIONARIES

Rev. P. H. Richert has received a Speedletter from the Department of State, dated August 27, which reads:

"Following message received for you from Weih-sien via American Embassy, Chungking:

'Well; inquire Board future plans. Hope Kai-chow. Greet all, Goertz, Regier.'"

Rev. P. H. Richert says that the board will leave it to the two missionaries as to whether or not they will come home, but that they seem to expect to go to Kaichow, their former station. This lies in the territory which the Japanese had occupied. Miss Elizabeth Goertz and Marie J. Regier were interned over two years ago. Neither one's furlough is due.

Hans Regier, brother of Marie J. Regier, has received the following message from the State Department: "Please thank God. Both well; soon out. Write soon."

deed great when a few days later we received the news that she had arrived at Leopoldville and would soon be here. We praise the Lord that He has so wonderfully answered our prayers and filled the need for a nurse at Kalamba. Miss Slagle arrived a few days before the Barkmans left the field. Thus we are now five white people on the station.

It is now the dry season and the mornings are cool. We very gladly put on a sweater or coat to go to the morning devotional period. During the day, however, it gets to be very warm, and the smoke and soot from the grass fires are very disagreeable.

Now as we continue the language study, we covet your prayers that we may soon learn it so that we shall be able to do better the work which we have already begun.

Yours in His service

Thousands of German Mennonites Now Refugees in Denmark

Letter from Refugee Minister Tells of Conditions

By Cornelius Krahn

The Christlicher Bundesbote, August 28, 1945, reprints a letter, which the writer believes, is the first information concerning the Mennonites of Danzig and Prussia after this territory was occupied by the Soviets. This letter is written from Denmark to relatives in the United States by Rev. G. Reimer.

We have been wondering what happened to the eight thousand Mennonites in and around Danzig in the territory that had been occupied by the Soviets and has been turned over to Poland. The press has been stating that Polish farmers moved into the villages and farms of the Germans and took them over leaving German inhabitants to crowd the road westward. From this letter we learn that not all German inhabitants of the territory had remained there. Rev. Reimer reports that Copenhagen, the capital of Denmark, has a half million German refugees. Of the eight thousand Mennonites from the Danzig territory almost half are at present in Denmark in temporary camps. They know they can never return to their former homes and that overpopulation and starvation reign in what is Germany proper today. Therefore they wonder where they can possibly find new homes.

From Danzig to Denmark

On January 24, 1945, Russians were approaching Danzig. The local German authority ordered an evacuation of the civilian population. Many loads of furniture, grain, feed, and seed were shipped westward. March 6th the Russians occupied the home of Rev. G. Reimer. A month later the refugees turned their belongings over to the German police and were themselves taken to Copenhagen by ship. From there they were taken to a place called Gjerrild, where they arrived April 20. At this time Denmark was still under German occupation, and the refugees received as favorable treatment as circumstances could allow.

Present Conditions

Since Germany's surrender these people are under the Danish government. The 129 German refugees of the village Gjerrild were put into barracks behind barbed wire under the guard of Danish soldiers. Rev. Reimer states that their fate would be hopeless and could not be borne if it were not for the fact the sure Foundation Jesus Christ was the Rock on which they are standing. He quotes the text upon which he had preached that morning, Matt. 9:36, "But when he saw multitudes, he was moved with compassion on them, because they fainted, and were scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd."

Many people, especially the older ones and children, he reports, died on the trip. The Elder of the Heubuden congregation is in one of the hundred camps with the half million German refugees in Copenhagen. In his camp with 4,800 persons, two hundred have died within two months. They are sleeping on cement floors and the food is not sufficient. He and his wife have each lost fifty pounds of weight.

Germany's Main Sin

Rev. Reimer writes that at present the press and radio are picturing the German people as the scum of the earth and every German as a Hitler. He continues that their main sin was disregard of the First Commandment and prays that God may have mercy upon them and not reward them according to their deeds. Speaking more specifically about the Mennonites, he says that they greatly regretted the outbreak of the war but are guilty with the German people because they did not love and honor God above all. He prays that God may grant them faith and loyalty to endure their present suffering.

What About the Future

Rev. Reimer says, "Whence shall we go?" It is impossible to return to their former homes which have been occupied by the Poles. Germany proper has no room for them, and they are unable even to contact anyone from there. They had thought of asking their Dutch brethren for help but discovered that the Dutch themselves are being helped by Denmark. They have relatives in Germany and in Russian, English and American Prisoner of War Camps whom they are unable to locate and contact. They urgently seek for someone to mediate for them. Naturally they would like to find a place in which they might be able to establish homes once more and wonder whether the American Mennonites could help them in any way. But he goes on, "Perhaps even they do not care to know and hear from us" because press and radio seem to make every German responsible for what happened in the concentration camps. "The fact is that we did not know of the existence of these camps. We are farmers and want to live according to the principle 'pray and work.' We had as little to do with politics as at all possible." Rev. Reimer wonders whether the Mennonites from America are exempted from military service, whether there would be some farm land available for them and whether there is any chance that the American government would grant them permission to enter the country. They are also thinking of Argentina in this connection.

Mutual Aid in Panorama

By Lois Johns

Christ ... Galilee ... 29 A D

As Jesus sent out His disciples on a preaching and healing tour, He instructed them thus: "Preach . . . , cure the sick, raise the dead to life, cleanse lepers, drive out demons; you have received without payment, give without payment. Provide no gold, nor silver nor copper to carry in your girdles; no bag for your journey, nor extra inner garment, nor shoes, nor stick; for the labourer deserves his food." (Matthew 10:7-10). The disciples were to render such services as they were especially able to perform and, in return, the recipients of those services were to give material aid to the disciples. This is the essence of true mutual aid: both parties benefit in the common enterprise.

Paul .. Corinth .. 27-58 A.D.

"At the present I am going to Jerusalem to serve the saints, for Macedonia and Greece have thought it good to contribute a certain sum in relief of the poor among the saints in Jerusalem. Yes, they have thought it good, and in fact it was a debt they owed them. For seeing that the Gentiles have been admitted into partnership in their spiritual blessings, they in turn are bound to serve them with material benefits." (Romans 15:25-27).

Menno Simons .. Holland .. 16th Century

"... We are ready before God and man, with all our hearts, to bestow our possessions, gold, and all that we have, however little it may be, and in addition thereunto our sweat and labor, to meet the necessities of the poor, as the Spirit and Word of the Lord, and true brotherly love teach us." (Complete Works of Menno Simons, Part I, page 93).

Anabaptists .. Europe .. 17th Century

There is evidence that as early as 1630 it was the custom of the Anabaptists and Mennonites to provide land for their needy. This type of aid aimed at making the recipients self-supporting in order that in time they could contribute to the welfare of other needy people in the community.

Mennonites .. Lancaster .. 19th Century

Early in the nineteenth century, a number of Pennsylvania Mennonites moved into Canada, purchased a large tract of land, and settled on it. Soon after, they discovered that there was a heavy mortgage on the land. Having used all their capital for the purchase of the land and having nothing left with which to remove the mortgage, they were in danger of losing their investment. The swindler, when he was discovered, attempted to clear himself by offering 6,000 additional acres at the ridiculously low price of 10,000 pounds. But the people were too poor to raise even that amount.

Finally, some of the more far-sighted leaders decided to take their problems to their brethren in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania. There a group assembled, discussed the problem, and decided to give the needed assistance as an act of brotherly love. The money was raised through a quickly-organized committee and loaned to the Canadian brethren. In the spring of 1804 a wagon transported $20,000 in solid silver from Lancaster to Ontario. A year later the balance was paid and the title cleared.

Mennonites .. British Columbia .. 1935

The Bethesda Mennonite Health Society was organized in 1935. Dr. H. W. Epp, a Mennonite from Manitoba, established an office in the town of Sardis. The assessments for a year were: $4.00 for a single person; $8.00 for a family without children; and $10.00 for a family with children, regardless of how many. The payment of this assessment entitled the person to an unlimited number of calls. Recently, the annual fee for a family was raised to $12.00. The present flat rate for small operations is $10.00.

With money from the deacon's fund, the churches buy one or two tickets in the Health Society and use the membership cards for poor people who are unable to pay their own medical expenses. There are about 250 members in this Health Society.

Mennonites .. Manitoba .. 1943

In Altona, Manitoba, a group of Mennonite farmers could not get new farm implements or satisfactory repair services on old ones, so in 1934 they organized a farmers cooperative machine shop to help themselves. At the first general meeting of the farmers in the municipality, the idea of a cooperative machine shop was approved and $1,300 pledged for the purpose of getting plans under way.

A garage in Altona and a lathe and machine shop in a small village four miles to the south were purchased. A. H. Wiebe, a former resident who had gone to Winnipeg to work in an aircraft plant, was asked to return and become manager of the shop. Realizing the possibilities of the plan, he gave up his job and returned to his home town. During the first year, ten men were employed; the service sales amounted to $24,000 and the net earning to $2,900.

Mennonites .. Mexico .. 20th Century

Securing new lands for their growing population is ever a problem with the Mennonites in Mexico. When it becomes apparent that new land is needed, the Oberschulz and his assistants assume the responsibility for scouting for land, buying new land, and discovering who in the colony wants land. A list is made of the people wanting new land and each man declares the amount of money he has available for such a purchase. Those who do not have sufficient money of their own are urged to borrow from a friend or relative. Whenever possible the colony purchase more acreage than there is immediate demand for so that there is room for expansion.

Those interested in plots in this new land meet with the Oberschulz to draw up a plan of division for the new settlement. Then each plot or farm is given a number and the interested parties draw for the number of the farm each is to buy. The farms vary in price, each having been evaluated before the drawing according to the quality of the land and its location.

Mennonites . . Bethel College . . 1945

Bethel College and its students have an extensive plan of truly mutual aid. On a college-owned farm a number of students are employed. By working on this farm, these students earn part of their way through college and the college is furnished with much of its milk, poultry, meat, vegetables, cereal foods, etc. The college owns its own press and print shop in which all the college printing and some custom printing is done. These and other businesses mean a saving for the college of hundreds of dollars which can be used to pay the students who do the work; they in turn use the money to pay for their education. Every one concerned benefits from such a plan.

Brotherhood . . Stewardship . . Peace

Paul sets forth the idea of mutual aid in these words (Phil. 2:4): "Each (Christian) fixing his attention, not simply on his own interests, but also on those of others." Mutual concern and helpfulness are the natural expressions of true Christian brotherhood. Any Christian who truly senses this fact of brotherhood with other Christians will not be concerned only about himself and his own things but will be interested in the welfare of others also.

Mutual aid springs also from the fact that we as Christians are merely stewards of our possessions responsible to God for their use. We are not committed to the secular practice of striving for the accumulation of wealth in its various forms, but rather to the responsibility of using what wealth we have for the benefit of others.

Mutual aid, therefore, is one expression of the Mennonite commitment to the Christian Way of Life; it has been and should continue to be a part of the daily peace witness of the Mennonites.

(For the incidents of mutual aid included in this article, the author is indebted to J. Winfield Fretz, who made available many of his printed articles and unpublished manuscripts.)

Most organizations deal with more or less definitely defined strata of human life. The church deals with all ages from the cradle to the evening of life insofar as she does her work well.

Names do not do the work. It takes interested, capable and trained persons to meet successfully the possibilities in each age group. These need to be selected for their qualifications. They should be encouraged to grow. This may be achieved through further training in schools, through workers' conferences in the home church, through teacher training courses, which can be very helpfully conducted on an interdenominational basis, through series of addresses by the minister at either the morning or the evening worship services and, last but not least, through well-planned and regular meetings of all the teachers for the purpose of discussing the possibilities of their work under capable leadership. All this takes time, effort and hard work but it is worth while because it is a cure for the discouraged and hence under-efficient leadership in the work of the church.

Professedly the Bible is the chief source material in the teaching of the Church. Too often we get little further than a mere profession. A good farmer, and withal a good father, once told his young son, "My Boy, you may take your time to plow this field, but plow it deep and don't make any skips!" That is good advice in connection with the use of the Bible also. It is better to study one portion well than to skip all around and leave the minds of the pupils in confusion about the real intent and value of the Book. The Bible becomes a "Book of Life" to him only who uses it with understanding and in keeping with the Spirit of the Christ whose Name we bear. It is more important that we earnestly seek to prepare people for the Way of Life for all mankind than it is to defend our own positions.

We recently had two lessons each on Isaac and Jacob. Genesis devotes fifteen chapters to these two men. One wonders how many pupils, let alone teachers, carefully read these fifteen chapters. If they did, they discovered that the Bible is like an unretouched negative which tells the truth instead of presenting what one would like to see. There have been too many teachers who have been shocked by what they found when they really began to read the Bible without making "skips." There have also been too many pupils who were either incensed at what seemed dishonest to them in the teaching to which they had been subjected, or who lost respect for those who might have been helpful guides to them. Let our use of the Bible for the good of all exceed our abuse of it for our own ends!

Hold Joint Mission Festival at Vancouver, B. C.

July 29th was a memorable day for our British Columbia Mennonite Conference for it was the first time that all our different groups in this province had been invited for a joint mission festival in Vancouver. We also had the rare privilege of having Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary of the Home Mission Board of the General Conference, as our guest speaker.

Brother J. B. Wiens extended a hearty welcome to the guest of honor and to all others present and gave an introductory message based on Luke 4:16, with special emphasis on verse 20: "And the eyes of all of them that were in the synagouge were fastened on Him."

Brother A. J. Neuenschwander conveyed greetings from the three churches in Quakertown, Pa. which he serves, and also from the Home Mission Board, then he brought us an evangelistic message, his text being taken from Acts 3:1-11. The lame man restored to health became the cause of a real spiritual awakening.

Brother J. J. Klassen, Yarrow, closed the morning service. During the noon recess a meal was served to all guests in the church basement. The afternoon service was opened by Rev. J. P. Klassen, Vancouver.

Then Brother Neuenschwander addressed the meeting in English. He pointed out how important it is that we have a solid foundation in our Christian life. Only a house built on the rock withstands the wind and floods and so it is also in our spiritual lives. If we are based on the rock Jesus Christ, we are able to stand firm in the storms of life. It is important that young people get a good general education, but above all they should acquire a thorough knowledge of the Word of God.

Brother Neuenschwander continued his message in German. He also gave us an interesting outline of the work being done by the Home Mission Board of the General Conference in the United States and in Canada, and he mentioned the different home mission stations from Toronto to Vancouver. We were greatly impressed by the large program being carried out.

Congregational singing, the renditions of the Coghlan Choir, and a few songs by individuals and groups also contributed much to the success of our mission Sunday. An offering for the cause of home missions brought in $170.00, which will be forwarded to the proper treasury.

Brother K. Tilitzky, Abbotsford, made the closing remarks, citing the words of Jesus Matthew 28:18-20, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations..."

Brother Neuenschwander is now on his way home, and we wish him God's richest blessing. May the Lord also continue to bless the work of our Home Mission Board. And we will strive to be more faithful in our support of the mission cause at home and abroad.—B. B. Friesen, Vancouver, British Columbia.

Esther Hirw Lall—is the daughter of a widow in Janjgir. Her father died while Esther was still a small child, and the family has had a real struggle with poverty. Esther finished the course in the Funk Memorial Girls' School and also took the two-year normal class which fitted her to teach in our local primary school. She waited a number of years for an opportunity to go on to high school, and at last in her letter dated May 3, 1945, she writes "Praise God for answering my prayers. I have now received permission to go to Jubbulpore in July to study in the Methodist Girls High School, and prepare myself for useful service."—Helen E. Nickel

PASTORAL CALLING

Pastoral calling should be more than a social call or friendly visit. Both the pastor and the parishoner should recognize the purpose in the call. The following may be considered some of the things that could be accomplished. (1) The call should give the parishoner a chance to talk over problems of life. (2) It should afford an opportunity to discuss difficult passages of the Bible. (3) It gives opportunity to share some important truth from God's Word that has been of help and guidance. (4) It gives the parishoner an opportunity to talk about the activities of the church with a view to improve them. (5) It gives the pastor an opportunity to keep his church records up to date (6) It should be a fellowship of prayer when the praise and concerns of the home are voiced.—W. F. Unruh

"WHOSO shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me." To lord it over children is to compete with the childishness of the child. This proves mutually devastating. To pamper the child is no better nor worse. It's the same thing with equally disastrous results. But to seek a relationship of oneness between parents, child, and Jesus is to "Clasp hands with God." —David D. Eitzen

Girls Enjoy Summer Service in State Hospital

By Gladys Graber

High stone towers rising above the trees gave the girls of the Cleveland Summer Service Unit their first glimpse of the State Hospital as they arrived at their destination on June 6. Luella Smith, registrar at Bethel College, served as unit leader for the eighteen girls whose home addresses ranged from Ohio westward to Kansas and North Dakota.

A New Experience

For each of the girls, mental hospital work was to be a new experience. Drawn by a desire to contribute some worthwhile service, the girls listed many reasons for coming. To some, the summer's work would be a valuable basis for a future in nursing, teaching, or church work. Others wanted to share in this kind of service as an aid to more intelligent understanding of the work and attitudes of C.P.S. men in hospital service. For all, this service represented an active interpretation on non-resistant ideals.

The Classroom

We girls were considerably relieved to learn that our first week would be spent in the classroom. A helpful introduction to mental hygiene and hospital techniques was given by Dr. Crawfis, superintendent of the hospital, and other members of the staff. Later Dr. Crawfis gave a series of lectures on the classification, causes, and prevention of mental illness.

Most Tense Moments

Perhaps the most tense moments of the entire summer were felt on the morning when we gathered in the supervisor's office for work assignments. A few days of actual work took care of the fears, and satisfactory adjustments came readily. Since the C.P.S. fellows in the Cleveland unit had so capably taken over an entire cottage in the short time they had been there, fourteen of the girls were placed in a similar cottage, the home for 250 chronically-ill, disturbed women. This cottage presented a real challenge to the girls in that the wards had suffered from lack of attendants and general neglect. Before many days had elapsed, all of the girls discovered many vital needs. The encouragement and support of a sympathetic administration assured the group that their services were of value and much appreciated.

The Daily Work

A few of the girls were assigned to the wards where various types of treatment therapy were administered. This was probably some of the most interesting work because here they could actually see a good many patients improve. But most of the work was much like that done in other mental hospitals—caring for the needs of irresponsible patients and keeping their surroundings clean. Every day was different in a way, yet this kind of work also takes on the day-by-day drudgery of routine duties. It was a real test to meet each day with enthusiasm even when it meant more hard work. Knowing that no matter how offensive or disturbed a patient becomes, she is not responsible for her behavior, we tried to be as kind with her as we would if she were our own mother or sister.

Rich Experiences

The experience received and the service rendered on the wards alone would make the summer significant, but the unit enjoyed worthwhile activities. Early morning girls' devotions and combined unit worship services provided spiritual refreshment. A mixed chorus met for practice twice weekly. The new Mennonite Hymnaries presented by the girls' unit to the fellows provided familiar music for singing. Social activities of the combined units included an exchange of invitations with the Hawthornden unit at Macedonia, Ohio, for ball games and socials. Two never-to-be-forgotten occasions were the evenings when, as a good-will gesture to the hospital, the Cleveland fellows helped the girls wash ceilings and walls in one ward where the girls worked. Members of the unit also appreciated the cultural advantages of the library, art museum, and musical concerts.

Studied Social Case Work

Classes two evenings each week centered on a study of social case work. During class lectures and discussions, the group learned about the science or technique of individual case work. At first the meaning of "social case work" was vague in our minds, but we learned that fundamentally it meant the science of understanding how to help individuals to make the best adjustments to life. Nearly everyone has tried to help a relative or neighbor with financial, problems, parent-child or child-school relations, social or religious difficulties. In these social case work classes Miss Smith gave a useful introduction to the methods of helping people. The students were led to see the variety of ways in which they could use this knowledge to help solve the problems of living. School teachers, nurses, church workers, and home-makers in rural areas or small communities have many opportunities to do such work just as well as full-time social workers in large cities.

Educational Tours

The five educational tours, planned on weekly days-off, gave unit members a glimpse into the social work of a large industrial city. We were grateful to the Red Cross for providing free transportation for the tours. The housing projects in slum areas, child-care centers, settlement houses, and a rehabilitation center acquainted the unit with the best efforts of private and government agencies to meet urban needs. On other tours the bus stopped at the large city hospital, the Children's Detention Home, the Arts and Crafts Studio, and the splendid Art Museum. These tours illustrated clearly the living conditions in large cities. We were impressed not only with the need of helping people but also with the futility of material advantage when there is no emphasis on inner character and Christianity.

The total value of the summer's work cannot be expressed in words. It is a complex whole of hard work, new friends, helpful and stimulating classes, inspiring activities, and a feeling of a greater responsibility to keep our own lives on the highest level possible—physically, mentally, and spiritually. We are grateful to our church leaders who make it possible for us to serve in these summer units, and we hope that this summer's experience will enable us to help our home congregations to a better understanding of the work done by C. P. S. men in hospital service.

THE WAY TO PEACE?

"A history teacher explained the difficulties of maintaining peace between nations as follows: I have a neighbor with whom I wish to be a friend. He also wants to be a friend of mine. In order to show him my good intentions I build a high barbed-wire fence with steel pickets on top between his house and mine. He in turn to convince me of his friendship put a ferocious dog in his back yard. I then put bullet-proof glass in the window on his side and started to wear large pistols in my belt. The other day I saw him moving supplies of poison gas and hand grenades into his house. Now I have a machine gun mounted in the front yard, and for the life of me I can't understand why we don't get along better."

Iowa Mennonite Youth Retreat Again

By Maxine Zihlman

Another retreat has come and gone bringing food for thought to the young people of the four Iowa Mennonite churches in the Middle District Conference. This retreat held at the Wayland Mennonite Church, Wayland, Iowa, on July 28 and 29 brought a total of sixty to register for the Saturday morning session with many others attending later sessions of the day and those of Sunday.

"Christian Youth Facing the Challenges of the Present Situation" was the theme of the retreat with studies for discussion based on the life of Joseph as he met the challenges of the situations of his day. The following were topics for discussion: (1) A Youthful Dreamer (2) Faithful in Hard Places (3) Resisting Temptations (4) Unspoiled by Sudden Prosperity (5) Manifesting Brotherly Love (6) Dependence on God (7) Returning Good for Evil.

The discussion groups were led by Rev. E. A. Sommers, Pulaski, Rev. H. E. Nunemaker, Donnellson, and Rev. E. S. Mullett, Wayland. Rev. Raymond L. Hartzler of Bloomington, Illinois, guest speaker for this event, closed each discussion period with an inspiring message connected with the chosen Bible character. Special music and devotional periods were conducted by the young people of the four churches represented, namely, Eicher Emanuel Mennonite, Wayland; Pulaski Mennonite, Pulaski; Zion Mennonite, Donnellson, and the Wayland Mennonite, Wayland.

A recreational period at the Iowa Wesleyan College swimming pool and a candlelight banquet in the church basement closed the activities of the day Saturday. Rev. Jacob J. Enz of Nappanee, Indiana, was the chief after Rev. Mullett led in group singing and Miss Lois Sommer of the Bluffton College showed slides of the campus.

The Sunday morning sermon was given by Rev. Hartzler. A large crowd was present to hear his morning message and the special number by the retreat choir. The fellowship was continued with a basket dinner at noon. The discussion groups met again in the afternoon to continue the study of Joseph. At the close of the afternoon session the following new officers were elected for the coming year: President, Evelyn Nunemaker, Donnellson; Vice President, David Allen Graber, Eicher; Secretary, Joe Baughman, Pulaski; Treasurer, Verlee Roth, Wayland.

The candlelight communion service Sunday evening following Rev. Hartzler's inspiring message provided a very fitting close to another retreat—a retreat which blessed those in attendance with spiritual knowledge and Christian fellowship.

Western District Holds First Intermediate Retreat

The first Intermediate Retreat of the Western District Conference was held August 6-10, on the Bethel College Campus, with a total enrollment of sixty, although two could not attend the entire period. These eager intermediates, coming from the various churches, participated in every phase of the retreat with boundless energy. Under the direction of Rev. D. C. Wedel of Halstead, Kansas, the prepared program of classes and activities was followed with punctuality.

The first morning class was led by Dr. J. H. Langenwalter, who brought a series of studies under the stimulating topic of what man can discover when he begins to wonder about things. In this class a new world was opened to the retreaters of how marvelously God has created this world as pictured in Genesis I. This led to the worship experience directed by Mrs. A. M. Lohrentz. She also served as house-mother for the girls, having the assistance of Miss Frieda Claassen of Beatrice, Nebraska. Four challenging periods, covering mission activities, were conducted by Mrs. S. F. Pannabecker, Bluffton, Ohio. Rev. Walter Gering brought the morning period to a close, presenting in a vivid way the Life of Christ in pictures. The music periods consisting of hymn study and general singing were in charge of Miss Marianne Toews.

Part of the afternoon was given over to recreation with Eugene van der Smissen in charge. All retreaters had opportunity to visit the Kauffman Museum, go on a nature hike, and take part in the general play period. Recreation was followed by an appreciation hour during which the retreaters gathered to listen to great works of poetry read by Mrs. A. Theodore Mueller; fine music, made available by means of recordings selected by Miss Marianne Toews; and pictures on Mennonite history presented by Dr. C. Krahn.

The evening devotional period was in charge of Miss Erna J. Fast. This was followed by the final study period of the day, led by Dr. P. A. Penner on "What It Means To Be a Christian." In characteristic manner Dr. Penner presented clearly and simply how one may become a Christian.

The universal reaction of both retreaters and leaders was that this retreat had been highly profitable and enjoyable.

—A course in vocational guidance is required of all freshmen who enter Pacific College, (Quaker) Newberg, Oregon. This course acquaints them "with the various possible fields of occupational endeavors. Following this course, students at any time may 'try' a given occupation by supervised vocational laboratory experience."

YOUTH JOTTINGS

—The First Mennonite Church of Burns, Kansas, had a very interesting C. E. program on August 19. The main theme was "Making the Home Christian." Luke 10:38-42 stresses the necessity of "Christ in the Home." I Kings 9:1-5 stresses the necessity of "Parental Example." The congregation was deeply impressed with the fact that Christianity in the home is a substantial factor for Christianity everywhere. In addition we had a report of the Western District Intermediate Retreat by one of the retreaters. Among other things this report brought out that Dr. P. A. Penner had given several outstanding talks on such subjects as: "What Does it Mean To Be a Christian," "How Can I Become a Christian," and "The Sign of a Christian." The one who reported expressed a strong desire for another retreat next year.—Esther Stucky, Corr.

—Mrs. Loris A. Habegger, until recently Evelyn Regier of Moundridge, Kansas, goes with her husband to Marlboro, New Jersey, to take over a secretarial position in the state mental institution there.

—Buhler, Kansas: Eighteen young people from our church attended the retreat at Camp Wood last week. No other church had more young people represented.

—Beatrice, Nebraska: A Knitting-Sewing-Klub has been organized by a group of about twenty girls. They meet on Thursday at the Sister's home in Beatrice.

—Lind, Washington: The Young People's Fellowship discussion on August 12 centered on "Mennonite Principles." The next Sunday night the young people began the "Mennonite Travelogue" which had been prepared by Viola Franz and Ernst Harder.

—Mrs. Mildred Frazee, Lansdale, Pa., is the Mennonite correspondent of the Eastern District Young People's Union.

WHAT IS HOME?

A London Magazine asked the question, "What is home?" Seven of the answers which the editor called "gems" were selected and published as follows:

Home—a world of strife shut out, a world of love shut in.

Home—the place where the small are great and the great are small.

Home—the father's kingdom, the mother's world, and the child's paradise.

Home—the place where we grumble most and are treated the best.

Home—the center of our affections, round which our heart's best wishes twine.

Home—the place where our stomachs get three square meals a day and our hearts a thousand.

Home—the only place on earth where the faults and failings of humanity are hidden under the sweet mantle of charity.

QUOTE

Rev. Richard M. Fagley, Secretary, Commission on a Just and Durable Peace:

"Through the sacrifices of young men and scientific discovery, our secularized society survived the crisis of Hitler's pagan conspiracy. The faith of modern man in his own self-sufficiency unfortunately also survived, weakened perhaps but not broken. Consequently, the end of one crisis becomes, with the discovery of atomic power, the beginning of a war greater crisis. From this crisis there is no escape by the ways familiar to secularism or worldliness. The inexorable 'either-or' of the atomic bomb upon which hangs the fate of life on this planet, leaves the pride of man no means by which to save itself. The only alternative to Armageddon is repentance and regeneration."

—"Gospel Herald" (Old Mennonite) comment on Youth for Christ:

"Thousand of young people are accepting Christ. Again we rejoice in whatever good this movement is accomplishing. Youth is the time for decision and we trust that many of these young people have really accepted Christ and that they will live truly Christian lives. But again one has some mental reserves. According to one observer repentance is not mentioned in these meetings. The thing of sole importance is 'to give your heart to Christ.' There is little attention given to the subsequent and necessary growth in grace and Christian living. Another thing that causes misgiving is the way in which patriotism, particularly support of the country's military program, is linked up with the evangelistic appeal. War bonds are sold during meetings and people in military service are singled out for special honor. One newspaper writer called the Chicago meeting a 'smooth blend of religion and patriotism.' But the movement does show that young people are hungry for things that belong to the spirit and are ready to respond to a leadership which appeals to them."

Dr. Frank C. Laubach, missionary literacy expert:

"The most dangerous thing in the world today lies in the whites' trying to keep the colored peoples of the world from equality with them . . . The next war will be a colored war if it comes in Asia. It is so easy to change the world if we go out humbly and lovingly and ask, 'What can I do for you?'"

MAX I. REICH

At 3 o'clock, August 14, friends gathered at Fallington, Bucks County, to pay tribute, in quiet Quaker manner, to the memory of "The Beloved Max I. Reich." The soft beat of the rain on the outside of the century-old meetinghouse played a natural requiem, while the mellow-aged wood of the simple interior added richness to the solemnity of the hour.

Sixteen men and women rose to express through verse, scripture, testimony, and prayer their appreciation of the "beauty and the calm" of this life. They were but a few of the many who in three countries, Germany, England and America bear witness to the blessing of this "seventy-eight year old servant of God." His sojourn in three countries, on two continents, came to an end in a pre-revolutionary Pennsylvania settlement. "He was a good man and full of the Holy Ghost," having gone about sharing with his fellow-Christians the fullness of the love of God and testifying to non-Christians concerning the grace of Christ which maketh men whole.

Over green-swarded grounds, footfalls softened by fallen rains, his remains were carried to the walled-enclosure; there amongst friends of yester-year, they were silently lowered into the grave. Overhanging branches of the neighboring oaks, more aged than he, dropped tears from rain-moistened leaves. Friends slowly turned away, carrying in their hearts the echo of his own words, reverently read by his son,

"Or some day

Falling asleep under the Father's kiss
And wake to rapture and eternal bliss."

Mennonite Refugees from Russia Arrive in Holland

The cablegram that Peter Dyck sent from Amsterdam on August 15 gave Akron Headquarters the first factual information relating to the dire circumstances that prevail among displaced Mennonites of Europe today:

THIRTY-THREE MENNONITE MEN, WOMEN, CHILDREN ARRIVE HOLLAND FROM RUSSIA. TWO YEARS PAINFUL PILGRIMAGE TELL INCREDIBLE STORIES SUFFERING, HUNGER, FEAR, GOD'S MYSTERIOUS SURE GUIDANCE. NOW REPATRIATION CAMP MAASTRICHT, DUTCH MENNONITES, MENNONITE CENTRAL COMMITTEE ASSISTING. POSSIBLE STAY HOLLAND TEMPORARY. PREFER IMMIGRATION CANADA. SAY MET HUNDREDS LIKE THEMSELVES CAMP GERMANY WHERE (BENJAMIN) UNRUH VISIT.

The M.C.C. Executive Committee, August 6, moved to extend personal assistance and financial support to the displaced European Mennonites until such time as they will be satisfactorily relocated. In order to carry out this program of assistance C.F. Klassen, Winnipeg, Manitoba, left New York City by air on August 22 for England and his plans are to enter the British-occupied zone of Germany to assist displaced Mennonites in that area. M. C. Lehman and Sam Goering have received permission to enter the American-occupied zone of Germany, as has been announced previously. Latest communications indicate that Bro. Lehman was leaving Switzerland on August 22 to enter Germany, and that Bro. Goering will delay his departure until Brother Klassen arrives in England.

RELIEF

Departure for England

A farewell service was held at Akron Headquarters August 16, in behalf of B. Frank Hartzler's departure for relief service in England. Brother Hartzler will be engaged in War Prisoners' Aid work.

Handicraft Shops Closed at El Shatt

As homeward migrations among Yugoslav refugees became numerous the interest in handicrafts began to lag, according to the report of Ervin Hooley and Arthur Jahnke, two Mennonite relief workers who have been assisting with the supervision of handicraft shops at the El Shatt camp. Ervin Hooley's recent report summarized shop activities before the shops were dismantled:

"Between holidays, Saturday afternoons, Sundays, and days after immunization injections, we made 1410 skirts, 752 blouses, 520 burlap bags, and numerous trousers, shirt, dresses, etc. in the sewing shops. The shop in Camp II was closed on May 12 because everyone there was leaving in the very near future and preferred no more work. Due to the lack of time, in our new cobbler shop we only cut all the necessary parts of a pair of shoes, and put all the parts for one pair into a burlap bag. We prepared about 500 pairs in this way and they were given out immediately through the clothing distribution center. The people who received these pairs seemed to be better satisfied than most of those who had received the ready-made shoes because they knew that when they would have them made in Yugoslavia, they would have a good pair of shoes that would fit them. "By May 19 we had checked in all tools and had closed all the shops but the sewing shop and cobbler shop in Camp IV. Because I had received and accepted an invitation to go on a "flight" to Yugoslavia with 2000 refugees, arrangements were made that I turn these shops over to Arthur Jahnke."

Tolumbat Convalescent Camp Closes

The closing of the Tolumbat refugee camp has created some special problems, and has required more detailed repatriation planning than other camps because convalescent mothers and children were tended and cared for here. Dr. Richard Yoder, July 9, reported as follows about the closing of this camp:

"We are looking forward to the closing of Tolumbat about August 1. The next two weeks promise to be busy ones since we still have over 1400 refugees to move. For some time I have been working out lists of patients who will require special care and accommodations during their movement. It has been worked out quite in detail and I think there should be no difficulties. We are fortunate in having a comparatively small number of ill patients just now which is very gratifying. In fact, for several months the health of the refugees has been on a very high level. There have been a few chickenpox and mumps cases for many weeks, but no other acute diseases to speak of. Dysenteries, which are always expected with the fly season, have been almost nil. We attribute this largely to the effective fly control which has been possible with the use of minimal amounts of DDT."

C. P. S.

Life and Work in C.P.S. Sidecamps

During the summer and fall months a large number of C.P.S. men, particularly in the Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast areas, are located in sidecamps to be on hand for emergency firefighting. As sidecamps are an important part of the service C.P.S. men are rendering, the C.P.S. Notes this week will provide reports on the activities of sidecamps from the Belton, Montana, and the Camino, California, camps:

Belton—To date there are eight sidecamps in operation. Many of the men in these camps are on telephone line, trail, and road maintenance. Yellowstone men are on blister rust control, which is extermination of the plant carrying the rustfungi. At Heaven's Peak sidecamp they are building fire lookout quarters on a mountain which rises to a height of 8,994 feet above sea level. Five tents and a horse barn have been set up. The men in this camp have been bucking cold rainy weather and are thankful for anything but snow.

Camino—"Six ambitious men braved the snow and rain at Airport on June 7 and opened the eleventh sidecamp of the season . . . Pacific put out a roadside fire last week . . . Lumberyard and Caldor camps were out on a twenty-acre fire for about two days. At present Caldor is cutting firewood and Lumberyard is sharpening fine tools . . . The Forest Hill group is still engaged in clean-up and repair work on camp grounds and equipment . . . The men at Mosquito welcomed a little change of work when asked to 'plant' 3,200 trout in an up-country stream."

The men at Paskenta have begun their timber cruising job in the Mendocine National Forest. They live in tents and the great out-of-doors and will probably have to relocate themselves three or four times during the summer. Timber cruising consists of estimating quantities of timber on given areas and on making of 'type,' showing kinds of trees, and topography maps.

The members of the Pacific sidecamp were awakened one morning recently to rescue a young girl who had fallen over a precipice. They arrived on the scene of the accident just as the body was located. The country was rough and very steep and it was difficult to carry a stretcher out. The girl, a University of California student, accidentally fell over a rocky crag while hiking with some companions.

COLLEGE NEWS

BETHEL COLLEGE

Members of the Bethel College faculty and staff have been returning for the new school year from a variety of activities and services for the church and College besides regular summer school. Prof. Hohmann spent two months among the Canadian churches in the interests of church music. Miss Becker represented Bethel at the N.C.A. Workshop at the University of Minnesota. Miss Lola Hill was enrolled at the University of Wisconsin for advanced work in Home Economics. Prof. Bargaen, who with his family spent the summer in California, filled speaking engagements in C.P.S. camps, as did also Professors J. J. Voth, Krahn, and Richert. Dr. J. Winfield Fretz, Dean of Men, will continue on a part-time basis his work in the Mutual Aid Section of the M.C.C., and Dr. Fast has been traveling in South America as an M.C.C. relief commissioner. Mrs. Eva Harshbarger, Dean of Women, has completed her thesis on "The Family Status of Mennonite Women in Kansas" for her Master's degree in Euthenics. Dr. and Mrs. Melvin Gingerich were youth leaders at a Mennonite camp along Lake Michigan. Serving in a similar capacity at Camp Wood (Kansas) were Mr. and Mrs. Adam Mueller, Mrs. Willis Rich, Dr. Langenwalter, and J. H. Lingenfelder from the campus community.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

Activities for the fall semester will open with a faculty devotional retreat Saturday, September 8. Sessions will be held Saturday and Sunday. Students return to the campus on Monday, with the first chapel service Wednesday and the first classes Thursday. Some increase in attendance this fall as compared with that a year ago is expected. However, the total enrollment will be far short of that in the best pre-war days. It is doubtful whether the end of the war came early enough to have any great effect on September enrollments, although the effect will likely be felt by the second semester. Miss Naomi Brenheman, Prof. of English, will be on leave of absence this year teaching at Goshen College. An intensive study is to be made this year as to just what is involved in having the teachings of Jesus Christ as the center of all college activities, both curricular and extra-curricular. Plans for this study will be made at the fall faculty retreat. It is expected that students will also assist in this study.

FREEMAN JUNIOR COLLEGE

After a lapse of many years the College Dining Hall will again be operated this year. Mrs. Lydia Kaufman will serve as matron. A considerable number of students have requested this service. The kitchen and dining hall have both been re-decorated and new equipment has been purchased, including a bottle-gas range and a refrigerator. The new DeVry sound projector has arrived and will be used throughout the year both for instructional and entertainment purposes. The shop room in the old college building has been remodeled by Gerhard Toews. A number of new benches have been built and considerable additional equipment purchased. All of the mattresses in the two girls' dormitories were completely renovated during the summer. Miss Kathryn Kaufman will take over the work in English and Speech when school begins. Miss Kaufman is an Academy graduate, holds a B.A. from Western State Teachers College, and an M.A. from Northwestern (Evanston). Miss Loewen, who has handled the English for many years was released this fall upon her request to minister to her sick mother at Mt. Lake, Minn.

HOLD MEETING RELATIVE TO OPENING OF MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY

Chicago, Illinois: A meeting of students who have enrolled, board members, and other interested in the opening of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary was held August 31 in the chapel of Bethany Seminary in Chicago.

Several hours of meditation, prayer, and consecration were followed by a period of consultation and fellowship.

Rev. A. S. Rosenberger, President of the Seminary Board and J. N. Smucker, President of the General Conference, expressed the deep concern and interest of the General and Central Conferences in this new venture. All are grateful to God for having opened the doors and seek His continued guidance. Deep inspirational remarks on Rev. 3:6-7 by Dr. A. Warrentin, head of the school, followed. Another season of prayer and consecration by the entire group closed the fellowship meeting.

— The Students

JOTTINGS

—Rev. Edmund Miller began a series of meetings on the theme "The Church, Its Failures and Triumphs" at the Salem Mennonite Church, Freeman, South Dakota, Sunday morning, August 26. Brother Miller is pastor of the Menno Church, Lind, Washington.

—Rev. Andrew Shelly, pastor of a Mennonite church in Kitchener, Ontario, was the guest speaker at the young people's retreat held recently at Freeman. Reported from there: "We hope some day in the not too distant future to have a retreat grounds."

—Bulletin, First Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: The offering last Sunday amounted to $185.37. It will be divided as follows: $92.68 to Board of Education (General Conference), and $46.34 to both the "Christian Worker's Institute" and the General Treasury of the General Conference.

—August 26: J. H. Langenwalter served the Wichita Church, Orlando Schmidt, Buhler; Prof. B. Bargaen, Hutchinson; and Ronald von Riesen, Bethel College Church.

—The Buhler, Kansas, Church has sent fifty boxes for relief, and the C.P.S. canning project is being stressed.

—West Zion Church, Moundridge, Kansas: Plans for the mid-week services for the winter include a monthly panel discussion on vital problems of the day. These topics are to be discussed in the light of the teachings of Jesus and Christian revelation. They are meant to be an honest effort to discover the will of Christ for present day life. Each discussion will be led by two outside leaders who will be called in because they are well informed on the particular subject under discussion. Three to five of our own church members will be asked to participate in the discussion. There will be a findings committee which will write up the best thought that comes out of these discussions. These findings we plan to share with those who live away from home through the West Zion Visitor.— On August 12, the Sunday following the marriage of Loris Habegger and Evelyn Regier, Mr. Habegger spoke in the morning service about the Christian testimony which C.P.S. men seek to make at Marlboro. In the evening, following the union park service Mr. Habegger showed a film of Pictures in the West Zion Church on the work the unit is doing in the State Hospital. Mr. Habegger told about Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt's visit to the unit and her interest in the work. Mr. Habegger plans to study for the ministry when he is released from service.

—Mrs. Sam Goering and son Robert and Miss Jessie Brown left North Newton August 25 for an eastern port to board a European-bound ship on the following Tuesday. They will join Mr. Sam Goering, who has been doing relief work in England, France, and Holland.

—"In the European conflict alone the military dead are estimated at 14,000,000." This does not include the millions of civilians who have died by starvation, area bombing and massacre.

—Moundridge, Kansas: The summer Sunday evening union park services have been held continuously for over thirty years. The program for August 26 was a musical one.

—Rev. and Mrs. Victor Sawatzky and children have moved into the Pullman Courts on the Bethel College campus. Rev. Sawatzky, who served the Mennonite Church north of Butterfield, Minnesota, for eight years, plans to continue his studies.

—Old copies of The Mennonite, ranging from January, 1888, to April, 1889, have been received from Flora L. Fellman, Quakertown, Pa. We are very happy for these rare old copies. They will be placed in the Mennonite Historical Library at North Newton.

—Dr. H. A. Fast wrote on August 20 from Ascuncion, Paraguay, that he intended to begin his return journey home (via Puerto Rico) on September 2. Dr. Fast has been spending part of the summer surveying M.C.C. activities in South America.

—Rev. and Mrs. Olin Krehbiel and children left Newton on August 29 for home after visiting with Rev. Krehbiel's parents, Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Krehbiel. Rev. Krehbiel and family left Lansdale, Pa., August 6 to go to California where Rev. Krehbiel participated in the Y.P. Retreat. While in California they visited with Mrs. Krehbiel's parents.

—Berne, Indiana: Gil Dodds, the famous miler, will speak at the First Mennonite Church on August 7th in connection with the interdenominational youth rally sponsored by the Youth for Christ.

—Upland, California: The thank offering, held upon cessation of hostilities, went to the M.C.C. for relief of war sufferers.

—Christian Education Sunday was observed in the Bethel Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, with a sermon on Christian Education by B. L. Braun of the Mennonite Brethren conference.

—The faculty for the Mountain Lake Bible School, which is to operate nine months instead of six as formerly, includes: Rev. C. Wall, Tina Quiring, Anna Baerg in the Bible department and Misses Ann Regier, Evelyn Regier, and Caroleen Harder in the parochial department.

—Fairfield, Pa., The ladies of the church, assisted by some of the ladies from Bethel Church, canned one hundred quarts of peaches for C.P.S. and twenty quarts for the Old People's Home on August 21. Peaches were donated by the B. E. Benner family.

—Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander returned to Quakertown, Pa., on August 17 after a seven-week trip into Canada.

—Newsletter, Lorraine Avenue Church, Wichita: "When we think of our new house of worship, our first thought is how soon can we begin construction . . . committees are ready to start action; they are just waiting for the word from the War Production Board . . . we feel . . . we will receive the permission in a short time." Marianna Galle, Esther Grundman and Naomi Schmidt plan to attend Bethel College. The Gay Esaus will move to Newton. "We surely hate to see them go but we, too, can see the advantage of living near Bethel so that the children may attend the Academy in another year."

—Berne, Indiana: Rev. Gerald Stucky spoke on "The Gospel in Pictures" and showed and interpreted some religious masterpieces in art at the evening service, August 26.

—Rev. Arthur S. Rosenberger brought the message in the Deep Run (Pa.) Church on August 19.

—Lubin Jantzen plans to continue his studies at the University of California this coming winter. The Jantzens have two children: Daniel Eldon and Esther Anna.

—Rev. Homer Sperling took summer work at Bethel College and returns to the Oklahoma Bible Academy this fall.

—Carl M. Lehman wrote from Puerto Rico on August 13: "Next Sunday we are celebrating the first anniversary of the opening of our hospital. For the event we are getting out a special issue of El Heraldo de La Plata, which is a mimeographed Spanish newspaper our unit is putting out for the local community."

—"C.O.'s in the Caribbean" in the Christian Century of August 29 tells of Mennonite and Brethren C.P.S. services in Puerto Rico. The article dealing with the unique, unselfish service of the C.O.'s concludes thus: "The Puerto Ricans . . . could not quite comprehend why people should do so much for them without expectation of material reward. Of course, said many of the hill people, these are 'crazy Americanos.' But the hill people, and all the other people, have found out that that explanation was not sufficient. They have found out that these are 'crazy Americanos' indeed, but of a special kind—'fools for Christ's sake!' And coming to know that, the Puerto Ricans are coming to a new appreciation of Americanos . . ."

—Immanuel Church, Nappanee, Indiana. The Nappanee Church regards the church papers as educational literature similar to Sunday School papers and will therefore finance the plan through the Sunday School. It is suggested that each family contribute ten cents extra per month through the Sunday School offering each third Sunday of the month. Under the plan one copy of The Mennonite will go into every home.

—Rev. Victor Sawatzky served the Johannestal Church, Hillsboro, Kansas, on September 2 and will serve the Friedenstal Church, Tampa, the next Sunday.

—Ah, Human Nature! In the town of Buhler, Kansas where Mennonites form 95 per cent of the population, the names of men who go to C.P.S. are not allowed on the town honor roll. In the neighboring town of Inman, where Mennonites are much less numerous, the names of IV-E assignees are listed without prejudice or distinction.—The Reporter

—The M.C.C. Relief Clothing Center at Newton, Kansas, has shipped out over forty tons of clothing since it was opened less than a year ago. Fifty-five boxes of shoes are ready to be shipped, and three thousand pairs still need processing.

—The First Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas, held its first offering for the Mennonite Biblical Seminary and Bible School on August 26. The offering amounted to $181.50. Dr. A. Warkentin, president of the new institution, served as minister in the First Church of Newton from 1924 to about 1944.

—Rev. A. H. Schultz is to be installed as pastor of the East Swamp Church, Quakertown, Pa., on September 16. Rev. Howard G. Nyce is to officiate.

—Calvary Church, Mechanic Grove, Pa., plans to have eight days of evangelistic meetings in November.

—The Sunday School Union of the Eastern District plans to hold its annual convention on September 29. Theme, "Looking Ahead."

—Souderton, Pa., The Women's Missionary Society arranged for filling fifty Christmas (relief) boxes. Mrs. Henry Detwiler, whose husband has been serving as M.C.C. relief worker in Egypt, took the boxes and sixty pounds of clothing to Akron. While there she showed pictures taken by her husband, who has been stationed at the El Shatt Camp.

—Rev. Freeman H. Swartz wrote on August 25: "I am about to go to Maine for a brief vacation . . . Enroute, I expect to preach at the union services at Roaring Spring—outdoor—in the park close to the spring . . . That is August 26. I shall have harvest

What Will the War Teach Us?

By Isaac I. Friesen

Now that the curtain has fallen on the last act of the most devastating and destructive war the world has ever seen, it is well to ask ourselves, has this war taught us anything? Will the fifty-five million casualties of the war and all the suffering connected therewith make any lasting impression upon us, or will it all soon be forgotten as so much water that has passed down the river? I believe that there are at least five convictions that should be deeply burned into our souls.

Sin, the Cause of All Wars

1. The first of these is that the cause of all wars and fightings is sin in the human heart. In James 4:1 we read, "From whence come wars and fightings among you? Come they not hence, even of your own lusts that war in your members?" It is more usual, however, to trace the cause of war to some outward cause like an offending nation or dictator. But the deep underlying cause is the corruption of the human heart. Had it not been for the greed, hatred, selfishness and desire for revenge in the human heart it should have been possible for the nations to get together for peaceful settlement of their difficulties instead of resorting to such awful carnage. There has been a tendency to minimize the abysmal depths of evil in the human heart, but the things practised in this war, as for example, the use of atomic bomb have only served to emphasize this fact more strongly. The impression of the prophet Jeremiah must be unreservedly accepted, namely, "The human heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked."

War, a Retribution for Sin

2. The second impression that we must come to is that God allows wars to come as a retribution for sin. Paul says, "The wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men." (Rom. 1:18.) The history of the past proves abundantly that when the wickedness of men increased on the earth that the retribution of God had to follow. This was true in the case of the flood when God destroyed all but a handful of people from the face of the earth because, "God saw that the wickedness of men was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually." A Spanish proverb says that God does not always pay on Saturday but eventually He does pay. This was the truth that the prophets of Israel had to tell the people constantly. Eventually the people were carried into captivity because they failed to heed these warnings. God uses war to punish the nations, and sometimes the punishment falls on the victors as well as the vanquished.

War, a Call to Repentance

3. The third impression is that war itself is a divine call to repentance. Isaiah 26:9, states, "When thy judgments are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness." God's judgments when they do come are to cause us to learn righteousness. We only learn true righteousness when we learn to bow our knees before God and say, "Against thee only have I sinned and done this evil in thy sight." War is not something to make us proud, even though God has given us the victory. It is something that should deeply humble us. It may be said that it would have been better to suffer the humiliation of defeat, if thereby we should have learned righteousness than to be crowned with sweeping military victory if thereby we are confirmed in our ways of ungodliness. The distressing thing is that we see so little evidence of repentance in spite of the great judgment that has come upon us. An increase in divorce rates, in profanity and in Sabbath desecration are not signs of true repentance.

Only Christ Can Save

4. The fourth conviction that we must come to is that apart from the gospel of Jesus Christ there is no power that can overcome the evil in the heart of man. Not only must we open our own hearts to this gospel, but it becomes increasingly important for us to spread it over the entire world. The opportunities now opening to us to do mission work at home and abroad should be made use of by us to the fullest extent.

Isaac I. Friesen is pastor of the Bethel Mission Church, Winnipeg, Manitoba.

5. Finally the conviction should have been impressed upon us that war can never be reconciled with the teachings of Christ. Our forefathers arrived at this conclusion many years ago and rather than take part in war they chose to suffer persecutions and had to migrate from one country to another. As their descendants we should not now throw away that heritage which they so dearly bought for us. Let us learn ourselves and let us teach our children that Christ was the Prince of Peace and that He only can bring peace first of all into the human heart and then to a war-torn world.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

Victory through Seeming Defeat

By F. J. Isaac

A tall fine looking young man came to Mauhadih one day and said with determination: "I want to become a Christian. Please baptize me now." His name was Pilau. and he belonged to a leading family in Tal Deori, where much Christian testimony had been given and where there used to be a number of Christian families. Now only one elderly man and one elderly woman of different families were left.

We suggested that he remain with us for instruction, and in the mean time he should go one day to tell his people of his decision. At first he could not pick up enough courage, but finally he went. He returned with a glowing face and told how his relatives had gathered from far and near to dissuade him. Some had come on foot, some by cart, others on horse and on bicycle. "If you want to be a religious man," they pleaded, "remain a Hindu. We will build you a house; we will give you a monthly allowance; you can even be our religious leader, only do not disgrace us all by becoming a Christian." But he said: "No, I have found something better; I will become a Christian."

We continued to teach him. One day his older brother came to us and asked why we were detaining Pilau. We said: "He is not being detained. He is free to come and go; in fact he went home a few days ago. He is free to go with you now." Having said this much we left the two brothers to talk together. Soon the older brother departed alone. However, a few days later Pilau went to the bazaar and from there to his home with some of his relatives, whom he met. He failed to return to Mauhadih.

We waited a long time. On a visit to Tal Deori we inquired about him but could not find him. Others likewise sought him on several occasions. Some met him, but he was always accompanied by relatives and was uncommunicative. Then we heard that he had become sick. He had a big sore on his hip. As we heard the story afterwards he had begged to be taken to the Mauhadih dispensary for treatment, but no one heeded his request. Or they should take him to Champa hospital, but no one would do it. Finally, in desperation he jumped into a well. He was rescued before he drowned, but in a couple of weeks he died.

This man wanted Christ, but everything was against him. Will not Christ's promise: "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out," apply to him?

All this happened in 1941. Now in 1943 and 1944 the church has grown at Tal Deori. Some of Pilau's relatives have been baptized, and we hear the testimony that this tragic death was a mighty influence in bringing others to the decision to come to Christ.

TO ORDAIN MISSIONARY TO AFRICA

The Lord willing, the ordination of Sister Selma Unruh as missionary to Africa is to take place in the Friedenstal Church, Tampa, Kansas, at 2:30 p.m., November 16. Rev. Phil. A. Wedel, a member of the Board, will officiate. All mission friends are invited to participate with their prayers. There will also be an evening meeting on that day.—P. H. Richert

THE DEBTS of two of our colleges have been wiped out. Last August Freeman Junior College became debt-free, and now Bethel College announces that the old debt has been paid. In 1941 Freeman had a debt of $42,645.57, and in 1932 Bethel had a debt of about $142,000. From the fact that the main reductions in these debts came in the last few years, we conclude that the interest of our conference people in our colleges is strong, and that that interest speaks very eloquently when money is abundant. Undoubtedly, there is in general a greater interest in schools of "higher learning." Our increasingly complex civilization demands it. Forty-five years ago some boys in rural Kansas communities failed to complete the eighth grade because they had to stay at home and help with the farm work. By 1925 not everyone was going to high school. Today a high school education is a "must" for nearly all young people in the General Conference. Increasing numbers are going to college and university. Undoubtedly, this trend has been accelerated by the war, and we can expect many more of our young people to be interested in "going to college." That a goodly number of people realize the importance of making that a "Christian" college education is indicated by the fact that two of our colleges are now debt-free.

TRUE AND TRUTH are not synonymous. The concluding words of a recent newspaper article were: ". . . for Japan the loss of . . . an empire built by bloodshed and terror." It is true that Japan built an empire by bloodshed and terror, but nevertheless the quoted statement distorts the truth. It does so because it presents only one isolated fact of empire while failing to present other "facts of empire" which should be brought out and related in order to present the whole picture, the truth. This becomes evident from relating two other facts of empire, one stated by Time magazine of September 3 and the other by an American Legionnaire, who insists upon relating many facts.

Time tells how "on April 13, 1919, following a series of disturbances in the Punjab, (India) British Brigadier General R. E. H. Dyer threw a detachment of soldiers around a forbidden public meeting in an enclosed square, and ordered his men to fire until their ammunition was exhausted. Result: 379 Indians killed, 1,200 wounded." The Legionnaire, speaking to men in a C.P.S. camp, pointed out that the United States grabbed Florida from the Indians, Texas and California from Mexico, and the Panama Canal Zone from Colombia, and made clear how shady our dealings were in "freeing" Cuba from Spain.

An isolated fact may be true, but it does not necessarily give one the truth. Truth has much to do with the relationships existing between many and varied facts. Thus a newspaper may print something that is true, and yet it may distort the truth by ignoring or repressing important related facts. Many and varied true facts seen in their proper relationships help to make the truth more evident.

RESTLESSNESS is straining the lives of people today. They need rest for their souls. Once again comes the call of Jesus: "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your soul. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light." How shall we find that rest? Jesus says, "learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart." Jesus asks us to be meek, that is, patient under injuries, mild of temper. Our Saviour must have observed how men tended to be just the opposite of meek, how they sought to domineer, that is, rule over others in an arbitrary way. Such "I tell you" conduct does not bring rest for the soul, said Jesus. He asks us to be lowly, that is, unassuming and not proud or self-assertive. Pretentious, conceited, arrogant behaviour makes for friction and irritation in the life of the individual, said Jesus. It is hard for us to be meek and lowly; hence, much of our restlessness. God has so ordained the pattern for human relationships that rest for the soul can only come to those who are meek and lowly in heart.

MINISTERS' SALARIES in the General Conference are not high in comparison with those of other major denominations, and at the same time there are gross inequalities in these salaries. We are not aware that any systematic study has been made of ministers' salaries in the General Conference. We do not know of any minister's conference that has discussed this matter in the past several years. There is little conception of what ought to be a minimum salary for ministers in our Conference. Here is a matter that might well be gone into from the conference angle, for the individual minister does not feel like pushing the matter.

Observations Made on My Canadian Trip

By A. J. Neuenschwander

With few exceptions of those that came to Canada from the United States, the vast majority of Mennonites in Canada are immigrants. They came from Europe in two great immigration periods. The older or earlier ones came between the years of 1870-1880, and the more recent between 1921-1928. Among those that came about fifty years ago are the Old Colony and Sommerfelder groups. They are diligent and also successful farmers, but very conservative in their religious life. They seem to be bound by tradition; therefore their progress along the line of development in church and Christian education lines has been very slow.

Those that affiliate themselves with the General Conference show much more spiritual life and interest. While on long trips on trains, I have been reading a book, Revivals in the Midst of the Years by Dr. Benjamin Rice Lacy, Jr., President of the Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Virginia. In this book he traces the reasons and also records the various revivals that spread through the early Colonies and on down to and including the Civil War period. Dr. Lacy belongs to the Presbyterian Church, and he traced the growth and development of his church. He noticed that in the wake of various revivals that swept over the country, small church schools and seminaries were started, that Sunday schools were established and Bible societies were organized in the sections where the church experienced these special seasons of spiritual refreshing.

I did not find that a series of revivals had spread through the Canadian provinces, but a spirit of deep devotion and concern for spiritual growth is, nevertheless, manifesting itself in the springing up of numerous Bible schools. The movement is clearly a religious revival, even if it does not express itself in a way identical to the revivals of the earlier days of the United States.

The Gretna and Rosthern Academies

The Mennonite Collegiate Institute, Gretna, Manitoba, organized under the leadership of Rev. H. H. Ewert, 1891, and the German English Academy, founded a few years later at Rosthern, where Rev. Toews was principal from 1905-1913, and pioneer institutions in the educational field in Canadian Mennonite circles. Both these academies offer religious instruction in addition to the regular academic subjects and as such have contributed greatly to the growth and development of the religious life of Mennonitism in Canada. In earlier years attendance and support of these schools was somewhat meager. The writer recalls vividly the year 1913-1914 when he served as teacher with Prof. Silas Hertzler, now at Goshen College.

There were between forty-five and fifty pupils in attendance that year. A big majority were boys and young men, because at that time it was not considered essential for girls to acquire much learning. During the year, we accompanied Prof. Ewert to various churches and conventions in the hope to increase the interest in the school. On August 10th when I visited the Mennonite Collegiate Institute, I was delighted to learn from Prof. Peters, the Principal, that 160 pupils, an equal number of boys and girls, were already registered for the coming year and twenty were on the waiting list. The school is filled to capacity. Plans and lumber are ready to build a new and larger school as soon as the permit is granted.

When I visited in Rosthern, in early July, I was taken through the Rosthern Academy and was amazed at their building program that was in progress. The only dormitory was being enlarged to furnish more room for students and also to provide additional class room. The experience at these two schools proved to me that a new day has dawned for our Canadian Mennonite churches.

The Bible Schools

The concern, that is found in every section, for Bible Schools, gives promise that the religious revival among our Mennonites is bound to continue and grow in the future. In many localities small Bible schools are established, and devout men do not count the cost in their desire to help the young people to come to a definite experience of Christ as saviour and to assist them to gain valuable Bible knowledge. From these efforts, even if the school term is only about five months, it can easily be seen that spiritual life and activity in the churches will be greatly increased in the future.

Are we permitted to express two fond hopes: First, it is the fervent hope of this writer that in due time the Sunday Schools will grow and not only teach the children as is the case now, but that all young people and adults will become faithful members in these schools and in well-directed classes to study God's Word faithfully. Second, another hope is that in the future many of these small Bible Schools, with limited facilities, might be united into two or three well-equipped and well-located and well-staffed Bible schools.

Advanced Theological Training School

The decision, by the Canadian Conference, held at Eigenheim, July 1-4, 1945, to direct the Board of Education to establish an Institution of advanced standing for special training for ministers in theology and related subjects, is a most noteworthy step. This gives promise that the Cause of Christ will be carried on with increased devotion, energy, and efficiency.

The Influence of the Retreats

The retreats, although not old in years, have nevertheless made a noteworthy contribution to the uplifting of the moral and spiritual life among the young people. The days spent together are not many, but they are filled with messages, conferences, and discussions that are bound to make a lasting impression on many a young heart for Christ and the Church in the years to come.

With the conscience of the church awakened to the extent that much effort and sacrifice is gladly made: to deepen and strengthen the Cause of Christ, to enroll many in a devout study of God's Word, and to provide a special training school for ministers and leaders, a spiritually vitalized, growing and useful Mennonite church in Canada is a definite possibility.

PILGRIMS IN PARAGUAY

II. The Land to Which They Came

By Willard Smith

To what kind of a land did these pilgrims come? This country has sometimes been called "Unkown Paraguay." While it is becoming better known today, certainly at that time (1929) it was all but unknown to the Russian Mennonites. Some of them have admitted to me that they had never heard of it before; this no doubt was true of others also. Paraguay is a land-locked state in the heart of South America with 170,000 square miles of territory. Through unfortunate wars with larger neighbors, Paraguay has suffered several losses of important territory. In the last war with Bolivia, however, some Chaco territory was gained.

Paraguay is reached by the Parana River system through Argentina, and more recently by airplane. Its capital, Asuncion, is connected by rail, also, with Buenos Aires. That part of the railroad which lies in Paraguay, some three hundred miles, constitutes Paraguay's only railroad, with the exception of a few small private roads operated by large corporations in connection with their interests. This fact, taken together with that of the lack of roads, suggests one of Paraguay's greatest problems, lack of adequate transportation.

The Population

The population of the country is largely a mixture of Spanish and Indian. The predominant Indian group was the Guarani, a fairly advanced and capable tribe which has left its impress on the life of Paraguay. Not only has it left its blood flowing in the veins of most Paraguayans, but also its language remains and is spoken by most of the people. Spanish is the official language, but in the outlying parts of Paraguay children do not learn Spanish until and unless they go to school. There are more Paraguayans who cannot speak Spanish than there are Paraguayans who cannot speak Guarani.

Nobody knows how many people are living in Paraguay. No census, accurate or inaccurate, has been taken. Only estimates of population exist and these vary considerably. The estimate for the total population is usually given as 1,000,000. The estimates for the largest city, the capital Asuncion, vary from 100,000 to 170,000. The city probably has more than 100,000 today. It is interesting to note that the total population estimate is little greater today than it was in 1865. In that year began the disastrous five-year war with powerful neighbors, Argentina, Uruguay, and Brazil, which reduced the adult male population to an estimated 30,000. Paraguay has few cities. The second largest city has a population of perhaps 15,000 or 20,000.

An Agricultural Country

Paraguay is an agricultural country. A bit of industry exists in Asuncion and a few other places, but not much. A large proportion of the industry which does exist is controlled by foreign capital. Most of Paraguay's manufactured goods are imported from the United States, Europe, and especially Argentina. Asuncion has sometimes been called a branch office of Buenos Aires, meaning that Paraguay is largely dependent upon Argentina for her economic livelihood. This is due in a large part to the fact that virtually her only economic outlet is by way of the Paraguay-Parana water system through Argentina. There is a great deal of interest in Paraguay, as well as in other countries, in securing transportation facilities through Brazil and Bolivia in order that this dependence on Argentina might be diminished. Agriculturally, too, Paraguay depends much on Argentina. The chief crops are yerba mate, mandioca, cotton, tobacco, peanuts, citrus fruits, and other tropical or sub-tropical fruits. Some corn is grown but virtually no wheat. Hence nearly all the flour used is imported from Argentina.

Paraguay is a level rather than a mountainous country and only a small percentage of the tillable land is being used. Rainfall over most of the country is sufficient and there is no good reason why a much larger agricultural production could not be secured. There exists also quite a large cattle industry. The climate is more or less sub-tropical, the tropic of Capricorn running through the center of the country. The summer months are hot, to be sure, and often humid, but throughout the year Paraguay has a great deal of pleasant weather.

Religion and Morals

The moral and religious standards in Paraguay are far from high. Catholicism is the religion of the state, but other religions are tolerated with considerable reluctance, however, by the church hierarchy. The Catholicism which prevails is less enlightened than that of some countries. It is interesting to note that even John W. White who thinks that in other Latin American countries Protestant missionaries are a hindrance to the good-neighbor policy and ought to be called home (see his Our Good Neighbor Hurdle), admits that Paraguay needs missionaries. Illegitimacy has been estimated to be as high as seventy-five per cent. This situation has probably been aggravated by the low ratio of men to women in years following 1870.

The Government

Politically, Paraguay is a nominal republic which occasionally gives lip service to democracy but which has had through most of its history, and still has, dictatorship. The present government is not as good as its friends say it is and not as bad as its enemies declare it to be. It seems to be possessed of a social conscience and is taking at least some steps to ameliorate the conditions of the poverty-stricken masses.

The Capital

Asuncion, the capital, is one of the oldest cities in the western hemisphere, its history going back to 1537. It is the only American capital city that has no city water system or city sewage system. It is a picturesque city of yesterday, but there are signs that it is beginning to awaken from its four-century sleep. Via M.C.C. Headquarters, Akron, Pa.

MUTUAL AID IMPERATIVES

By Lois Johns

Every need for and every ability to extend aid are mutual aid imperatives or "musts." Failure to supply these needs and give this aid will mean spiritual loss to the church and to the individuals, but meeting these needs and exercising these abilities will keep alive a sense of brotherhood and stewardship.

The opportunities for mutual aid are almost unlimited. On every hand are needs for aid and abundant resources with which to meet those needs. Much of this aid can be and is given spontaneously—husking bees, barn raisings, quiltings, loans to relatives, Christmas baskets, and gifts of money are but a few forms of spontaneous mutual aid.

On the other hand, organized mutual aid is necessary in order that certain other needs will be met: the man who needs occupational advice may not have a wise father whom he may consult, the girl needing money to go to college may not have a relative who is able to supply it, and the young man wishing to stock a farm may not have the necessary resources. Moreover the man having money to invest may not be aware of the opportunities for using his money in helping his fellow Christians, or he alone may not have sufficient resources to meet a given need. In such situations, organized mutual aid has its place.

The variety of situations in which a system of mutual aid is needed is best described by specific illustrations. The following accounts, all of actual needs, are real mutual aid "musts" if we are going to hold the young people for the church, encourage settlement in Mennonite communities, lessen economic failures, help young people get a start in home-building and business, and provide opportunities for the expression of brotherly love. (In all cases, pseudonyms have been used in place of the real names.)

Able to help a young man who wants to get on a farm, an Ohio farmer writes: "We have a farm we are living on, and for physical reasons in the family we would like to get off for a few years. We were wondering if you might have a young married man that could get deferred from going to camp if he had the chance to go on a farm. We would prefer some one who was reared on a farm and sufficiently interested to take care of livestock and farm. This farm is equipped with plenty of livestock and implements except grain drill... Some one in the conference would have the opportunity for church work. . . ."

Wishing to help some one into a business, an Indiana man writes: "... I am interested in a young man either just out of C.P.S. or about to be released, who has extensive training or experience in photographic work, to take over an agricultural photography business in the Middle West. The job would consist mostly of taking pictures of registered livestock, of farmsteads, of rural scenes, and a possibility of making instructional slides for colleges and vocational high schools..."

aid. His situation is reviewed in a letter from the Section for Mennonite Aid to the college president: A request for financial assistance from Jay Hoover has come to our attention. You know Jay as a former student and as one who has taken a considerable amount of correspondence work from _____ during his C.P.S. days. Jay is asking whether the M.C.C. is in a position to help him pay a forty-dollar account which he owes _____ College for correspondence work taken during C.P.S. . . .”

Inquiring about a suitable place to settle, a Kansas non-C.P.S. man asks: “We are writing to you because we do not know of any one else who might have the information we seek, namely about a Mennonite settlement where land is considerably cheaper than it is here in _____ County, Kansas. We are renters and have farmed for the last twenty-four years . . . We would like to have a place where farming is similar to the farming we do here, growing grain and raising stock . . .”

For help in financing farm, livestock, and furniture, a C.P.S. man requests information concerning the availability of a loan: “. . . Since Mrs. Daily and I have a farm background and have farmed for several years prior to the draft we feel we should get back to the farm as soon as possible. . . . We are much more interested in owning a farm, even though it is small, than to rent a farm with the possibility of constantly moving after the expense of repairing and beautifying a rented farm. Will help be available in locating a desirable farm in a Mennonite community? We own one-half interest in a quarter of land in a non-Mennonite community in western Kansas . . . We own a small tractor, plow, and duckfoot. We have some household furniture and a small saving . . . Will M.C.C. or some other organization finance the balance of the farm, livestock, and furniture with a loan for a long period of time with a low rate of interest . . . ?”

Needing a month's hospitalization, a discharged Ohio C.P.S. man seeks assistance: “. . . It has been found necessary that I go to a hospital for complete bed rest for a period of at least one month. Further hospitalization will depend on findings of X-rays after one month . . . I should like to know if a loan for the total sum amounting to something over one hundred dollars can be obtained at this time for the one month period . . .”

To open a small machine shop, a discharged C.P.S. man needs a loan. The Section for Mennonite Aid explains his case thus: “This morning Ira Pennell . . . inquired about possibilities of receiving a loan from M.C.C. to open a small machine shop at _____ . . . He has had four and a half years experience with this kind of work. . . There is a very pressing need for a farmers' machine shop at _____ . . . He thought he should have between two thousand and $2500.00 to equip himself for the work. . . .”

There is almost no end to the variety of the circumstances which make imperative a system of mutual aid. Young people especially need many kinds of personal and vocational guidance and assistance, and many of them do not know where to turn for such help. Many, too, are the more mature and more established members of Mennonite communities who are concerned about the economic and spiritual welfare of the young people and desire to have means by which they may aid them more efficiently.

Methods for meeting these needs in this complex modern life must be developed; these needs cannot be lightly brushed aside and forgotten. If the Mennonite Church meets them wisely, her youths' loyalty to and faith in the Christian brotherhood will be strengthened. Practical expressions of mutual aid will make more meaningful the expression Christian brotherhood and will be a ringing Christian testimony to the world.

BETHEL COLLEGE IS DEBT FREE

To the friends of Bethel College:

Thanks to you, and you, and you. Thanks to everybody who had a share in helping Bethel College pay its old debt. First and foremost, however, thanks to God our Heavenly Father for His help and guidance in this undertaking and its final achievement. The old debt was of long standing. It began some twenty years ago and in 1932 reached an amount close to $142,000. How dark the future looked for Bethel College at that time! Some schools were going bankrupt. What a burden the old debt was. The Lord has heard and answered the prayers in this regard of the many friends of Bethel College. The Lord has helped and has made others willing to help. The old debt is finally paid. In view of this the Executive Committee of the Board has decided that Founders' Day, October 12, the anniversary of the corner-stone laying of the Administration Building, is to be celebrated this year on Sunday, October 14, with a special thanksgiving program in the afternoon and evening. More detailed announcements will be made later. For the present we say: “Thank you all again. Praise God from whom all blessings flow, and may He help us all henceforth to keep Bethel debt free.”

Gratefully in behalf of Bethel College,
Ed. G. Kaufman, President

OUR MINISTRY OF EDUCATION

By J.H. Langenwalter

THE IMPORTANCE OF INTEREST

There are churches which seek earnestly to prepare people for the Way of Life for all mankind. They do this because they are interested in people as they see them from the viewpoint of Jesus. They start to develop this kind of interest early in the life of those entrusted to them. That makes it largely a matter of deep interest for the Sunday School. Many later decisions can be traced to these early impressions in the home and in the Sunday School. One wonders what those in service, because of the recent world conflict, could tell us on this subject.

There are churches which are fully as deeply interested in the children of their community as they are, or think they are, in children across the seas. Too often, however, it seems so much easier to lend an ear to the appeals which come from far off than to do the obvious thing for the good of children within the home, the church or the community.

Too many of our buildings are planned for the older people. Too often children are placed into rooms for the Sunday School period which stand in discouraging contrast to what they find in the public schools. They say nothing, but they make comparisons which determine their attitudes during very important periods of their lives. "But these ye ought to have done, and not to have left the other undone." Matthew 23:23b.

There are churches which seek to give to each according to his needs. That is encouraging. It makes for a sense of unity in a normal way. It is also the most interesting and the most satisfying way of meeting our opportunity-responsibilities in that part of the church work which is fundamental for the future.

There are churches which have discovered that interest is an important factor in the up-building of really helpful Sunday Schools. To have made that discovery, and to have acted on it, is both a reward and a challenge. It is also a source of new discoveries as to the possible meaning of the work we are trying to do. More than that, it is the way in which we learn to appreciate each other both as to our needs and as to our possibilities of service.

Some of the finest friendships have been formed as people have worked together for the good of all groups in the work of the church, especially at home and then also abroad. Unfortunately, the opposite is also true. Some of the finest possibilities for fruitful friendships have been lost because, even in church work, self-interest has too often overshadowed Christ and His interest for all mankind.

QUOTE

Arthur E. Morgan, expert on "the community":

"There is greater range of ability among 'common' people than we recognize. Limitations are not so much in present or latent skill as in personal character, such as persistence, intelligence, self-control, care of one's physical health, dependableness and social interest . . ."—"Community Service News"

Roy L. Smith, Editor of "The Christian Advocate":

"Somewhere in the program of every Annual Conference (Methodist) there must be provision for a searching of souls. Nothing more important can possibly come before any body of Methodists than this thing of cleaning up the hearts and lives of those who are to stand in the pulpits to proclaim 'the acceptable year of the Lord.' Ancient jealousies, feuds, grudges, rivalries, and political machines must go. Personal habits must be inspected. Ambition must be brought under subjection to Christ."

H. F. Rall, retired seminary professor:

"In his wisdom and love God has set us here in close relation to others. A mere individual is no real man. To be a man is to live in home and community and nation. To be a Christian is to love and share, to labor with others and to serve them. God's providence is personal but never merely individual."

Richard M. Fagley, Secretary, Commission on a Just and Durable Peace:

"The experts believe that other states will be able to make atomic bombs in three to five years. When and if that happens, when two or more states can bring about their mutual destruction, the final race to disaster will, in all likelihood, be short indeed. Through God's mercy, a remnant in some forgotten isle or some deep tunnel might be spared to begin again the long uphill trek. We dare not, however, expect much undeserved mercy. We have had too ample warnings of judgment, to mistake the consequences of continued disobedience. We know, as Major George Fielding Eliot has pointed out, that the logical outcome of the full development and use of atomic bombs is the extinction of life on earth."

David D. Eitzen, professor of pastoral counselling:

"An emotional state manifests itself physically. Chief among the physical symptoms of fear, worry, anxiety, resentment, and guilt feelings is chronic fatigue."

Errol T. Elliott, Editor of "The American Friend" (Quaker):

"Her (Japan's) defeat does not mean our victory. In large measure we shall find that defeat is indivisible. This is not victory. There is only less of defeat for the Allies, at the present time, than for the Axis nations. We are all defeated more than we know. It will begin to catch up with us sooner or later in the difficult days ahead."

ART IN C. P. S.

By Randy Penner

The C.P.S. arts and crafts show which was held recently in conjunction with the General Conference brought into the public eye evidence of the fact that there is artistic ability in some of our men. Even more is no doubt lying dormant in others and has not been expressed because of the lack of stimulation. It is surprising to note the interest which is often aroused by directive stimulation, and with a little encouragement it can grow into something beneficial and worthwhile.

It seems to me that such an exhibit as was mentioned at the beginning should be made an annual affair and should be continued even after C.P.S. ceases to exist. It should probably be held in connection with some outstanding occasion such as, for instance, the song festival of the Western District. The two programs could be joined very fittingly because they are so closely related by their very nature. The exhibit should be thrown open to entries by all ages of both sexes and classified accordingly.—I was going to suggest the bestowing of annual Mennonite awards in art upon outstanding achievements, but I remember at the same time that one of the primary objectives of progressive Christian circles is to do away with the competitive element.

Arts and crafts are possibly the most productive outlets C.P.S. men have for self-expression released in constructive thinking and doing. And let me impress upon the constituency that this is all-important in a program where continued regimentation of personality is inclined to deaden the senses and dampen initiative. This is indeed a problem to be reckoned with, for there are too many of our young men merely "sitting it out," as it were, and spending their leisure hours doing just that. Perhaps the arts and crafts have therapeutic value even within our own group.

For some time a number of us in MCC-CPS have felt the need for centralizing artistic talent in order to create a compact and fertile nucleus from which great things might grow. There is something about the association of like-minds which stimulates individual and group endeavor. But as yet nothing of this nature has been realized, although the crafts school which just adjourned here at Denison is a definite step in the right direction. Several men from various mid-western camps were assembled here for the express purpose of obtaining schooling in crafts, and they were more or less under the tutelage of a fellow camper who is especially adept with his hands.

Perhaps from amid the frustration of C.P.S. will arise some noble accomplishments worthy of recognition as lasting memorials to the ceaseless struggle of men to break loose from and shatter the encroaching tentacles of bondage. Conscriptio will not deter us all from artistic enterprise; in fact it has fired us with a burning zeal to counteract its menacing claws with all that is within us. We who chafe neath the bonds of regimentation more readily than the average must and will make our testimonies known through the avenues of the arts.

Seventh Annual Retreat at Mountain Lake, Minnesota

The seventh annual Mountain Lake Young People's Retreat of the General Conference churches began on Sunday evening, August 19, with a service held in the village park. The guest speaker, Rev. Andrew R. Shelly, pastor of the Stirling Avenue Mennonite Church, Kitchener, Ontario, Canada, spoke on "The Inspiration of Possibilities."

Sessions on Monday and Tuesday convened at the Bethel Church. After the morning chapel, Rev. B. J. Braun, pastor of the Carson Mennonite Brethern Church, Delft, Minnesota, led us in the Bible Study class. "The Holy Spirit" was the subject of study. Rev. B. J. Nickel of the Butterfield Mennonite Church was in charge of the music period which followed. During the Inspiration Hour, the Rev. Victor Graber, pastor of the Immanuel Mennonite Church of Delft, inspired the young people to a life of absolute surrender to Christ.

The noon lunch and recreation prepared the retreaters for a few more hours of study. Rev. Shelly discussed with us "Problems Facing Mennonite Youth Today." After another period of singing we divided into groups. The girl's discussion groups were led by two pastor's wives, Mrs. August Ewert of Mountain Lake and Mrs. B. J. Nickel of Butterfield. Leader of the boy's group was Rev. Dan E. Friesen, Pastor of the Mennonite Brethern Church of Mountain Lake. Monday evening Rev. Shelly gave an inspiring message on "It Pays To Be A Christian," followed on Tuesday evening by "Our Heritage and the New Frontier." The busy retreaters' day closed with an After-Glow service in the park.

The business meeting was held Wednesday morning after the regular shortened class periods. At this meeting officers were elected to plan the 1946 retreat. Norman Voth and Irene Kliewer were reelected as president and vice-president, respectively. In the afternoon the group enjoyed a picnic at Marten's Creek. The retreaters met around a campfire that evening for an impressive consecration service. Rev. Shelly's message on "Expanding Spiritual Horizons" brought the retreat to a close.

We have enjoyed this time of study and fellowship around the Word. We trust that as we heed the challenge of our motto, "Whosoever will lose his life for My sake, the same shall save it" (Luke 9:24b), we will be "Youth All-Out For Christ" as our theme suggested.

YOUTH JOTTINGS

—"David Livingstone, wasted to a skelton and dying in Africa, on his knees cried out: 'Let Thy blessing be upon every man who will help 'Others,'"—Bulletin, Aberdeen, Idaho.

—Copies of the "Smoke Jumper" supplement that appeared in a recent Mennonite are still available free of charge. Write The Mennonite, North Newton, Kansas, for free copies.

—A unique colored comic (not funny tho) pamphlet of eight pages can be secured free of charge from the Church Peace Union, 70 Fifth Avenue, New York 11, New York. The theme of it is "The Churches, Temples and Synogogues together with men and women of all faiths throughout the world have a heavy responsibility to help make the World Charter of the United Nations effective." The pamphlet undoubtedly is not fully acceptable to most Mennonite believers in non-resistance, but it is a good example of a modern means of education that is being used effectively in new realms.

—Peace Time Conscription . . . A Problem for Americans is an excellent little pamphlet which can be had for five cents from the American Friends Service Committee, 20 South 12th Street, Philadelphia 7, Pa. —Rev. P. H. Richert reports that the Tabor Church is seriously considering the adoption of a mutual aid plan for the borrowing and loaning of money.

Church Membership in the U. S.

New York, Sept. 6—Church membership in the United States has reached an all-time high of 72,492,669 persons, more than 52 per cent of the population, according to the 1945 edition of the Yearbook of American Churches. The total membership figure, as officially reported by 256 religious bodies in the continental United States, represents an increase of 3,991,483 over that compiled for the previous issue two years ago. Total church membership, as well as the proportion of church members in the population, has been increasing steadily for many years.

Among the Protestant groups the Methodist Church reports the largest membership—8,046,129 persons, followed by the Southern Baptist Convention with 5,667,926. The figures in the Yearbook are mainly for years ending in 1943 and 1944.

Thirteen religious bodies each reported over one million members, a total of 59,767,348 persons, equal to 82 per cent of the total church membership. These thirteen bodies, and their memberships, are as follows:

The Roman Catholic Church	23,419,701
The Methodist Church	8,046,129
Southern Baptist Convention	5,667,926
Jewish Congregations	4,641,184
National Baptist Convention, U.S.A. Inc.	4,021,618
National Baptist Convention of America	2,352,339
The Protestnat Episcopal Church	2,227,524
Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A.	2,040,399
The United Lutheran Church in America	1,690,204
Disciples of Christ	1,672,354
Northern Baptist Convention	1,555,914
Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Missouri, Ohio, and other states	1,356,655
Congregational Christian Churches	1,075,401

The number of members 13 years of age and over is estimated to be 59,717,107 persons, also the highest figure ever reported.

Twenty-three Baptist denominations have a total of 14,208,193 members; twenty Methodist denominations have 9,924,842 members; twenty Lutheran denominations have 5,129,147 members. The 256 religious bodies report 253,762 local churches.

FOR US

If we have not learned that God's in man,
And man in God again,
That to love thy God is to love thy brother,
And to serve thy Lord is to serve each other—
Then Christ was born in vain!

If we have not learned that one man's life
In all men lives again;
That each man's battle, fought alone,
Is won or lost for everyone—
Then Christ hath lived in vain!

If we have not learned that death's no break
In life's unceasing chain,
That the work of one life well begun
In others is finished, by others is done—
Then Christ hath died in vain!

If we have not learned of immortal life,
And a future free from pain,
The Kingdom of God in the heart of man,
And the living world on heaven's plan—
Then Christ arose in vain!

CORRESPONDENCE

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH McPherson, Kansas

The Mennonite Church group of McPherson had their constitution approved and adopted on March 11 and 18. A copy was then sent to the Home Mission Board, which gave its approval after which it was put in printed form and placed in every home. Members secured their letters from other churches and on July 22 an organization meeting was held. Thirty-three signed as charter members.

On the following Sunday, a business meeting was called to elect all the necessary officers in compliance with the constitution.

Baptismal services were held on August 19 when six young people were received into the church. We have charter members at the present.

On August 26, members of this church and a few visitors participated in the Sacred Communion.

For the past several months the average attendance was sixty. The record attendance was 105.

Members of the group have been looking at other churches to get ideas in drawing up plans for the new church building. Word has been received from Jonas Graber that a building permit can be secured from the WPB. The group is planning to go forward.—Mrs. J. W. G., Corr.

EDEN MENNONITE CHURCH Moundridge, Kansas

On Friday, August 31, the Eden Church held its annual Harvest Festival at the Wm. Juhnke picnic grounds. This was their first peace-time festival, and a large crowd gathered. The forenoon program consisted of a program by the Junior Sunday School, after which Rev. Walter Gering made a few remarks relative to the festival. After a lunch in the open under the trees, the congregation gathered once more to hear an interesting and inspiring message by Rev. J. N. Byler. Rev. Byler, the Relief Director in the Mennonite Central Committee, told of the work the M.C.C. is doing in foreign fields, and also of what is being planned in the future. The need is great, and the group responded generously in the two offerings. Thanks to the Almighty for a bountiful harvest. Only by sharing with others less fortunate can one rise to the fullest that which is given from above—Ellis Goering, Corr.

RELIEF

Mennonite Representative in Europe

C. F. Klassen arrived in England on August 23 with the hope of tapping various channels of information regarding the plight of displaced Mennonites in Europe and with the hope of entering British-occupied Germany. At the same time Akron received a call for help in behalf of several thousand displaced Mennonites now interned in Denmark. The London M.C.C. office was requested to make immediate investigation. The latest message from London indicated that Bro. Klassen was leaving for Copenhagen, Denmark, on August 29.

Workers Return from Paraguay

Vernon and Mrs. Schmidt arrived in New York, August 26, having returned from the Paraguayan Chaco and Asuncion by way of Buenos Aires. Brother Schmidt's return terminates almost four years of service among the Mennonite colonists of Paraguay. Sara Hinstead Schmidt had joined Brother Schmidt in April, 1944, and served as a practical nurse in the Fernheim hospital and colony communities. Brother Schmidt first assisted the Hutterites in building a community hospital, and then began to direct the grading of a favorable road through the Chaco from Filadelfia in the Fernheim Colony to the only railroad running into the Chaco, approximately sixty miles away. This required that sections of the previous wagon paths be re-routed through the Chaco tangle to shorten distances or improve dainage. To prevent the Chaco from reclaiming its own, to improve grading and drainage, a full-time crew will continue to work on it.

Deadline Days for Christmas Carton Project

Christmas carton requests received from interested families and church groups have exceeded the total of 7,000. More than 5,000 packed parcels have already been returned to Akron. It is necessary that all filled cartons be sent in as rapidly as possible. All cartons which have remained unfilled should also be returned promptly.

The time and expense involved in acknowledging the receipt of each packed carton can well be understood by each participant. The silence of the M.C.C. offices in this matter is in no way indicative of the measure of appreciation that is felt for each person's generous support of this project.

"Tools and Utensils for Relief"

The Mennonite Central Committee has received authorization from the President's War Relief Control Board and other government agencies concerned to conduct a "Tools and Utensils for Relief" program. Full details and instructions regarding contributing and shipping tools and utensils have been released to all Mennonite and Brethren in Christ church papers.

As these notes are being written the regional directors of Mennonite camps, along with area pastors and personnel from the C.P.S. Section are meeting at Akron. C.P.S. demobilization and policies regarding the closing of camps are some of the chief topics for discussion. Other concerns relate to the opening of additional special projects in the fall, camp pastors and the ministerial program, and the matter of providing more counseling for the men in the camps and units.

The day when the first men will be released is still uncertain. Selective Service met this week with the House Military Affairs Committee to determine, among other things, the mind of Congress regarding C.P.S. demobilization, but it appears evident that nothing definite will be known until Congress convenes on September 4 and some disposition is made of the Winstead Bill.

Tools and Utensils for Relief

(This program has not been worked out for Canada as yet, and hence the details released here apply only to the States.—Publicity Editor)

One of the most acute shortages in the most western European countries is that of the tools with which to rebuild the wreckage left by the war and to till the soil. Tools and utensils which many of our people will be glad to give will help the people of these countries to get back on their feet and help themselves, thus hastening a return to a normal life. Either new or used tools and utensils may be contributed.

The Mennonite Central Committee has been urged to present this need to the churches of the United States which support the Mennonite Relief Program. It is felt that this is a worthy project, and Mennonites interested in contributing to this need are encouraged to do so. Contributions will be divided approximately equally between France and Holland, where we have set up our own distributing organizations.

Tools That Can Be Used to Advantage

Carpenter Tools: hammers, hatchets, saws, planes, wood chisels, squares, braces, bits, draw knives, bench vises, trowels, plumb bobs; Gardening Tools: hoes, rakes, shovels, spades, hand cultivators, potato forks, 1-horse cultivators; Other Hand Tools: axes, pliers and pincers, tin snips, soldering irons, crescent wrenches, pipe wrenches, emery grinders and bench, cold chisels, hacksaws and new blades, punches, riveting hammers, blow torches, wrench sets, three cornered saw files, mill files, screw drivers, pocket knives, pitch forks, grass sickels, scythes; Household Utensils: table knives, table forks, teaspoons, table-spoons, stirring spoons, soup dippers, cooking utensils (medium sized), butcher knives, kitchen knives, pans, pails, tubs, metal plates, can openers, cork-screws, coffee pots, teapot (metal), milk pails, milk cans, brooms, brushes, kitchen gadgets of every description, ironing boards, flat irons, scissors, drinking cups, oil cloth, paint brushes, frying pans, colanders, soup kettles, baking pans, pancake irons.

Conditions of Used Tools to Be Acceptable:

Only tools which have a good deal of practical usability can be accepted. All tools contributed must be in good repair. Electric welding or brazing is an acceptable means of repairing many broken or partly broken tools and making them useful. This must be done before the tools are sent in. All tools to be contributed should be oiled, greased, or painted. Rusted tools should be cleaned with sandpaper or emery paper before being painted.

How Tools Should Be Gathered and Shipped

1. Congregations or groups of congregations should arrange for a suitable place to which the contributions can be brought for packing.

2. Small tools should be boxed. Sharp tools should be wrapped or individually boxed to prevent damage to sharp edges and injury to those who handle them. Larger tools may be securely banded in bundles. Do not use rope or twine for bundling tools, because it will stretch and the tools may be lost in transit. Wire or metal banding should be used. Be sure that the banding is adequate. A little extra is better than not enough.

3. Shipment should be made by rail or truck freight, prepaid, to the Mennonite Central Committee as foregoing paragraph. Original bill of lading should be sent in immediately, advising the Mennonite Central Committee that the shipment is on the way.

5. Final packing of tools and utensils for overseas shipment will be handled at Akron.

Some Questions Answered:

Q. Can new tools and utensils be accepted?

A. Yes. Our program has been approved for either new or used tools and utensils.

Q. What criteria should be used to judge whether used tools are good enough to contribute?

A. Usability is the test. If tools are good enough to do good work at home, they would do the same in Europe. Do not send junk or cheap, trashy things. Remember, our contributions go out "In the Name of Christ." Let our gifts be worthy of the Name.

Q. What about repairing broken or worn tools and utensils?

A. Many tools and utensils can be made useful by proper repairs. Electric welding and brazing can often restore a broken or partly broken tool to a high degree of usefulness. Repaired tools and utensils are acceptable, PROVIDED they are in good usable condition. Repairing must be done before the contributions are forwarded to Akron. Rusted tools should be cleaned and all tools should be oiled, greased or painted.

Q. What kind of cooking utensils are most desirable?

A. Medium sized aluminum, stainless steel, or cast iron. Porcelain enamel ware is accepted if not more than slightly chipped, but must be more carefully packed for shipment.

C.P.S. Men Rescue Hikers

Seven C.P.S. volunteers from Nederland, Fort Collins, Colorado, side camp, assisted a local sheriff in rescuing five girls from the Colorado Rockies on the night of August 9. The girls, hiking in the mountains, were evidently marooned on a ledge. One of them had fallen into a boulder field and had to be carried out by stretcher for twenty-five miles.

Recognition Given to Firefighters

receiving a number of commendations from Forest Service officials for the excellent service they have been performing. The following excerpts have been taken from a letter which was addressed to the men at North Fork camp:

"It is fires like this one that call for our best efforts and a strong will to win. As you are aware this same area was ravaged by fire six years ago, almost to the day, and millions of feet of valuable timber and watershed was destroyed. There may have been a repetition of such an occurrence but it not been for your fine work . . . On fires of this sort there are always trying circumstances; the hikes are long and hard, the weather is hot, the rations are short and irregular, and sometimes the beds don't arrive . . . The fellows like you who can take these discomforts, do the job, and come out smiling are the ones who make fighting go efficiently and effectively."

PEACE SECTION NOTES

Military Conscription

It has been reliably reported that President Truman will ask Congress to enact legislation to provide for peacetime military training. Since peacetime conscription is considered a dead issue it is believed that this type of legislation would be a compromise which might be acceptable to the nation. The plan would encourage every young man to volunteer for evening periods of training in the National Guard or joining up with an R.O.T.C. unit in either high school or college. Failing to volunteer for either of these services would mean that a man would be drafted upon reaching the age of twenty-three to serve one year in the regular army.

In the meantime the President has asked for a two-year extension of the present draft. These developments indicate that the military group is powerful in this country and will make a bid to continue their interests in peacetime.

BETHEL COLLEGE

Traditional activities and meetings attending the opening of school began Sunday afternoon, September 2, with the Faculty Consecration Service led by President Kaufman. Dr. Langenwalter and Prof. Menno Harder discussed, "What Makes a College Christian?" and a report was given by Dean Goertz on plans for accrediting courses taken in camp by returning draftees. The group then enjoyed a fellowship supper in charge Helen W. Penner. Testing, enrollment, and counselling of students began Tuesday and continued throughout the week, with the evenings devoted to the usual campus tour, music program, the S.C.A. reception, and the Fall Mixer. The Women's Association gave their annual tea for the students and faculty Wednesday afternoon. Dr. J. Winfield Fretz spoke on "Wanted: a Christian Education" at the formal opening service on Sunday evening, September 9.

Mennonite Biblical Seminary and Bible School News

Report of the Meeting of Students, Board Members, and others interested in opening the Mennonite Biblical Seminary and the Mennonite Bible School held Friday, August 31, 2:30 p. m. in the chapel of Bethany Biblical Seminary, Chicago, Illinois.

After a brief introduction, Rev. J. N. Smucker, president of the General Conference, made the opening remarks in which he pointed out the great importance of the schools and the responsibility we as students and faculty as well as all who are connected with it have. The Lord expects us to be priests who are concerned about the salvation of souls and prophets who bring the Word of the Lord to them, but most of all he wants us to be saints who live a holy life in accordance with the Word that is taught and preached.

Rev. A. S. Rosenberger, President of the Seminary Board, gave a brief historical review of the Seminary, going back to the Witmarsum Seminary at Bluffton, Ohio, 1921. He also explained our affiliation with Bethany Biblical Seminary and the reason for calling our school THE MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY AND THE MENNONITE BIBLE SCHOOL. Reverend Rosenberger reminded us that the foundation on which our Seminary is built is Jesus Christ as expressed by Paul in I Cor. 3:11: "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ."

A telegram from Dr. Ed. G. Kaufman, President of Bethel College and a member of the Seminary Board, was read by President Warkentin. His wishes were expressed with the words of Paul in I Thes. 1:2-3: "We give thanks to God always for you all, making mention of you in our prayers; Remembering without ceasing your work of faith, and labour of love, and patience of hope in our Lord Jesus Christ, in the sight of God and our Father."

Dr. A. Warkentin, President of the Seminary, based his remarks on Rev. 3:7-8. We see it is the hand of the Lord which has opened the doors for the General and Central Conferences to establish these schools. It is a door for deep spiritual and scholarly preparation of all who want to serve Him, a door for consecrated service in the Mennonite Church and on the Mission Fields and a door for work in the Kingdom of God at large wherever our help is needed.

Who should enter this door opened by God? Those whom the Lord has called, those who are converted from a selfish to a holy life and those who have consecrated themselves to the Lord for service.

Robert Hartzler, a former student of the McCormick Seminary and James Smucker from the Chicago Theological Seminary gave brief expressions of their interest and concern.

Each one of the students present expressed his high hopes for the beginning and future of our Seminary.

Rev. John T. Neufeld from the Mennonite Bible Mission and Rev. E. A. Albrecht from the First Mennonite Church gave brief expressions of welcome and interest in the school as well as words of invitation to join the Mennonite Fellowship of the city.

These brief messages were intermingled with songs of devotion and consecration as well as prayers.

The meeting of fellowship was closed by a season of prayer and consecration by each member of the entire group.

Those present were: J. N. Smucker, A. S. Rosenberger, A. Warkentin, E. A. Albrecht, John T. Neufeld, James Smucker, Robert Hartzler, Willard Wiebe, LaVerne Rutschman, Gerhard Neufeld, Ernst Harder, Arnold Claassen, Ruth Ewert.

The entire group had dinner together in a special room in the Wabash YMCA Hotel, after which they continued their meeting of consultation and discussion. Doland Unruh and Rufus Baehr joined the group for the evening meeting.

The spiritual atmosphere of the school was discussed first. It will be largely what we make it, therefore we want to strive to make it Christ-centered, an atmosphere where the spirit of love, prayer, consecration, humbleness and tolerance prevails, yet at the same time shall try to achieve sound and sanctified scholarship. Our tolerance shall be in the spirit of love which gives, forgives, and gives up in order to keep the unity of the spirit, but at the same time one which is firm in Christian convictions. We will strive to achieve sound and sanctified scholarship by critical observation, by spirit enlightened interpretation and by application in sincere Christian service. The seminary should not try first of all to produce Christian leaders of people, but devout followers of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Already arrangements are being made with Mennonite churches in the community—both General and Central Conference churches—for practical work for student pastors.

The publication work of the seminary was also briefly discussed. Regular weekly reports are to be submitted to our conference papers and other periodicals who are desirous to help along in this new venture.—A. Warkentin, September 1.

SLIDES FOR RELIGIOUS EDUCATION NOW AVAILABLE

Previously it was announced that the Bethel College Historical Library was preparing a slide collection on Mennonite Life, Principles, and History. This project has been enlarged and now includes also slides on Bible stories and the Christian Church as a whole. Thus the slide collection consists of three divisions: (1) Bible series, (2) Christian Church series, and (2) Mennonite History series. It is our aim to furnish from five to ten sets of slides consisting of about fifty each, and lectures on each of these sets. A college representative will be glad to show the slides in any church within driving distance. For more distantly located churches the slides, with a written lecture, will be mailed on request. A bulletin with full information to topics and slides is in preparation and may be ordered from C. Krahn, Bethel College, North Newton, Kansas.

JOTTINGS

—Wichita, Kansas: The editor of the United States News has been taking a definite stand in his editorial columns against un-Christian agreements made at the Potsdam Convention and the use of the atomic bomb with its atrocious destruction of civilian populations. At the Wichita Lorraine Avenue Mennonite Church business meeting recently it was decided that the peace committee write a letter of approval to the editor. Individuals are urged to do likewise. The address is: Mr. David Lawrence, Editor of the U. S. News, 24th and N. Street, N. W., Washington 7, D. C.

—Emmanuel Mennonite Church, Galva, Kansas: September 2, we were very fortunate to have Rev. J. H. Langenwalter with us this evening. Our C. E. Society invited him. He gave a very inspiring address on "What Youth Faces Today and How." The Juniors sang a song and a chorus, and after the message a men's vocal and instrumental trio rendered the very fitting number "Walking in the King's Highway."

—C.P.S. Camp, Downey, Idaho: Some of the men travelled to Yellowstone Park over the Labor Day weekend. On August 29 we had some Fort Collins visitors. They were circling through Yellowstone, Downey, and Salt Lake.

—Rev. and Mrs. Gerald Stucky and daughter were to leave on September 5 for Colombia, South America, where they are to open a new mission field, according to the Berne Witness of August 31. They were to board a Pan American Airways plane on Sunday and arrive in Columbia on Wednesday. The actual flying time is only about twelve hours, but there are stopovers in Guatemala, Panama, and other places. The Stuckys will not be able to go into mission work proper right away, but will take up language study when they get there. Rev. Stucky, who has been serving the Berne, Indiana, Church for several months as assistant pastor, gave his farewell message on Sunday night, September 2, when he also showed colored pictures of South America. A farewell love offering was held at the meeting. Regarding his ministry the Berne Witness says, ". . . his uplifting influence in the church has been keenly felt and especially have the young folks been flocking in for his strong and direct sermons."—The Berne Church has a new 300 watt slide projector donated by the E. W. Baumgartner Sunday School class.

—Recordings were made of the program of the Habegger family reunion held at Berne on September 2. It is hoped that one of these can be sent to relatives in Switzerland by mail or by someone going there. Other records are to go to relatives spread widely throughout the U.S. The Habegger relatives number 731.

—Freeman, South Dakota: Rev and Mrs. Orlando Goering are planning to go to Chicago, where Rev. Goering will attend seminary.

—“Mennonite Relief given in the name of Christ” is on each Christmas carton that our churches send to Europe.

—The Bethesda Mennonite Church of Henderson, Nebraska, together with two other local churches, had a young people's retreat August 27 and 28 with Rev. Walter H. Dyck, Beatrice and George A. Peters of Hillsboro, Kansas, as the main speakers. A total of 104 enrolled for the sessions. Four came from Beatrice. It is also reported that three of the Bethesda young people attended Camp Wood retreat in Kansas this summer.—The Bethesda Church is planning to raise a fund for aiding C.P.S. men as they are discharged from camp.

—The Peace Committee of the General Conference met at Bluffton College on August 23.

—Donnellson, Iowa: Rev. Marvin Dirks visited us on August 27 and 28 and told us of inferment experiences in the Philippines.

—Wayland, Iowa: The parsonage shines white with new paint, and the church is also to be painted. Rev. E. S. Mullett attended a ministers' Retreat at Iowa Wesleyan College, under the leadership of Dr. Kirby Page. Rev. Marvin A. Dirks visited our church and the Eicher Church on August 19.

—Nappanee, Indiana: On each of two days eight to ten women were to can peaches for Relief. Ralph Metzler had agreed that peaches from his orchard, especially those which had fallen, might be picked for this purpose. The boys and girls were invited to another “Fellowship Day” on which they learned about soldiers for peace who feed hungry children and clothe the shivering. Program included stories, handwork, recreation, singing, and something that was still secret when announced. Participants were to bring lunch, ball, bat and smiling face. On September 2 the pastor, Rev. Jacob Enz, spoke to the two Mennonite churches in Chicago in the interests of the Middle District Educational work.

—Eden Church, Moundridge, Kansas: Midweek services this year are to include a session for Juniors. The pastor, who has to visit over seven hundred members, allows thirty minutes for a pastoral call. A total of 150 Christmas Relief boxes were filled. The church yard has been oiled. The church building is to be painted. The new Hammond Organ may appear any day. The pastor, in speaking of coming events, mentions Mennonite History and says, “The war is over and we are beginning to think in terms of peace time activities. Repeatedly the accusation has been made that our youth of today knows too little about the great spiritual heritage which is ours. In order that we may become more familiar with the wondrous ways of God with our people during these many years, we are arranging a series of meetings devoted to such a study for this winter. These meetings are to be conducted the first Sunday of each month at the regular evening service. Dr. Krahn, of Bethel College, who has been making a study of such themes for many years has consented to lead these discussions. These meetings are to be in the form of illustrated lectures. Thruout the course of the winter, he shall begin with the early days of our history and continue on to the present time.”

—Married: Rev. Jacob Friesen, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, and Lisbeth Koehn, Meno, Oklahoma, on September 2. The couple will attend seminary this coming year.

—First Church, Lehigh, Kansas: Outside speakers that brought us Sunday morning messages while Rev. B. H. Janzens were on their vacation in California were Abe Peters, Hillsboro; Rev. H. B. Schmidt of the Tabor Church; Rev. W. F. Unruh, Moundridge, and Prof. A. R. Ebel of Tabor College, Hillsboro. The joint Sunday evening meetings came to a close with a C. E. program on August 26. Much interest was shown in these meetings. After supper, one night last week, twelve church members unloaded a carload of sand, which is to be used for completing the new basement of the church.—Mrs. Ferd Unruh, Corr.

—Immanuel Mennonite Church, Los Angeles: The parsonage was dedicated on August 26. Rev. and Mrs. Harold Burkholder held open house in the afternoon. Rev. and Mrs. Aaron Jantzen visited the church on August 19. Rev. and Mrs. Albert Jantzen are touring in the West and are expected for a visit in the near future. Miss Eva Duerksen has just returned from Africa.

—C.P.S. Camp, Downey, Idaho. Rev. Henry Harder was the guest speaker August 26. The campers recently sent $135.78 for War Sufferers' Relief.

—First Church of Christian Mennonite, Moundridge, Kansas: Beginning with September Rev. P. P. Wedel will again take full responsibility at the Sunday morning services if his health permits: During the past few months he preached every other Sunday.

—Thank you, pastors. Recently we sent cards to the active pastors of the General Conference, asking for the name and address of the church's correspondent to The Mennonite. By September 5 about sixty-eight of 150 or so pastors had returned their cards. A hearty thanks to all these and also to the others who are returning their's at the present time.

—Case Studies of Mennonite Communities in Canada (32 pages, 25 cents) “is an account of very interesting community co-operatives, in farming, canning, health, insurance, and burial, which have been developed by recent immigrants under great difficulty.” Order from Rural Life Association, Quaker Hill, R. R. 2, Richmond, Indiana.

—Ernest Bachman of the First Church, Newton, and some willing boys from the First Church and The Bethel College Church have made over two hundred boxes for the Newton Relief Clothing Center. They used the industrial arts equipment at Bethel College for making these boxes which will be used for shipping shoes and soap.

—Rev. and Mrs. Donovan Smucker and son left Newton on September 3 for Princeton, New Jersey, where Rev. Smucker plans to work for his B.D. degree. Enroute he will stop at Berne, Indiana, to preach, and then the family will visit with Rev.

Smucker's mother in Bluffton before proceeding to New Jersey. Rev. Smucker recently toured C.P.S. camps and then held protracted meetings at Goessel, Kansas. On September 2, he brought the message to the First Church, Newton.

—Dr. David D. Eitzen, Professor of Pastoral Counselling at the University of Southern California, is directing a study in effective counselling at the annual conference for directors of Mennonite C.P.S. camps, being held at Colorado Springs from September 9 to 16. On this same trip to the Middle West, Dr. Eitzen was to stop at Samuel Huston College, a Negro college, and conduct a seminar with the faculty.

—Dr. J. H. Langenwalter, Minister-at-Large for the Boards of Education and Publication, is to conduct a Bible study series at the First Mennonite Church, Summerfield, Illinois, September 23 to 30. The general theme, "Beginnings" will be dealt with under two sub-topics, "Beginnings in the Teachings of Jesus" and "Beginnings in the Experiences of the Early Church." Following this Dr. Langenwalter will serve churches in Ontario, Canada, and visit schools in the East where students from our churches are attending, including Bluffton College and the Mennonite Biblical Seminary, Chicago. Before proceeding to Summerfield he will visit the conference for Mennonite directors of C.P.S. camps at Colorado Springs.

—Kenneth Earl is the new baby boy of Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Graber, North Newton, Kansas.

—Married: Ellen Frances Myers, Fairfield, Pa., and Sgt. Michael Shimcoch, Olanta, Pa.

—Calvary Church, Mechanic Grove, Pa., In the past year Sunday School classes have increased from four to eight and a cradle roll department. A church bulletin was also introduced. A new foundation is to be put under the church building at an estimated cost of $1,000. The pastor reports that the Young People's C. E. needs to be supplemented with a Junior C.E.

—Married: Orpha Schrag, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. J. Schrag, and Oswald O. Schrag, son of Rev. and Mrs. John J. A. Schrag.

—Aberdeen, Idaho: "On August 12, Rev. J. M. Franz, Minister-at-Large of the Pacific District Conference, installed Rev. H. N. Harder as our pastor. Rev. and Mrs. Harder were also received into the fellowship of the church. We bespeak for them a successful ministry in our church."—J. E. Toews, Corr.

Delmar Wedel is to leave soon for Akron, preparatory to going to France for relief work. Forty-three Christmas relief packages were sent by the King's Daughters. A total of $404.34 has been raised for the Bible School as India.

—Rev. and Mrs. Elbert E. Koontz of the Second Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, returned home on September 1, after serving the C.P.S. camp at North Fork, California for about two months. While there, Bro. Koontz conducted Sunday morning and evening services and Bible studies on Wednesday evenings. Missionary Albert Jantzen and Rev. H. Albert Claassen served the home church during his absence. The Jantzen's gave interesting reports

Our Study of the Bible Should Lead Us to Say:
"Let Us Love One Another"

Beloved, let us love one another for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God.

In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him.

Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another .

Smokejumpers Fighting Unusually Many Fires

Jumping has been the order of the day in this unit. Anyone who might have been critical of the large number of men brought here this summer can relax in the assurance that they were all needed. We have not yet run out of men but have come within twelve, including the riggers, of exhausting our manpower. This is very close when you consider the fact that we jumped on hundred men in a three-day period. So far there have been three jumpless days since fire season called for the first jump. We have made over fifty on some days; the total stands at 373 for this region which is more fire jumps than have been made in all the previous time that smoke jumping has been in existence. The fire season, its heavier second half, is just ahead and for the first time in weeks we have more than just the Missoula unit in Region One. We had fewer than fifty men not out on fires for two weeks. It got so that they would come in during the night and go out before twenty-four hours were up; everyone was getting weak and tired from the sixteen-hour work day and then the twenty-mile hikes to the resting places. The strain was really beginning to show, but the present slight intermission has permitted everyone to recuperate. We even hear a little griping, very weak, now and then.

Yesterday they jumped the Negro supplementary troops on a fire in Oregon and one of them was killed when he worked his new release harness too soon. He fell 180 feet out of a tree. Several of our men have been injured, one broke parts from two vertebrae in his back, but he is back in the house in good condition with a cast all over his back. You don't need to tell him to sit up straight. Another man is still in the hospital with three bones broken in one foot and a four-inch chip near his hip on the other leg. This required a painful operation. He was very fortunate, however, because a large snag which he hit coming down fell just behind him. If it would have hit him he would be dead now. Several others have minor injuries. The men claim that they have been jumping in much rougher country than ever before. This goes for the three-year men. There is very little talk of smoke jumping not being dangerous. I have seen many of the men state that they believe it is getting to the point where utmost caution will be needed.

One jumper is stepping out into space and another is about to follow him. With his right arm the second man seems to be making sure that the static line, which will tear the cover off his parachute, has been firmly secured. The "spotter," who determines where and when to jump, is looking out of the window.

Both of the above-mentioned injuries had to be carried by stretcher for about twenty miles. Another case, that of a Forest Service man, who was seriously burned, had to be carried for more than that, and the

LOVE TO GOD is inseparable from love to fellowman. Jesus emphasized the unity of the two when he declared that the second great commandment, "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself" is like the first one and that all the law and the prophets hang not on the first alone but rather upon both. They belong together as one. John later re-emphasized this by saying, "If any man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar." Our relationship to God and fellowman is like that of a parent and children. Three-year-old William is resentful towards one-year-old Sue. He hits, pushes, and trips her because he is jealous of her. He would like to have the whole of his parent's affection as he did before the arrival of his sister. He tears the playthings away from her because he has not learned the necessity or joy of sharing. It is difficult for him to understand that the parent can love both of them. However, the parent does and therefore he does not wish to see harm come to either child. Consequently, when William shows resentment towards Sue, this resentment also affects the parent, for the parent is concerned with the welfare of Sue as well as with the welfare of William. Therefore, whenever and wherever we are resentful, hateful, and cold towards a fellowman, we at the same time and place are all of that towards God. "In as much as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Just as the parent is affected by every attitude that one child takes towards the other, so God is affected by every attitude that we take towards a fellowman, for he loves every man-

SPIRITUAL PAIN is good for us. Spiritual headaches impress upon us that something is wrong. If painful enough they stimulate us to seek alleviation and a cure. Sleepless nights or hours may be distressing but they are packed with fruitful potentialities. They are an indication that some difficulty has been repressed and not brought out into the open and courageously faced. Many times the good in us doesn't have enough of a chance to come to full maturity because the bad in us isn't painful and troublesome enough to us. Only when the sun beats down hard enough and bakes the shallow soil and wilts its plants, does the soil begin to admit that something ought to be done about the layer of rock underneath it. We may delay the operation on a long troublesome appendix of sin until it is about ready to rupture. Not until the pain of our affliction is greater than the pain of being helped do we tend to seek help. "Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted."

PEOPLE OVER SIXTY need friendly fellowship and recreation, insists Christ Church, Philadelphia, Pa. The church "was awakened to the plight of . . . old-age pensioners in their run-down apartment houses and decided to do something about it." Today the "Golden Age Club" meets weekly in a room bright with flowers and plants. In the room are comfortable chairs and rockers and colorful vases and other gifts that help to make it a pleasant meeting place. The members of the club enjoy games, books, magazines, movies, recitals, book reviews, lectures by travelers hobby programs, trolley rides, picnics, visits to historic places and river boat rides. Refreshments are also supplied by the club. All of this is without charge to these elderly people who have little in finances. Thus one church seeks to combat in its own way the gloom and loneliness which so often afflict the elderly. The thesis of this church cannot be denied. Elderly people do need fellowship and activity that stimulates the glow of life. In our churches there are old people that feel this need. One young pastor was praised by one of the church members because he had the ability and took it upon himself during a church event to sit right in with the elderly ladies and engage them in a lively, meaningful conversation. The loneliness of old age is not a light matter for those who feel it.

MINISTERS' SALARIES in the General Conference may not come up to those of the Upper South Carolina (Methodist) Conference. A survey shows that during 1943-44 the average salary of one hundred ministers in this Conference was $2,650.11. This is considered a little high for the whole state. However, the average salary for all white Methodist ministers in the state was over $2,000. These figures do not include the usual 15 per cent allowance for house rent. Most charges in South Carolina supply furnished parsonages. The Upper South Carolina Conference, in 1944, adopted a minimum salary standard of $1800. Perhaps, one reason for the relatively high income mentioned here is that 63 per cent of the ministers served circuits of three or more churches.

Mutual Aid Strengthens the Local Congregation

By J. Winfield Fretz

Present Conditions

Everybody knows that the present conditions are going to be permanent. We have to admit that we often hear and use the expression, "times are good." By that we mean that the prices are high, the wages are good, work is plentiful, and few people complain about money being scarce. But we know that these "good time" refer to economic prosperity and not to moral or religious vitality. Underneath the seeming surface prosperity is the deep and abiding sense of fear. People with jobs are afraid they will lose them; people in middle age are afraid they will not have adequate income in old age; young married people fear that they won't be able to provide a better life for their children than they enjoyed; old and young alike fear that they may need medical attention for which they have not adequately provided. There is literally no end of fears. Unfortunately, Christian people with a supposedly strong faith are to be found all too frequently among the "afraid" group.

The Remedy of Fear

God did not make man all-wise and for that reason we do not know what the nature of the future will be; hence, there is always bound to be uncertainty of the future. But this need not mean fear of the future. The answer to fear is faith—faith in God as revealed in Christ. But faith in Christ is doubly strengthened when those who profess it are bound together into a common bond of fellowship to form the Body of Christ. The strongest union in the world is the union of believers in Christ who, in addition to a common faith, have a common love for one another, worship and work and share with one another in the daily tasks of life. To be a member of such a union provides an individual with the courage, hope, and confidence which membership in no other society can ever provide. Active membership in the body of believers is the best answer to the constellation of fears that surround the modern man.

Helping One Another

It is amazing how little faith the average church member has in his fellow church member today. It is often less than he has in the unbeliever. This is in part because church members have so little opportunity to work with each other in performing common tasks. We worship in the same meeting-house but the occasions when we work at common tasks with the same members with whom we worship are all too rare. The practice of an active program of mutual aid in the present-day Mennonite congregations is one of the weakest spots in the total church program.

Yet mutual aid is one of the most beautiful aspects of a truly Christian fellowship. It is not to be confused with relief or charity. Too often in relief or charity the giver looks down on the person receiving; it is easy for the giver to feel a sense of superiority. Mutual aid, however, is reciprocal; it has a two-way relationship; it is an interchange of service benefiting all parties concerned. The local congregations today need to discover the almost lost art of practicing mutual aid. It is a vital part of the Christian tradition as well as a fruit of the faith.

Eager for its Rediscovery

It is gratifying to discover that ministers and laymen alike feel the need of mutual aid in their congregations. They recognize it as a vital element in the development and maintenance of strong brotherhood life. These ministers and laymen realize the strength and solidarity that come from sharing with one another in love and mutual understanding. The fact that our people want to rediscover and develop mutual aid is the first and most important step in attaining it. As needs facing young people which church people can help meet. The needs of the individual should be considered the opportunity of the church. In God's plan for man we do not know what is in store, whether prosperity or depression, whether persecution or religious toleration, but that makes little difference because disciples of Christ know that when they are true to Him and loyal to each other in word and deed they will have the strength and the wisdom to face whatever situation God calls them to face.

Strength in Solidarity

One may observe that there is a close relation between the amount of mutual aid practiced in congregations and their spiritual strength. An intelligent program of mutual aid directed by the Holy Spirit inspires confidence, develops courage, promotes loyalty to the church, and inspires church members toward a wholesome congregational spirit. It has seemed to me that this is illustrated in any number of Mennonite congregations. In a small Pennsylvania congregation a Friendly Society was organized "to share in a material way in the joys and sorrows, through an organized channel, of the members and close friends of the congregation." Any member of the congregation wishing to do so may become a member by paying the sum of $4.00 and agreeing to pay $1.50 upon the receipt of notice of the death of a member, $1.00 upon receipt of the notice of a marriage of a member, and 40c upon receipt of the notice of a birth in any family in the congregation. In this congregation thirty members belong to the Friendly Society. This means that a family in the congregation visited by death would receive $45., and a member being married would receive $30., and if a child is born to a member he receives $12.

A Cooperative Business

In a small Virginia congregation two members began bottling and delivering milk to a near-by city. The demand for milk grew so steadily that the brothers had to buy additional milk from other members who were farming. In time a city law required that the milk be pasteurized and a state law required an expensive license to continue operating. The new demand meant extra expense beyond the two brothers' capacity. The problem was discussed by concerned members of the congregation. It was soon decided that all members who were farmers and producers of milk should organize a cooperative. In this way sufficient capital could be raised to meet the cost of expansion and at the same time all farmers who were interested had a market for their milk. A charter was drawn up to determine the rules and regulations of conducting business. The milk plant is closed all day Sunday and no deliveries are made on Sunday, extra deliveries being made on Saturday afternoon instead. All share holders must be actual producers and no producer may hold more than twenty shares ($100.00 per share). The volume of milk is controlled by the number of shares owned. Whenever new shares are sold the smallest producer with the least shares is given the first opportunity. All shareholders must be members of the congregation. This venture in mutual aid has grown from a 200-gallons-a-day business to 1,700 gallons a day. At the present time thirty members comprise the cooperative. Throughout its history the group has maintained a fine cooperative spirit. This congregation has found that it is stronger as a brotherhood since its members work together during the week as well as worship together on Sunday. By means of mutual ownership they can determine the ethical and moral character of their business. They have discovered that in mutual aid there is strength.

Our Ministry of Education

By J. H. Langenwalter

THE GENTLE JESUS

Gentleness is not weakness. It is the kind of strength which human beings have always feared. It is not in accordance with their way of thinking, hence they are afraid of it. Men do not say of gentleness, "Everybody has it," hence people are afraid of it lest they appear to be out of place. Most people are only superficially interested in gentleness, hence they are afraid of it because of what it might do to their view of life.

Nevertheless, Jesus was gentle, and in His gentleness there lay strength which He knew how to use for the good of others. He taught His followers the value of the strength. The world has seen that this kind of strength is different. The thoughtful and the unselfish learned how to use it. Thus far they have been in the minority. That does not prove them wrong.

Men were afraid of Jesus because of His gentleness when He lived among them. Their fear was increased through jealousy and ended up in frenzy and hatred. They killed Him in the most atrocious manner which the imaginings of fear-bound human minds had discovered until then. In doing so they merely revealed the fact that human problems are never solved by inhuman methods. They showed to what lengths fear-bound men will go.

At the same time the Gentle Jesus showed the world His consistent attitude of love. Their attitude left the problems of the world in worse condition than before. His attitude gave men a new source of hope and power. Some of the people caught His Spirit of gentleness and lived accordingly. That revealed what light there was to be found in that age of darkness.

Men also feared these humble followers of Jesus, and persecuted them. The lives of these victims bore testimony to the fact that love and not fear moved them. Their persecutors did not understand. That increased their fears and made them stoop to new atrocities.

After more than nineteen hundred years men still cling to the age-old fallacy that might makes right and that gentleness is weakness. The results remain unchanged. Fear makes hecklers of men. Some of them scold, like the Pharisees, others scoff, like the Sadducees in the days of Jesus. Men were intended to be helpers and become such when they learn to appreciate the strength which lies in gentleness.

Too many people are more afraid of peace than they are of war with all of its horror. They are afraid of gentleness because they do not understand it, for the simple reason that it is not in line with their way of thinking. They are also afraid because it is not popular with the masses. It takes thought to discover and appreciate truly great ideas. Men are afraid to follow the thinking which it takes to make such great discoveries as the power of gentleness because they are only superficially interested in the Gentle Jesus.

Tuba City, Arizona
August 21, 1945

My dear Bro. Richert,

Our Bible conferences in Arizona are now closed—one at Flagstaff and one at Clarkdale, Arizona. We attended both Flagstaff Bible and Missionary conferences, and one at Clarkdale which was opened up especially for Indians and for Indians only by Indian Presbyterian churches of both Prescott and Clarkdale. These Indian leaders gave me their invitation to come there and to preach for them. I accepted this invitation in July and went after attending a few days at the Missionary conference at Flagstaff this month of August. When I arrived at Clarkdale from Flagstaff, Indians from different tribes had already come in from all parts of our state in Arizona. There I met Apache Indians from San Carlos where I had preached for this Indian tribe three years ago. Then a large group of Pima Indians from Salt River Valley were there; the Mohave Indians from Parker and the Yavapa Indians of Prescott and Fort McDowell, Wallpais from Peace Springs, and they told me that the number of all the delegates was something like four hundred fifty people. Then we have white visitors from nearby towns who also attended these meetings. We had a big meeting. And before we closed, there were many Indians kneeling at the altar for prayer; we baptized one old man of about sixty-five or more, who for the first time knelt and received his baptism from the Lord—he was a medicine man. Indians have wept for joy of the Lord. I feel after all, the Lord has answered my prayers for Indians in our state of Arizona, and I would like to have you publish this news for Mennonite people in the United States and ask them to pray for all our Indians in Arizona. Not only pray for Hopi Indians but for all Indians, and Christian Indians of Arizona. That old man gave the following testimony:

"It has been for two years that I had been thinking of becoming a Christian. But I realized that to become a Christian is hard to live the life. I had been a policeman and I visited the big jails in our state of Arizona, where I saw some preachers, even ordained preachers, locked up behind the bars. And from that scene I realized that to become a Christian is hard. But today I have decided to come and take Jesus Christ as my saviour. This is my own decision, and no one forced me to take this Saviour. I decide for myself."

This was his testimony after he was baptized by another Presbyterian elder from Salt River Pima Indian Church. And it rejoices the hearts of all the Christian Indians who have prayed for our meetings. God bless the man.

I remain in His service,

Farewell Letter from Gerald Stuckys

New Orleans 9, Louisiana
Friday, September 7

To Our Praying Friends:

We are grateful to God, and to you for your prayers, that the door to Colombia has now opened for us. Though this is just about one year later than what we had originally planned—yet we believe that the Lord has been glorified through the seeming "delay."

During the next year we shall be studying the language in Medellin, Colombia, (address: Apartado Aereo 653—for Air Mail) after which we shall commence that type of missionary activity that the Lord will open for us. How much we need your continued prayers for wisdom, understanding and guidance in this undertaking for His kingdom. We desire that you make Ephesians 6:18-19 your prayer for us: "Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints and for me, that terance may be given unto me, that I may open my mouth boldly, to make known the mystery of the Gospel."

All preparations are made—we leave tomorrow night, D. V. to begin this new work for God and for you. Thank you again for your faithfulness in prayer.

Sincerely in Him,
(signed) Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Stucky and daughter, Judith Anne

SOMETIMES 25 PER CENT

Hillsboro Loan Association.—Rev. John Harms and Benjamin Unruh, of Hillsboro, Kansas, representatives of the German Mennonite Loan and Trust Association, of Hillsboro, Kansas, were east during the early part of March, in the interest of the association. The object is to help the struggling farmers who have mortgaged their farms, to avoid the high rate of interest charged by banks and loan offices—sometimes charging 25 per cent interest, which is more than they are able to pay. The Brethren who are free of debt have given their farms as security; thus making the investment safe and profitable. Should any of our readers have any money to invest they can address the association for information. The Association is chartered under the laws of Kansas and is fully legitimate in its organization and working. Some of the best men of our church, with whom we are personally acquainted, are stockholders. Mennonite, April, 1886, p. 105.

R. C. Kauffman Writes from India

(The following are excerpts from a letter written by Dr. R. C. Kauffman to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kauffman, North Newton, Kansas. We are happy for the writer's permission to publish these interesting insights into relief work. After serving with the regular M.C.C. unit for a short while, Dr. Kauffman became the head of another relief organization which very much needed his services.—Editor)

In spite of the rainy season, our relief activities haven't slackened much. We now have five medical units going. It keeps Mr. Sarkar, my good man, "Friday," busy just buying and taking medicines for them. Most of these units are in remote village areas, but one recently started is right here in Calcutta. This one is for women and children only. Indian women are very reluctant to go to a male doctor; many would rather die than do so. And many are of course too poor to go to any doctor. So this unit may render a great service. I was fortunate in being able to obtain a fully qualified Indian Christian lady doctor for it and also a good dispenser. There are now some ten doctors and dispensers on our payroll. All of them are Indian and all Christian, with the exception of one, who is a Hindu. However, in the anomalous fashion one sometimes finds, this Hindu is more Christian in spirit than are many "Christians." It takes a real Christian spirit to serve in the isolated village areas in which they are called upon to serve.

One of our Medical Units is a mobile unit, which is moved to some new needy area about once every two months. Last week it was moved to East Bengal, into the so-called "Beel" (flooded) areas, where they will most probably go from village to village in a house-boat. It was something of a job to get them, with their fifteen boxes of equipment, packed off. It is also saddening to see the reaction of the people who are left behind. On the day they were to leave, 275 patients came out. Some of them cried when they saw the unit leave. For many it is the first time in their lives that they have had real medicines served to them. Even Government dispensaries water down medicine or offer some ineffective substitute where patients unable to pay are concerned. The results they get from genuine medicines are to them, therefore, miraculous and everyone along the way, as they go to and from their villages is informed of it. Soon patients come from miles around. This medical service is one of the most gratifying aspects of our relief work. The Mennonite Relief Unit has now started a medical unit of its own too, under the direction of Mr. Titus Lehman.

In addition, we have several larger rehabilitation projects at hand. One of these, taken up at our Executive Committee meeting of last Friday, involves over Rs. 30,000. It is for the industrial and agricultural rehabilitation and training of the Garo Hill people in northern-most Bengal. These Gare people were at one time head-hunters. Now, though still in need of economic uplift, they constitute a large and staunchly Christian community. Recently I have returned from East Bengal where another of our larger projects is to occur. This one is for the development of a boat-building industry, giving employment to the local people and then selling the boats to the local fishermen on a loan basis. Many of them sold their boats during the famine in order to buy food. The Mennonite Unit has consented to letting me have Mr. Clayton Beyler for directing this project. The country in that area is a very interesting one during these rainy season months. The entire country-side is under water, with the exception of little artificial islands on which rest clusters of houses. The green rice grows on stalks six to eight feet tall and so reaches out of the water. As one looks across, it looks quite like an ordinary grain field. But right in the midst one will see a sailboat or two, wending its way across. It certainly looks odd to see this, like seeing a boat in one of our Kansas wheat fields. They evidently take the "waves of grain" literally. Wherever they go, they have to do so by boat and are thus very dependent on them.

It is right among these rice fields too that the people catch some of their fish. One kind I saw looks like our common bull-head at home, except that it has a wider tail vertically, like the eel) and has the peculiar habit of resting its head above water or sometimes even crawling out on the bank . . . Another problem we are working with in connection with this fishing community is that of forming some sort of a direct and cooperative marketing outlet. A large share of the profits are lost to unscrupulous middle-men. But to get the fish to Calcutta or some large city before spoilage sets in is difficult. They are some 150 miles distant and, under present arrangements, fill a large boat half full of water and try in that way to keep them alive for the seven day's journey by boat. Lawrence Burkholder (of the Mennonite Unit also) and I have been playing around with the idea somewhat remotely so far!) of buying an army plane, now that the war is over, and hauling the fish with that—two trips a day, delivered fresh and air-cooled! As I say, this is still in the realm of fancy, but it might actually be a very good business proposition. Fish are a delicacy with Bengalis and sell for tremendous prices. However, Lawrence is himself a pilot, so I suspect some ulterior motive behind his great interest in this particular "relief" project! He has already assured me that he would gladly fly the plane if we got it.

Apart from these "long-range relief" or rehabilitation schemes, applications for private grants (technically known as "hand-outs") of course still continue to come in. On the whole, this sort of relief is being discouraged now that the emergency is over. Some of these applications are, in a pathetic sort of way, humorous—especially with respect to the artful way in which the appeal is made and also the flourishing English used. When choosing between two synonyms, the Bengali will use both if possible or the bigger of the two under any circumstances. Sometimes the application is written in Bengali, in which case Sarkar goes on work on it. I think I should take space here to quote a sample application. This particular one came not to me but to a missionary, but it is quite typical. This Indian writes:

"The sender of this letter is a poor man in agricultural behavior. Therefore I pray that you will have favor upon him and take him into your saintly service that he may have support for his soul and family. I fall upon my families' bended knees and begs the merciful consideration of your honor's thankfulness while I linger for your hopeful words.

"I am out of employment for more than a year, so that my mental facilities are daily swift away from me. My family is a very large one, consisting of five females, three masculines and a child. The latter is still drawing milk from the paternal mother's chest.

"Your humble servant is too much old, too much poorly to espouse hard labor, so kindly give me some easy work. I now live from your bungalow 20 miles as the cock crows.

"May your philanthropic zeal take some measure with me and look with favorable eyes upon me and for this I shall ever pray that the Almighty will give you tit-for-tat."

How can one deny a heart-rending appeal like this?

THE MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY

By Willard W. Wiebe

A name is not of prime significance to an individual or a group—but, a name is important and should be carefully chosen. The name of our conference seminary should be practical and descriptive as well as beautiful, for, by the grace of God, that name will be spoken oft for many generations to come. Hence, after prayerful deliberation the Seminary Board has chosen the name for our conference seminary to be THE MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY.

Why Mennonite?

A word means nothing unless connotation is brought to it through usage. The word Mennonite brings to the minds of our people a wealth of significance, and it would be a rather difficult task to try to elaborate on the multitudinous meanings that this word has. It is a part of us even as we are a part of it. Briefly, we could say that this word signifies an expression of simple, personal faith in Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord as it was found in the lives of our forefathers and as we ourselves try to live it. The inclusion of the word in the title of our seminary signifies also that this school shall serve our Lord first of all in our Mennonite churches, and on the other hand that our churches have the responsibility of supporting the school spiritually and materially.

The word Mennonite is becoming increasingly more meaningful to the world in general. It oftentimes means even more to other people than we realize. It refers them to a people who endeavor to take Christ's teaching literally a people whose Christian faith is expressed more in practical Christian service than in a creed.

If then the word means so much, both to the people of our church and to others, it surely is a good choice for our seminary.

Why Biblical?

This word in the title of our school is not there merely to lengthen the name. There are other good words which could easily have been incorporated. But, the centrality of the usage of the Bible amongst our people should most assuredly be continued in our schools, foremost, of course, in our seminary. The revelation of God as set forth in the written Word is man's authoritative source of spiritual food and life. This is incontrovertible. Therefore, our seminary must be truly Biblical in teaching and in life expression. All courses offered in the seminary are to be related to the study of God's Holy Word.

The Bible is to be studied devotionally. The personal applications of its teachings are imperative. This devotional approach is to be jealously guarded in our seminary. But the Bible must also be studied intellectually. The best scholarship is to be applied in the study of the Scriptures. This scholarship must be sanctified by prayer and humble submission of student and teacher to the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

Why Seminary?

The word, seminary, designates a graduate school for ministerial training. Entrance to the Seminary presupposes a college degree. Students in seminary have gone through a more or less uniform experience in their training. They have all had the rather basic and broadening type of education that a college curriculum offers, and are now ready for specialization in ministerial training.

A Bible school differs from a seminary in that it requires high school graduation as a prerequisite. In devotion, zeal for service and in their expression of faith, seminaries and Bible schools have much in common. Both have their proper place in the education of the Lord's workers. The Evils of Wars and Methods of Preventing Future Wars

By Myrtle Wasser

(The following first-prize essay was written by a Mennonite high school student and entered in a contest conducted by the Doylestown Pa., High School. The contest was sponsored by two parents who lost two children in World War II. Fifty essays were submitted on the subject of "The Evils of War and Methods of Preventing Future Wars." First prize was won by Myrtle Wasser, who is a member of the Deep Run, Pa., Church, which was served until recently by Rev. Russell L. Mast.

—Editor)

Our world is in bad shape. One generation has seen two wars that in size and frightfulness surpass anything the world has ever known. Considered the greatest problem and social sin of the twentieth century, the evils of war have influenced each individual and nation in our vast world.

War is frequently thought of in terms of newspaper headlines, war bond drives, and scrap drives. However, if we wish to understand why so many people are dreaming of a new world order and praying that this truly may be the last war, we must realistically look at the way war affects human beings, social institutions, and the world as a whole—the evils of war.

First, one of the evils of war is the inestimable destruction of life and property. Authorities have stated that in World War I 25,000,000 lives were lost. Almost half were civilians. In addition, 20,000,000 people were crippled or wounded. To get a true glimpse of war we might walk across a great field after a battle, where the bodies of the dead and wounded cover the earth. It wouldn't be a pretty site. We would have to look at their bodies, listen to the moans of the wounded men, and look into their eyes—not to see if they are friend or enemy but to see young human beings who had whole lifetimes before them, but now they have nothing. Also, we would have to go back to their homes—homes where the light has been snuffed out suddenly and completely.

Literally millions of war victims find themselves impoverished and deprived of all that people have considered to be essential to human growth and happiness. Refugees driven from their homes, children bereaved of their parents, parents watching the distended stomachs and spindly legs of their starving children without being able to help—these are the ways in which war destroys life.

The ruin of historical places, which were centuries in age, the waste of former magnificent cities, and the disruption of industry are elements which made the computed cost of World War I, $300,000,000,000. In reality no amount can measure the cost of war for the qualities of human life are immeasurable.

Second, war lowers the value of human life. Nicholas Berdyaev in his book, The Fate of Man in the Modern World, stated, "Inhumanity has begun to be presented as something noble, surrounded with an aureole of heroism." In wartime man is no longer man, human life is not valuable but cheap. Although modern warfare involves intelligent direction on the part of its commanders, the individual soldiers become automatons.

After a battle or raid the destroyed bombers or ships are reported with comparative little emphasis on the individual lives involved. "War destroys human personality," writes one author, "The capacities last required in our development: the sense of unity with others, sympathy, kindness, respect for truth—these have to give way in wartime. The result is apt to be a spiritual and psychological cripple." That is war!

Also, war causes a demoralization of both soldiers and civilians. War exacts much from youth—"frustration, grief, loss . . . , work, conflict and painful resurrection" characterize war and the days following it. War's viciousness and hostility shatter ideals, concepts of kindness, and human decency.

Disrupted family life inevitably registers in the lives of men and women. There is always a relaxation of sex standards during war. Sexual promiscuity is a problem of the army. Nor are irregular sex practices confined to the soldiers; it increases everywhere. The mores of love and courtship are also affected. Illegitimacy on the one hand and sexual frustration on the other are results of every war.

That the increase in crime rates following the war is due to the war is debatable. Nevertheless, social adjustment is a problem. Following World War I, unemployment faced returned soldiers, and wounded soldiers were unfit to earn.

In the process emotional strain is intensified. While soldiers to a certain extent become callous to human suffering, some personalities crack under the fatigue and strain. Because of the very nature of war, life takes in a fatalistic aspect. Existing is also an increase in belief in superstition and religion.

Fourth, war breaks down social institutions. We have already discussed the sexual disorganization. Also, the children in homes are frequently neglected due to women employment.

Educational institutions feel the impact of war in various ways. In war areas children must be evacuated, and facilities are not usually available. Young men of draft age forego their college training. Even the curricula are adjusted to national interests.

William MacDougall once said, "The English are British first, and Christians afterwards." Could not that be said about many church members? The Church who has fostered the doctrines of "Thou shalt not kill," "Love your neighbor as yourself," and "Love your enemies and do good to those that despitefully persecute you" in war tends to act on the doctrine that destruction of the enemy fosters the development of Christianity. The delegates assembled from all over the earth at the Oxford Conference in 1936 felt forced to declare: "... War is a particular demonstration of the power of sin in this world and defiance of the righteousness of God as revealed in Jesus Christ... No justification of war must be allowed to minimize the fact."

Political disorganization confronts all the nations, but particularly the defeated nations who must begin anew in this realm.

War, in the fifth place, sets progress back generations in its slow and tortious progress toward a better civilization. One can only dream of the new discoveries of science, the improvement of slums, the available facilities in education, the music and poetry which might have been accomplished by the dead with the financial resources which entail each war.

Finally, perhaps the greatest tragedy of war's evils is that war itself is a failure and fails to accomplish that which it desires. The financial expenditures, loss of life, economic disorganization, the mourning, and difficult adjustments are experienced by all nations—vanquished and victors alike. That no one really wins a war is illustrated by this fact. Memories of war create bitter hatreds.

Something must be done about these periodic smashings of our world. Wars have become so ferocious so destructive, that our civilization cannot literally stand many more of them. Against these terrible conditions we must pit all our wisdom, all our understanding, and our Christian beliefs.

METHODS OF PREVENTING FUTURE WARS

For Americans it is not a question of withdrawing and letting the other people and nations "fight it (the peace) out for themselves." Is it too much to believe that we have learned that we cannot isolate ourselves and hope to enjoy peace while others do not? What can be done to prevent future wars?

There must be a world order which is supported by the people and dedicated to the purpose of maintaining a true and lasting peace for all. "To maintain international peace and security and to achieve international cooperation in economic and social problems" was the statement given concerning the hope of the Dumbarton Oaks Proposals. Whether the world organization shall contain the general assembly, security council, economical and social council, secretariat as originally proposed in the plan remains to be seen. However, that meeting and the present conference at San Francisco are a step forward, having numerous possibilities for good.

If a world order would insure peace, there are various things that it must make provisions for.

(1) Men must have freedom from want. Playing a large part in the causes of this war was the terrible poverty of millions of the earth's people. Men must not be allowed to starve in the midst of plenty nor be inadequately clothed or housed. Those who are the haves must share with the have-nots.

(2) Men must no longer be slaves to fear. God never intended that men should walk the earth all their days cringing in fear. Yet that is the kind of world we have made. Sometimes it is caused by lack of insecurity and material things, but other millions of people lived in constant terror of secret police, minority persecution, or invasion. The new order must take away causes of fear and allow men to walk their ways in dignity and self-respect.

(3) Member nations must become law abiding. "Absolute sovereignty" must give way to international cooperation. All peace loving nations, small and large, should have the right of decision. Nations, as well as men, must bow to the dictates of conscience, and agree to submit their disputes to impartial courts or councils.

(4) A temporary world police should be provided. This is not synonymous with each nation's building an army of its own, which encourages further armament. Internationally organized, this world police should not be the dominating threat of the world order but serve the same part as a local police force—that of keeping order if nations refuse to act as gentlemen. Never should this organization be used for nationalistic interests of any nation—not even the Big Three. Failure to provide such a system was one failing point of the former League of Nations.

(5) Goodwill must be the dominating spirit. It was China's first lady, Madame Chiang Kai-Shek who reminded this warring world of the only foundation upon which peace can hope to endure: "There must be no bitterness in the reconstructed world. No matter what we have suffered, we must try to forgive those who injured us and remember only the lessons gained thereby." Is not that the spirit of Christianity?

Time recently carried this quote which was made by a European foe of regionalism: "The trouble with you Americans is, you don't know your own power. You don't know how strong you are." However, what shall be our source of strength for a better world? One of America's leading clergymen stated that it matters little about the war unless Christ wins the peace. A peace which embodies Christ's spirit and recognizes the Fatherhood of God, brotherhood of man, and sacredness of human life cannot fail.

Second, reconstruction must be carried on in the whole world. Industry must be rebuilt; schools, which do away with the indoctrination of warlike attitudes, must be established. Not only will this enterprise involve finances, but people who are willing to serve and sacrifice. Is not the price of peace more worthy than the price of war?

World building like charity begins at home. Therefore, we must seek to establish more peaceful relations in our own nation. Racial prejudice and injustice are in a deplorable condition in America. The negro does not have equal opportunities. Yet, Booker T. Washington, Marian Anderson, and George Washington Carver are only a few to show their potentialities. We cannot hold someone in the gutter without remaining there with him.

Life in our slums and the unsanitary conditions of the migrants and sharecroppers are not conducive to producing personalities of fine character.

Also, our denominational squabbles are a disgrace. True, we have the right to think as we please about God, but shouldn't we grant the same privilege to others with whom we disagree? What is needed is not a pattern of thought but a spirit which places justice and kindness above revenge, difference, and hate.

In conclusion, we as individuals can do something about preventing future wars for we can do something about ourselves. When men have made detailed plans for a world order, the ultimate success will depend on how we as individuals handle our lives, treat our neighbors, and live from day to day. Nations are composed of individuals and reflect their spirit.

We can either add to the world's woe or aid in solving its problems. We must come to grips with ourselves. Although there may be war without, there need not be war within us. We can be changed! The spirit of good will and love can motivate our daily acts. If we could not be changed, there would be no hope for the nations and the world.

..Goerge Lansbury in My Pilgrimage for Peace, concerning the practicing of religion, stated that there is neither sense nor reason in preaching love if we don't believe it. By making the principle of cooperation operative in our own lives, we carry it into our homes, school office, etc. As we permit this spirit to enter and change our lives we will be working with God toward a better world, having an enduring peace—a world in which future wars will not be.

As we scan history we see slavery, another great social sin of its time, finally totter and fall. Viewing the present, we see war destroying life and property, lowering the value of human life, demoralizing civilians and soldiers, breaking down social institutions, disrupting the political structure of nations, and failing to achieve its goal. In the vision of the future we see the possibility of a better world in which youth goes forth not to kill but to help and enrich life. Let's build tomorrow's world today and dedicate our lives to the creation of a peace which will be enduring.

first half mile took two hours. They dropped eight-man rescue crews for all three cases and despite the fact that the men were extremely husky, they all played out before the end of the trip and emergency crews were necessary. The general attitude has changed from that of lightness and expectancy of fun to one of soberness and almost grimness toward a job that is going to take all we can give to it. One big lightning storm would put everyone out and they would have to fight hard to keep the fires from breaking farther. One packer in the back country, given to a little exaggeration, said that the CO's had saved over a million acres of timber. He is not far from wrong because the country is very, very dry. Public relations are excellent all the way around. Big accounts of these rescues and injuries run in the paper and radio. Praise comes from all angles and is often printed in the papers. One of the men made the first page every day from the time the report of his injury was made until he was in the hospital, and everyone in town would ask us about it. The Forest Service men in the back country are really sold on CO's and smoke jumping and this bids well to give us better jobs for next winter.

Names are necessary. Jesus made something of names. He went so far as to change the name of an individual so that his name would be more descriptive of his true character. John 1:42. The MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY shall be true to its name in the loftiest sense of the word. By the grace of God, honor shall be to Jesus Christ, our only

Canadian Mennonites Buy $20,000 Property

These pictures represent two massive structures on a fine estate, situated approximately ten miles north of Winnipeg on the banks of the Red River. To these homes belong three farm buildings: a barn for cows or horses, a large chicken house, and a pig barn. The estate contains 107 acres, of which a part is turned into fertile vegetable garden land.

A few days ago this place was purchased by a group of brethren who now offer it to our Mennonite society for the purpose of establishing a charitable institution on it.

In the year 1911 a rich Winnipeg business man, Mr. T. D. Robinson, built a large country house in classical style on it, exactly after the famous Baldwin House at Pasadena, California. The erection of the house occupied seventy workmen. To the estate at that time belonged 720 acres of land. Two years later a son-in-law of the owner, Mr. C. W. N. Kennedy, built another large house on the estate some distance away from the first one. It was constructed of Tyndale stone, the same stone from which our Provincial Buildings are built. The roof of it was covered with red tile, and its entire appearance is a very noble and impressive one. Both buildings stand amidst a spacious green lawn, bordered by a grove of stately oak trees. To the east slowly flow the broad waters of the Red River.

The houses are connected by a subterranean tunnel 426 ft. long, through which pass the pipes of the water and steam heating system, established in the larger house.

Robinson's house has cost $86,000.00, Kennedy's $42,000.00. After both families had occupied them for about fifteen years, the estate was sold by the heirs. First a neighbour, Mr. Parish, bought 615 acres of land. In 1927 Mr. A. Michael, a business man of Winnipeg, bought the houses and the remaining land. But he soon sold it again to the Winnipeg Ukrainen Workers Benevolent Association. In the larger house they established an orphanage and in the other an old folks home. They operated them until the beginning of the war. Then the expenses became too great, and both institutions closed down. Since that time the buildings have been vacant.

Lately our attention was drawn to this place. We inspected it repeatedly, then went to the office of the W.B.A. and began negotiations with the purpose of purchasing the estate. Soon it became evident that we were not the only ones interested in the place, and because of this we decided to act promptly. The W.B.A. in a kindly way gave us preference to others as we intended to buy the property for a humanitarian purpose. For this reason they rejected the offer of a wealthy business man. After we had been encouraged by many of our friends, a small group of brethren took the initiative and on August 20th bought the place for $20,000.00. We consider it a gift of God. This purchase presents us with a rare opportunity but also with an important responsibility.

Now you will ask us what we intend to do with this newly acquired property. A definite answer to this question will be given at the Constitutional Meeting, where the statutes and rules of the new Benevolent Society will be worked out. We hope that many will join us in this noble enterprise.

Here is an ideal opportunity to establish a home for the aged, where our dear old folks, separated from other invalids, may spend their declining years in an atmosphere of quietness and rest. Those who still are able to work, can make themselves useful on the farm or in the garden.

One of the described houses will be used for invalids of all kinds, especially for those whose nervous health is impaired. How much misery, how much distress of every kind is found in our midst. There are so many sufferers, not ill enough to be in a hospital, and yet not well enough to fulfil the normal duties of life.

Now we have the opportunity to offer these people a haven of rest and quietness. We pray and believe that on this estate there soon will be established a Christian institute of mercy and brotherly love, which will serve well our Mennonite Society far beyond the borders of Manitoba. Who of you, dear friends, would not like to participate in this work from its very beginning?

To speed the work we make the following proposal: Every one who pays $50. becomes a member of the new Benevolent Society. Please send your contribution to Mr. H. J. Willms, 437 Desalaberry, Avenue, Winnipeg. As soon as a considerable number of members has been reached, a meeting of all these members will be called and here the preliminary statutes of the society will be laid down and many other important things decided upon.

We want to remind our churches and congregations to remember this new institution at their harvest thanksgivings and also our women organizations to think of the many needs in clothing and other household belongings.

We herewith send this appeal to all groups of our Mennonite Church. Of course, we will not reject the cooperation of any other group or individual. We also hope that our Mennonite brethren in the U. S. A. will also be interested in this our new Christian enterprise, that they will pray with us for its success and also, in course of time, include it in their manifold missionary endeavours.

Here we are given a splendid opportunity to work together, regardless of our closer church affiliation, and with the help of God to create something that will be noble and enduring and benefit many of our suffering brethren. May the God of love and mercy help us in this great undertaking.—J. J. Klassen, H. J. Willms, J. J. Thiessen, J. J. Schulz and J. H. Enns

RELIEF

"Food for Relief" Donations

Contributions of food to the Mennonite relief program will be picked up by truck from local collection centers. Several congregations have indicated an interest in donating large quantities of food, such as carload lots of wheat, flour, and navy beans. Such contributions are welcomed and directions for shipping may be obtained by corresponding with the office at Akron.

Selective Service recently authorized the transfer of ten C.P.S. men from each of the three agencies to assist "in the preparation of materials for relief." Ten men from Mennonite camps have assigned to assist in the "Food for Relief," "Tools and Utensils for Relief," and clothing programs. They will operate trucks to collect the food and will serve in warehouses and centers to prepare the donations for overseas shipment.

Relief Training School

A second training school for relief workers will be conducted by the M.C.C. at Goshen College, September 12 to 29. Twelve workers, recently appointed for service in Holland, France, Switzerland, and Relief Unit in Ethiopia

Paraguay, will be enrolled.

Orie Miller reports from Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, September 3, that arrangements for beginning a Mennonite relief service in that country are being completed and that additional workers from the States should be sent. Samuel Yoder and Ervin Hooley, Mennonite relief workers who formerly served in Egypt, have been in Ethiopia since August 5 surveying the field and preparing the way to begin a relief program there.

Nurse Arrives in Puerto Rico

Annabelle Troyer has joined her parents, Dr. and Mrs. G. D. Troyer, in Puerto Rico where she will serve as a trained nurse in the Mennonite hospital at La Plata.

Arrival in England

B. F. Hartzler arrived in Southampton, England, September 1. Brother Hartzler will serve as a relief worker among German prisoners of war in England.

China Workers Obtain Passports

Passports have now been validated for S. F. Panabecker and P. P. Baltzer to enter China. These brethren had been delayed in India since March of this year.

COLLEGE NEWS

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

The new year at Bluffton opened with faculty devotional meetings on Saturday and Sunday, September 8, and 9. There was also a staff meeting for business purposes on Monday. Freshmen met for the first time on Monday evening and during the next two days took physical, mental, and achievement examinations and registered for the year. Dr. Ramseyer spoke at the first Chapel service on Wednesday morning, stressing the fact that without spiritual emphasis and devotion to Christianity a college education may be detrimental rather than helpful. On Friday evening the annual "mixer" for students and faculty, sponsored by the Y.M. and Y.W.C.A., was held in the library. While enrollment figures are as yet not complete, it is safe to announce that there is an increase in attendance over last year. It was necessary to arrange additional rooming facilities for girls, since Ropp Hall is more than filled.

BETHEL COLLEGE

At the end of the fifth day student enrollment stood at 165 in the college and 78 in the Academy, making a total of 243 with prospects for about twenty more. Approximately 77 per cent of the college students are Mennonite and 68 per cent from Kansas, with nine other denominations and twelve other states represented from Washington D. C. to Mississippi to Washington State. Four are here from Canada (with others to follow), George Flasscheon from Belgium, and Eleanor Thiessen from India. Six negroes are enrolled, three American Indians are in the Academy, and two girls from India have applied for college admission. The proportion of men remains as low as last year, although the Academy is quite evenly divided. The Academy is almost 100 per cent Mennonite and Kansan—and has twenty-seven day-students.

FREEMAN JUNIOR COLLEGE

The enrollment at the end of the second week of school stands at 117. There has been a substantial increase in the Academy over last year, 103 as over against 94. There are still a number not yet enrolled due to the lateness of the farm season. The College enrollment is about the same as last year of this date—14. Rev. J. J. Regier and Rev. Willard Claassen are assisting with the work in Bible until more permanent arrangements can be made. Rev. Regier teaches Bible I and II in the Academy while Rev. Claassen has Bible III and IV. Harold Gross is teaching the College Bible. Gerhard Toews likewise is helping out with the music work until someone can be found to take over this work. The annual meeting of the Freeman Junior College Corporation will be held on Friday evening, September 21. In addition to the regular business Dr. E. G. Kaufman of Bethel is expected as guest speaker.

CHILDREN OF WAR

A small girl stares with widened, frightened eyes
I shall remember always the tragic faces
Of little children orphaned by this war—
Terrified small children searching for traces Of lost familiar things. The frightening roar
Of planes has been their constant lullaby.
They know not laughter nor a child's quick joy;
Strangers to beauty—a gentian-blue swept sky
Is but a path for bombardiers to a boy
Sitting amid the rubble—homeless, hurt.
A small girl stares with widened, frightened eyes
At her young mother crumpled in the dirt,
Her features stamped with terrified surprise—
These are the children war has made its own,
Children unacquainted with sudden laughter,
Children whose flesh lies tight upon the bone:
War's branded children—now, and ever after.

JOTTINGS

—By the end of 1944, fifty-four members of the Mennonite Church at Heubuden, Germany, had fallen in military service. A total of twenty-five members died as soldiers from 1914 to 1918.—From a letter written by Gustav Reimer, Denmark, to his cousin Gustav Remier, Whitewater, Kansas.

—First Church, Reedley, California, has ordered one hundred slides from Dr. Cornelius Krahn, Bethel College Historical Library, North Newton, Kansas, for an evening's program to be given September 23. The slides give a summary of the Mennonite Church throughout all countries through the centuries. The Menno Church, Lind, Washington, just recently used them for an evening program.

—A. J. Muste and John Nevin Sayre urge people to write to President Truman and their representatives in congress: 1. To express moral revulsion against the resort to atomic bombing; 2. To urge that immediate steps to discontinue production of atomic bombs be taken and a pledge given by the government of the United States not to resort to its use in the future; 3. To urge vigorous action to secure disarmament and abolition of conscription by international agreement."

—From recent press reports anticonscription sentiment is becoming vocal in Great Britain. While the majority opinion endorses peacetime conscription, elements in the Labor party, hitherto quiet on the issue for reasons of political expediency, have indicated opposition to the policy. to leave for India from there in December." —Bulletin, Bethel Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota —First Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: The Mennonite Bible Academy, of which Huldah Myers is the teacher, had thirteen students enrolled on September 9. Rev. Solomon Mouttet spoke on the evening of September 9 on the needs of the Ozark mission field.

—Berne, Indiana: Fred Von Gunten, who for the past two and a half years served as substitute clerk and carrier at the local post office while retaining the managership of the Mennonite Book Concern, has resigned his post office position to devote full time to the Book Concern, which has an increasing amount of business.

—Miss Janet Soldner of Berne, Indiana, has now received permission to enter Colombia, South America, for mission work. Miss Soldner plans to leave for her work as medical missionary as soon as she gets her passport and travel reservations. She will join Rev. and Mrs. Gerald Stucky who were to arrive in Colombia by plane on September 12. At present Miss Soldner is on the nursing staff of the Bluffton, Ohio, Community Hospital.

BETHEL DEACONESS HOSPITAL GIFT AND FELLOWSHIP DAY, SEPTEMBER 26

The Bethel Deaconess Hospital and the Bethel Home for Aged of Newton, Kansas, are announcing their annual Gift and Fellowship Day to be held this year on Wednesday, September 26.

Two programs have been planned for this day, in the afternoon at four and in the evening at eight o'clock. The address for the afternoon program will be given by the Reverend Maurice Yoder, pastor of the Hesston College Mennonite church. The evening program will include a concert by the band of Newton High School, and the Reverend H. W. Reed, pastor of the Nazarene church of Newton, will make a short address during the intermission of the concert. Both the above programs will take place on the lawn of the home for aged.

Between the hours of five and seven, the ladies auxiliaries will again serve a luncheon which will feature "borscht" which has been so popular in past years. This year the luncheon will be served in the basement of the First Mennonite church located on east first street. This change has been made in order to accommodate more comfortably the large crowd which is expected. The food sale, however, will be held at the home for aged as usual.

A cordial invitation is extended to all friends of the institutions to attend the above mentioned programs.

C.P.S. camp at Colorado Springs. Those bringing the morning messages during Rev. Regier's absence were the brethren: Orlando Schmidt, J. F. Sawatzky, Abe Peters, Arnold Nickel, P. S. Goertz, and Victor Sawatzky. Dr. P. S. Goertz also brought the message at the union Sunday evening service. All messages were inspiring and heart-reaching, and we hope the Reverend and Mrs. Regier have also been a blessing where they served during the two months. Our church at present has ten members in C.P.S.

—Rev. and Mrs. B. Ewert of Winnipeg, Manitoba, celebrated their Golden wedding on September 2. At the same time the fiftieth anniversary of Rev. Ewert's ministry in Canada was also commemorated. For twenty-five years he was one of the ministers of the large Bergthal Mennonite Church in Manitoba and for twenty-five years itinerant minister of the Canadian Conference and minister-at-large. About eight hundred friends participated in the celebration.

—Bulletin, First Church, Wadsworth, Ohio: "Plans for an adequate church program for the winter months are now under way. In an effort to determine the needs of the congregation, you will receive with your bulletin in a few Sundays a brief questionnaire. It will concern particularly the Sunday evening service and the mid-week service."

—Rev. and Mrs. W. C. Voth and daughters have moved to Lorraine, Kansas, where Rev. Voth is teaching. Their son Stanley is in the C.P.S. camp at Mulberry, Florida. When home on furlough, August 19, he showed pictures of what the camp is doing to the Gnadenberg Church, Whitewater.

—Zion Church, Souderton, Pa., is sending its weekly bulletin to all non-resident members. Dr. L. L. Ramseyer is expected for a visit on September 23. The week following he is to visit members of the church and other members of the Eastern District Conference in the interest of Bluffton College. Zion Church observed a harvest festival on September 9. Note from bulletin: "Harvest Home Sunday transforms the day from an ordinary day of self-gratulatory feasting to a time of humble gratitude to God. Instead of the fool's thought, 'Soul, take thine ease; eat, drink, be merry,' it whispers: 'What shall I render unto God?' and 'How can I share my blessings?' Now it is coming to ask, 'How can I help remove the world's burden of poverty and wretchedness?'" —Aberdeen, Idaho: Delmar Wedel, who is to sail in the near future for relief work in France, brought the message on September 9.

—A unique feature in the newsletter of the Zion Church, Elbing, Kansas, is a set of questions relating to the history of the church and then the answers.

—Wichita, Kansas: According to the Sunday School report many of the members in the past year pledged to give 5 per cent of their income to the church building fund.

—Religious training is the duty of the church and the home and not of the school, and the church and state should not be combined. So claims Civil Liberties League of Chicago, according to a report.

—Dr. J. E. Hartzler was ordained a Bishop in the Mennonite Church at a service held at the 8th Street Church, Goshen, Indiana.

—Eighty-five ministers have to date sent in the card they received asking for the name and address of their church correspondent. Those who have not returned the card will facilitate the completion of our list of correspondents by an early return of the card.

—The First Church of Christian Mennonite, Moundridge, Kansas, got its name from the little town of "Christian" which once existed about one mile south of Moundridge. The church was built in Christian and later moved to Moundridge. The town of Christian in turn got its name from being located at a section corner at which there converged three sections, all three of which were owned by men whose first name was "Christian." Sometime the congregation of the First Church of Christian Mennonite may have a new building in which to worship, for it has collected a building fund of over $13,000 in eight years. Rev. P. P. Wedel, pastor, has served it continuously for over forty years. During the first eight months of this year, this church gave $1,494 for C.P.S. One member, Mrs. Ed Gering, in spare time found here and there in two months, made one hundred new garments for needy children in war-torn areas. Another member contributed sixty feed sacks of colored print material out of which the sewing society is making beautiful dresses for girls in Europe. This society has also contributed $250 for relief. At present they are canning for C.P.S. They also collect used clothing, that is in good shape, for relief.

—The First Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas, was the first church to make a gift to the new Mennonite Biblical Seminary and Bible School, according to a letter of acknowledgement written by E. W. Baumgartner, Treasurer of the institution. The offering amounted to $181.50.

—Bulletin, First Church, Nappanee, Indiana: "You may be interested in seeing the pile of 1,718 No. 2 cans of peaches in the furnace room of the church. Fifty bushels were given to us by Ralph Metzler from his orchard. Twelve from our church helped gather the fruit Monday and Tuesday after work. They hauled it to the Brethern Cannery at New Paris where nineteen of our women helped to can the fruit; some worked both Wednesday and Thursday, while most worked only one of the two days. Several others of the men helped to bring the canned fruit to the church on Thursday afternoon. Over thirty people have helped with the project so far.—On Friday twenty-two of our boys and girls met at the church for the August Fellowship Day. After studying about our relief work they made a pan of relief soap, knotted baby comforters, and made banks to begin saving for a relief heifer." On Christian Education Sunday high school and college students sat together in a body. The Sewing Circle's last shipment to Akron included thirty-seven pounds of soap, sixty pairs of baby shoes, and fourteen pairs of adult shoes.

MENNONITE FACTORY OWNER AND WEEK-DAY RELIGION

(A General Conference pastor has submitted the following, encouraging report of a Mennonite business man who believes that his Christian faith should affect his advertisements.)

Too often businessmen on Monday forget that they attended church services on Sunday, or that they have any connection with the Church of Christ. One minister relates an experience showing that some businessmen do seek to have their religious faith affect their business dealings. A factory owner, who prefers to remain anonymous, called his pastor, saying, "I have been asked to buy an advertisement in the victory edition of the County daily. Instead of paying for one of their stock advertisements, I'd like something that expresses the ideals for which our church is striving; would you like to write the copy?" Later that day, the pastor gave the businessman several sheets of paper with suggested copy, one of which (centered about St. Francis' famous prayer—"Lord, make me an instrument of Thy peace") was run in a three-column advertisement over three-fourths of the area from top to bottom of the page.

NOTICE TO MINISTERS

If all those ministers in the General Conference who have changed their address in the past year will report this change to Rev. C. E. Krehbiel, then the correct addresses can be given in the forthcoming Bundesbote Kalendar and Mennonite Year Book. This information is needed immediately.

NUMBER 38

WHEN THEY COME HOME

They will come back—some are already—from Fort Collins, Hawaii, Camino, Germany, Denison, Italy, Provo, the South Pacific to Hillsboro, and Bluffton, and Moundridge, and Reedley, and Souderton. From all over the United States and from the vast world they will converge towards home, the place where people belong together in some little town or village or community, where there stands the church of childhood and youth, and where there is a family group that will be waiting at the station.

They have been gone a long time—waiting for the war to cease. For some it's been years of soil saving, fighting forest fires, attending the mentally ill—for some it has been years of "flying missions," of invasions and front line fighting, of seeing death and destruction, of doing unwillingly what a nation back beyond the waters asked them to do.

They will be coming back to home, to soft spoken words, to quietness and cheerfulness, to the stability of familiar sights and sounds, to the intimacy of love ties that were never broken, to the sunrise of a peaceful day, and a sunset upon work that builds for the future, to the teachings and spirit of Christ as embodied in the fellowship of the First Church of ———.

But back, the world cannot be forgotten; it goes on in war or peace. And whether it will be war or peace is important to those who can be torn apart. Families must not be torn apart again. They must remain together, and like they the peoples of all nations must be drawn together and live together in peace through the grace of Christ.

Our Ministry of Education

MEETING AGAIN

By J. H. Langerwalter

The first flush of the joy that "the war is over" has disappeared for the most part. The second thought is very sobering because the world that the war has left is a very uncertain and disillusioned world. The expected thing has not happened. The boys, with few exceptions, have not come home. Nobody seems to know the reason, and nobody seems to be responsible.

Whom Will We Meet Again?

Nobody knows that either. Some will never return. Some have died by "accident," others by the weapons of the enemies, and still others through "punishment," often meted out in ways which are past finding out or understanding.

Others may never return because they are among the "living dead." Their bodies are still here, to be cared for or neglected, but their minds are gone so far as any relationship with them is concerned.

When?

Not too soon in too many cases. There are those in hospitals who may be a long time returning, if ever. There are those in prison. Then there those who have "re-enlisted," or are being "invited" to do so! Men are learning new lessons in the art of coercion in these post-war days. Some of these lessons are very disheartening.

What They Want

These boys of ours in all kinds of "service" have been uprooted. They want and need quiet in order to to recover. They want no "fuss or parades" of any kind. They want time to find themselves again without coercion. They have had too much of that already. Calling it something else will not deceive them. They want a chance to work out their problems. They have faced these problems at hand and in perspective and want to find real solutions for them. They feel keenly the need of penitence on the part of mankind. That calls for a contriteness of heart which extends the forgiving and sympathetic hand instead of the condemning finger. They feel the need of private and public confession, provided such expressions are genuine.

Lessons Learned

These boys of ours have learned how untrustworthy human arrangements are. "Orders is orders" has a strange sound for them in the remnant of civilization left to us by those who have given such orders too long and with results that are so futile and disheartening. In some way they feel that "orders" and a well ordered life should be more closely related.

They have also learned that the best that has been attained in human life may be held as wrong by those in power. The latter have shown, as perhaps never before, that they consider themselves as belonging to "privileged classes." Our boys understand now that that kind of human direction is not guidance but enslavement. They have found, through bitter experience, how useless it is to depend on those who seek "privileges" for themselves. They have had their eyes opened to what one must expect from selfishness, however cleverly or sanctimoniously it may be hidden. They have also learned that fear makes men unfit to be themselves at their best and that it makes them easy prey for those who are selfish and without conscience.

On the other hand they have also learned that right is still right, and never might, that truth still makes men free indeed and that other kinds of "freedom" are delusions. They have learned to see, as never before, that the spirit of service, and not the spirit of dominion makes for right relationships.

They have had opportunity to see the difference between the contributions which come from the lives of those who are moved by love and those moved by fear. That is why many of them look forward to a return home where they hope to find us having grown at a pace at least equal to their's.

It is well for us to remember a paragraph from the letter of a boy to his mother. "Dear Mother, you say that you want us to come home tomorrow. We want to go home tomorrow. But what will you do with us when we get home?"

In the eyes of Jesus everybody is somebody. Remembering this fact may make our professions of Him as our Lord more helpful when we meet our boys again!

EDITORIALS

"THE CHURCH AND THE RETURNING SOLDIER" by Roy A. Burkhardt is a book, which in high idealism and searching frankness, calls the church to begin with the soldiers and the civilian where they are and then to take them to where they ought to go. The book is "hard" on the church but not without giving some positive, fairly specific suggestions for improvement — a very hard but helpful thing to do. Mennonite readers might question certain parts, but in general the book should prove stimulating and suggestive of improvements.

Roy A. Burkhardt seeks to practice what he preaches in the program for servicemen that is carried on by the church of which he is pastor. He has talked much with servicemen and knows their mind; at the same time as a pastor he sees the weaknesses and the opportunities of the Church. Given to the way of love, he feels deeply with the soldier and exerts a uniting influence.

In the preface to the book he makes clear his belief that the Church must become a new and re-vitalized church or it will fail this generation. That it hasn't done so well is indicated by the horrible blight of war itself, by the fact that of the eleven and one-half million men in service at least half left without a church connection, and that only an estimated 5 per cent keep in touch with the men who are gone. Many organizations will want to help the returning serviceman; the church can best focus these efforts. The church must be vital to the returning soldier or he will tend to line up with organizations that tend to divide serviceman and civilian at the expense of the spirit of community. Well-meaning busy-bodies had better not sweep down upon the men when they return with problems, for the wrong approach might only make the problems worse. More than anything else the men will need "vital group fellowship in which they can join with others in service, play, study, problem-solving and worship." They need to find the church folks at home living with a great faith and purpose. They need to find an emphasis upon government from within, given by God and directed clearly to the well-being of all men. This summary of the message expands into four parts in the book.

Part One: The Mind of the Soldier

The men who return are not to be regarded as a problem. The greater problem is the readjustment of the civilian so that he can helpfully work with (not for) the soldier. Fundamentally the latter is a civilian who has been trained to be a soldier, sailor, marine, or flier. Though possessing this training, he is at heart a civilian and, in short, very much like the rest of the people. However, he has one profoundly unique experience, and that is the intensely close and deep comradeship of the frontlines. In it he has become one with others in something that the civilian has not experienced. If the Church is to have first place it must provide a fellowship in place of the other. "The Church must provide a sustaining religious fellowship that will help the person recover those ethical convictions upon which our way of life has been based from the beginning and without which it will disintegrate. It is the Church's responsibility to help him find the kind of fellowship that is God and that will become life eternal in his own heart; to help him sense the divine in life and live by the peace-producing power of that divine quality; to help him find the love that is God and live in that love." At this point we might well raise the question as to how rich a fellowship our Mennonite churches have provided for its young men. It has been estimated from survey results that 50 per cent of the young men from our conference went into the armed services because of "social reasons" (Mennonite, July 31, p. 5). Is the Mennonite Church the "fellowship" that it should be in this day of competing secular fellowships?

Burkhardt goes on to say that many find little more in the church than the "theological abstraction of a sermon," whereas they much need participation in the church program and a definite opportunity to learn. Competing with the Church are secular fellowships which appeal. No wonder that when the individual spends much more time in these fellowships than in that of the church, that he will naturally adopt the patterns of behaviour that they offer. Ministers need to know how to get close to people and preach to their actual life needs. The home needs to be a vital Christian community in itself if it is not to cancel out the work of the church. Instruction must always begin where the person is. It is here that the church may fail with the returning men. Through an effective program and fellowship the men can be won to the Church and its program.

Part Two. Where Should the Church Begin?

The Church should begin by uniting for service, by keeping in close contact with the men who are gone (various concrete suggestions are given), by welcoming them when home on furlough, by bringing the home-folks into the most helpful attitude towards the men who are gone, by sustaining those who experience sorrow, by providing circles of fellowship for those who have loved ones absent, by encouraging the right kind of letter writing, by having services in memory of those gone, and by getting ready to live for those things that the men in the armed forces are dying for.

By H. E. Nunemaker

Since 49 per cent of those discharged while the war was in full swing were released for mental causes, the church will need to provide for sound counseling to aid many of these. Since 32 per cent of 11,800,000 soldiers never held a job and because many will want to find a new one, there will have to be provision for vocational opportunities. Counseling for home life may also be helpful to many. Specific suggestions follow on these points.

Part Four: The Revitalized Church

This section of the book breathes with the vitality that a new-born Church should possess. The Church must possess a heart of compassion, a new conscience, and a glorious gospel. God must be more than a word; He must be a gripping and enheartening experience of the soul. To achieve this men must be met where they live and at the point where they are anxious for help. The one who has God must reveal Him in living. "The Christian lives by love, he is compassionate, he is kind, thoughtful, understanding. The Christian is merciful, therefore he obtains mercy. He is a peacemaker since he is a child of God. Wherever he goes, therefore, he is used of God to bring peace to human hearts, to end strife among persons. He is a leader not by virtue of calling orders, but by emitting a light others can follow. He does not impose his own will upon his fellows but he helps them develop sufficient freedom to live by the high and holy will of God." God must determine the nature of worship, work, and service. The Church's greatest peril is that of being content with itself as it is, thereby neglecting God-ordained growth.

"The Church," Burkhardt says, "consists of human beings with a certain quality in their souls, a quality which is evidenced in their relationship to one another and to God." This Church must influence all life: see to it that the child is not only loved but learns to love others, that he ever continues to grow, and that the Christian home shed the light that the whole world needs. Socially the church must set patterns of cooperation and forgiveness that other social groupings may follow. It must be able to lead men into and through an experience of personal salvation. The Church needs adequate leadership: ministers with a broad training, an internship in an effective church and study in hospitals for the physically and mentally ill, etc. Teachers of children and youth need more effective training. The Church needs greater preparation for membership. It must ever bear in mind the prayer of Jesus "that they all may be one."

Here is a book, which with its emphasis upon fellowship, tends to unite rather than divide those who should be one in and through Christ. It has something to offer for the needs of our churches.

(The Church and the Returning Soldier may be had for $2.00 a copy from Harper and Brothers Publishers, New York, or from the Mennonite Publication Office, 722 Main, Newton Kansas.)

The war has ended and the men in various types of service are being demobilized and coming home. The matter of welcoming them so as to conserve all spiritual values and strengthen the church has been the matter of much serious thought on the part of church leaders. The Church Council of the Zion Mennonite Church, Donnellson, Iowa, has decided to have two services of welcome. The first to be held when about half of the men of the church have been demobilized, and the other when the other half has been demobilized. Two services were planned because of the possibility of quite a long period of time elapsing between the return of the first and the last of the men. It is planned to have a carry-in dinner for the entire church on the appointed Sunday with special effort to have all of the men who were in Civilian Public Service and military service present. The noon hour and a portion of the afternoon are to be spent in fellowship.

The details of the service have not as yet been planned but will consist of the elements of praise, confession, prayer, a charge to the church and a charge to the ex-servicemen. It must be recognized that the church has a definite responsibility toward the men, and they in turn have a definite responsibility toward the church which has nourished their spiritual life. This service should seek to point out their mutual obligation with the hope that each will again assume a vital place in the life of the other — the church in the life of the men and the men in the life and work of the church.

The element of praise will find ready acceptance in such service, because of the joy occasioned by the close of the war and the return of loved ones. The matter of confession can, however, become a divisive rather than a unifying factor if it is made the instrument to wrest confession from certain ones who, under the pressure of abnormal times took the course which is contrary to the spirit and teaching of Christ. We too, must confess because in so many things we have taken our own way rather than the way of Christ. We must confess as a church because we have so signally failed to teach the revealed will of God as touching the sacredness of human life, man's relation with his fellowman and the power of love in the larger relationships of society. We must confess because the inconsistencies of so many of us caused some of our young men to lose faith in our teaching of the doctrine of peace. Some of us, while denouncing war, welcomed war profits and increased our efforts to produce war goods. We must confess because of the many things we have left undone that should have been done. Only a service of mutual confession will clear the air for a mutual understanding which is necessary for united work in the church.

(When we heard of the plans Zion Church, Donnellson, was making, we asked Brother Nunemaker to describe them for the sake of other churches which may be interested. We invite the churches who have made plans for the return of the servicemen to send accounts of their plans to The Mennonite, North Newton, Kansas.)

Dutch Mennonites Ask for Help to Rebuild Churches

By Cornelius Krahn

Among the many war casualties in Europe are a great number of churches. According to the Netherlands News sixty Protestant churches and twenty parsonages were destroyed throughout Holland during this war. The General Synod of the Reformed Church in America has put aside an amount of $300,000 to begin the project of rebuilding destroyed churches. An American Reformed representative is to go to Holland to investigate conditions and possibilities on further rehabilitation measures.

Five Mennonite Churches Destroyed

Five of the above-mentioned churches belong to the Mennonites. The church at Rotterdam was destroyed during the early German "blitz" when Rotterdam was leveled. The Mennonite church of Arnhem was destroyed very likely last winter when Allied paratroopers landed in the vicinity of Arnhem which resulted in a fierce prolonged battle. Vlissingen, on one of the Zeeland Islands lost its Mennonite church probably when the Island was flooded. The city is a significant harbor at the approaches to Antwerp. Of these churches the one at Rotterdam was the largest with a membership of 1,200. Its pastor is S. H. Gorter who has been active in relief work for many years. He is now the vice-president of the Algemeene Doopsgezinde Societeit (Dutch General Conference).

Appeal for Help

The writer received a postcard written July 19, 1945, from the former editor of the Mennonite weekly Zondagsbode, Rev. W. Koekebakker, in which he appeals to American Mennonites to aid them in their reconstruction of the destroyed churches. Rev. Koekebakker sends the following message from the historic city of Dordrecht: "Dear Dr. Krahn! Many thanks for your card. We are all well. Also in my congregations are great losses in men and goods. The Mennonite churches in Rotterdam, Wageningen, Arnhem, Vlissingen and Nijmegen are destroyed. The publishing of the Zondagsbode was stopped in May 1942. The paper won't reappear. At intervals will appear De Noodbrug (The Emergency Bridge). Dr. Gorter in Rotterdam is editor. Perhaps will the Mennonites of America help to rebuild the destroyed churches. I will be glad if you will take the initiative. You know about our brotherhood. Last Sunday I took leave from my congregation at Breda (a second church across the Rhine which Rev. K. served). I can't continue my work there now that the great bridges over the "Hollandsch Diep" (Moerdijk) are destroyed. Breda was combined with Dordrecht. Now with Eindhoven. With the best wishes for you and your loved ones. W. Koekebakker."

"Rebuild My House"

St. Francis as a warrior heard the voice of God say, "Rebuild my house." Immediately he began to rebuild the neglected church. Again the voice of God speaks the same words to his children. Some hear it and act accordingly. Recently the writer visited some C.P.S. hospital units. Most of the boys had families, and earned little or nothing. And yet they had a treasury with money in it. They wondered in which missionary or relief enterprise this money would be most effective. When the writer related the above appeal from Rev. Koekebakker their immediate response was to give $20 to the M.C.C. for "rebuilding the house of God" in Holland. Who will join our C.P.S. boys in this worthy project?

Letter Tells of Flight from West Prussia to Denmark

A letter written from Copenhagen, July 23, and received by Elder Johannes Regier of Laird, Saskatchewan describes how his relative Johannes Regier and family of West Prussia fled to Denmark upon the advance of the Russians.

Start Flight When Thermometer 14 Above

On January 21, 1945, the German government ordered the Johannes Regier family to leave Tiegengagen. The temperature was fourteen above zero as Johannes Regier, wife, daughter Ursel, two daughters-in-laws with eight children, six servants, and seven other people crowded into two wagons and drove out the farmstead, perhaps, never to see it again.

Seek Refuge by Relatives

After driving beyond Kathaus and remaining there three weeks, the party was compelled to return some distance. Johannes Regier then drove to his niece, Lisbet Strunk, at Westlinken-Danzig. But they couldn't remain here. After six weeks Johannes Regier drove to his brother-in-law, Joh. Harder, at Fischerbabke. But here the air was so full of bullets that one day three persons were killed on the brother-in-law's place and seven horses were killed out in the granary. On April 8 the burgomaster asked them to leave Fischerbabke.

By Truck, Ferry, and Cruiser

They were now taken by truck to Nickelswald and from there to Hela by ferry. Here the cruiser Orion awaited them. On April 9, they left for Denmark. Hardly had they begun the journey when the air filled with bullets. But on April 13, the party came safely to journey's end. (The cruiser Orion was sunk on its next trip). The original 650 refugees of the camp shrank to five hundred. A great many died at the beginning. Regier writes that they are continually tightening their belts.

Hope to Migrate

The Mennonite leaders, says Regier, have now resolved to try to find some place to which they might migrate, in case they cannot return to their former homes. He says that all they desire is to till the soil in peace.

Now Possible To Send Packages to Europe

Families who have been anxious to send packages of food, clothing, and other supplies to relatives for friends in Europe are now able to do so. This applies to certain countries; Germany is still inaccessible.

Mrs. Anna C. Linscheid, postmistress at North Newton, Kansas, states:

"It is now possible to send ordinary parcel post packages, containing articles not restricted by customs, to foreign countries such as Holland, Denmark, Switzerland, France and others. The maximum weight of a parcel for Holland or Denmark is eleven pounds and the size is limited to eighteen inches in length and forty-two inches in length and girth combined. In some cities larger stores offer special services in preparing and mailing gift boxes to civilians overseas. The STOP & SHOP, 16 W. Washington St., Chicago, Illinois, issues a list of countries to which boxes may be sent. In this list they describe the contents, give the cost of each box, and the mailing or postage charges."

Packages to Holland May Include:

Up to $1.00 worth in any one package — fish (canned, preserved), vegetables and fruits (canned), peanuts (shelled and unshelled), coffee, spices, tea, sugar, candy, eggs (dried), sheeting, rayon goods, nylon goods, wool yarn, soap (all kinds), vitamins and medicines, cotton fabrics, cotton underwear, cotton outerwear, silk hosiery, and silk underwear,

Up to $25.00 in any one package — infant's and dietetic food, shoes (old styles second hand), leather goods, dehydrated soups, cocoa (powered), chewing gum, honey, preserves, jellies, tobacco, cotton thread and yarn, wool blankets and wearing apparel, safety razors and blades, table cutlery (steel), kitchen utensils, buttons, toothbrushes and toothpaste, jams, and notions.

Letters and money may, of course, also be sent. Ask your bank how money may be sent.

Familiar faces, laughing, bright;
A pleasant room, confusion free—
(Long, long, ago, the endless fight.)

When he comes home, he'll wish to hear
Those sounds affection never quells:
Playing of children, loud and dear—
(Far, far away, the bombs and shells.)

When he comes home, he'll want to know
That faith and love and truth are there,
All to God in reverence go—

He'll want to know;
Then, 'til he come,
We'll keep it so.

QUOTE

Maimonides, a noted Jewish rabbi of the Twelfth century:

"Humility is the mean between arrogance and self-abasement."

E. Stanley Jones in "The Christ of the American Road":

"For none of us has the Truth. The Truth is in Christ—the Truth. What we hold is truths about the Truth. We need, therefore, the other person's truth to add to our truths, so that our pooled truths may more closely approximate him who is The Truth. I say 'more closely approximate,' for even our pooled truths are forever this side of the Truth. We shall eternally grow into deeper and larger comprehension of the Truth, and assimilate it more and more into character and achievement; that will be our happiness and our heaven."

Cecil E. Haworth, Quaker, in "The American Friend":

"Every home is doubly blessed if it has growing parents, and growing parents are usually reading parents. A parent can hardly claim to be growing unless he reads at least one good book a year on parenthood.

Starr Daily, converted after a criminal career of twenty-five years, writes in "The Third Front":

"It is doubtful whether psychology has coined any advice which Jesus has not given. The Master's methods for helping people have not been equaled or improved upon. He held the magic key to life. As a practicing psychologist, he remains the Alpha and Omega. But psychology has made His methods more generally available by reclothing them in a garment of new terms. . . First and foremost in the list of His commandments is that of Love. We can hardly help people if they bore us, or if we dislike them, or resent them. I believe it was the psychologist, Link, who said that if we wish to make an enemy of a man we have only to tell him he is wrong, and the method will never fail. Only slightly can we help others if our interest is merely professional. But if we Love them we can help them more by that Love than we can by our most sage advice."

ERROL T. ELLIOTT, Editor of "The American Friend" (Quaker):

"We fought for 'democracy' in the first world war and lost nearly all of it. We could not use that discredited slogan again. This time we fought for 'freedom.' We shall now watch it perish measurably over all the earth for some years. New rulers will arise, new governments will come and go, but the next quarter of a century is not going to be a heyday of 'freedom.' A world so completely upset as this one should not expect it. In fact, men will need to give to their respective governments more understanding criticism and sympathetic service in the difficult role they shall have to play."

Pastoral Visitation Program to CPS Camps

Just before the opening of General Conference, May 30, representatives of all the General Conference Boards gathered in Memorial Hall to appraise the visitation effort of last fall. Reports came in from many sides from camps and units that the men appreciated the program very much. Especially, one point was stressed, namely this visitation was not the hurried one-night-meeting kind, since the men stayed from three days to a week in one place. Others reported that the men received new courage and determination to carry on in their service, "for conscience sake." From still other quarters word came that the men were sure the General Conference had not forgotten them, although they were scattered in far away corners. All in all, the men assembled felt that the effort of 1944 had the Lord's blessing stamped upon it.

1945 Theme: "The Christian Walk"

As soon as all were convinced that we should go ahead and plan for the fall visitation work, a theme was sought. What particular Bible study should be taken up, for all were of one opinion that the effort should be scripture-centered. Many good passages and themes were suggested with the one: "The Christian Walk" as found in Ephesians chapters four, five and six, finding favor with all.

The Visitation Workers

A number of men were selected at the first meeting to make the visitation. Contacts were made in good time, but several found it impossible to leave the work in their home churches. Others in the selected list were contacted and finally the Acting Secretary reported that nine men had accepted the assignment. This is a smaller number than went out last year. The following ministers have been released from their churches and work and have expressed a desire to help in this undertaking: H. T. Unruh, Hillsboro, Kansas; L. L. Ramseyer, Bluffton, Ohio; Elmer D. Hess, Coatesville, Pa.; Alvin van der Smisen, Buhler, Kansas; Menno H. Kliever, Bessie, Oklahoma; Wilmer S. Shelly, Topeka, Indiana (Brother Shelly is in the Central Conference); W. F. Unruh, Moundridge, Kansas; P. K. Regier, Reedley, California; Rev. George Dick, Bloomfield, Montana; and J. E. Kaufman, Inman, Kansas. These men solicit your prayers so that they might truly represent Christ and the church to the men in the camps, hospital and farm units.

The Committee wants to thank those churches who last year cooperated in such a noble manner to release their pastors that all conference churches could be visited after the young men in C.P.S. had been visited.

This year, no doubt, because of the time taken out to attend General Conference sessions and other pressing engagements, fewer men could be released and so the church visitation had to be eliminated. This is deeply regretted. Our sincere thanks to those churches that did give their pastors liberty to help.

United Bible Study

In order to tie up the work in the camps and units and the home churches in a worthy spiritual manner, the Committee of the Boards suggests, that during the month of October, when the visitation is being made, in all General Conference pulpits a careful study of Ephesians be made in the form of expository sermons. The service of Rev. Jacob J. Enns, Nappanee, Indiana, has been secured and he has worked out an outline that will be used by all visitation workers, and it is hoped that the same outline which will be published in the church papers, will be used in the home churches by the pastors. The committee learned that already some fathers with sons in service have asked their boys to study Ephesians together. By studying God's Word together in smaller and larger groups, and by united prayer much can be accomplished with the Lord's help to bring our thinking, planning and efforts together.

Rev. John J. Plenert, 7319 Whitaker Avenue, Philadelphia II, Pa. has served as Acting Secretary in working out the many details in connection with the Pastoral Visitation Program. General Conference men in the M.C.C. office at Akron, Pa. have also rendered noble service.

Outline Next Week

Next week, we plan to bring the first installment of the Outline for a helpful study of Ephesians, chapters four, five and six, as these suggest "The Christian Walk."—The Committee from the Boards of General Conference.

NOT THE SAME TODAY AS YESTERDAY

Fifth and sixth grade pupils in Albany public schools have been using a textbook, The Old World and Its Gifts, which tells them that the Japanese are "a clean, alert, intelligent people." Worse, it explains that Japan acquired new land "because it is almost impossible for so many people to make a living on their small islands."

Clearly, something had to be done about it. School Superintendent John W. Park pondered, "This is a fine book" . . . "We would prefer to have the teachers say 'That is what we thought of Japan in 1939 but not today' —but . . ." Then he hit on a solution. The books were saved. But the unfashionable pages have been neatly stapled together.

They Ask Questions

We arrived in India in February. Mrs. Isaac had charge of the girls' middle school and boarding, but the plan was that they go to Mauhadhi as soon as I had taken over the school. We took about two weeks turning over and taking every work, and the Isaacs moved to their assigned field of work. Since I had had the girls' school and boarding before, it was not new work for me and hence easier to get a start. There are over ninety people in the boarding which is a big enough family to keep the matron and me and the eighth grade girls as helpers busy. There is a primary and a middle school where ten teachers and I find many interesting lessons to teach and to learn.

I enjoy the eighth grade Bible class especially. The girls bring their problems and questions to class whether they are related to the lesson or not. That gives me a chance to know them better and to understand their difficulties.

One day the question of suicide was discussed. In India a common form of protest against anything is refusal to eat. Sometimes some of our Christians also resort to this. The question was, "Would a person who destroyed himself or herself go to heaven?"

Another day the girls asked, "May we ask you a question today?" The mother of one of our pupils from Korba had come to visit her daughter. On the way back she died of cholera, which was raging in many nearby villages. The girls said they had hardly slept any at all last night, and but little two nights before, because they thought they saw Dasmal's spirit in the bedroom at night and she said, "Daughter, daughter." There were many questions about what happens to our spirits when we die? Do we have a body right away or when do we get it? What is the state of non-Christians after death?

I tried to answer all these questions and I asked them whether Sukhmat was happy to see and hear her mother or not. Some said "yes," some said "no." I said I did not know whether the spirits of the dead could come like that but I thought a Christian mother would not come to scare her daughter and this group of girls. She might come to comfort, to warn, or to teach if she could. They thought that looked plausible.

That evening I went to the boarding and for the devotional period I chose the verse, "Be not afraid, it is I" when the disciples were scared and thought they saw a spirit. I prayed that God might cast out all sin and fear and anything that did not please Him, and to fill the heart of each girl with the Holy Spirit. That night the girls slept well and they were not scared of this spirit again.

The teachers have been cooperative and helpful and willing workers, and the girls have shown a good spirit of learning. Thanking you for regular salaries, interest and prayers.—Augusta Schmidt, Janjgir, C.P., India, August 11, 1945.

Board of Foreign Missions
General Conference Mennonites
Newton, Kansas

Dear Members of the Board,

We truly are grateful for your prayers and cooperation with us. We hope that you do not take our refusal to come home as mere stubbornness. We felt that your request for us to come home was merely for our own safety, and that as long as we felt that it was God's will for us to stay here, you didn't really object. We are otherwise still willing to abide entirely by your decisions as to our future work. At the beginning of our stay here, we kept in touch with the station, but during the last year, the news was very scanty and we were able to write only one short letter a month. We heard from Tamingfu that the communists were in charge, already in April. We believe that the church is carrying on. They were certainly learning to stand on their own feet and trust in God before we left. We don't know whether they care for us to come back or not, but all the Chinese around here are certainly very friendly. A Presbyterian Chinese church, immediately after the gates were open sent tomatoes-watermelons for all the missionaries, and there are many of them. Each got three apiece. We hope to hear from you soon.

Sincerely,

(signed) Marie J. Regier

PROBLEMS OF POST WAR YOUTH

By B. Bargen

Their problems are many.

First, there is the problem of the attitude toward money. Everyone is flush with money these days, and the ensuing days will, without doubt, see a depression coming. Can Mennonite youth adapt itself to a money-less, as well as a money-full, economy? Historically speaking, they can. Historically speaking, Mennonites have demonstrated their ability to get along with very little, and especially with very little money. Contemporary Mennonite youth must demonstrate its ability to do likewise in this generation.

In the second place, there is the problem of conflicting morals. A world, which believes there is no life hereafter, adjusts its morals to a span of fifty, sixty, or seventy years. Mennonite youth, which believes in a life hereafter, adjusts its morals to an eternity. Living side by side with men and women who have lost, in some cases, all sense of moral rectitude, Mennonite youth must demonstrate its ability to hold to a code of morals which is unquestionably clean and pure and upright, popular acceptance of a code of morals directly to the contrary notwithstanding.

In the third place, there are large opportunities facing Mennonite youth. There is the problem of talents and ability, which may be released for the good of all mankind, if we will learn to work together as groups. There are young men and young women in the Mennonite denomination who have superior talent for medicine, for nursing, for business, for church leadership, and countless other fields, but who do not have the necessary means with which to continue their education. Will those who have money, but not the talent which urges them on for extended education, share with those who have the urge for education but not the financial needs? That would be a group enterprise in which Mennonite young people would learn to work together for the good of all mankind.

There are opportunities for making tremendous contributions along technical lines. The world waits for Mennonite young people, who have special abilities in the field of science, such as chemistry, physics, biology, bacteriology, etc., who think in terms of human suffering and the relief of human suffering through scientific means.

There is finally the grandest spiritual opportunity of all times to express the age-old truths of the church of Jesus Christ into the language of young people today—to express it in a way which will not lose any of the great heritage of the ages, and yet make it understandable in terms of young people living in the midst of numerous conflicts and frustrations in the modern world.

Whether or not Mennonite youth will meet these post war problems and challenges seems to be determined not so much by whether they can, but whether they will; ah, the will, there lies our bitter need!

In the statement of faith accepted by the Souder-ton Conference in 1941, paragraph 5, we have a definition of a Christian: "We believe a Christian is one saved by grace whose life is transformed into the likeness of Christ by his atoning death and the power of His resurrection." By this statement the test of a Christian is whether or not his life has been transformed into the likeness of Christ. At once, the greatest problem and the greatest challenge to Mennonite youth is to demonstrate in flesh and blood on the many areas where service is so badly needed in Christ's name, what we have so beautifully stated in paragraph 5 of our statement of faith.

California Mennonite Young People's Retreat

By Adeline Sprunger

The seventeenth annual California Mennonite Young Peoples Retreat was held at Camp Gaines, Lake Sequoia, August 11-18 with the theme "Christ Our Hope," Lam. 3:26 and Heb. 6:19a.

Saturday afternoon incoming retreaters from the seven California churches were registered and assigned to cabins so bunks and cots might be made up before the supper bell rang at 6:00. Each evening as the sun sank in the west all was quiet around the Lake as the group met in the meadow for vespers, with Rev. Olin Krehbiel bringing a series of seven messages.

The first evening the Ice-breaker helped the young people get acquainted with each other and at the camp-fire which followed instructors were introduced and spoke briefly concerning their classes. The Dean of the Retreat, Lyman Sprunger, brought the meeting to a close with a timely devotional.

On Sunday morning the group met in a half a dozen classes with the ministers present acting as teachers, and the church service was a blessing and inspiration as Rev. Homer Leisy opened the Word and preached on the Second Coming of Christ. High light of the afternoon was the singspiration led by Harold Burkholder. A Christian Endeavor program at the campfire brought the Lord's Day to a satisfying conclusion.

Monday through Friday the daily schedule remained the same with rising call at 6:45 a. m., flag raising and Chapel (each Church having complete charge for one service during the week). After Chapel the young people scattered and all was quiet in and around the camp as the retreaters communed with the Lord in their personal devotions. With breakfast and cabin cleanup out of the way, four morning classes were held from 9:10 to 12:20.

During the first period Rev. Olin Krehbiel taught a class entitled "That Dream Cottage" to the college age group while Rev. Homer Leisy was leading the high school retreaters in a study of First Thessalonians. In the second period the college age Bible class followed the same course of study while the younger group was discussing "The Relationship of Life." A teacher training course taught by C. F. Mueller and "Youth Faces Post-war Mission Challenge" by Rev. and Mrs. Albert Jantzen were elective classes during the third period. The same procedure was followed in the last class period with choice of Music Hour under the direction of Rev. Harold Burkholder or Camp and Mission projects in charge of Alfred Heer and Gwen Cline.

Four-hour periods each afternoon were filled with swimming, boating, ball games, badminton, ping-pong, group hikes and side trips by automobile, planned by Ernie Lichti, recreational director,

After supper the daily camp paper was distributed with its contents including devotional messages by various leaders, short biographical sketches of instructors, poems, words and music of the theme song as well as the usual innocent key-hole gossip.

Campfire services were varied from night to night but usually began with the singing of gospel choruses and well-loved hymns interspersed with testimonies of praise and thanksgiving at the leading of the Lord. One evening was set aside as stunt night, each cabin presenting some skit, song or humorous reading. Another evening the retreaters hiked several miles to Inspiration Point where the lights of a number of cities in the San Joaquin Valley were to be seen, as C. F. Mueller brought a challenging message on the need for Christ in those homes still in spiritual darkness. On other evenings Rev. Leisy and Rev. Burkholder were greatly used of God, and many decisions were made, some for full time service, others for complete surrender to His Will and separation from the world, and a few accepted the Lord Jesus Christ as personal Saviour.

This year the retreaters gave seventy-five dollars for some missions, seventy-five to the Foreign Mission Board and forty dollars toward the new mission work in Colombia.

The time spent in God's beautiful out-of-doors at the feet of those called to teach and preach His Word filled a real need in many lives and staff members felt well repaid upon receiving a letter of thanks from the board of one Church for the favorable change in their group of returning retreaters.

The total registration was 190 with 96 receiving certificates for perfect attendance at every class and cooperating with the teachers.

EASTERN DISTRICT RETREATS

Four hundred and fifteen children, young people and adults of the Eastern District Mennonite churches gathered around the theme, "Christ liveth in me," Gal. 2:20, at Camp Men-O-Lan, near Finland, Pa., for the eighteenth annual retreat which was held for five age groups from July 13 to 29.

Junior and Adult Retreats

A new venture for this year's retreat was the addition of two more age groups. Previously, only three groups met — intermediate, high school, and young people. This year a junior and adult group were added, giving approximately one hundred more persons the opportunity to receive the rich blessings of retreat.

God wonderfully blessed the retreat sessions. Most retreaters will long remember the time spent at the retreat because of its Bible-centered messages and fundamentals of the faith learned in each class period. For many children it marked the beginning of a new life in Christ, and for older ones the retreat is a reminder of the time when they consecrated their life to the Lord's service.

Rich, heart-searching, and convicting messages were brought to each group by the Rev. J. D. Unruh of Newton, Kansas, on the retreat theme, "Christ liveth in me." Rev. Unruh made the plan of salvation very plain and invited each person to drink freely of the "living water." Then, he presented the challenge of service to each Christian life. Miss Martha Burkhalter, missionary on furlough from India, also spoke to each group in her unique, picturesque manner arousing new interest and zeal in missions. Her reels of motion pictures were also a means of adding interest to bringing the gospel to the lost.

Miss Huldah Myers taught a class at the young people's and adult groups on "Methods of Shepherding Children." This was designed for adult leadership among children. Miss Grace Moyer taught the Bible study class in the children's groups with the use of the flannelgraph. Mr. Carroll Parks instructor in the Allentown high school, taught "Youth Reaching Youth for Christ" to the high school group, while the Rev. J. J. Plenert, Mrs. Ely Fretz and Mrs. Mildred Frazee taught the guidance courses. Music classes for the various groups were taught by the Rev. A. H. Schultz, Rev. Olin Krehbiel, Mr. Brooke Reichenbach, and Mr. Russell Bloss. In addition to these, some twenty-five other ministers and lay-workers of the local churches brought inspiring messages and assisted in the class work of the retreat.

The program schedule of the day varied according to the age of each group. The children were permitted to sleep a little longer in the morning than the older groups and they also retired earlier after breakfast, after which a camp inspection was held. Classes were held in the forenoon and a few in the afternoon. The remainder of the afternoon was given to recreation. Supper was followed with a vesper service, at time of leisure, an informal program, and a camp fire service.

Besides all the spiritual food received at these retreats, each retreator returned home with pleasant memories of the wonderful meals which he had had and were so graciously served by the volunteer cooks. Mrs. Olin Krehbiel was in charge of the kitchen.

Camp Men-O-Lan is happy to own six cabins — three for men and three for women retreators, a large dining hall, a leaders' cabin, and a workers' cabin. The Board of Managers is now seriously considering the building of a much needed chapel-recreation hall in which to hold the retreat meetings during inclement weather.

The Eastern District conference is very fortunate to have its own retreat grounds which are being used not only for retreators, but for ministers' meetings, Sunday School picnics and other social gatherings.

On the Retreat committee for the past year were the following: Dr. Harvey R. Bauman, chairman; Rev. Walter J. Dick, acting chairman; Beverly Ann Krehbiel, secretary; Grace Moyer, treasurer; Robert M. Landis, and Arthur Groff. Mr. J. Herbert Fretz has been elected to serve as chairman for the ensuing year.—Retreat Committee of the Eastern District

Enriching Fellowship

The young people of the West Zion church went to the Harvey County Park for an afternoon and evening retreat Sunday, September 16. It was a happy and profitable experience for all who attended. Mrs. Johnny Huxman and Mrs. Josephine Meyer had planned the day very well. About thirty-five to forty young folks arrived in a big truck which brought them from Moundridge where they had gathered to be picked up. Shortly after arrival they were treated to ice cream, and after these refreshments the group gathered on one of the lovely spots of the park lawn and sang hymns for about half an hour accompanied by a number of brass instruments. Then Prof. Benjie Barga of Bethel College spoke on allowing Christ to control our life and using every situation in life to act out the command of loving each other.

After the close of the afternoon meeting, the group relaxed a bit while supper was prepared. Soon everyone was roasting wiener-wurst over an open oven and enjoying the meal. After this delightful meal a number of games were played for recreation. Then the group sat down again on the blankets spread on the lawn and entered into another hearty "sing" of hymns. A few special numbers of music were contributed and then the pastor led in a lively discussion of the topic, "Post-war Days — the Dangers and Opportunities that May Come to Young People." The evening program was closed by singing "Blessed Be the Tie" and the Mizpah benediction.

Soon the young people were piled into the truck and on their way home, happy for the Christian fellowship they had enjoyed.

IN MEMORIAM

ERNEST D. PANKRATZ, son of John M. Eva Duerksen Pankratz, was born January 17, 1917, in Marion County Kansas, and passed away July 31, 1945. After grade school he attended the Hillsboro Bible Academy. In 1935 he was baptized and received into the Alexanderwohl Church. In 1942 he was united in marriage to Ruth Janzen, who with two children, now survives him.

MRS. ELIZABETH KOEHN, daughter of Adam and Eva Wedel Ratzlaff, was born in Antonofka, Poland, Russia, March 21, 1865. In 1874 she migrated with her parents to Moundridge, Kansas, where she was baptized and received into the Emmanuel Church. Later she and her husband moved to Taloga, Oklahoma, where she became a member of the Kidron Church. She breathed her last on July 28th and is mourned by her children: Adam and Lincoln, Meno; Jonas, Mrs. Francis Koehn, and Anna of Taloga, and Nettie of Oakland, California.

PETER DYCK, son of Peter and Elizabeth Kehtler Dyck, was born May 21, 1860 at Krebsfield, West Prussia, and passed away August 4, 1945. After early years as apprentice shipbuilder in Danzig and Elbing, he came to Halstead, Kansas, where he farmed until 1924, when he moved to town. In 1886 he married Elise Epp, who preceded him in death in 1944. The deceased was a member of the Halstead Church. Children who mourn are: Johanna and Mrs. D. A. Bartel of Halstead; Mrs. L. J. Horsch, Ontario, California; Anna Belle of Monterey Old Mexico; Herbert, Wichita; Cornie of Burtron; Peter of Moundridge; and Elmer in the South Pacific.

CHRISTIAN HEER was born March 22, 1867, in Bavaria, Germany, and died August 3, 1945. Coming to America in 1892 he settled in Nebraska before coming to live at Paso Robles, California, where he became a member of the Mennonite Church and married Marie Rematski in 1899. She died in 1924. He is survived by his brother Stephen of Los Angeles, and a sister, Mrs. Lena Hesselbacker of Germany.

ANNIE BAEHR was born April 15, 1875, in Germany, and departed this life at Wisner, Nebraska, on August 6, 1945. When seventeen she migrated to Wisner, Nebraska with her parents. Here she united with the Mennonite Church. In 1898 she married Chris Stauffer, who with the following children now mourns her: Otto, Denver, Colorado; Mrs. Elma Schmoldt, Peemer, Nebraska; Mrs. Christine Kemper, Grand Island, Nebraska; and Richard of Wisner.

RELIEF

Displaced Mennonites in Europe

It is now known that Mennonite communities in Russia, East Prussia, and Poland, have suffered greatly as a result of the war and that thousands of members have fled or were evacuated before invading armies. All details are not known, but likely thousands of Russian Mennonites retreated with the German armies from the Ukraine and are now in repatriation camps in Germany. Evidence of their presence has been received from the State Department in Washington and through letters coming out of Germany and Holland. As announced before in these notes, a small group of these Mennonites succeeded in entering Holland and are interned at Maastricht.

It is also known that 3,000 to 4,000 Mennonites from East Prussia and Poland are now confined in camps in Denmark. The first information regarding this group was received in a letter, the substance of which was released to the church papers on August 29, to the G. Reimer family, Beatrice, Nebraska. These Mennonites were evacuated before the advance of the Russian armies.

The need of our brethren in Europe places upon Mennonites in America a great responsibility and opportunity in addition to the present war sufferers' relief program. The prayers of the churches are desired that God may direct in behalf of these brethren who are in a very difficult situation. Several steps have been taken to visit them and investigate their need. C. F. Klassen has been sent to Denmark and M. C. Lehman to U.S.-Occupied Germany. Later, Samuel Goering and C. F. Klassen hope to enter British-Occupied Germany.

Meat Restrictions Lifted

As of September 8, O.P.A. removed slaughter control regulations. This means that there is no longer any limit to the amounts of meats and fats which our farm people can give for relief, provided points are turned in to ration boards for the amounts contributed. It has also been reported that rationing of meat may be discontinued by the end of September. If this happens it will mean that meats and fats may be contributed without any restrictions except those pertaining to federal inspection.

Distribution of Canned Food in Holland

Peter Dyck in charge of Mennonite relief interests in Holland, gives the following report regarding the distribution of the thirty-six cases of canned food which arrived in the early part of August:

"This being a sample shipment we thought it would be appropriate that our Mennonite people should sample it. One case I gave to a Jewish family for which I had messages from London, and which I found in two rooms in the Hague, where they had hidden for more than three years. The father, a typical son of Abraham, now sick in bed, told me that neither he nor anyone of his family had left those two rooms during the whole time of the occupation of Holland. It appears, however, that they are not the only ones, for today I received the following from their friend whom we do not know: "Through Mrs. Frankenberg we received a delightful and very big bottle of applesauce, which as she told us, was a gift of you. Now this was a real feast for us. As for myself, applesauce is one of my favourite dishes and being in prison these four years I never got it all that time, so you may understand my gladness. All the other members of the family rejoice in it too. You will, therefore, accept our most cordial thanks for this present. . . ."

"I know that many of our Mennonites have written directly to the mothers or the ministers according to the name they found on the jar. I have heard it said that this is truly more than food, that it is like the partaking of one brotherhood from one table, even like a sacrament which unites one with the other and all with God."

Additional Workers in Italy

Esther Detweiler and Bertha Fast have arrived in Rome, Italy, and are now serving under UNRRA's Italian Mission, according to a telegram sent from Rome to Washington, August 23. This increases the total number of Mennonite workers in Italy to four; the other two being Grace Augsburg and Delvin Kirchofer.

C. P. S.

C.P.S. Attitudes Toward the End of the War

What are C.P.S. men thinking about and planning now that the war has ended? An answer in part may be found in the following excerpts taken from reports from base camps and special projects:

"The leaders of the unit (not only the official leadership) feel that the task of C.P.S. now becomes difficult and faces its greatest opportunities. The question to them is whether we will be able to maintain a forceful witness when the pressure of public opinion has diminished as we have more or less maintained through the 'duration.' . . . Sad to say, more are thinking in terms of the speed with which we can leave or guarantees of our own welfare."

"The effect is pretty well measured by the spirit of a V-J Day prayer meeting-confession, repentance, consecration, and determination according to the will of God. The question in the air here is not 'When release?' but 'What after release?' The relief imperative seems closer to many of us."

"The evident reaction to the end of the war has varied from a growing impatience and discontent with camp life and with technical authority to a more passive and deliberate sitting-it out attitude. The tendency to 'let down' comes as a strong temptation.

"After four or five years of the thing we have been through many of us have given up. The fight is all out of us; we are men without vision; lamps without oil; we long for the flesh pots, the leeks, and the garlic of the world as it used to be. . . . The choice before us will decide our destiny. We can turn to the luxurious ease of a materialistic world, and suicide as far as Christianity being a vital force is concerned, or we can choose the hard way of suffering and service. . . . ”

C. P. S. Men Find Missing Man

About thirty members from the Fort Collins, Colorado, C.P.S. Camp combed the mountains near camp for a missing shepherd on August 31. They found his corpse at the bottom of a precipice which he evidently had ascended to keep his flock in view. Six men carried the body to a place where an ambulance could take it to a mortuary. The task was difficult because the terrain was rough and the man had been dead for a number of days.

THE MENNONITE BIBLE SCHOOL

By Mrs. Gerhard Neufeld

“Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light,” Matt. 11:28-30.

These verses contain a phrase which strongly attracted my attention. It is the phrase “learn of me.”

This is Christ’s gracious invitation to those who labor and are heavy laden, those who are too busy with ordinary things of life to lose themselves in Him. I am especially glad for the opportunity to do just what Christ invited us to do, to learn of Him. I am glad to do this in one of our own church institutions. At first thought, I felt I would not find time to take classes, for I had family and household responsibilities. But then I thought I would be doing exactly the same thing that other people in similar circumstances are doing. I would not be taking time for my spiritual growth. It seemed clear to me that it was not a matter of having time but of taking time.

The affiliation of our Mennonite Biblical Seminary and Bible School with Bethany Biblical Seminary is an arrangement between the Mennonites and the Church of the Brethren for which we are grateful. I consider it an ideal way of meeting the need of our church in the training of ministers and other church workers until such a time when we can have our Seminary and Bible School on our own campus. The fellowship we have with the Bethany students and faculty members has already been a blessing to me. The spiritual atmosphere is soul-strengthening. I have no hesitation to advise anyone who is planning to go to a Bible School or Seminary to come here and be enriched by the fellowship one with another and with the Lord in classroom, dormitory, chapel and prayer meeting.

The Mennonite Bible School and the Mennonite Biblical Seminary are two schools, but under one administration and one roof. For any information write to the Mennonite Biblical Seminary and Bible School, 3435 Van Buren, Chicago 24, Illinois.

COLLEGE NEWS

BETHEL COLLEGE

The College Church, under the direction of Miss Lena Waltner and Clarence Graber, arranged an appreciated and well-attended social for the students on September 16. The evening was spent in a hymn sing, get-acquainted games, special music, and short talks by Rev. Hostetler and Walter B. Enns for the church and by Eleanor Duerksen for the students. On September 20, at the regular Thursday convocation, the extra-curricular program was organized for the coming year. Participation is being advised and limited by personal counselling and a system of class, extracurricular, and work-enrollment, which is not to exceed seventy-two hours a week per student. A weekly schedule has been drawn up for the religious organizations, departmental clubs, intramural sports and other recreational activities in order to avoid conflicts and to do justice to a balanced program for each student.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

Enrollment figures show an increase in attendance of about thirty per cent this year as compared with the previous semester of school. Women still far outnumber the men, being three to one for the college as a whole and about two to one in the freshman class. However, there is an increase in the number of men students as compared with last year. The freshmen class is substantially larger than that of a year ago. The annual college “mixer” was held in the library Friday evening, September 14. On Sunday evening the local church held a special reception for students. The plan of associate membership for students was explained. Each year a considerable number take advantage of this plan by which they can affiliate with the local church without losing their home church membership. Lois Sommer, ’45, who was employed as field secretary this summer, will enter Columbia University about October 1 to take graduate work.

TALES FROM MENNONITE HISTORY

I dared to do it.

I have translated my Erzahlungen aus der Mennonitengeschichte into the English and have published them (mimeographed) under the above title.

It is a risky undertaking.

I know my limitations. But people who have read the Tales insist that they make good reading and would be a great help to many if translated and published in English. They believe my English is not perfect but, at any rate, good enough to convey my thoughts to the readers.

I put the booklet on the market with a trembling heart, hoping it will help us to see our past a little clearer and to appreciate our cause a little better.

The price of the booklet is, postpaid, $1.00 per copy, and it can be ordered from the author.—Jacob H. Janzen, 164 Erb Street West, Waterloo, Ontario Canada.

God on a Minister's Salary

God has revealed what He wants a minister's salary to be. We take it that in giving the law to Moses God has made plain how He wants the religious affairs of His people administered. Even though we now live under grace, we may still look to the law for light on how God desires things to be done.

God set one of the twelve tribes, the Levites, apart for full time religious service. The other eleven tribes were to give a tenth of their income for the support of this tribe. That means that the Levites would get for their support one-tenth of the average income of the eleven tribes of Israelites. Besides this the Levites were given cities to live in and grazing ground around the cities. Evidently the Lord wants His servants to live on a standard of living a little above the average in the congregation, and He made provisions that this should be possible.

When this plan of God is applied to the salaried ministry of today, it would mean this: A minister should be given a place to live, ground for grazing and gardening, and a salary a little above the average income, this and much more is easily possible.

JOTTINGS

—Bulletin, Second Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: The young people have decided to have a week of special meetings this fall for the young people of the First and Second churches. The general topic for discussion will be, "Problems Youth Face Today." A Bible study will be held in connection with these meetings. They also plan to engage in Bible study during their regular meetings this fall and winter, and they also intend to start some work in crafts as soon as materials can be gotten. Interesting slides on the history of European Mennonites were shown on the evening of September 16.

—Saron Church, Orienta, Oklahoma: On September 16, Rev. P. J. Boehr of Pandora, Ohio, served with a message on missions. At present he is visiting the Oklahoma churches. —Corr.

—First Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: One hundred thirty-three chickens were brought in on September 11. These chickens were taken to the Lakefield canning plant the following day. In the evening of the same day, a group of eight ladies returned home with the chickens in 211 tin cans, all ready to be sent to the war stricken countries for starving people and children. —P. P. Buhr —Miss Janet Soldner's address in Colombia will be: Apartado 53, Medellin, Colombia, South America.

—Grace Church, Pandora, Ohio: "Word has been received that Ruth Hilty is scheduled to be sent to Holland to carry on relief work under the M.C.C. It is encouraging to note the number of young people of this church who are considering the challenging call to do Christian work in other lands less fortunate than our own. The fields truly are white ready for the harvest; all kinds of efforts are needed, relief, medical, agricultural, educational and evangelical work. Our missionary program should include these various phases so that the total life of the people is touched." On the evening of September 9, Miss M'della Moon of Bluffton College spoke on "The Philosophy of Life from the Viewpoint of a Scientist."

—First Church, Philadelphia: Fruits, vegetables, canned goods and prepared foods, brought for Harvest Home Sunday, September 30, are to be donated to the Mennonite Home for the Aged, Frederick. Sunday School enrollment is 220. Average attendance during the summer months was one hundred. The Sunday School has a mission project of $505.00. A total of $345.43 had been raised by September. Twenty-five people from the church attended retreats this summer.

—Eastern District Sunday School Convention, Zion Church, Souderton, September 29.

—First Church, Reedley, California, is considering how it as a church can work with the boys when they come home. Recently the church council, with representatives of the different church organizations had a special meeting to discuss this matter.

—Rev. Homer Leisy is to speak at the annual Young People's Conference of the First Church, Berne, Indiana, October 7 to 14. From October 21 to 28 he is to hold a week of special services in the First Church, Philadelphia.

—Married: Griselda Gehman and Maynard Shelly on September 7. The couple will attend the Mennonite Biblical Seminary, Chicago.

—August 27-30 Rev. and Mrs. John J. Plenert and Rev. and Mrs. A. J. Neuenschwander made a trip to visit the churches and workers in Napier, Roaring Spring, Smith Corner, Altoona and Lancaster, at the direction of the Eastern District Home Mission Committee and the Board of Home Missions. The work in Lancaster is growing and a careful survey shows that a fine group will come when the work is started with regular weekly services. The committee needs to have a meeting to consider the whole matter.

—The Fairfield (Pa.) Mennonite Church observed Harvest Home services on September 9. The church was beautifully decorated with a liberal display of fruits and vegetables and flowers. The food was taken to the Home for Aged at Frederick by the pastor. —Corr.

—C.P.S. Camp, Downey, Idaho: Marvin Linscheid from Aberdeen brought the message on the morning of September 9. The study of different churches is still being continued. On Sunday evening Bill Seiler told about the Church of God in Christ Mennonite and Erwin Voorheis about the Church of the First Born. P.S. Marvin Linscheid brought twenty big springs along. Carl Wiebe's generosity made them possible. The True Blue Society of the Aberdeen Church gave a 37-cent-stamp book to each camper. The men are beginning leather craft work, and the chorus is to begin soon.

—Rev. Andrew Shelly, pastor of a Mennonite Church in Kitchener, Ontario, coming from Mt.

Lake, Minnesota and Freeman, South Dakota, stopped over in Winnipeg, on his way home, and gave a stirring message here at the Bethel Mennonite Mission, on August 29.

—Mr. Watson from Toronto, Ontario, Secretary of the fellowship of Reconciliation, was a guest speaker at the Bethel Mennonite Mission in Winnipeg on September 4. Preceding his stop there he had also visited the Mennonite Youth Forum Organization at Altona, Manitoba.

—Farmers in Manitoba have been detained very much in their harvest by frequent and heavy rains during the first half of the month of September. The prospects for this year's wheat harvest is not very good. (Rev. Benj. Ewert of Winnipeg kindly reported the above three items. Thank you, Brother Ewert.)

—Bethany Mennonite Church, Freeman, South Dakotas: Rev. Hugo J. Mieran and family expect to leave for Hartford, Connecticut next week, where he will complete the last year of his seminary training. Bro. Mieran has served as Bethany's pastor during the summer months and will again return to us June 1, 1946. During his brief stay with us, he has brought much inspiration and blessing to the congregation and to the community and we are anxiously looking forward to his return next summer. Several weeks ago, the wedding of Miss Pearl Graber and Marvin Waltner took place. Pearl has been active in Sunday school work as well as a teacher in the public schools. Our choir of thirty voices, under the direction of Mrs. Harold Unruh, gave programs at the Salem and the Salem Zion Churches at East Freeman during the summer months.—J. M. Hofer, Corr.

—First Church, Newton, Kansas: The offering on September 23 went to the "Men in Service Committee" to aid needy and returning service men.

—Goessel Mennonite Church, Goessel, Kansas: "On the afternoon of September 11, the Senior Ladies Mission Society and the Mission Friends Circle were hostesses to the six societies of the Alexanderwohl Church and the two societies of the Tabor Church. Mrs. Willis Rich was the guest speaker. Each society represented gave a short report of their work, and each church gave a musical number. After the program an hour of fellowship was enjoyed while coffee cake and coffee were served."—W. L., Corr.

—Upland California: Ella Schmidt left New York on the Argentina on September 13. She will go to LaHavre, France, where she will be reassigned to her duties of relief work.

—The Peace Committee of the Western District is to meet in North Newton on September 26.

—First Church, Madrid, Nebraska: On September 16 the C.P.S. boys from the North Platte Experimental Farm gave us an enjoyable musical program which was attended by a nice crowd. The offering was given to the boys for the expenses of the trip.

—The official opening of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary and Mennonite Bible School is to take place on October 4, 7:30 P.M.

—Rev. John P. Suderman spoke to the churches in the Freeman, South Dakota, community during the week of September 16 to 23.

—Nappanee, Indiana: On September 21, the First Church was host to a five-church Mennonite brotherhood meeting. Rev. John Metzler, of the Brethren Service Committee, was main speaker, and his subject was "The Brotherhood Looks at Relief." An added feature was the description of a trip to Europe with a shipload of livestock for relief by Arthur Schwartz, a local boy. Each church gave a musical number. Refreshments and fellowship followed the program.—Note in bulletin, "Boys and girls of high school age and under are invited to come to the church after school to put the labels on the cans of peaches. Some may turn the mimeograph, others may stick on the labels, and others put them in boxes." Miss Erna Fast, editor of the "Junior Quarterly," spoke at a worker's conference.

—Dr. H. A. Fast returned to his home in North Newton, Kansas, on September 13 after making a trip by air and back to Paraguay. On the way back he also stopped at Puerto Rico. Dr. Fast surveyed the M.C.C. program as it is being carried out, and together with the workers planned the activities for the future. He reports that in the past crop year, fresh fruits and green vegetables were practically non-existent in the Fernheim and Friesland colonies, in the Chaco. The people are not too greatly discouraged, for they consider it an unusually difficult year in comparison with other years. Only about one-sixth of a crop was harvested in general. Grasshoppers were a plague and for the last four months there was no rain.

—Miss Mary Becker, who completed her work for the Master of Religious Education degree at Biblical Seminary, New York, this summer, recently came home to Newton, Kansas for a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Becker. Miss Becker is still awaiting permission to enter Columbia, South America, to do mission work.

—Alberta Community Church, Portland, Oregon: The special offering on September 23, Rally Day, went for the church building fund. The young people had an evening of entertainment at the parsonage recently. On September 16, the pastors of the Oregon churches exchanged pulpits.

—The Lorraine Avenue Mennonite Church, Wichita, Kansas, has extended a call to Dr. J. H. Langenwaller to serve the church as minister. Dr. Langenwaller has accepted the call and hopes to begin his service December 1.

—A very helpful little calendar of the Christian year, 1945-1946-1947 may be secured from the Commission on Worship, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y.

—The Executive Committee of the General Conference, which is composed of the officers of the conference and the chairmen of the six boards, is to meet in Chicago, October 2-5.

—Gospel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: On September 16, Mr. F. W. Loewen was ordained minister. The pastor, Rev. August Ewert officiated after giving a fine sermon on St. John 15:16-19. Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Loewen have accepted the call from the Emmanuel Church, Dolton, South Dakota. Over a hundred quarts of chickens were canned last week for the M.C.C. relief project. J. P. Suderman, missionary to the Hopi Indians in Arizona, gave an interesting report of his work and also showed pictures on the night of September 13.

—Aberdeen, Idaho: Today, September 16, Rev. and Mrs. Lester Wutherich were in our midst. Rev. Wutherich preached at the morning service, and they both spoke this evening telling us of their experiences in the internment camp in the Philippines, from which they were released by the U.S. Army after three years of imprisonment. They are now on their way to the Pacific Coast where they expect to enter school. Their visit here was much appreciated by our church as well as by the many relatives they have in this community.—J. E. Toevs —Mennonites number about 2,200 of the approximate 1,000,000 Protestants in France, which is predominantly Catholic. It has about 330,000 Lutherans.

Barthinius L. Wick, fellow in history of the State University of Iowa, wrote in his book on the Amish Mennonites in 1894:

“The Mennonites were among the first non-resistant sects, and the first who strenuously opposed the taking of an oath which had made perjury common. . . This first party of peacemakers has grown to a mighty power in the world; the faint echo which resounded from the low marshes of Holland less than four centuries ago, has since re-echoed in every civilized country. What was then a new doctrine has been recognized by leading statesmen—that there is a better way to settle differences than by war.” Contributed by Dr. A. Warkentin —Emmanuel Church, Denver, Pa. At a special meeting, held last Sunday evening, the young people organized a Christian Endeavor Society. Meetings will be held the second and fourth Sundays of each month. Our pastor, Rev. E. D. Hess, has been chosen to be one of the ministers to participate in the annual church (C.P.S. camp) visitation program, sponsored by the Conference. He will be gone about three weeks.—Walter D. Fry

—The Chicago Mennonite Fellowship met at the Mennonite Biblical Seminary on September 18. Present were: Ernst Harder, Harold Buller, Mr. and Mrs. Maynard Shelly, Ruth Ewert, A. Warkentin, Erna J. Fast, Willard S. Fast, Willard Wiebe, Robert Hartzler, Verney Unruh, Orlando Schmidt, Mr. and Mrs. Albert L. Jantzen, and Laverne Rutschman.

—Zion Church, Souderton, Pa. Some keen interest is being shown in the church library. One friend gave $100 for it. On September 23, Dr. L. L. Ramseyer brought the morning message, and in the evening he showed pictures of Bluffton College.

Responsibility

*I have a clean, soft bed on which to sleep,
I have a table set with gracious things—
How can I pray the Lord "my soul to keep?"
How can my heart lift up on joyous wings
While there are those about me in the night
Who toss on filthy rags and cannot rest,
Who have no food, no raiment, and no light?
How can I sleep unless I do my best
To ease and comfort them, and how can I
Be deemed a follower of the Christ until
I heed humanity's unbroken cry
And move to feed the hungry, heal the ill?
God help me keep remembering—help me to see How great is my responsibility.*

FOOD CONDITIONS IN FRANCE

Ominous reports by qualified observers of approaching starvation over Europe find confirmation in France, where conditions are already serious and are getting worse. The food outlook is gloomy, say government and private relief experts alike, and France is in for a long, hard winter. Such reports are difficult for most Americans to understand, since they know five-sixths of France has been liberated for almost a year and V-E Day itself is three months past. To complicate the picture, soon after liberation the press was flooded with conflicting accounts by "eye-witness" reporters, who, on the basis of hasty and limited observation, described conditions either of great plenty or of dire want. Although these sensational and highly publicized reports have long since been replaced by sober, factual surveys made by relief experts with no axes to grind or papers to sell, the effect of the first reporting has been to make the average reader suspicious of what he reads about conditions in France. To understand why France is still a land in need requires attention to the effects of the war on her own particular factors of food production, and also the current problems of distribution and importation of food supplies.

Means of Production Severely Damaged

Final liberation found France's normal food production severely damaged. Not only had large agricultural areas been devastated by the advance of the armies and incendiary bombs, but literally millions of land mines were buried by the retreating Germans. As late as mid-July French authorities estimated there were still 100,000,000 mines uncovered, with over 750,000 fertile acres remaining impossible to farm on that account. In one week alone 105 children were killed by stepping on mines. In many regions farm machinery had completely disappeared, and reserves of fertilizers all over France were almost exhausted. Although the return of war prisoners has eased the serious farm-manpower shortage, many of the farmers are in poor physical shape. Shortages in seeds have also decreased the return to normal production. Finally, add to your picture a too-wet fall and winter followed by an extended drought which still continues. The 1944 wheat crop of 6,000,000 tons came to 1,500,000 tons less than the normal pre-war production and the 1945 crop will probably be an additional million tons less. Livestock herds were either taken away by the Germans or slaughtered during their retreat, and, since the liberation, milk herds especially have continued to decline because of the drought and shortages in feeds, as well as from using cows as draught animals. Sugar stocks are almost non-existent because lack of fuel and manpower shortages made it impossible to process last year's beet crop.

Basic Items Dangerously Low

The net effect of the war has been therefore to decrease to dangerously low levels France's supply of such basic items as wheat, fats, beef, and sugar, as well as her ability to produce them. The only possible answer to France's food supply problem is importation from the outside and here again she has been running into difficulties. World shortages in many of the items mentioned have made it impossible for her to obtain the items through the Allied shipping pool. Since France has money she cannot and no doubt will not appeal to UNRRA for aid, for UNRRA helps only those liberated countries which cannot pay for the help. To underline France's concern, the French Minister of Supply arrived in the United States in mid-July to arrange for the purchase of supplies from the United States if at all possible.

Transportation and Black Market Troubles

In France, the presence of two other factors has also affected the adequate distribution of what food stocks there are. One factor is the difficulty of transport, due to the destruction of rail lines, rolling stock, trucks and transport producing industry. This has meant that, generally, rural areas are much better off than the cities. The second distributing factor is the black market, which has developed to an alarming degree in cities where the people can pay, with

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION WEEK, October 1-6, is being observed throughout the United States. It has been observed in past years, but in view of the war that has burned the bodies and souls of men in these recent years, it has taken on a new significance. Even non-religious leaders are voicing their conviction that a great and deep spiritual experience is of primary importance. The late Franklin D. Roosevelt when asked, "What, in your opinion, is the most fundamental need in the lives of the young people of America today?" said:

"No greater thing could come to our land today than a revival of the spirit of religion—a revival that would sweep through the homes of the nation and stir the hearts of men and women of all faiths to a re-assertion of their belief in God and their dedication to His will for themselves and for their world. I doubt if there is any problem—social, political, or economic—that would not melt away before the fire of such a spiritual awakening"

President Truman, in a letter endorsing Religious Education Week, wrote:

"At a time when stars hang in the windows of the nation's homes to honor absent warriors; when millions of Americans live in temporary homes and in migrant centers while they work . . . it is important to urge that the religious education of the country's children be fostered and extended.

"It is likely that there are millions (17,000,000 unchurched children of school age) of youngsters who need initial and basic instruction. They should receive it and learn of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man."

General MacArthur, at the formal signing of the Japanese surrender, spoke of the survival of civilization when he said:

"The problem basically is theological and involves a spiritual recrudescence and improvement of human character that will synchronize with our almost matchless advance in science, art, literature and all material and cultural developments of the past two thousand years. It must be of the spirit if we are to save the flesh."

But it is that very Spirit of God that is lacking. Millions do not even use the terms of religion, with the exception of some of them when they swear. However, the emptiness of heart goes further than that. Millions who belong to churches use religious terms, but the terms are not packed full of heart-gripping, life-filling experiences. The cart of religious terminology is before many, but the horse of experience is many miles behind it.

The exceedingly rapid and tremendous changes of modern life impress us. Is it possible that man—including the Christian—has been so occupied with these absorbing and important changing life activities that he has failed to consult God to find out how He would have all these various new modes of life express themselves? Certainly man has not given too much thought to God, but man has given a lot of thought to streamlined physical existence. No wonder then that the religious terms he uses should be so detached from that which really concerns him!

The experiences of life are tremendously important. When these are not filled with the Spirit of God, then they in turn cannot fill the holy terms of the Christian faith until these terms burst with meaning. Let a parent speak much of God but at the same time show impatience and lack of forgiveness by slapping a child again and again, and that child may grow up with an intellectual conception of God that he feels he must adhere to, but with feelings that have never learned to know God in the patience, understanding, and forgiveness of a parent. Such a child would need an "experience" of God regardless of how much he might "believe" in Him intellectually. America has its Christian terminology of days gone by; it needs a heart experience of Him whom Jesus revealed as Father. It should be the purpose of Christian education to bring this about.

CHILDHOOD IMPRESSIONS are very deep and lasting even though they are not remembered consciously. A scientist took his fifteen-month-old baby boy and read to him three selections of Greek literature every day for ninety days. (See Travis and Baruch, Personal Problems of Everyday Life, pp. 17, 18.) At the end of this period he took three new selections and repeated the action. This he did until the boy was three years old. When the boy was eight and one-half years he had not the slightest recollection of the procedure. He could not recall one bit, not one word. The scientist then read to the boy a Greek selection that he had never heard. He read it repeatedly to the boy until he was able to say it by heart. He did the same with one of the old selections that the boy had heard as a baby. He continued this, using an equal number of new and old ones until the child was able to recite them aloud. While doing this he kept record of the number of repetitions needed to learn a selection. At the conclusion of the experiment this amazing fact showed itself: The boy had learned the old selections much faster than the new ones. He had not the least inkling that he had remembered; nevertheless he had. So well had it stayed with him that on the average a hundred less repetitions were necessary for the old material than for the new. Also of interest is the fact that he remembered best what he had heard between ages two and three. However, he also remembered what he had heard between fifteen and eighteen months. The fact that a baby or very young child is deeply and lastingly impressed by the life which goes on around him, suggests the importance of making those impressions Christian ones.

SCHOOL OR HOSPITAL?

by B. Bargen

The Conference resolution to cooperate with the M.C.C. in establishing a mental hospital came unexpectedly soon. That such a plan should materialize soon — the sooner the better! — was the earnest hope of all who have seen and contemplated the significant contribution of the love technique as used by C.P.S. units in various mental institutions. That it passed unanimously was encouraging; in another sense, disquieting. For when, ever, has a venture of such far-reaching implications been launched by a unanimous vote! It almost seems as though the Conference to make sure its intentions were nailed down tight passed another — if M.C.C. won't, we will (Resolution 70 — is the figure "7" a good omen?).

Joint Action

This second motion was made by an educator, seconded by a minister. This suggests a unity of spirit, and it is symbolic of joint functioning of the school and the church — the mind and the soul — in the rehabilitation of those who have lost their way in a special sense — lost!

Institution Visualized

Sometimes the spirit of man, without knowing exactly what the resources are or may be, ventures upon tremendous undertakings. Today we can visualize only in meager outlines what such an institution may be like. We visualize a plant of some buildings, a group of people ministering to another group of needy. We visualize, perhaps true to our cultural traditions, a small farm — and maybe some shops — which together will serve economically to make the institution partially self-supporting and vocationally rehabilitative for those patients who can profitably make use of these features. Each of us will perhaps hope to see some special feature — music, architectural inspiration in its physical properties, landscaping which is restful and harmonious, libraries, artistic interior furnishings, or some other special service.

The Proper Emphasis

All this will come in due time, but this article would like to stress one point which, in the light of trends in recent literature in the fields of psychiatrics seems to emerge more and more often. It is this: Basic to a sound mind is a network of proper love relationships. This demands that from its inception on, through its management and operation it must be steeped and guided in and by that God-like love which alone is sanity. Love is sanity. Lovelessness is insanity.

A Danger To Avoid

To the extent that anyone in the organization, administration, and operation is impelled by feelings or hopes of personal advancement—"a job," "a stepping stone" (which usually means "stepping" on someone else)—it can only become another, like many others which are, for the most part, merely places to "keep" patients; more like a prison or forced confinement.

A Place of Healing

But, motivated by a God-like love, such as Christ evinced in dealing with personalities which were violently frustrated (and most individuals of which the Gospels speak as having been cured by Christ seem to have been such), this proposed Mennonite Mental Hospital could be a mecca for these disturbed, ineffective personalities in the spiritual realm what the Mayo Clinic at Rochester has become for the physical, or the Champa Leper Asylum in India for the poor lepers.

Hospital and School

Here, indeed, then, Mennonite youth finds the most ideal opportunity of making a dynamic laboratory for the regeneration of men thru the healing influence of Christian love; in building a little, economically self-contained, yet ever expanding little island of love and sanity; restoring broken men to integrated usefulness. Hospital in the sense of a place where the healing influence can begin work; school, in the sense of dynamically "bringing out" of the individual the residual Godness which in every man, this side of death, is the little mustard seed capable of God only knows what development for good.

*With strong roots deeply planted in thy sod,
And trunk so sturdy no capricious wind
Can ever shake my firm foundation.*

*Let me have eager fingers reaching out
To thee and to the star-encrusted sky,
And downward to the lonely paths of earth
So seldom touched by human kindness.*

*And let these roots of mine grow deeper yet—
Down deep until all shallowness is lost
In utter beauty of the love of thee
And of my neighbor and my fellow men.*

*Let my broad, reaching arms stretch far.
Not always over fertile, favored ground,
But over plots where bitter suns have shone
To leave my own cool shade a soothing balm.*

*And, Father, if need be my sturdy trunk,
Deep-rooted and with tender branches tall,
Should be hewn down in some far distant year,
Lest each small part of me, a lovely tree
Bear proudly thine own Woodman's seal on it.*

Principles of Mutual Aid in the Local Congregation

By J. Winfield Fretz

Note of correction: The first sentence of Brother Fretz' last article—see issue of September 18—should have read, "Everybody knows that the present conditions are not going to be permanent." We are sorry that somehow the important little "not" was omitted.—Editor

Many ministers and lay people have expressed an interest in developing aid programs in their congregations. They have asked for suggestions as to what they might do to start such programs. At the same time many young men have expressed a desire for counseling or financial assistance from the Aid Section of M.C.C. These requests could have been cared for within the local congregations if these congregations had been conscious of mutual aid techniques and had been ready to administer such aid. In spite of the fact that many young people are in need of various types of assistance, they do not come for assistance to the church. They may go to their school teachers, to the local banker, to business men or write letters to agencies far from home. The reason they don't come to the church is that the church is not prepared to help them. Most young men say that to ask for help from the congregation would be interpreted as being down and out and in need of relief or charity. But these men are not down and out and they don't want charity. They want understanding, some one who can listen to their plans and give them sound advice; they want some one who has faith in them and is willing to risk a few hundred dollars in them if necessary to give them a start in some venture where they can earn their livelihood.

Local Aid Committees

It would seem wise for individual congregations to begin a program of mutual aid by first of all discussing the total subject of mutual aid and its place in the program of the church. A full evening could be spent in studying the scriptural teachings on mutual aid. It would be surprising to discover how many references there are to this practice in the Bible. There is abundant evidence of its practice as well as numerous references admonishing Christians to do so.

A second step toward developing mutual aid locally is for the congregation to elect a mutual aid committee, preferably of not more than three members. The function of this committee should concern itself with the congregational needs that fall within the sphere of mutual aid. The members of this committee should be chosen with great care and should be individuals who have demonstrated ability in their own fields of work. As suggested in Acts 6:3, they should be "men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom." Local committee members should be the kind of people in whom young people have confidence and to whom they will willingly come for help in matters pertaining to advice and financial assistance for vocational purposes.

Function of the Local Aid Committees

Perhaps the most immediate needs will be those of C.P.S. men who will have served their country from one to four years or more without pay and without provision for their dependents. Local committees should quietly and quickly try to discover needs and try to help work out solutions to their young people's problems. In many cases it will mean a heart-to-heart talk in which young men will want sound advice on which job to take, whether to start farming or not, where to start in business and how to proceed; some will want guidance in their educational program. Young women as well as men will need this kind of counsel. Local committee members can provide such help if they are alert and if they keep themselves well informed. In cases where money is needed, it may sometimes be merely a matter of bringing together the individual in need of help and the one who has the means and willingness to provide the help. Where the Mennonite group has a central mutual aid organization, the local aid committee might well be the agency through which contributions of gifts or loans are received. It might also be the logical agency to provide information and guidance to its aid section representative on the M.C.C. or the director of the Aid Section in cases where local projects or persons are involved.

1. Sound Business Practices. Mutual aid is not charity. It is a two-way relationship benefiting all parties concerned. It is a form of Christian stewardship. It should be based on good business practices and carried on in the spirit of mutual love. Charity cases should be handled through committees or agencies created for that purpose but not through mutual aid committees because these two functions should not be confused.

2. Amount. The amount of assistance to any individual should be dependent directly on the nature of the project to be undertaken. It is seldom that two individuals have exactly the same plans in mind and for that reason it is likely that they will not have identical needs. The amount of the loan should be large enough to enable the borrower to set up a program that is sufficiently productive to be self-liquidating.

3. Time. Loans should be made for a sufficiently long time so that repayments can be made in small amounts and over an extended period. Time is an important factor in helping a man get an economical start.

Principles of Assistance

4. Interest. The interest rates, if charged at all should be less than prevailing rates in commercial markets because this is a program of mutual aid and not a source of investment for profit. It would be helpful to the borrower if no interest were charged during the first year of the loan.

5. Security. The basic security of the loans under mutual aid is the character and reputation of the individual who wishes to make the loan. A character loan is made on the basis of the lender's confidence in the trust worthiness and ability of the borrower to pay back the loan. Such individuals are at the present time unable to make loans from commercial agencies. Where funds are used to purchase land or equipment, that would serve as security.

6. Supervision. Almost as important as the loan itself is wise supervision of its use. Loan aid committees should try to provide the same careful and thoughtful counsel to members of the brotherhood as a father gives a son or a brother a brother.

Type of Organization

Mutual aid may be expressed either in a spontaneous, unorganized way whenever a need arises or in a formal, organized way. In times past when life was less complex and community life characterized by fewer rapid changes, spontaneous expressions of mutual aid were satisfactory. Today, however, with new means of communication and transportation, with members engaged in a wide variety of occupations in town and country, and with all of life more highly organized, it is necessary to organize also for mutual aid if it is to be effectively and efficiently practiced. Wherever possible needs should be met locally through united effort of the group; where that is impossible or impractical it should be done on the basis of a district or general conference. In the final analysis, the particular kind of organization is not so important as the spirit that pervades the group planning it. Uppermost in the mind of the group should be the desire to live and work together in the spirit of Christ. The principles of mutual aid are the principles of Christian brotherhood.

the rich living well, while the poor continue to suffer.

Six Million Suffering Severely

Reports as of mid-July indicate that there are still 16,000,000 under-nourished French people (total population: 38,000,000), with at least 6,000,000 suffering severely. Food rations, raised after liberation to approximately 1,500 calories a day, have again been reduced. In the cities there is no meat, little cheese or eggs, and no sugar, even in restaurants. Butter is $8.00 a pound.

Most seriously affected by conditions probably, are the children, hundreds of thousands of whom need special foods and treatments. Children in France are in a serious condition due to malnutrition, worry, and uncertainty. Tuberculosis, cardiac and skin diseases from cold and inadequate food are widespread. Many have sores, swollen legs, yellow skins. Some children look normal but have no resistance.

Needs Almost Unlimited Assistance

It is now clearly recognized that France will need unlimited assistance from the outside world for a period estimated to last at least over the coming winter and probably until the next harvest. This assistance must take the form of energy-producing foods, as well as warm and durable clothing, shelter, and medical supplies and equipment. In view of current shortages almost everything in the food line that can be sent will be useful. Food items of the first priority are baby foods, milk, fats of all kinds, chocolate, sugar, canned meat, sardines, and rice. Dried fruits and vegetables of all kinds can also be used to advantage.

M.C.C. "Foods for Relief"

Can private relief agencies help out in this situation of need? The answer is an unqualified "yes." The French government has indicated that it will welcome all the assistance private relief can provide, particularly since UNRRA is not in the picture in France. Over twenty American relief agencies are either planning services for France or are already in the field. Through its French organization, "Secours Mennonite Aux Enfants," the Mennonite Central Committee has maintained a continuous record of service to needy French during all the years of German occupation. Since liberation the program has been revised and expanded. The recently organized MCC "Foods for Relief" program will add another valuable section to the significant pattern of service already established. Especially significant to American Mennonites is the knowledge that the MCC program in France will bring aid to the 2,000 Mennonites of France, most of whom live in the Alsace-Lorraine region and have suffered severely from the war. Any contribution to the MCC "Foods for Relief" program therefore will not only bring help to suffering humanity, but will also provide a concrete way to apply the principle of Christian stewardship to needy brethren in distress.

HOME MISSIONS

(NOTE: Herewith we present the first installment of the outline mentioned in the Home Mission section of last week's issue. It has been prepared for camps, and it is printed here in order that pastors and members in the home churches may utilize it for sermons and Bible study during the month of October, thus making for a united study with those in camp.)

The Bond of Peace: A Study of the Epistle to the Ephesians

By Jacob Enz

I. A Message For Our Time

The Epistle to the Ephesians has a message uniquely adapted to our time. In its lofty themes we see the search of a man for a way of life that will meet all the varying facts of life as well as be buttressed by those facts—we see his search for such a way coming to an end. And where is that end? It is in Christ. The believer in Christ, the Church of Christ, and the Kingdom of Christ are found by him to be the most fundamental and timeless factors in the world. Real peace, real security, and real understanding on any level of personal or social relationship can only be known in so far as Christ in the believer, in the Church, or in the Kingdom is central and dominant.

This is a refreshing note in a time when we are painfully searching for a way of life which we may follow fearlessly—a way without the if's, and's, and but's of a compromised and unsatisfying philosophy of life. We are tired of thinking it is possible to love and hate the same people at the same time—tired of thinking it possible to evangelize and pulverize the same nation. To help us Paul tells us of "The Bond of Peace."

II. The Method of Study

This study is not intended to be an exhaustive commentary. An attempt is merely being made to bring out those pertinent facts which will help to reconstruct in the mind of the modern reader somewhat of the temper of mind of the first readers of this epistle so that its basic spiritual message may be grasped. This involves a short survey of the fact about Ephesus, the Ephesian Christians, and the Apostle Paul. A few helpful word studies and initial observations are followed by an outline and comments. The comments are limited and intended to be suggestive. Questions and suggestions are intended to stimulate original thinking.

III. The City of Ephesus

Ephesus was a prominent city in the ancient world.

It was the capital of the Roman province of Asia, hence the headquarters for the Roman military of that area. It was the most easily accessible city in Asia by land and by sea. Its location therefore, favored religious, political, and commercial development and presented a most advantageous field for missionary labors.

Ephesus was known far and wide for its amazing architecture; the Temple of Diana was regarded as one of the seven wonders of the ancient world. In the temple were some of the world's best statuary and paintings. Ephesus also had its circus and theatre.

The religious life of a metropolis such as Ephesus usually exhibits variations. There were, of course, the worshippers of Diana who worshipped sex; the ritual of the great temple consisted of sacrifices and ceremonial prostitution, a common practice in ancient oriental religions. The shrine at this great temple was but one of many devoted to her service since she was the mother of all living things, hence the great trade of Demetrius the image maker. The temple was a sanctuary for criminals none of whom could be arrested for any cause whatever if within bowshot of the walls. Pilgrims brought their wealth from every part of the ancient world enriching the temple with wealth of lands and fisheries; the priests were its bankers. The strength and influence of this bank in the ancient world was comparable to that of the Bank of England in the modern world. Other religious elements beside Christianity were Gnosticism with its emphasis upon so-called higher knowledge, Judaism with its legal emphasis and the mystery religions with their divisive secrets, magic, and various rites. All of these elements are reflected in the letter to the Ephesians as Paul seeks to show them a more satisfying way.

IV. Paul and the Ephesian Christians

To our knowledge Paul ministered longer in Ephesus than in any other one place. Acts 18-20 gives the account of his contacts with the Ephesians. He was the first to make a real impact upon the pagan worship of the city as is noted by the riot caused by Demetrius the image maker. The people to whom Paul had ministered were evidently Gentiles, for such are the recipients of the letter as indicated by Eph. 2:11. They were at one time partakers of the evil so prevalent. At the time of the writing of the letter Paul was in prison; the reason for his imprisonment was basically his Gentile missionary labor and his conviction that the Jew is on the same plane as the Gentile as far as his need of Christ is concerned; this incidentally is the central conviction of the epistle.

V. Word Studies and Initial Observations in the Epistle

A definition of terms used in the epistle will help in a clearer understanding.

One such term is grace. This term usually conveys the idea of the free unmerited favor of God to man. It may also mean a gift or talent. Both senses are found in the letter.

The term glory as used in the N.T. is not always fully understood. In addition to the physical idea for Paul it becomes “. . . the most significant symbol for the manifestation of the perfected human nature; being also for him the most significant inherited symbol of the divine perfection as manifested to the human eye.” (Hastings Bib. Dict.) It is the radiance of moral perfection.

The word heavenly is a common word in the epistle before us. It refers to heaven itself or as in 6:12 the realm of the spirit. The first sense, which is most common, refers to the abode of God. In other words the realm of reality.

The word mystery was a common word used in those days to refer to cults springing up. It was a hidden thing confided only to those initiated and not to be communicated by them to ordinary mortals. As applied to the Gospel by Paul it is that which cannot be fathomed by evil men but is the hope of the godly.

The term dispensation may mean a stewardship or responsibility or it may mean the management of a household or an arrangement for working.

The term sealed is another word commonly used in connection with the Mystery Cults. To seal meant to keep in silence, to mark or to confirm.

In Eph. 1:14 the term earnest is found; this is a word taken from business life meaning a pledge or down payment.

By way of general observation several facts may be noted. One of the most interesting of these is the figures of speech used in the epistle taken from warfare, business, nature, physiology and architecture. Find them and see what they are used to illustrate.

Another interesting observation is to note how Paul uses the terminology of the pagan religions and fills them with Christian content; his repeated use of the idea of power and working is the Christian answer to the magical powers of the Mystery Religions; his emphasis upon knowledge and wisdom may have its explanation in the Gnosticism which was threatening the Church with its “higher” but non-ethical knowledge. And of course Judaism was the basis for his references to the law in chapter two.

The material in the epistle divides itself into about equal portions; the first three chapters are doctrinal while the last three obviously deal with conduct.

REV. F. F. JANTZEN FAMILY ENJOYS REUNION

Gathered almost literally from the four corners of the earth, the family of the Rev. and Mrs. F.F. Jantzen were once again under the parental roof near Paso Robles, California, for two days, August 25th and 26th. It was the first time in seven years that they had all been home at the same time, and even on this occasion there was one vacant chair, for the little mother had been called to her Heavenly home a few months after seeing two of her sons depart for foreign mission fields, China and India. But she was not absent from the thoughts of any of the family.

The “ingathering” commenced at noon, Friday,

August 24, when Albert and his family reached Paso Robles from Shafter, Winton and the retreat, meeting Ruth, the youngest daughter, who had been away at College when they returned from the Philippines on Easter Sunday. Later that evening, Dr. Richard and his family, returned a year ago from a term in Africa, arrived from the Los Angeles vicinity and still later, Aron, Lubin and their families came from the same area, Oswald and his family arrived from Oregon and Anna came from Stockton where she is taking her last year of nurses' training. Mary, the eldest daughter (Mrs. David D. Shultz) lives near here, and Minna and John and his wife are on the home place.

Albert brought the morning message on Sunday, August 26, and the reunited family gathered around the dining table, each in their old time place, at noon that day. The in-laws waited upon them and saw to the feeding of the children. The afternoon was partially occupied by the taking of pictures, a whole family group, the individual families, and Grandfather with the fourteen grandchildren. Four of these were born in this vicinity, four in the Los Angeles area, and one each in the states of Kansas, Oregon, and Oklahoma and the countries, China, Africa and India.

On Monday morning the first break occurred, when Dr. Richard must return to his practice. Tuesday Lubin returned to his university classes. Saturday Albert and his family left to meet speaking engagements in Upland and Los Angeles, Anna returned to Stockton Sunday evening, and the following Tuesday saw the departure of Oswald and family to their ranch home in Oregon. Aron and his family remained until Sunday, September 16 when they also returned to Los Angeles with the expectation that both he and Kathryn will be in school this winter, while her mother, Mrs. Ed Louthan, will care for little Cynthia. It was Aron's return from India, early in August, that gave definite hopes of a reunion, which has now become a most blessed memory. —A former correspondent

JACOB ISAAC WRITES LETTER

Moundridge, Kansas, September 15, 1945

Will herewith let our friends and readers of The Mennonite know that we are still alive. We also want to say that letters from India come through much faster. Received a letter from our children Ferdinand and Anna, which had traveled only about six weeks. They write the same from over there in regard to letters from here. Since we are now in peacetime, letters are not censored any more.

They write of enjoying fairly good health for which they are thankful and that they are able to do their work. At the time instructing in a Bible course at their station, Mauhadih.

They are in the rainy season and the rains are normal, so that the outlook for a good rice crop is favorable. High prices of all means for livelihood make it hard for the common laborer, but on the

Work in a Mental Hospital Changes One's Viewpoint

By Hazel Senner

The term "mental hospital" brings to the mind of the average person a picture of buildings with barred windows and a concept of a "house of horrors" for inmates who have lost their minds. One's viewpoint in regard to this matter may change both rapidly and radically when one has opportunity to be more than a casual observer.

About the Patients

As attendants, the members of the Women's Summer Service Unit at Ypsilanti State Hospital, Ypsilanti, Michigan, had opportunity to work with mental patients eight or nine hours each day. This made a vast difference in their viewpoints. The tasks performed for the patients were comparatively simple, consisting largely of feeding, bathing, and clothing them. The performance of these tasks may become mere routine or it may open eyes to intricate opportunities, opportunities for exercising an "out-of-the-way" kindness or tactfully seeking to build a bit of hope for a confused mind, for displaying sympathetic understanding, for making physical living more comfortable in those minute ways ordinarily overlooked.

Classroom offered further opportunity to learn to know and understand mental patients with whom one came in contact. Twice each week the girls of this unit attended staff meeting which could be described briefly as a most interesting course in advanced mental hygiene. In this class, case histories were presented and patients were interviewed.

A few years ago the average Mennonite girl, secure in her home community, never dreamed of looking for opportunities such as these. But today, service units such as this one have made her realize that behind barred windows there are individuals who are very human indeed, who once had ambitions and aspirations typical of her own, but who have deviated from normal thinking, acting, and feeling for a time. They have made her realize that there is something one can do for such individuals, sometimes things so simple that the ordinary eye cannot see them. She has learned of the quick response she may expect from kind treatment. She has been made aware of the need for calmness and poise. She has seen the need of guarding herself against thinking cheaply of human life. To her the words of Jesus, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, ye have done it unto me" have become more meaningful.

About Other Mennonites

Invaluable also to the girls of the Summer Service Unit was their opportunity to become acquainted with each other. Eight states, six Mennonite colleges, and four branches of the Mennonite Church represented in a small group of girls who live and work together can result in nothing less than a broadening of one's viewpoints and experience. Activities of the regular unit, such as Sunday evening services, the weekly prayer services, choir rehearsals, and group socials, were participated in by the girls, who enjoyed this fellowship with the permanent group. Committees appointed served to assist in arranging for these activities as well as in other capacities. (An example of the latter projects was that of preparing Christmas packages for over-seas relief which the summer unit girls sponsored.)

Excellent recreational facilities available on the hospital grounds provided many pleasant off-duty hours. Tennis, golfing, bicycling, croquet, and similar sports were common activities in which most of the girls participated. A planned unit recreation program was also provided.

About the Church

Besides learning to know and understand each other in these ways, the group members also gained a clearer understanding of the principles of our church, particularly through class work under the unit leader, Lois Gunden. The basis for study this summer was M. C. Lehman's History and Principles of Mennonite Relief Work, a vast field of study which allows ample opportunity for discussion and research.

The Need to Make Love Explicit

To evaluate a summer spent as a member of a Women's Summer Service Unit would be difficult. Each phase of activity offered was beneficial; each phase of activity awakened one to the vast responsibilities involved. Problems and situations formerly unknown frequently confronted one. Evidences of degraded, immoral living brought to light more keenly the need of constantly reaching upward to God. Such experiences revealed that consistency, implicit trust, alertness, and inner strength are needed to make evident in our service to suffering humanity the better way of life—the way taught by Jesus wherein love is the underlying motive.

Women's Summer Service Units have opened this new avenue of service. Will we continue to recognize it as a challenge to live Christ by showing love to our neighbor?

CPS LORE

Containing the series of C.P.S. legends and old wives' tales:

Last November, the "starvation" guinea pig unit at the University of Minnesota found itself assigned to the same dining hall as an army training unit. Tentative friendships were formed and, as the weeks went by, progressed famously. At Christmas soldiers joined the CO group in singing carols.

At this point a visiting lieutenant-colonel discovered the situation and declared the COs were demoralizing the army unit. He first tried to oust the CPS men from the hall, but no other eating place satisfied the requirements of the experiment. So he had a wall built across the room and, further, shifted meal hours so the two groups ate at different times.

Unexpected opposition developed among the soldiers, some of whom showed pointed disgust. "What does he think we are fighting for?" they asked. "Does he think he can change our minds by putting up a wall?"

Though they no longer ate together, outside contacts continued and fraternization was actually increased by the colonel's methods. The wall progressed from a point for mutual jokes to an actual bond between them. Shortly before the army unit was to leave, one of the soldiers defied the order to come all the way round to the CO side of the wall, shook hands and said goodbye.—The Reporter

MINISTER COMMENDS BOOK BY SOCIOLOGIST

Dr. Sorikin in his book "The Crisis of Our Age" has shown that the really great discoveries and great contributions in art, literature, sculpture, ethics and law have been made during periods in history when the thinking of people was dominated by the faith that there is a God Whose Word and Will is to govern life. He shows that when people have turned from God and have lived for self, their ethics and morals have degenerated into pragmatic selfish codes of conduct which have brought ruin and self-destruction. He shows how this present chaotic condition in the world is an outgrowth of a culture that has forsaken God and lived for self. He holds that the only way to a better world lies in returning to God, to live life by faith in Him, and to take the Sermon on the Mount as our code of conduct. To this conclusion he comes as he evaluates the life that has been lived under different cultures from the beginning of history. We hear people say, "We learn from history that we do not learn from history." Dr. Sorikin, the sociologist of Harvard University, leads us to learn from history. —Rev. W. F. Unruh

QUOTE

The "National Tennesian" in commenting upon a bill (failed) discriminatory towards C.O.'s declared:

" . . . a viciously intolerant measure . . . concocted from such a brew as drugged the mind of Hitler's fanatics . . . It is not cowardice but courage which a man exhibits who stays loyal to his conscience. It is to the credit of an enlightened government that a way has been found in the beginning of this war for men who were opposed to shedding human blood on the grounds of religious conscience to serve their country with honor either in or out of uniform. . . . "

Lester Hostetler, Pastor of Bethel College Church, after visit to M.C.C. Office at Akron:

"One is impressed there with the magnitude of the work, the fine spirit in which an efficient staff of sixty young men and women pursue their tasks, the orderly and business-like character in which the details of every project are being carried out. After this visit, I have renewed confidence in the importance and integrity of our C.P.S. and Relief Program. It is the positive side of non-resistance. Its scope is world-wide and offers a field of service to which consecrated young people can devote themselves with enthusiasm."

Justice Black of U.S. Supreme Court in a minority opinion upholding right of an Illinois C.O. to practice law even though Illinois constitution requires willingness to perform military service:

"It may be, as many people think, that Christ's Gospel of love and submission is not suited to a world in which men still fight and kill one another. But I am not ready to say that a mere profession of belief in that Gospel is a sufficient reason to keep otherwise well-qualified men out of the legal profession, or to drive law-abiding lawyers of that belief out of the profession, which would be the next logical development."

Elsie C. Bechtel, candidate for relief work in France:

"An alert parent or teacher will substitute a good activity in place of the evil one; instead of saying 'Don't,' he will say 'Do this instead.' In a like manner, any Christian who takes a negative stand against war and does not find a channel into which he can turn his energies and activities, is going to find his Christian life thwarted. Relief service, I believe, supplies one such channel."

W. F. Unruh, ex-missionary and present partor of West Zion Church, Moundridge, Kansas:

"As long as people harbor an unforgiving spirit, as long as they glorify war, as long as people feel that the teachings of Jesus are impractical for a day like this, peace will not last long. But if we will be of a forgiving, merciful spirit; if we will believe that God has made all men equal and loves them all, desiring that we all belong to the teachings of Christ, peace will come, for Jesus is still the Prince of Peace. We should also remember that the way that leads to peace leads through the valley of repentance."

MENNONITES THE WORLD OVER

By Cornelius Krahn

In Holland: Algemeene Doopsgezinde Societeit

The report has been received in this country of the last meeting of the A. D. S. (Dutch Mennonite General Conference) of 1943. Herein very valuable information has reached us. The A. D. S. was founded in a time like ours, that is, when Napoleon dominated Europe. This report, too, reflects hardship and turmoil of war. The chairman says in his opening address: "The year behind us is one of the darkest pages of the history of our country." It is to be feared that the following two years will have been darker than the one on which we have this report.

A General Conference Meeting in Holland is attended by delegates only. All 130 churches have their representatives all the way from 1-153 (Amsterdam). The Dagelijksch Bestuur (Executive Committee D.B.) reported on: contacts with other denominations of the country, handling difficult problems in connection with the occupation of the country, the discontinuation of the "zondagebode" and many other questions. The sub-committees reported on matters as the following: The theological Seminary, Candidates for Ministry, Pensions of Ministers and Widows of Ministers, Broederschapswerk (which is a movement to revive some characteristics of Mennonitism) and others.

We learn from this report that quite a few changes have taken place during the last years. The movement of the Gemeentedag has not been able to conduct its annual meetings of Bible study, study of missions, temperance, non-resistance, etc. because of the war conditions. It is interesting to note that Rev. Kuiper, the chairman of this movement, has been followed up by Rev. Fleischer who requests that the Gemeentedag movement be given a permanent place in the organization of the A. D. S. These meetings are always a source of spiritual strength and took place in the solitary camps owned by the movement.

The A.D.S. which throughout its history was more an organization to take care of the business interests of the churches reports now that the last years have proved that the brotherhood is a "living organism" and that the congregation has meant to the individual more in these years because the individual has been willing to contribute more to the congregation.

In Berlin:

John Kroeker writes from Berlin: "No phantasy and imagination of (those) pre-war days could have pictured what it means when in two hours time in a single town which is all ablaze some 17,000 men, women and children perish. And that is what happened here in 1943 when Berlin got its eye-opener of what a real attack would mean. Worse onslaughts followed. . . ." He reports that "there have been hundreds of nights and not many less days" in which they "have seen man-made hell turned loose, and in which the earth not only was trembling, but literally shaking from explosions of thousands of bombs, and when man and beast were crouching horror stricken in cellars or blazing ruins." He relates that a number of times his dwelling place was blown to dust and all he saved was his life.

Among Mennonites of Russia:

It is known that many Mennonites of European Russia were evacuated to Siberia and others taken along by the retreating German army. The latter were settled in the eastern Provinces of Germany. Kroeker has visited many of the camps and settlements and will be able to give some first hand information. Of course, these groups were broken up when the Russian army invaded that territory. Many of them went westward into Germany, whence they are awaiting an opportunity to come to America. Many will have been overtaken by the Russian army and sent back to Russia.

A Modern Odyssey:

Jacob Redekop writes to his relatives in Canada how he traveled "half way around the world" and finally landed in Holland. He states that from the Ukraine they were taken to Germany and from there to Salzburg, Austria. Relatives with whom they had left the Ukraine were gradually scattered and died. When the war ended they left Austria by foot and soon lost all their baggage and had to live by begging. After enduring many hardships they arrived in Holland. He says, "We cried to God on our knees many times during the journey. He directed our path and will do so in the future."

Only a Glimpse of the Real Horror:

One of the first thirty-three Mennonites from Russia to arrive in Holland has written: "If those who left Russia before 1929 thought they had suffered in Russia let me assure them that it was only a shadow in comparison to the complete darkness which we have experienced." Peter Dyck, relief worker in Holland who relates this reports that these Mennonites have found a temporary home in the Mennonite camp Fredeshiem.

Report from Denmark:

C. F. Klassen reached the Prussian Mennonites now in Denmark in a camp at Copenhagen on August 31. He spoke with the elder of the Heubuden Church, Bruno Ewert, and others. They were overwhelmed by the fact that the Mennonite churches of North America were thinking of them, praying for them and searching after them. C. F. Klassen states that registration of the refugees has not been completed but that it is expected that among the 250,000 there will be about 2,500 Mennonites. They are homeless and treated as prisoners. Many of their number were killed during the war or died on the trip.

Speaking of B. Unruh and A. Fast:

Kroeker states that he met Benjamin Unruh at his home where the headquarters of Mennonite World Relief are located. Brother Unruh's health had not been restored completely since his illness in 1935. Mr. A. Fast, Berlin, who was an active relief worker in Russia and later in Germany, is reported to have died.

MARY BECKER HAS VISA GRANTED HER

September 24 Dr. Seel cabled that the Colombian Consul in New York had received authorization to visa sister Mary Becker's pass. All she needs now is passage, which we are expecting soon.

The going of the new mission in South America has not been easy, but one already hears the young missionaries express the conviction, that the time of waiting has been for the best. Thank the Lord.

Next summer three more are planning to follow.—Sec.

RELIEF

Meeting in Paris

To further organize and plan the Mennonite relief program in Northwest Europe, the following brethren conferred in Paris on September 11: O. O. Miller, Samuel Goering, C. F. Klassen, John L. Horst, M. C. Lehman, and Henry Buller. M. R. Zigler of the Brethren Service Committee was also present. Our relief program in Holland and France is desperately in need of transport facilities according to a cable sent shortly after the conference. Relief workers are needed who can operate trucks and also serve as repair mechanics. Arrangements are being made to send several vehicles from both England and the States.

It is also reported that there is urgent need for clothing and food supplies in France. Additional shipments are therefore being consigned to this country immediately.

C. F. Klassen reported concerning his visit to interned German and Polish Mennonites in Denmark. Brother Klassen has proceeded to Switzerland, Germany, and Holland in the further interest of displaced Mennonites.

Five Workers Leave for France

Farewell services were held at Akron, September 13, for five outgoing relief workers; Mary Miller, Ella Schmidt, Beulah Roth, Evelyn Egli, and Elsie Bechtel. All five of these workers sailed together from New York the next day on board the troopship, U.S.S. Argentina. They sailed directly for France and will disembark at Le Havre. These workers will likely serve in homes for war victims as nurses, child-training specialists, and matrons.

A new headquarters has been decided upon for the French work. Communications to French workers should be addressed: Impasse Du Tranche, Chalon sur Saone.

Report on Visit to Paraguay

H. A. Fast visited M.C.C. interests in Paraguay and Puerto Rico during the past four weeks. He arrived in Asuncion, August 12, after waiting eight days at Trinidad and one week at Rio de Janeiro. Brother Fast spent three weeks in Paraguay and left Asuncion for Puerto Rico on September 2.

During this time, from August 13 to 18, in company with Elvin Souder, he visited Colonia Friesland, the Mennonite Colony on the eastern side of the Paraguay River, the Hutterite colony at Primavera, and the supplementary feeding project at Itacurubi. On August 20, Brother Fast traveled up the Paraguay River to Concepcion where with several missionaries from the Disciples of Christ group he studied the desirability of land near this city as a possible site for a Mennonite leper colony. On August 23 he arrived in Colonia Fernheim in the Chaco for a one-week visit in company with Willard Smith.

Besides visiting the various projects and discussing with the workers the present and future relief program for Paraguay, Brother Fast preached a number of sermons at the Mennonite Center in Asuncion, at Colonia Friesland, and at Colonia Fernheim.

Twenty-Fifth Anniversary

September 27, 1945, marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization of the Mennonite Central Committee. Although a joint meeting of several Mennonite relief committees was held at Elkhart, Indiana, July 27 to 28 of the same year, the M.C.C. was officially organized in Chicago, September 27, 1920. The occasion for the meeting and organization at that time was the felt need for united action among Mennonites in North America to send organized relief to the Mennonites of Russia who were suffering from the great famine.

An anniversary booklet relating the story of the organization and its activities will be prepared sometime during the fall months.

C. P. S.

"Refresher" Classes

To assist C.P.S. men facing post-C.P.S. life a number of short courses, labeled "refreshers," are sponsored in the camps. Most of these classes relate to special emphases which have been given throughout the camp program, such as nonresistance, Mennonite heritage and Christian community. Colorado Springs, for example, is offering in six lessons a series of studies, titled, "Mennonite Pillars of Faith."

Visitation Program

The General Conference Mennonite Church has announced their plans to provide a program of pastoral visitation in behalf of their men in C. P. S. and their churches at large. During the month of October, a group of ten ministers will devote approximately four weeks of time to this work. The emphasis of this effort will center around the theme: "The Christian Walk in Wartime and Peacetime," based on chapters 4, 5, and 6 of the Epistle to the Ephesians.

Civilian Bond Subscriptions

As of September 1, 1945, the amount of money subscribed for civilian bonds in the U.S. Treasury was $6,501,627.14. Of this amount, $4,706,026.50 was subscribed by Mennonites.

whole, conditions have improved.

As for ourselves, we like to report, that we are still carrying on as we have for some time. We live together with our sister, Dr. Elizabeth, who still keeps up her office practice, but is not making calls.

God is gracious to us, when we are still able to take care of ourselves. Our ages: sister seventy-six, mother near eighty, the writer just about eighty-five.

God has spared us eyesight for reading, (The Mennonite is always getting its attention) and so much hearing, as to be able to appreciate the radio. Every morning we enjoy the religious broadcasts and also the news reports through the day. Such privileges our forefathers did not have. But we want to be ready for the call from time to Eternity.

COLLEGE NEWS

FREEMAN JUNIOR COLLEGE

Rev. John Suderman, whose son is a Freshman in the Academy, spoke twice during the regular chapel hours. In his first talk he gave an insight to the work among the Indians in Arizona. His second talk was based on the Twenty-third Psalm. Both were very much appreciated.

Four numbers have been scheduled for the Community Entertainment course sponsored by the College. Three of these have been arranged through the university of Minnesota and one through the National Audubon Society. There are to be two musical numbers and two lectures with accompanying pictures. The first number will be a ladies trio, the second a lecture on the North Country, followed by a Scottish Quartette, and finally a lecture on Wild Life in America by a representative of the National Audubon Society.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

Prof. Lantz has selected the personnel for the Vesper Choir. Investigations are underway to see whether it will be possible to secure transportation to get this choir out into the churches again this year. The Gospel teams are tentatively planning a number of trips, one of which will likely take them into Michigan and another into Ontario.

The Southernnaires will be in Bluffton for a concert October 9. Bible Lectures this year will be the week of November 11, with Dr. William M. Beahm, Bethany Biblical Seminary, as the speaker. Ministers' Conference and a Women's Conference will also be held that week. The semi-annual meeting of the College Board is scheduled for November 12.

President Ramseyer spent the week of September 23 in field work in the Eastern District Conference. He spoke in the Souderton Church on Sunday, the 23.

BETHEL COLLEGE

Approximately 175 attended the opening meeting of the Bethel College Women's Association on September 24 in the Student Union room, with a number of the surrounding churches represented. Mrs. Gingerich led devotionals on "Workmanship," based on Exodus 35:35; a girls' trio sang two numbers; the address was given by Mr. C. A. Berry, interior decorator from the Innes Store in Wichita; and Rev. Unruh led in a closing prayer. Mrs. J. E. Entz, president, discussed the new significant project which is soon to be announced. In the past eleven years this auxiliary has raised $12,000 for the pipe organ and for flooring, drapes, and kitchen and dining equipment for the Memorial Hall basement. They have also spent many days in canning and sewing for the College. Their faithful sacrificial work is deeply appreciated and a plaque memorializing their willing hands will be placed in Memorial Hall.

THE MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY and THE MENNONITE BIBLE SCHOOL

The Mennonite Biblical Seminary was happy to have as their guests on Tuesday Miss Erna J. Fast, Orlando Schmidt, Verney Unruh, and Harold Buller, all of whom were on their way to New York where they will attend the Biblical Seminary in that city. They joined us in our weekly devotional meeting in the afternoon after which the group had dinner together in a down-town hotel.

Rev. and Mrs. Albert Jantzen, who were among our interned missionaries on the Philippines, joined the student body this past week. They are living in a near-by apartment, and both Mr. and Mrs. Jantzen are taking seminary work.

Dr. C. Henry Smith, instructor in Mennonite History spoke on "Overcoming Evil with Good" in the present world situation, basing his remarks on Romans 12:20, 21, during the Wednesday morning chapel hour.

Faculty and students are looking forward to the formal opening of the school which is to take place Thursday evening, October 4, in the Bethany Chapel, 3435 W. Van Buren Street, Chicago.

JOTTINGS

—Miss Janet Soldner arrived safely in Medellin, Colombia, South America on September 20, according to a cablegram received by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Soldner, Berne, Indiana. Miss Soldner joined Rev. and Mrs. Gerald Stucky who had arrived in Medellin earlier. Miss Mary Becker, who now has received her visa, will very likely join the three missionaries mentioned in the very near future. LaVerne Rutschman, the fourth missionary originally scheduled to go, is continuing his seminary studies at Mennonite Biblical Seminary and plans to go when they are completed.

—Dr. S. F. Pannabecker, who is to organize M.C.C. relief activities in China, is expected to arrive in China some time during October, according to word from his wife, Mrs. Sylvia Pannabecker of Bluffton. Dr. Pannabecker has been helping with relief work in India while awaiting permission to enter China. He and his family were formerly missionaries in the latter country.

—Buhler Mennonite Church, Buhler, Kansas: A committee representing the four Mennonite churches in the Buhler Community, met last Thursday in our church and formulated plans for sending at least one carload of flour to the starving people of Holland. The wheat is to be donated by the members of these churches. The Buhler Mill and Elevator Co. has graciously consented to mill the flour free of cost. Cash contributions will also be required for the purchasing of bags and shipping. Around 1,400 bushels of wheat are required for a carload of flour."

—Rev. Walter Gering showed his slides of Puerto Rico to the Buhler Mennonite Church on September 16.

—Reedley, California: Much interest is being shown in the Young Married People's Sunday School Class that is now being organized.

—Alberta Community Church, Portland, Oregon: The church membership recently increased about 15 per cent when nine new members, including Rev. and Mrs. C. H. Dirks, were received.

—Interesting displays, which are changed frequently, can be seen in Mennonite Historical Library, North Newton.

—Immanuel Church, Los Angeles, California: "Dr. Dan Gilbert, nationally known speaker, will be conducting services at the Immanuel Mennonite Church, 79th and Stanford Avenue, from October 10 to 14. Youth night will be observed on the evening of October 12 the main service being preceded by a young people's banquet. Dr. Paul Bauman, Vice President of the Bible Institute of Los Angeles, will serve as toast-master. Rev. H. D. Burkholder formerly of Quakertown, Pa., is the present pastor of the Immanuel congregation." The pastor and wife are now canvassing the community.

—Burns, Kansas: The young people have begun their Bible study meetings. They are studying the book of Mark.—Corr.

—Rev. C. E. Krehbiel plans to leave October 12th for Chicago, where he is to teach a six-week course in Mennonite Polity at the Mennonite Biblical Seminary. The course will begin October 16.

—Most pastors have returned the card asking for the name and address of the individual elected by their church as correspondent to The Mennonite. As soon as the remaining cards are returned, we will be able to complete our list of correspondents. Thank you, pastors, for your cooperation.

—Roland Hayes, negro tenor from the red hills of Gordon County, Georgia, has sung in the palace of King George the Fifth and in the mansion of the Queen Mother of Spain. The honorary degree of Doctor of Music has been bestowed upon him. A recent book tells of his life. Roland Hayes will appear in Memorial Hall, North Newton, Kansas, on the evening of October 19, at 8 P.M.

—Thanks to all pastors who send in their church bulletins regularly and promptly.

—Rev. M. M. Lehman writes from Page, North Dakota, that he has resigned as pastor of the Mennonite Church at Monroe, Washington. At present Rev. and Mrs. Lehman are staying with their children, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Perkins.

—Hereford Mennonite Church, Bally, Pa., commemorated with a special worship service on September 23 the seventieth birthday of Dr. Oswin Weller Berky who in the past forty-five years, as physician, ministered to thousands in the community. The message of the service was brought by a brother of Dr. Berky, namely, Herbert W. Berky, who is Professor of Physical Science and Chemistry at Bluffton College and whose birthday was also commemorated on this occasion. So was the birthday of a third brother, Ralph Weller Berky, hymn-writer and poet, who has written a number of hymns, four of which were sung during the special service. Also remembered was another brother, Darius Weller Berky, explorer and professor of physics, who died in 1924. — Frank H. Snyder, who drove the bus for the Hereford Church for twenty-three years, carrying many, many children to Sunday School and church, died on September 19. He is survived by his wife and two daughters, Dora, who is church organist and Pearl, Mrs. Willard Green.

standing that he would be Vice-President and Rev. Sylvan Lehman, President. Rev. Smucker resigned because of his responsibility as President of the General Conference. Rev. Lehman was Vice President of the conference. The conference officers now are: President: Sylvan Lehman; Vice-President: J. N. Smucker; Secretary: Gerhard Buhler; Treasurer: L. A. Geiger.

—Mrs. Sarah S. Geiger of North Newton has been ill with pneumonia in the Bethel Hospital for the past few weeks. The last report stated that she was seriously ill.

—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kauffman of North Newton returned on September 26 from a two-weeks visit at Freeman, South Dakota, their old home.

—Bethel College Church, which is planning a new church building, had the following in the September 23rd bulletin: "On the question of finances, we are already committed to several definite policies: (1) There is to be no coercion or undue pressure on the membership for funds. The church when completed, must represent the free, voluntary, personal dedication and devotion of its members. (2) Construction cannot proceed until a very substantial amount of the cost is at hand in cash, bonds, notes, or pledges. (3) The church cannot be obligated to a debt exceeding fifteen percent of the cost of the building.

A church building is erected to the glory of God. It represents men's faith in God and the spiritual values in life. A church built on this campus will in all probability remain the place of worship for the community and generations of students for a century to come. Let us think of this project, not as a burden, but a rare opportunity. It is our church, our responsibility, our opportunity."

—Upland, California: The address of Miss Ella Schmidt, who will serve as M.C.C. relief worker in France, will be, c/o Dr. Eldon Burke, 29 Rue Street Didier, Paris 16, France.

—Forty-five gallons of molasses were recently made at the John R. Regier home by members of the Hebron Church, Buhler, Kansas. The molasses will be given for relief and was made from sorghum donated by Mr. Regier.

—Buhler, Kansas: Sunday evening, September 30, the churches of Buhler participated in an old-fashioned community sing in the high school auditorium.

—Mrs. S. F. Pannabecker wrote on September 25: "According to latest reports Mr. Baltzer and Mr. Pannabecker were supposed to fly from Calcutta to Kunming on September 30."

Mountain Lake, Minnesota: A committee, composed of representatives from ten Mennonite churches (representing four different conferences) in Mountain Lake and community and neighboring towns, is promoting a drive for new and used carpenter, garden, and light farm tools and kitchen utensils, to be sent for relief. These are to be sent by freight to Akron along with the canned goods that the community is sending for relief. The committee is also stressing the canning of meat for relief.

BETHEL HOSPITAL GIFT AND FELLOWSHIP DAY VERY SUCCESSFUL

In spite of threatening weather, the Bethel Deaconess Hospital and Home for Aged Gift and Fellowship day held Wednesday, September 25 was a satisfactory and successful day. Unusually large crowds of people attended all the activities of the day.

The chapel and basement hall of the Home for Aged were filled to capacity for the afternoon program to hear the Reverend Maurice Yoder, pastor of the Hesston College Mennonite church, give the address of the afternoon. Several groups of student nurses supplied the special music for this program.

The regular food sales and dinner were held in the basement of the First Mennonite church this year, and this basement was none too large for the number of people who were served. The junior and senior auxiliaries to the Bethel institutions served the largest number of people ever served in the history of this dinner connected with gift day.

In the evening, the weather was more cooperative and allowed the evening program to be given outside on the lawn of the home for aged. Mr. Elder Gunter, city manager, served as chairman for this program. Dr. H. W. Reed, pastor of the Nazarene Church of Newton, gave the address of the evening during the intermission of a band concert played by the Newton high school band under the direction of Mr. E. S. Sanderson.

Those connected with the Bethel institutions are very happy about the results of this gift and fellowship day as shown by the number of people who showed their interest in these institutions by attending the activities of the day and by the generous gifts which were received by both the hospital and home for aged.

QUOTE

J. Edgar Hoover in address to Daughters of the American Revolution:

—“Last year a major crime occurred every twenty-three seconds. More persons were murdered in the United States than there were casualties at Tarawa. A robbery occurred every twelve minutes, a burglary every two minutes, a larceny every thirty-nine seconds, and an automobile was stolen every three minutes . . . nearly 23 per cent of all persons arrested last year were under voting age. More boys of 17 years of age, and more girls of 18 years were arrested than in any other age group. In fact, the arrests of girls last year over 1941, the last peacetime year, increased 130 per cent. Until we can greatly change this picture, we are hardly in a position to boast of true progress.”

A. J. Muste and John Nevin Sayre of the Fellowship of Reconciliation:

“The confidence on which such peace must be built cannot exist so long as fear of atomic bombing and similar diabolical means of destruction made possible by modern technology hangs over the peoples of the earth. The United States took the initiative in perpetrating the atrocity of launching the atomic bomb. Upon the government and the people of his country squarely rests the responsibility to take leadership in removing the horrible danger and fear which this involves.”

Bulletin of Zion Church, Souderton, Pa.:

“The house of God should be a place where we see ourselves as God sees us. Conviction of sin will not come through preaching pious platitudes which people like to hear . . . There must be a proclamation of the law of God and of the consequences of sin. This is needed in order to produce conviction in sinners; a vision of the Holy God and a vivid conception of His character and omniscience, and of His moral demands upon men.”

H. F. Rall, retired seminary professor:

“Freedom is something positive, something to be gained at cost of toil and pain. To find the highest and follow it in obedience, to rule your own spirit, to grow in knowledge and wisdom and in sympathy with others, to rise above passion and prejudice and all littleness, this is to be free . . . Even under tyranny a man can be free; but no man is ever free who is not free within.”

THE BOOK REVIEW

Tolerance

Oberlin - A Protestant Saint by Marshal Dawson is especially good reading for rural preachers. The book is full of gems—homiletic and otherwise. Here is one the much needed virtue of tolerance.

One day Oberlin rescued a Jew from a mob. He took the peddler's pack on his own back and led the man by the hand to the parsonage. That evening as the two men sat talking while the dishes were being moved from the table, a neighboring Catholic priest came to the parsonage for a visit. The three drew their chairs together before the fire. Putting his hand on Oberlin's shoulder, the priest said, “How I wish, my good friend, that you and I were of the same religion.” Putting one arm upon the priest's shoulder, while the other circled the man he had rescued from the mob, Oberlin said, “Love is the religion of Jesus Christ.”

The eyes of the Jew were moist with tears. Bowing his head he murmured: “What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly before thy God?”

The priest said softly, “He who loves his fellow-men whom he has seen, loves God whom he has not seen.”

Oberlin's eyes were getting red. He wished to have a good excuse for sneezing and hastily produced from his vest-pocket a handsome snuff-box—the one luxury he allowed himself. He lifted a pinch of snuff to his own nostrils, and then passed the metal case first to the Jew and afterward to the priest. All three sneezed together.

“It is a fine night,” said the priest, reaching for his hat and cane, then stepped outside to view the stars.

“You are tired, my friend,” said Oberlin to the peddler. “You must sleep tonight in my bed.”

That evening his housekeeper spread a pallet for Oberlin on his office floor.

“Tolerance is the finest flower of civilization—and the last to bloom.”—G. S. Stoneback

GOD is of supreme importance. Undoubtedly, none of us would question that statement. We feel that it is right and that God should be of supreme importance in our lives. But then comes the question "What does God mean to us?" How do we conceive of God, whom we supposedly love and honor so much in our lives? To ask "Just what do we honor when we honor God?" seems like an awkward question. It seems much more natural to say, "Just whom do we honor?" It is so easy to assume that God means the same to all of us. In a sense He does, for He is the God of the Bible. But that does not solve it all. Some Christians picture Him as "mighty in battle" and others see Him through the Cross. Whatever comes first to an individual's mind when he thinks of God would make a very significant study. That there is much need for knowing Him better cannot be questioned. Realizing this one minister in our conference has started a sermon series on "What Jesus Tells Us About God." Another has a sermon on "An Adequate Conception of God." Another has a doctrinal sermon on God every year. But there is danger in preaching about God, danger of not saying that which is most significant, or at least significant enough. However, this need not and does not stop the humble preacher who realizes his own human limitations and admits them to others. He knows that he cannot say the final word on what God has revealed about Himself, but as he shares the experience of God that has come to him he touches upon that which can be very enriching to others. "Who is God?" is a question of supreme importance. Jesus Christ has given us the answer, but how fully do we comprehend the meaning of his answer? What comes to our mind first of all when we see or hear the word "God"?

FELLOWSHIP is needed and desired by young people. The baby wants to be cuddled by the mother and needs it for the sake of security. The four-year-old wants "playmates." A little older he must belong to the "gang." As adolescent he must belong to the larger group that he has found outside the family circle. And so it continues. We need to belong and want to belong in fellowship. It is not good for us to be alone. God made many of us. Fellowship enriches, that is, fellowship centered in Christ. The young people of our communities need and want fellowship, but they do not always know how to get it. In times past there have been few systematic and well-planned efforts to provide for it. Now church leaders and parents are becoming increasingly convinced as to the necessity for it. The pain of improper recreation and fellowship is driving them to it in some cases. It is pointed out to us that according to the judgement of our conference ministers, about 50 per cent of our young men went into the armed services because of social reasons. We have spoken of our churches as fellowships of believers, but the young people have not always felt the fellowship. Consequently, there are attempts now to provide fellowship in the way of recreation, worship, study, service, etc. The annual Sunday School picnic is being supplemented by frequent "socials." Some are considering the purchase of "crafts" material on which young people can work in a group. Some are pursuing courses of study. One group has a "fellowship" garden. But on the whole, we are very much in the pioneering stage in this whole area. Little direction is being given to the movement. Some suggestions, such as crafts, the need for a "recreation building," and others are coming from the C.P.S. experience. Here is a source that needs to be tapped much further in a systematic and comprehensive way. The need and desire for wholesome fellowship on the part of our young people is great. To the extent that parents recognize this and help to do something about it, to that extent will they find rich returns coming to them from an area of youth life, which at times seems rather unpromising to them. Fellowship will be sought. The Church can help determine how it will be found.

PUNISHMENT OF GERMANY is now being carried out by the Allies. The punishment of war itself is not considered sufficient. The present punishment is to help make the Germans better people. That is a noble aim, but whether such methods will not serve instead to make the Germans bitter people, remains to be seen. In many areas there is a loss of respect for punishment as a method for producing acceptable behaviour. Criminologists point out that punishment does not reform the criminal or deter him from crime. Warden E. Lawes in his book on Murderers points out that capital punishment does not keep people from murdering. Rather, it is pointed out, what is needed is the removal of the cause of the behaviour. Leaders in child guidance point out that spanking a child for unacceptable behaviour may succeed in eliminating that particular behaviour for the moment only to have it crop out in some other unacceptable manifestation. Many alcoholics drink because of personality problems. To punish them for drinking does not solve their problem. To starve the Germans for what they may have done, be it ever so sinful, is a questionable way of getting at the causes of their behaviour. Once the Germans were driven into desperation. Observers, who have noted the unthinkable need in Germany, point out that it is being done again.

OBSERVATIONS IN INDIA

By S. F. Pannabecker

Calcutta to Champa

Calcutta is in Bengal in the eastern tip of India. It is located on the lowland of the delta which has been built up by the Ganges, thus near the sea. Champa, where our General Conference mission-station is located, is four hundred and forty miles farther west in the higher land of the Central Provinces. Having just returned from Champa, the jottings in my note-book suggest some observations that may be of interest to others as they were to me.

The trip from Calcutta to Champa was by train, taking about fifteen hours. At the Calcutta end the country side was green with vegetation, the land was level, water in the canals and pools was plentiful, and palm trees much in evidence. The land was divided into rectangular plots by low walls and was already plowed for seeding. In the Central Provinces, away from the coast and at an altitude of 900 feet, the air is drier, the temperature hotter, vegetation limited, the land dried out and little plowing attempted. Palm trees are seldom seen there and their place is taken by a variety of tropical trees which I would not attempt to enumerate though I did notice banana, papaya, mango, orange fruit trees and others for which I would know no English name.

The difference in water supply was especially evident between the two places. In the delta region of the coast could be seen ponds and lagoons and canals with a multitude of small boats, while carts and roads were scarce. In the interior the rivers were comparatively dry, the only ponds were those artificial "tanks" which serve as the village water supply system. Transportation was by road and cart. The variation in humidity of the atmosphere affected the human system noticeably. In the damp area of the coast the temperature was lower, never above 100 degrees, but perspiration dried so slowly that one was always damp and sticky and uncomfortable. In the higher interior regions the temperature was fully ten degrees higher, but the dry air promoted rapid evaporation and one walked about in dry clothes though the heat was uncomfortable.

The buildings varied in construction too. Near the coast bamboo is unlimited in quantity; so simple houses are made of bamboo framework and roof. The roof is then thatched with a heavy layer of straw and the side walls filled in by tying mats on the framework and plastering them with mud. The floor is filled in so as to raise it a couple feet above the surrounding ground and the house is ready for occupancy. Interior houses were made of dried mud walls with a tile covered roof. In general they seemed more stable than the houses in the delta.

Oddly enough irrigation was more commonly used near the coast than in the higher, dry ground where it would seem to be needed. The reason seemed to be that the hot sun tends to wither plants in the dry season and the farmers consequently wait to plant until the rains are just ready to break. The rains are heavy enough that it is only necessary to dam up the land in small, level plots and sufficient water stands in these plots to permit the raising of rice which is the staple crop. In the cooler and damper coastal areas the farmers had less fear of early planting and supplemented the meagre, early rains with a certain amount of irrigation.

India-China Comparisons

A noticeable difference in the use of the land in India and China was observed. In the latter country all available good land is put into crops. Here there were large, uncultivated sections, such as the grazing areas attached to every village, and the miles and miles of uncleared land covered with scrub brush and called "jungle." The Chinese have surely gone too far in uprooting trees and grass, and the Indian system would have many advantages if it were better handled. As it is, the grazing land is largely devoted to the support of useless cows. These animals are held sacred according to Hindu religious belief and are thus accorded free support regardless of their condition or productivity. As for the "jungle" land, it is the property of princes and wealthy landowners and is used to increase their private incomes. The pressure of population and public opinion has not yet forced the opening of this land for cultivation.

Water supply is a problem for every village and is usually met by digging a large pond, called a "tank." Water congregates in this in the rainy season and if the village is fortunate holds over until the next year's rains. In the meantime it is used for bathing, for laundry, for the water buffaloes to soak themselves in, and for cooking and drinking. Wells are occasionally dug by public benefactors as an act of merit, and pipe wells are sometimes sunk by the government. But these in no sense begin to fill the water needs of the communities. In the use of drinking water the Indians differ much from the Chinese. While Chinese wells are no more sanitary and the water is often dirty, the Chinese are protected by their universal custom of drinking only hot water. Heating to boiling incidentally destroys the harmful germs though the ignorant Chinese knows no more about this aspect of it than does his Indian brother.

Clothing needs of Indians and Chinese are met in quite different ways. For the common man and woman in India the usual covering is a long strip of cloth, five to seven yards, wound about the body in a simple fashion. Better class women and men add a waist or shirt but these are not necessary to the poor man in India the usual covering is a long strip of or in the case of those so fortunate a coat or jacket. For the vast majority there is little difference in summer and winter garb, and no sewing is required in making either. Because of this most Indian women have no training along sewing lines. The Chinese on the other hand use less cloth and sew it into garments which vary with the different seasons—single layer for summer, lined clothes for fall and spring, and cotton padded garments for winter. Thus the Chinese women are well trained in sewing. Further in the matter of shoes, Indians go about freely without shoes, while the Chinese regard it as a disgrace to appear in public without shoes or with torn ones. Thus the Chinese women are kept busy making cloth shoes for the family.

The need for more complicated clothing keeps the Chinese wife tied much more closely at home and incidentally develops talents and abilities and a sense of industry. The Indian woman is free to work outside the home, and it is not uncommon to see low caste women employed in building construction in India, where, in China, men coolies would be used. The Indian man is thus freed for the more skillful operations and also possibly for more lazy self-indulgence at times.

In China one seldom finds any use for English in the interior. In sea ports and cities, English, or "pidgin" English, is not uncommon and among educated men it may be used, but in general its value to one working or travelling in China is very limited. In India English can be used to satisfy practically all the needs of a person travelling on the railway. Even interior shops have English-speaking clerks and, of course, all government employees speak English. I was much surprised to find that I could converse with our Indian pastors and church workers freely in English. When asked to make a talk before a group of young people of high school age at our Champa mission I was told they would understand English. Suspecting that their abilities along this line would be rather limited I asked a good many questions while speaking just to check on the degree of understanding. Someone was always ready to answer immediately, and most of them seemed to be getting the significance of my remarks. This would be quite impossible with any similar group in our China mission field.

In the matter of national aspirations the two peoples are alike. Both yearn for full freedom of expression and both feel they have been frustrated by outside forces. Thus there is aroused a bond of sympathy between the two countries. The Indians feel the Chinese have been able to proceed further along the road toward independence, and the Chinese feel a sense of responsibility for representing Indian aspirations. In both countries, due to ignorance, disease, poverty, economic oppression, yeast is working in the lump. It appears as activity for Communism, for Nationalism, and even as a desire to accept Christianity. How parallel the future development in the two countries may be cannot be foreseen. China is more open to Western civilization including Christianity, while India cares less for the Western religion but desires technical assistance. As far as Christian leaders and Christian thought are concerned, there is bound to be more contact in the future, a lively exchange and a closer cooperation.

Gerald Stuckys Write from South America

The letter below was written to friends in Berne, Indiana, and reprinted from the Berne Witness.

September 23, 1945

Apartado Aereo 653

Medellin, Colombia

Dear Friends:

This being Sunday night our thoughts naturally turn toward home, the church, and our friends in Berne. We remember with gratitude the many kindnesses extended to us before our departure and feel both unworthy and grateful to God for them.

The trip down here was made without any particular excitement. Because we are in a different country one may think we are far from the States—in reality, Medellin and Los Angeles are about the same distance from New Orleans—neither being very far. We left New Orleans on a Sunday morning and were here on a Wednesday morning. Janet Soldner, who arrived last week, left New Orleans on Wednesday morning and was here the following morning—Thursday.

Medellin is a city about the size of Ft. Wayne and is located in a beautiful valley. All about us are high mountains, and above are magnificent scenes. From the air the city is very striking because nearly all of the houses have red-tile roofing. The city is at an altitude of about 5000 feet and the climate is mild (summer-like) the year around. The people are a mixture of Spanish and Indian blood—and of course speak Spanish. Our Spanish tongue doesn't wiggle very well yet—nor do our ears understand it well. One makes some very stupid mistakes when one doesn't understand what others are trying to say. It embarrasses me to think of some of them.

We are living in an apartment rented for us by the school, and we are seriously studying Spanish. We have found living expenses high. We have paid 40 cents a loaf for bread, $1.20 a lb. for butter, milk is 22 cents a quart. My favorite breakfast in Berne was shredded wheat, but here that has become an "unmentionable" for it costs about $1.20 a box! But fruits abound and are cheap—for which we are grateful. Also we have a favorable money exchange—the American dollar being worth about $1.69 here.

The spiritual needs here are genuine—and we hope that we may be able to be a "light" and a help, that all men may know the only true God and our Savior, Jesus Christ. Please pray for us.

Sincerely,

Gerald and Mary Hope Stucky

P. S. We shall be happy to hear from any of you. Airmail takes about two days. Regular mail about two months.

The Place of the Library in a Christian College

By Leona Krehbiel

The college library, unlike the public library, exists not as an independent institution in itself, but as a part of a larger institution, the college, which it serves. Therefore, it derives its objectives from that institution. Its function is to make available to the students and to the faculty books, magazines, and other materials which supplement the spiritual, educational, cultural, vocational, and recreational program of its college.

The central aim of a Christian college is to educate men and women to become disciplined Christians who have an unshakable faith in Christ, and through whose radiant lives flows the redemptive love of God. The world is waiting for those who will again turn it upside down. The weak goodwill of conventional Christians has proved ineffective against the evils of our day. Today the Christian college must develop men and women whose confidence in the spiritual forces of the universe will remain intact amidst the crash of empires and the destruction of the material world about them, and whose goodwill and love will eventually overcome the evil forces of our world instead of being intimidated and conquered by them. Such persons will realize that they must first endeavor to be good, before they busy themselves about trying to do good.

However, goodness needs to be sustained by knowledge and thought. It is possible to be kind without being intelligent, but kindness based upon stupidity may in the end do harm as well as good. Our minds were given to us for use; failure to train and discipline them is not an indication of goodness, but merely a sign of mental laziness. A Christian college should encourage its students to use their minds effectively and creatively. A Christian in the small interrelated world of today needs a wide knowledge, but knowledge is not enough; with it must come understanding of more than one field and more than one class or race of people in order that he may come to recognize the essential unity of all creation. Above all a true education should give an individual perspective. That is, it should give him a long view, so he can see the events of his day not only in their relation to the present and to himself, but also in their relation to the past, to the future and to other individuals. This should enable him to realize that violence is not the ultimate force in the universe, and that what at the moment appears to be defeat may in the verdict of history prove to have been the only true victory.

A Christian college also has a duty to pass on to its students the cultural heritage of the past and to tie it to our present-day situation. It should instill in them a love of and an appreciation for the great and the beautiful in literature, music, and art. Then the cheap, the shoddy, and the trivial will hold no appeal for them.

The liberal arts college is primarily concerned with teaching its students how to live, yet, the world being such as it is, young people attending the college need training which will prepare them for a vocation in order that they may earn a living after they leave college. The college should assist its students in the selection of their life work so that they may make an intelligent choice, one fitted to their abilities. Naturally, it cannot, in all cases, give its students training for a specific occupation, but it can prepare them for further training.

During the war we read glowing accounts of the amount of leisure man would enjoy once the war was won. We are still too close to the war to determine whether these predictions will come true. However, this freedom from work may not prove to be an un-mixed blessing, unless people are trained to use it wisely; otherwise it may be wasted on recreation which does not renew spirit, mind, and body. The many commercial amusements of our day vie with each other to gain the time and attention of the public. In the hands of the all powerful state the mass media of entertainment have proved to be effective weapons for keeping the populace amused and for controlling its thinking, or rather preventing it from thinking. A Christian college should educate the young people on its campus to select their entertainments with discrimination and to engage in those beneficial recreational activities which will be available to them after they leave its halls.

If these are some of the spiritual, educational, cultural, vocational, and recreational aims of a Christian college, what part can the library play in helping the college achieve its objectives?

The courses in Bible are designed to meet the spiritual needs of the students; to be meaningful they must be interpreted by those who teach them. Although the instructors are most influential in directing the thinking of the students, the books in the college library can add much to the depth of the students' spiritual insights. Through books the students have access to the thoughts of the great Bible scholars of all the ages. In them they can read about the lives of the saints and their impact upon the world; they can follow the current trends in religious thinking and understand the deep convictions that motivate sincere and earnest Christians who today are trying to rethink Christ's life and his teachings in their application to the problems of the twentieth century.

In the last twenty years the theory and philosophy of higher education have been the subject of much study and investigation. As a result the content, form, and method of college education have been re-examined and changed. These changes are reflected in the curriculum and teaching methods of the colleges, through the introduction of survey courses, honors courses, individual projects, term papers, and comprehensive examinations. For this type of education the use of a single textbook is no longer sufficient; instead, a student must use many additional books which he will find in his college library. Here he has contact not only with the thought of one period, one nation, one class, or one race, but of all ages and all peoples. Wide reading in many books outside his textbooks will give a student a perspective which he cannot gain by reading the views of only one person. The material in the library should represent all sides of any vital question. By reading extensively a student should be able, under direction, to weigh the evidence from different points of view, and to reach his own conclusions, for whether or not he shall wring from life its meaning depends ultimately upon his own decision.

The cultural heritage of the past is available to the college student in the library. Here he can have access to the noblest thoughts of the great, the wise, the gifted, and the joyous of all ages.

To meet the vocational needs of the students, the library should contain books in the various fields for which the college prepares its students. Also books on occupations so the students may learn about the opportunities open to them in the world today.

Reading is one use of leisure time which people of all ages may enjoy. The youth who learns to derive pleasure from reading while he is in college will have a means of enjoyment to which he can turn all the days of his life. In this respect reading is superior to some other activities which engage the college student's time, for some of these will no longer be open to him after he leaves the college campus. Yet, William S. Gray in his The Reading Interests and Habits of Adults found that not one person in two ever reads any books at all. The average American seldom reads anything besides newspapers and cheap periodicals; unfortunately few college graduates are above the average in this respect. This may partly explain why we as a nation are so immature in many of our ideas. Such reading fails to give the reader any basis for thinking independently and sanely upon current economic, social, and political problems. Newspapers express opinions of current affairs, but too often their views are biased. We talk and write glibly about our freedom of the press, but how free is our press? How fairly are all sides represented in any newspaper? For example, how fair is the average newspaper to labor? Or to the Negro? The cheap magazines may provide harmless recreation, but too often it is not entirely harmless; or if it is not definitely harmful, it is at least a waste of time. A reader who drugs his mind with this kind of reading cannot develop the ability to discriminate between the false and the true, the good and the bad. It is the responsibility of the college to teach its students how to make intelligent use of the printed page, and to encourage them to form discriminating and lasting reading habits. To this end the college library can make a definite contribution by supplying the right type of books and magazines for the students' general reading, and by making them readily accessible to the students.

To achieve its objective the library must have sufficient funds at its disposal to build up a book collection which is adequate to meet the needs of the teaching staff and the students. Upon the librarian falls the responsibility to see that these books are selected and acquired, and to administer them so that their content shall be available to those who require it. The library in a college should be an integral part of the instructional program, instead of a mere storehouse of books as it has been too often in the past. This requires a library building which makes ample provision for the following functions:

- (1) The acquiring, cataloging, classifying, and shelving of the book collection.
- (2) The efficient and rapid production of books and information needed by the students and the faculty.
- (3) The provision of quiet and attractive rooms for reading and study, with books easily accessible; and connected with conference rooms for faculty and student consultation.
- (4) The provision of space for independent and group study.

Let Your Light So Shine...

From Florence Auernheimer, who is supervisor of seventeen rooms of pre-school children at Tule Lake War Relocation Center, Newell, California, comes the following interesting report of how some Japanese Americans fared when they returned to their home community:

Many interesting letters come to us from those who have relocated. Most of them are encouraging, relating only pleasant contacts made on the outside. . . I must tell you about a girl who relocated in Chicago. She found a good job and soon had friends all about her. Her mother, still in camp wanted to return to their small farm near Hoodriver, Oregon. The girl finally gave up her good job and together with her family returned to their ranch. In relating her first visit to the grocery store she said she went in fear and trembling not knowing what to do in case she was refused any groceries. However to her surprise and relief the manager came up and asked if she wanted any bananas today! Her little sister attends the public school, the teacher of which must be a wonderful character. When rumors were about that some Japanese Americans were returning one of the mothers whispered to the teacher one morning, "What are you going to do when the Japanese come back?"

The teacher answered, "What are you whispering for? What would Jesus Christ do?"

Later, when there were some returned Japanese American pupils in her school the teacher was asked by some mother, "How do you like your Japanese pupils? Are they causing any trouble? Would you like to get rid of them?"

The teacher answered calmly, "In America we don't make any difference. We accept all the pupils. But if I were given a choice to choose to get rid of some of the trouble makers, it wouldn't include any of my new pupils."

Pastoral Visitation Program to C.P.S. Camps and Units

In this the second article on things relating to the Visitation Program there are three or four points that bear attention and emphasis. On account of the shortage of men available to make the visitation, as explained in the first article, it will be impossible to visit the local churches after the camps and hospital units have been visited. The churches, however, have an opportunity to get direct contact and information from C.P.S. men direct if they follow the suggestions given below.

Work Hours Shortened for C.P.S. Men

The Selective Service Board shortened the work hours per week from forty-eight and, in some cases, fifty-two hours, to forty. This is in conformity to the work hours as set by the Federal Government. With the coming of V-J Day, came another advantage, gas rationing was lifted.

Arrange for Church and Conference Programs

The peace committees from the various district conferences, it is hoped, will take these two points into consideration and contact the local churches and assist them in making contacts with camps and hospital and other units, for programs in churches and conferences by C.P.S. men. It is a well known fact that fine talent is to be found in every group either as quartets or choruses, and some of the men will also be glad to come to local churches. Local churches are also encouraged to arrange for programs.

Slides Showing C.P.S. Work and Church History

A number of slide sets are ready that can be used to present a program in local churches, showing the kind of work that our young men are rendering "for conscience sake." The church history slides are full of interesting facts that will help all our people to appreciate the Mennonite Church and her principles. For details contact the Educational Secretary, Mr. Elmer Ediger, Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pa.

Bible Study

Ephesians, especially chapters 4, 5, and 6 have been selected as the basis for a united Bible study in all the camps and units. "Unity in the Church" is one of the main themes of this epistle, and "Jews and Gentiles are One in Christ" is a second point that cannot be missed even in a casual reading. Paul spent his efforts as a missionary teaching that Gentiles could be Christian without becoming Jewish proselytes. While he maintained stoutly that Gentiles should stand firm for their liberty in Christ, he warned them that they should not be prejudiced against their Jewish fellow Christians, but to regard them kindly as brothers in Christ.

Because of circumstances today, it is well for us as Mennonites to get the Biblical teaching on Unity in Christ. It is hoped that churches will also encourage their members in service in other branches than C.P.S. to study Paul's Epistle to the Ephesians. By all studying this part of Scripture we cannot fail but be drawn close together and to Christ who is the center of all our faith.

See the outline for Ephesians which follows this article. It may be used as material for expository sermons and studies in our churches.

Inspirational Meeting, October 3-4

In order to work as a unit and all get the same attitude toward their task of visitation, all workers gathered in Chicago on October 3-4. The program permitted much time for united prayer and Bible study. There was also a sharing of experiences from last year's visitation. In order to refresh for the men the historic background of Mennonitism, Dr. Harold Bender, Goshen College, delivered a lecture on "The Anabaptist Vision." Other speakers presented different subjects related to the task in hand.

The Committee of the United Boards kindly asks your prayer support for this important work. —The United Boards of General Conference.

Theme: CHRIST, THE BOND OF PEACE

I. Our Common Calling in Christ—the Basis For This Bond (chaps 1-3)

A. The Greeting (1:1, 2)

B. Arises out of a common source (1:3-23)

This section reveals as it were the heart of God and the heart of a man united in the effort of making real to a group of Christians the eternal, dynamic, and all-inclusive impact of the blessings of Christianity.

1. The heart of God (1:3-14)

The blessings of Christianity flow from the very heartsprings of the Universe. They are absolutely comprehensive in time and eternity; there is no spiritual need of man for which the Christian faith does not have a corresponding blessing. In other words Christianity is God's appointed religion for the world, and is as timeless as God himself. Note carefully how every blessing has its source in the nature of God. Imagine what this statement of faith may have meant to any Ephesians who were floundering around in pagan philosophies.

2. Through the heart of a Man (1:15-23)

The prayer of Paul at this point is a human source for this calling in the sense that through prayer humanity becomes an instrument in establishing the common calling. Note how the prayer grows out of the previous blessings. What is the prominent petition? Examine the cluster of words related to knowing and also to power. Think of how this would appeal to the Greek mind which stressed that knowledge is power. In how far is this true from a Christian standpoint?

Wang Shu Ying -- Unassuming, Talented, Deep Thinker

Miss Wang Shu Ying (or as we would say: Shu Ying Wang) came to the special attention of our Mennonite Mission (General Conference) in China when she with her one sister and three brothers lost both of their parents within a short period of time. Shu Ying was the youngest of the five.

The lot of these children would indeed have been a tragic one had Christ not been preached in this area. Through the missionaries her parents both got acquainted with the Saviour.

Wang Shu Ying

no relatives, who might (?) have shown sympathy.

The Lord laid it upon the heart of the missionary in charge of the funeral to load the five children on the springless cart with him and bring them to Kaichow. The boys were put into the Boys' school, and the girls were brought to the single missionary's home. Shyly they stood there—the older one so sad, realizing to some extent the loss that was theirs and the loneliness of the road ahead. The younger one, Shu Ying, with round eyes sort of passively viewed the surroundings.

The girls needed more care and so were put into the Girls' Orphanage at Tsao Hsien, where the Krimmer Mennonite Mission was working. Here they remained a couple of years, after which they were again brought back to Kaichow to attend our Missions Girls' school, Lower Primary as well as the Upper Primary. The missionary superintendents of these schools were asked to be guardian over these girls.

Both girls: Shu Ying, which means "Brave Loyalty" or "Virtue" and Shu Lan (Blue Orchid) graduated in due time from both primary schools. Then both were sent to Shunteh to attend the Industrial school there. Here they not only received a good training in Christian Home Management but also received a good Bible course. Both graduated. During the summer months they were given a chance to study English and music.

The older girl, Shu Lan entered the Nurses' training course at our Kaichow Hospital. She graduated and married one of the male nurses, and the two established a fine Christian home both continuing with their profession.

Shu Ying (Miss Esther Pauline Wang) entered the Junior High School at Suchow, Honan. After her graduation there she entered the Senior High School at Sin Yang Chow, Honan. One was a Presbyterian Mission School and the other a Lutheran Mission School. Esther Pauline graduated from the last named school in spring of 1937. In both schools she was well liked by students as well as teachers. She was reported to be a diligent student, capable and dependable. Her behaviour was always that of modest gentle dignity.

When the Japanese attacked China in summer of 1937 (July 7) Shu Ying was much distressed. She loved her country and her people. The students all had such high hopes for their country, which during the last ten years had made such wonderful strides toward improvements along all lines: political, educational, industrial, medical and religiously. She was especially interested in the Christian Movement.

For a while she had hesitated whether to take up the medical profession or the theological course. But then the war came and obscured all her future, but it did not suppress her spirit. With us she fled out of our area southward. We hoped she would find a refuge with one of her older brothers and family. But her active spirit could not remain idle. She wandered back to her school at Sin Yang Chow, Honan. Then when the enemy approached this city, she with other students trekked to Kweilin. Here she taught in mission schools a while and also in government orphanages. Gradually she with other students trekked on. On by foot, at intervals on wheelbarrows, richshas, springless carts, on boats across river and lakes westward until she finally reached Chengtu. Here she sought for a Christian school and found one in the West China Union Theological College. Our mission helped her with tuition, board and lodging. In the winter of 1940 she had a serious kidney stone operation. She made a marvelous recovery and saw in it the Lord's hand as did also her physician.

In spring of 1941 our means of communication with her was cut off. Not only that but our funds were so low that we could no more support students. We had much concern about our students there, for we had a few others who also had fled west.

God opened in sympathy the heart of missionaries in West China. In particular do we owe much to one Baptist missionary who helped her get through school. The missionary often had to sell some valued personal things in order to meet the need. But she felt the young woman was worthy of this help. In a letter to me this missionary had the following to say about Miss Wang:

"Miss Wang Shu Ying has done extra fine work. She carried on my work. I shall be sorry to lose her until I return, but of course further study is necessary. She was such a joy to help, and always showed appreciation. So if your Board can help her it will be a fine contribution. She never did ask me for a cent. Always said she did not need it when the dean would tell me her need—indeed an unusual young woman. I cannot express all she will mean as a Christian young woman to China."

In a later letter she reiterates her high regard of her as follows: "Miss Wang Shu Ying is a fine Christian woman. She is now carrying on my work at our Baptist Church. But she makes it very plain in her heart and future plans she longs for her home and own mission. I do hope her hopes will materialize."

"Her school expenses were high, but she always worked,—I believe in the library,—and she received compensation, an appreciable sum for extras. I gave to supply her need although it meant selling some articles, which I didn't need anyway. And, a soul is more valuable than material things."

Changes in Young People's Program

Corrections on the program for the Young People's Program of the Western District Conference that was printed in the October 3rd Mennonite are: The offertory will be played by Meribeth Nachtigal. Elizabeth Claassen, student at Bethel and one who has had wide experience in the teaching field and mental hospital work will speak on "Christian Growth in Home and School."

"She was always so lady-like and never seemed to go off on a tangent as so many sometimes do. When I asked her to assume leadership as superintendent of the Children's Department she only said: 'I'll try, I may not do so well.' But she did do well and is still doing well. It always was such a pleasure to help her. When your mission could not help her anymore, the Dean approached me with such high recommendations of Shu Ying that it was a pleasure to help."

I found Shu Ying to be all that this missionary wrote me. She was a quiet unassuming woman, talented and a deep thinker. Even as a child one would not help but respect her. She is responsible for the Women's Evangelistic work, as well as of the Children's work. She covets for a greater faith and greater strength. Miss Wang is one of our own. We are grateful to God that we have the privilege to know her and co-operate with her in our prayers for a great service for "our Lord" as she always writes. In the Lord we are of one family, and the Chinese covet this bond of fellowship. So let us in love extend our hand in fellowship of prayer for her and our entire field.

Sincerely, Aganetha Helen Fast

Outline of Ephesians

Why is Christ essential and not merely incidental in Christian thought? Note carefully in this chapter any changes in person as far as the grammar is concerned and its bearing upon the truths involved.

C. Wrought by a common redemption (2:1-10)

The larger part of chapter one is timeless in its outlook; this chapter beholds the results in time of God's plan and working in Christ. This first section of two shows how all humanity, Jew and Gentile alike, are ministered to by a common redemption in Christ—a redemption based on the love and grace of God and not any worthiness of man. Why does the author interchange the second and first personal pronouns? According to this section what place do works have in the redemption of man? Imagine what an impact this message had on a culture in which immoral practices were a part of the ceremony of religion itself.

D. Intends us for a common destiny (2:11-22)

Another present result of the common calling in Christ is the uniting of the human race for a common destiny. There was a strong race problem among the ancients and to no small extent among the Jews as they thought of their Gentile neighbors. The power of the cross crushed the isolationism of the old legalism—a legalism which was largely a false interpretation of God's laws. In Christ every race becomes an integral part of the plan for God's temple in the world—a temple that is destined to become the spiritual home of the human race. (Cp. Isaiah 2) Study the figures of speech in the light of the culture of Ephesus. Contrast this account of the inclusive character of Christianity and the esoteric exclusive character of the Mystery Religions as well as Judaism and Gnosticism.

E. Bestows a common heritage (3:1-13)

With each allusion to the Gentiles the purpose of the writer is clearer. How is the purpose of the writer brought out in the brief testimony in the first verse? The Gentiles are here seen as sons having also an inheritance. Why should Paul call this concept of world-wide sharing in the blessings of this calling a mystery? Some one has said that the receiving of Gentile Christians into the fellowship of the Jewish Christian church in apostolic times was comparable to an adjustment in which negroes would be accepted in every instance on the same plane with the white race in America today. This is a first century blast at race prejudice.

F. Unites in a common fellowship (3:14-21)

The thought of the first part of the chapter is so profound that Paul's teaching turns into a prayer—a prayer to God in behalf of the whole human family here and yonder. Compare this prayer with the other prayer especially the order and nature of the petitions. What is the high point in this prayer and what is its relation to the section and the theme of the book as a whole?

Summary suggestions: Trace the various lines of thought to this point: the power of God, the knowledge of God, the love of God, the unity of the human race, the indwelling Christ, faith, and the power of prayer. What ethical implications are evident in this section?

RELIEF

Shipments to Europe

A five-ton shipment of clothing was sent during the past week from the M.C.C. Canadian Office at Kitchener to England where it will be consigned to the Continent, likely Holland. In the United States twelve tons of clothing for France and seventeen tons for Holland are waiting for shipment as soon as space is allotted. Also waiting to be sent are two tons of soap for France, two tons for Holland, and 3,400 pairs of shoes for Holland.

Active Interest in Wheat and Flour for Relief

The inquiries indicating interest in contributing wheat and flour for relief have been increasing. To date there are in prospect for early shipment approximately fifteen carloads. Most of this is flour, since flour is preferred to whole wheat because of difficulties in having wheat milled in Europe at present. Shipment of flour is being made in 100 lb. cotton bags. Labels for these bags are available upon request from the Akron Office. Each bag should be labelled to identify the flour as a Mennonite contribution thus facilitating transfer to our own distributing organizations in Europe.

We have received special consideration from government agencies for our relief food contributions on the basis that our people produce what they contribute. This factor should be kept in mind in all phases of our food program.

Meat Processing Season is Here

Although canned fruit and vegetables will fill a very useful place in the relief feeding program, the heart of the "Food for Relief" Program is meats and fats. These are the most needed foods we can give. With the coming of cool weather, meat processing for relief should receive a great deal of attention among our people.

Canada Wholeheartedly Supports Canning Program

The call to the Canadian churches for an active participation in the canning for relief program has been well received and the support which many churches are giving is very encouraging. Reports are reaching the Canadian office from various parts of Canada, some expressing regret that due to circumstances beyond their control they can not participate in the program, while others tell of as high as a thousand or more quarts already canned and more to be ready later.

Even the scarcity of sugar has not discouraged the efforts of some. One Ontario church collected enough sugar to cook five hundred quarts of jam. A second church reports the collection of 240 pounds of sugar for the first night's canning and that the supply which was used during the first evening was replenished by the second evening.

Collection Centers Being Opened in Western Canada

In order not to lose further time to collect and prepare for overseas shipment the many thousands of quarts of canned food for relief, C. J. Rempel of the M.C.C. Canadian Office is now in Western Canada to arrange with the local church leaders and committees for the opening of suitable buildings where the food may be gathered for government inspection and crating for overseas shipment. A great deal of work is involved and cooperation from the various districts will be needed to complete this work.

Workers Arrive in France

The five M.C.C. relief workers—Elsie Bechtel, Mary Miller, Evelyn Egli, Beulah Roth, and Ella Schmidt—who sailed from New York September 14, have arrived in France and were in Paris by September 22, according to a cable from the Mennonite office in Paris. They proceeded at once to Chalon-sur-Saone, a city about sixty miles north of Lyon, where the M.C.C. Headquarters in France is now located.

Relief Conditions in Italy

The Akron office has been informed that there are now four Mennonite relief workers serving in Italy in UNRRA's Italian Mission. They are Delvin Kirchhofer, Bertha Fast, Esther Detweiler, and Grace Augsburg. A recent letter from Bertha Fast contains the following report:

"As far as modern Rome and the rest of Italy is concerned, I am again convinced that war brings with it only suffering and accent on a wrong way of business and living. The black market flourishes all over Italy; prices are terribly high—$40 for an inferior pair of shoes, $50 for a dress that would cost $15 at home. The common, necessary article of thread is $1.50 a spool. Toothpaste and a good soap can only be gotten on the black market for about the same price. Who can answer the question as to how the thousands of poor people manage to live? I can't. It is such a weighty problem that I try to dismiss it from my mind."

Relief Briefs

S. F. Pannabecker and P. P. Baltzer are scheduled to leave Calcutta for China during the last week in September.

Orie Miller has been detained in England due to the extreme difficulty in securing passage to the states.

C. F. Klassen left London, September 19, to investigate the situation of displaced Russian Mennonites in British-Occupied Germany.

C. P. S.

Demobilization of C. P. S. Men

After consultation of Selective Service and the National Service Board for Religious Objectors with Congressmen Winstead, Kilday, and Sparkman, it was agreed that Selective Service would proceed with a "systematic release of conscientious objectors from C. P. S. camps and units on a basis of age, length of service, dependency and hardships."

The first step in this system of discharge is being taken by calling for the physical examination, preparatory to release, of all assignees over thirty-eight and men between thirty-five and thirty-eight who have had two years of service. At the same time further lists of names are being processed based on length of service, dependency, and hardship.

Henry E. Nachtigal, C. P. S. assignee serving at Western State Hospital, Staunton, Virginia, died at his home at Inman, Kansas, September 1, after an extended illness resulting from a brain tumor. He was a member of the Hopeview General Conference Mennonite Church.

Joseph Kulp, assignee at the Camino, California, Camp, was killed September 19 in a truck accident. Several other members of the same camp were injured. Joseph was at home at Nappanee, Indiana, and was a member of the Salem Mennonite Church.

These deaths are the twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth in C. P. S. and the thirteenth and fourteenth in Mennonite camps.

MENNONITES THE WORLD OVER

By Cornelius Krahn

A detailed and reliable report on the conditions of the Mennonite congregations in Germany has reached us. This is the first report of the Vereinigung der Mennonitengemeinden im Deutschen Reich. We shall report the main events and conditions of the congregations.

Hamburg: This congregation has about 350 members. Since the minister is very likely a prisoner of war, his wife is taking care of the congregation. This congregation had one of the most modern and up-to-date church buildings, it being completed just before World War I. The main chapel, rooms for religious instruction, library, parsonage, etc., is one complex of buildings of which a number were severely damaged. The report from this church states: "We may gratefully say that church life has survived relatively well the many air attacks." Their Evangelical-Lutheran neighbors who have lost their church are meeting in this church also. That the Mennonite church buildings of Hamburg are not completely destroyed is likely due to the fact that the church was not located in the heart of the city.

Emden: Before the end of the war this church had sent in a report: "No more church building, no school, no administration, no baker shop, no stores, no gas, no water, no light, etc." The minister of this church was bombed out repeatedly and lost two sons.

Gronau is an industrial city in which Mennonites were the leading textile manufacturers. Both the textile industry and the Mennonite church have been ruined by air attacks.

Krefeld: The Mennonite church of Krefeld is the mother of American Mennonitism. From here the first thirteen families came to found Germantown. The Krefeld Mennonite Church has a membership of eight hundred. The pastor, who just returned from being a prisoner of war, has sent out invitations to his flock to hear his first lecture on "The Power of Christianity." He is trying to gather his congregation and is starting catechetical instruction. The old venerable buildings of the congregation—orphange, parsonage, and church,—in which even Terstegen preached, were completely destroyed. The Mennonites are meeting in the Lutheran Church. The pastor estimates that reconstruction of the buildings would cost $450,000.

This picture shows the Mennonite Church of Hamburg-Altona. On the left is the parsonage. Included is a library, a room for other gatherings, and the home of the care-taker. The building was completed in 1915. The church has been damaged during the war. See article.—Cut Courtesy "Mennonite Weekly Review."

Palatine-Hessian Area: The ministers of the congregations of Sembach and Weirhof have not yet returned from their services in the army. The congregations of Ludwigshafen and Monsheim have suffered severely under bomb attacks. The minister of Ibersheim visited a number of Mennonite churches on a six-day trip by foot. He was supported in "all possible ways" by the American occupying forces. This pastor is anxiously awaiting the return of his sons.

Berlin: This congregation has suffered severely from air raids. The chairman of the church was killed, and the report does not mention the young minister who was in the army. The leader of the congregation lost his two sons.

Elbing, Danzig, Koenigsberg: About this Russian occupied territory the report is scant. The pastor of Elbing is reported to be in Holstein "Like he, individual members of our West Prussian congregations have reappeared, but nothing is known as yet about the majority of those who fled and of the thousands who stayed behind. . ." Previously we have heard in his country that a large number of the 10,000 Mennonites of these congregations were evacuated and are now located in Denmark.

The Fate of the Mennonites from Russia: This report estimates that some twenty to thirty-thousand Mennonites of the Ukraine were moved westward in the fall of 1943 with the retreating German army. First they were taken into camps in Prussia, Silesia, and Germany proper. Then in winter in 1945 when the Russian army broke through they moved westward again. Families were broken up; some were overtaken by the Russians; many perished. "They are living under pitiful conditions; misunderstood, in spite of naturalization continually in fear of being recalled to go eastward; anxious for missing relatives; in the uncertain hope to be able to join at least their relatives in Canada."

East or West? For us here it is one problem among many others, but for those twenty to thirty-thousand Mennonites from Russia it is a matter of life and death to be sent back east or to be privileged to go west. And yet it will be a miracle if the majority of them would actually be permitted to come to the Americas. The Russians insist that people born in Russia should be returned, and the local German authorities are eager to reduce the number of mouths to be fed. If the American and British occupational forces do not find a westward outlet for them their fate is sealed. One of them puts it this way: "It would be too terrible if our misfortune would be crowned with this yet." The writer of this report, a German Mennonite, does not ask for help for his own congregations, but he appeals to the American Mennonites to do everything possible to save the lives of the remnant of the Russian Mennonites who have suffered beyond description for an entire generation.

"Time" Writes: "Berlin was getting ready for the winter. Quickly, before the earth froze over, shovel squads were digging extra graves—for some 100,000 Berliners expected to die of hunger and cold, or to commit suicide."

The Christian Church Answers: "Because of a fear that at least 13,000,000 Germans must die before winter 'if nothing is done', "English church leaders are sponsoring a movement for a further voluntary cut in the already restricted British ration to help starving Germany. (Christian Century, Oct. 3) How do we respond?"

Holland: The ADS (General Conference of the Holland) sent out an appeal to its congregations. It is reported that the congregations of Rotterdam, Middleburg, Aardenburg, Arnhem, Wageningen, Zutphen, Deventer, The Hague, and Nijmegen and the retreat camps of Schoorl and Elspeet etc., had suffered so severely that only through combined effort could reconstruction be attempted. Therefore the Executive Committee appeals to all the congregations and church members to contribute to the "Emergency Fund" of the ADE.

MARY AND HENRY TOEWS HAVE ARRIVED IN THE CONGO

Elizabethville, Congo
September 7, 1945

Rev. P. H. Richert
Newton, Kansas

Finally we have arrived in Congo. By Sunday, the Lord willing, we expect to arrive at Lubondai—Central School. There we will leave our children and then we shall hasten on to Nyanga Station. We thank God for his sustaining Grace through almost three months of travel on the dusty land and the stormy sea. Our trip has been very interesting if not always pleasant.

Already we're meeting natives with whom some of the missionaries can converse. The prospects of this term of service challenge us to consecrate ourselves to the task which lies ahead.

Yours in His Service,
(signed) Mary and Henry Toews

P. S. We have sent reports of our trip to Rev. C. E. Rediger.

COLLEGE NEWS

FREEMAN JUNIOR COLLEGE

Miss Kathryn Kaufman

At the last meeting of the Freeman Junior College Corporation one new member was elected to the Board of Trustees, while two were re-elected. The new member is Andrew R. Wollman of Menno, while Adolph L. Waltner and Rev. Martin Kroeker were re-elected. The Corporation has given its consent to make plans for the construction of a new gymnasium - auditorium when funds are available. The old gym will then be used for a much needed industrial shop building.

Rev. Louis Linscheid spent the week-end in the Black Hills serving the Hill City C.P.S. Camp twice on Sunday.

Miss Kathryn Kaufman joined the staff this fall as instructor in English and Speech. Miss Kaufman will also have charge of forensics and dramatics. She is a graduate of the Academy (Class of '22), Spearfish Normal, and this past summer was granted her master's degree in Speech at Northwestern University.

BETHEL COLLEGE

To supplement her classroom teaching in the Child Guidance course, Mrs. Eva Harshbarger has arranged for a nursery school of campus pre-school children for observation and study by her class for six weeks. The Bethel Collegian is being put out twice monthly by the evening class in Journalism this year under Mr. Eldon Graber. Katherine Linscheid (North Newton), editor, and her chief assistants were elected previously by the Student Council. Among the especially active organizations in these opening weeks of school has been the Student Council, with Melvin Boehr, Henderson, Nebraska, president. Composed of ten students and the three Deans, it serves as a "student governing council with responsibility for encouraging proper conduct." It also supervises student organizations and week-end recreation, and in various ways endeavors to orient the students to the traditions and spirit of Bethel.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

Five churches in Central Illinois cooperated in canning 184 No. 10 cans of fruit and vegetables for the college. The canning was done at the Pekin cannery, women from the various churches donating and preparing the food for canning. In addition home canning for the college has been done. Some churches will again have Harvest Home days for the college. President Ramseyer and Prof. Paul Shelly are cooperating in the C.P.S. camp visitation program of the Home Mission Board of the General Conference. Dr. C. Henry Smith is teaching a course in Mennonite History in the Mennonite Biblical Seminary in addition to his work at Bluffton. Home coming will be observed on October 13. Alumni, students, and faculty are cooperating in arranging the program for the day. The following day, Sunday, will be Parents' Day, featured by a Vesper service in the afternoon and a reception for students and their parents.

THE MENNONITE SEMINARY AND BIBLE SCHOOL

The schools look forward with great anticipation toward the formal opening celebration on Thursday, October 4, at 7:30 p.m. That is to be a special evening of dedication, consecration and prayer. We pray that the inspiration from that meeting will spread into our churches and that friends everywhere will join in devotion and prayer before Almighty God that our schools be completely surrendered to Him and our Lord Jesus Christ. A. Warkentin, 3435 Van Buren, Chicago 24, Illinois.

JOTTINGS

—General H. H. Arnold has looked into the future and "predicted an awesome Buck Rogers-Flash Gordon age of air power, with pilotless planes soaring into the stratosphere or ionosphere and dropping on defenseless cities half a world away." So reports O. T. Otto Nall.

—Wichita, Kansas: "Two called meetings of the Wichita Ministerial Association and several committee meetings of local church leaders have been held here recently to consider the relationships of churches to the Youth for Christ movement. Much praise has been given to the movement by those impressed with the fact it gives the high school-age group an alternative to undesirable types of recreation."

—Miss Ruth Hilty, a member of Grace Mennonite Church, Pandora, Ohio, who has been working at M.C.C. headquarters in Akron, Pa., is scheduled to be sent to Holland to carry on relief work under the M.C.C. early in October. Miss Hilty recently spoke to the congregation at an evening service.—Corr.

—Freeman, South Dakota: Dr. E. G. Kaufman of North Newton, Kansas, gave an inspiring message at the South Church Sunday morning (September 23) on the subject "We Build." Rev. John Suderman spoke there on Sunday afternoon, about mission work among the Indians in Arizona, where he has worked for many years and where he is now going.—"Freeman Courier"

—Martin Schrag, who has been education Director of the C.P.S. Camp at Fort Collins, Colorado, has transferred to Belton, Montana.

—Berne, Indiana: A group of women from the local Mennonite Church held a vegetable soup canning bee on September 26. The vegetables were prepared at the home of Mrs. Clovis Oberli, and the canning was done in the Liechty Cannery. Over one thousand No. 2 cans were filled, and enough cabbage was left over to make twelve gallons of sour kraut. Various people contributed vegetables, but the chief amounts came from Mr. and Mrs. Menno P. Eicher. The canned goods will be sent to Civilian Public Service Camps.

Herold Church, Bessie, Oklahoma: Plans are under way for the construction of a church basement. The church holds two offerings annually for Bethel College. The shipment of wheat for relief is being stressed. The mid-week Bible study provides for three age groups: children, young people, and older people. A recent bulletin had this note: "No service tonight? No, not tonight. Make this 'Visiting Night.' May we suggest that you call on some family with whom you have never visited before, or invite some family that has never visited at your home before." On September 4 "sixteen sisters met at the D. A. Harms' home and from 10 a. m. till 6 p. m. canned ten bushels of peaches, for a total of 244 quarts of sauce and jam for Relief and C.P.S. The Mission Society bought the peaches and sponsored the project."

—Rev. Victor Sawatzky served the First Church, Hutchinson, Kansas, for the past two Sundays. Rev. Sawatzky, former pastor of the Mennonite Church, north of Butterfield, Minnesota, is now attending Bethel College.

—Miss Aganetha Fast, who is visiting C.P.S. camps, will leave the Denison, Iowa, camp on October 10 for the Medaryville, Indiana, camp.

—West Zion Church, Moundridge, Kansas: The second Wednesday night Round-table Discussion will be held on October 10. Prof. Willis Rich and Dr. Melvin Gingerich will lead the discussion on "Rebuilding the Broken World."

—"The Moundridge Community has undertaken a project of relief for Europe. The Moundridge Milling Company offered to mill two carloads of flour free for relief if the people would donate the wheat for that purpose. Sixteen different churches of the community were contacted and asked to send representatives to a meeting in the City Hall to discuss plans for a relief project. It was decided to undertake the project and a committee was elected to sponsor it. Both wheat and donations of money were to be accepted. In the first week the community had responded with 5,700 bushels of wheat and $1,950 in cash donations. It is hoped that the goal of 10,000 bushels will be reached."

Invitation to Minister's Conference

We invite all ministers and deacons and their wives to attend the Western District Minister's Conference to be held at the Walton Mennonite Church, Walton, Kansas, October 16, beginning at 10 A.M.—The Walton Mennonite Church, Ronald von Riesen, Pastor.

the women of the Eastern and Middle Districts, the Central Conference, and the Defenseless Church, will be held November 14 and 15 on the Bluffton College Campus, Bluffton, Ohio, in connection with the annual outstanding speakers on foreign mission work, migrant work, and the M.C.C. relief program. The program in detail will be announced later—Mrs. S. W. Steiner, Sec.

—A bulletin of the Lorraine Avenue Church, Wichita, Kansas, lists three items about which members should write to their representatives in Washington. They are: 1. Peacetime conscription. 2. A relief program to feed all the hungry in the war torn countries even if that means the continuation of rationing. 3. Fair employment practice.

—Interesting details on the canning done by the Bethel Church Mountain Lake, Minnesota, during September, are given in a letter written by Miss Helen Nickel to a friend in Newton: Miss Nickel writes: "One hundred fifty-five chickens were brought together. There is a cannery in Lakefield, a town about twenty-five miles from here. Many women go there to have their vegetables and meats canned. There is where we took our chickens. Eight women go along and do the work that there is to do yet. They charge eight and one-half cents a quart can. That is all the expense there is for us. A total of 297 cans were canned. Eighty-eight of them contained soup with rice. The meat is cut off the bones when raw, and a good strong broth is made from the bones. The canning of pork and beef will be started in a few weeks. I believe the Lord is blessing America for this very purpose to help the other nations in their great need. I hope our churches will not miss this great challenge."

—Rev. H. T. Neufeld, Pastor of Bethel Church, Enid, Oklahoma, asks for some sample copies of The Mennonite. Anyone desiring such sample copies may secure them by writing to The Mennonite, North Newton, Kansas.

—First Mennonite Church, Paso Robles, California: Eleven of our young people attended the young people's retreat which was held at Lake Sequoia. Missionaries Rev. and Mrs. Aron Jantzen were with us on September 9. Rev. Jantzen told about the mission work in India. The Mission Society filled thirty-four boxes for M.C.C. relief. Their annual bazaar on September 5 was well attended, and the collection amounted to almost $90. Miss Betty Neufeld, one of our members, is attending Bethel College. Rev. Orlo Kaufman is conducting a Bible study group, which is well attended by the young people.—Corr.

—Fairfield (Pa.) Mennonite Church: "We were glad to have Leonard F. Gaedert and family, formerly of Hutchinson, Kansas, but now of York, Pa., worship with us in our Sunday School and church services this morning. Rev. Stoneback began a series of sermons this morning on "What Jesus Tells Us About God."

—"Points Needing Serious Consideration in a Post-War Adjustment between Returning Service Men and the Church" is the subject of a questionnaire which Rev. Walter H. Dyck of the First Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, has sent to all young men in service (both C. P. S. and military) and to various interested committees of his church and other members especially interested. Questions asked are: 1. What are the main responsibilities our church has to its returning service men? 2. Which of these do you feel our church has neglected? 3. What are the main responsibilities which returning men have to the church? 4. Which of these do you feel our service men have neglected? 5. In what sense may the church (or members at home) be the "prob'em?" 6. Should those who have taken up military service be asked to reaffirm their adherence to the biblical peace position? 7. If not, in what way do you propose that our church maintain a consistent position? 8. In what definite ways should both the returning service men and the church endeavor to show consideration for each other?

—The young people's Fellowship of the First and Second Churches, Beatrice, Nebraska, sent 4 bushels beans, 3 bushels carrots, and 1 bushel onions to the Hill City C.P.S. camp, and 4 bushels beans, 2 bushels corn, and one half bushel of beets, carrots, and onions to the Lincoln C.P.S. units. In addition 110 quarts of beans and 8 quarts of beets were canned for C.P.S. and relief.

—Individual members of Zion Church, Souderton, Pa., have contributed over $2,000 to Bluffton College this summer. The money is to be used for the reduction of the college debt, which now amounts to about $19,000.

—First Church, Aberdeen, Idaho: The Ladies Mission Society recently sent 355 pounds of clothing for European relief, 100 pounds for the Shafter Migrant Camp, aprons and tea towels for C.P.S. camps in California, 12 pair of hose and 3 apron lengths for the mission at Tuba, Arizona.

—Bethel Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: From October 11-19 the pastor Rev. Erland Waltner, will conduct a series of special services at the Bethesda Church, Henderson, Nebraska. J. N. Byler of the M. C. C. will speak at the annual harvest festival, October 28. From November 11-16, Dr. John C. Wenger of the Bible Department of Goshen College, will give a series of Bible lectures in our church. The appeal for the donation of animals for relief canning has already brought a sheep, two hogs, and a heifer. Slaughtering and canning will be done sometime during the latter part of October.

—Elma Esau, M.C.C. relief worker, writes from Amsterdam, Holland: "The coming winter promises to be very busy but interesting. The Peter Dycks and I have been here for more than a month surveying the needs and making acquaintances and contacts among the Dutch Mennonites. Our travels have taken us to churches in Friesland, Gelderland, and Limburg. The destruction in the battle areas along the Rhine and Maas Rivers is terrible, indeed!" WHEAT FLOUR FOR RELIEF

Mennonite communities in various parts of the country have shown a deep interest in contributing wheat or flour for purposes of relief through the Mennonite Central Committee. Various inquiries have come asking whether M.C.C. can forward such shipments.

This is to inform our Mennonite communities that the M.C.C. has completed arrangements for shipping wheat to various relief areas in Europe. It has the necessary priorities to insure shipping space for such donations. M.C.C. is therefore prepared to handle with dispatch carload lots of shipments of wheat.

It is, however, best if such wheat is first milled into flour. It is also advisable that this flour be 85 per cent white flour since Europeans generally are not used to our American white flour.

Communities wishing to gather a carload of wheat flour are asked to organize with some responsible person in charge. This person should communicate with Orle Miller, Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania, informing him that you are collecting a carload of flour for shipment and indicating also how soon you expect to have the shipment ready so that M.C.C. has ample time to complete arrangements to ship the car promptly from your community. M.C.C. in turn will send you such instructions as may be required.

The need in Europe is so staggering that people do not need to worry that they will over-supply Europe with the necessities of life. —Henry A. Fast, for Mennonite Central Committee.

TO THEE, O GOD, OUR HEARTS WE RAISE

Bethel Church, Jagdeeshpur, India, at the time of Harvest Festival

O Lord God Almighty, the Creator and Father of all. We yield thee hearty thanks that thou hast ordained for mankind both seed-time and harvest, and dost now bestow upon us thy children the fruits of the earth in their season. For these and all other of thy mercies we laud and magnify thy glorious name; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen

Beware that thou forget not the Lord thy God, in not keeping his commandments, and his judgments, and his statutes, which I command thee this day;

Lest when thou has eaten and art full, and has built goodly houses, and dwelt therein;

And thou say in thine heart, my power and the might of mine hand hath gotten me this wealth.

But thou shalt remember the Lord thy God for it is he that giveth thee power to get wealth, that he may establish his covenant which he sware unto thy fathers as it is this day.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

Selma Unruh, Tampa, Kansas, Ordained As Missionary

A very impressive ordination service took place at the Friedenstal Church near Tampa, Kansas, on Sunday afternoon, September 14, 1945, when Miss Selma Unruh was ordained as a Christian missionary. Rev. Waldo Harder, minister in charge, led the meeting. Devotionals and a brief message prior to the ordination service were given by Rev. P. H. Richert. Rev. Phil A. Wedel, Pastor of the Alexanderwohl Church, gave his message, basing his remarks on Matthew 4:16, "The people which sat in darkness saw a great light and to them which sat in the region and shadow of death, light is sprung up." After the message, Miss Selma Unruh was formally ordained to the important work of Christian missionary by the officiating minister, Rev. Phil A. Wedel. Miss Unruh spoke briefly on the challenge of the Christian missionary. She related her experiences which led to her call of the Lord for this important work.

During the services excellent choir selections were given by the young people of the Friedenstal congregation. Rev. Dan J. Unruh, also a member of the Foreign Mission Board, gave the closing remarks and led in prayer.

This event proved to be a milestone in the Friedenstal Church. Greater enthusiasm and more sympathetic feeling towards Christian missions were created through these meetings. The Lord willing, Miss Unruh will serve under the auspices of the Congo Inland Mission in Africa. We pray that the Lord may richly bless and guide her to the many souls who are yet in heathen darkness.

This mission festival was continued in an evening service when Rev. P. H. Richert and Rev. P. A. Wedel brought appropriate messages. May the blessings of this day bear much fruit in the kingdom of God.

A luncheon was served by the congregation after the afternoon services for the many guests.

Does the Church See This?

By P. W. Penner

India outside of Burma bosoms 389 millions according to the last census. Of these, 270 millions are Hindus. Population increases about 5% annually. In some sections there are 2,000 per square mile. A good many have turned to Christ since Carey landed in India. Nevertheless many still wait the message to reach them. Roughly speaking, there are now 8 million Christians, 3 million Protestant, the remainder Roman Catholic. There are some-what over 2,000 ordained Indians and some ten thousand officially recognized as ministers to the 21,000 congregations.

DESCRIPTION OF PICTURE ON COVER PAGE

The picture on the cover page shows the Bethel Church, Jagdeeshpur, India, at the time of the harvest festival. The past two years this festival was observed in October or November as well as the regular Thanksgiving Service at Christmas. Last year the collections of these two festivals amounted to about $75. The church is not quite completed. Due to the war, it has been impossible to finish the floor, or put in the concrete screens planned for the windows. Aside from the trusses and the cement asbestos sheeting of the roof, the church was built by the local congregation with substantial aid from our sister churches and missionaries. The next Hindustani Church Conference is to be held here beginning November 30, 1945.—Herbert E. Dester

Some quite alarming facts loom up distressingly. Let us point out a few.

1. Out of a total of 552 native states, only partly under Britain's control, almost 500 are still closed to the Gospel, because the ruler of the state does not wish his people to become Christian. Some of these have not yet been penetrated at all. Out of the 655,000 villages about 500,000 villages have not been as yet reached.

2. Lands to the north of India—Soviet Central Asia with 17 millions, Afghanistan 9 millions, Tibet with 3 millions, Nepal with 6 millions, Bhutan with one fourth million are entirely closed to the Gospel, because of the opposition of their governments to the Word of God. In a certain area of India are living 41 millions who have no resident missionary among them.

3. Only 12% of India's population—47 millions—can read or write. This percentage is a trifle higher among Christians. There are though 14 literacy committees working ardently to make India literary.

4. Across a sub-continent which it takes five days to traverse from north to south one experiences many different types of climate. The worst is the overbearing heat of the desert areas which preclude work at a certain time of the year when precipitation is

JUSTICE for the Germans is regarded by the Allies as one of their important tasks of the present. How pure that justice will be depends upon certain considerations. According to the Christian revelation, the highest kind of justice comes from a God, who is Love. Love rather than hate is the basis for the purest justice. Furthermore, self-righteousness, which in itself indicates a lack of love, greatly blocks the flow of pure justice. Significantly even such an advocate of violence as Reinhold Niebuhr maintains that political controversies are always a case of sinner against sinner and not righteous against sinner. He points out that self-righteousness is "an inevitable concomitant of all human conflict" and that "contrition is an important ingredient in the sense of justice." He says that the Christian conscience failed miserably in restraining vengeance after the first world war and that the self-righteousness of the Allies was the force that led to this vengeance. Furthermore, he pointed out when he wrote about this in 1940, that a great problem facing the Allies at the close of the second world war would be this matter of contrition great enough and deep enough to prevent another miscarriage of justice as had occurred after the first world war. (See Christianity and Power Politics, page 23.) The conclusion of the second world war has come. How much more contrite are the Allies after this war than after the first one? As a sinner nation how many specifically-named sins has the United States acknowledged in itself? To the extent that the United States pulls the beam out of its own eye will it be able to see just how to remove the foreign substance from Germany's eye. Perhaps, God has a reason for claiming vengeance as his own prerogative.

THE PURPOSE OF SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTIONS is perhaps not any too clear in our day. Are they to be held for the purpose of arousing interest in organizing Sunday Schools? Undoubtedly, this factor was once important. Are they to be held for the planning and furtherance of various Christian enterprises already being sponsored by the schools, etc? Or does the primary function of the Sunday School consist in learning the Word of God and worshipping Him? If the last named is held to be primary, then it would seem evident that Sunday School conventions could serve a useful purpose by tackling the problems that our Sunday Schools face in the learning-teaching and worship area. Miss Mary Becker, who has a Master of Religious Education degree and who has made a survey of the young people's program in the Western District, points out in her thesis that it is to be regretted that Sunday School conventions do not give more help for the problems that vex our Sunday Schools. Consequently, it is of interest to notice that one such convention, at least broke down into smaller groups for group conferences, which permit more intimate and specialized discussion of problems (see jottings). Those put on convention programs should be given an opportunity for significant preparation. This might mean surveys to discover problems. Next the individual might make an extensive study relative to the solution of a particular problem. Then meeting with a small group particularly interested in that problem, some helpful solutions might be found. Sunday School conventions should bring the best resources of Religious Education to bear upon our various problems. It is difficult to see how the mass approach can succeed in this. The small, group, problem-solving approach with a leader, who has been trained in religious education would perhaps succeed better.

SMALL CHURCHES generally can not pay their pastors as much as the larger churches can. Since even the larger churches in our conference do not pay high salaries, the amounts paid by the smaller churches in most cases mean financial strain and stress for the pastor. Should the pastors of small churches be penalized in such a way? No wonder that it is jokingly remarked sometimes that ministers are prone to hear the call of God where the salary is the highest. An inadequate salary handicaps the most consecrated minister. And the salaries of the ministers of many of our smaller churches are inadequate. These ministers are handicapped. Perhaps, some way for equalizing the salaries can be found. The Evangelical Church of North Dakota has a plan for equalizing salaries. "If a church can raise only $1,200 and its pastor is entitled to $1,800, missionary money is put in to make up the difference. Some of the stronger churches raise considerably more than their pastor's salaries, so that surplus goes into the mission fund to care for the salaries in weaker churches." It stands to reason that even with the higher salary paid by the larger church, its members will not have to pay as much per capita for ministerial support as do their brethren of a smaller church. Here is one approach to equalizing minister's salaries. Perhaps there are others that might be explored.

A Handicraft Program for the Church

By John F. Schmidt

In a previous issue of The Mennonite Randy Penner wrote of the distinctive contribution to our young men of the program of arts and crafts as now promoted in C.P.S. camps. He is concerned, as many of us are, that the values we have discovered in handicraft may not be lost to the Mennonite Church in the post-war world. Four years ago we had in C. P. S. some tools and some ideas but not leadership or a definite program of arts and crafts. As was seen at the Conference in Newton, men now work with wood, leather, alabaster, plastics, metals, yarn, ceramics and such art mediums as pastello, paints, charcoal, pencil, etc. With extensive equipment and trained leadership practically all campers are now stimulated to engage in some phase of crafts.

Surely such a program ought to be conserved and somehow integrated into the local program of our churches. Craftsmanship provides not only a channel for self-expression and a means of releasing pent-up tensions; it provides also a source of joy and self-confidence resulting from creative activity. In their past history Mennonites have prided themselves in their vocational craftsmanship. As textile workers, city builders and farmers they have prided themselves in workmanship expressive of integrity of character. They have hated sham and cheapness of effort. Thus their farms, homes and businesses have reflected their love of exact, original and honest workmanship. But we are losing much of this pride of achievement and devotion to exactitude. A planned promotion of a program of arts and crafts might help us regain these values.

The suggestion of conducting an annual arts and crafts exhibit seems to me to be excellent. Intelligent promotion would, however, require more. There should be a way in which the church could utilize the skills and leadership capacities of the men now in charge of these activities in the various camps. Would it not be fine if the Conference could employ such a person or persons to work through our schools, our retreats and our local communities in developing cooperative craft groups? Such a person would not only teach crafts but also help in securing the necessary equipment and materials and assist in organizational procedures. Our conferences and churches should, it seems to me, have an opportunity to obtain some of the specialized craft equipment now owned by the M. C. C.

We do need to provide wholesome recreation and creative activity for our people. We also need to cultivate a greater sense of group consciousness and group loyalty among our young people. I believe a crafts program could help us in this direction, besides helping us to grow in patience and genuine humility as we glimpse perfection but fall far short of it. Our Master, too, was a craftsman, a carpenter who learned in the shop in Nazareth to strive for thoroughness and perfection. As a craftsman he took what others threw by the wayside and with love and skill he glorified it. The Kingdom needs craftsmen of every kind, workmen that need not be ashamed, living witnesses of integrity, purity and truth.

Rev. John F. Schmidt is a frequent visitor to the C.P.S. camp at Colorado Springs, Colorado.

BETHEL COLLEGE POST WAR PROGRAM

The post war program for Bethel College to be worked for on a "pay-as-you-go" basis was made public at the Bethel College Founders' Day Program held at Memorial Hall, October 14, 8:00 P. M. It was announced that after long and careful consideration the following statement of needs was approved by the Board of Directors of Bethel College on September 19, 1945, and that it was felt that for an enrollment of 500 students these needs should be met if possible by October 12, 1948, the sixtieth anniversary of the corner stone laying of the Administration Building:

1. $25,000 in gifts annually to balance current budgets
2. Farm Shop—$25,000
3. Industrial Building—$50,000
4. Men's Dormitory—$100,000
5. Women's Dormitory—$50,000
6. Library—$75,000
7. Health Center—$50,000
8. Music Hall—$25,000
9. To complete proposed endowments
 - a. General Adult Education—$50,000
 - b. A Cappella Choir Tours—$50,000
 - c. Mennonite Research Foundation—$50,000
 - d. Students' Grants-in-aid—$50,000
 - e. General Endowment Funds—$150,000— including
 - (1) C. H. Wedel Memorial Chair
 - (2) G. A. Haury Memorial Chair
 - (3) J. W. Kliever Memorial Chair

Other significant financial facts about Bethel College are:

1. Bethel College is debt free.
2. Since its founding in 1887 Bethel College has never defaulted a financial obligation.
3. The value of Bethel's buildings and equipment is $568,855.97.
4. The endowment funds and similar assets total $572,054.86.
5. The net worth of Bethel College is $1,189,324.78 (as of August 1, 1945).
6. $25,000 in gifts balances the current budget of $175,000. The remainder comes from student fees, earnings of the endowment funds, and college auxiliary enterprises.

OBSERVATIONS IN INDIA

By S. F. Pannabecker

In looking at the problems of Christian work in India and China there are two important and fundamental differences which affect every phase of life. The first is the caste system and the second is the religious consciousness.

Caste

Caste is said by some to be dying out in India. Such a statement is open to serious questioning. To be sure in cities like Calcutta it is impossible to hold to caste distinctions in all the complications of city life—trams, tenement houses, city water system, etc. But Calcutta, as a Hindu speaker on "Caste" recently said, is an infinitesimal part of India, while the real India is the thousands of villages where life goes on with little change. Not only did this speaker insist that caste is not disappearing in India, but said he, himself, as a good Hindu, was in favor of caste. When its validity in the modern world was questioned by a European who was present at the meeting, one after another of the Hindus arose to affirm their allegiance to the caste system and to insist that it would continue as a living influence in Indian life. If true, this is a hard blow to those who have been expecting modern contacts to eliminate caste distinctions.

Whatever its origin, in practice caste means that somewhere along the line Indian society was frozen in the groups—cultural, economic, religious—then prevalent. Occupational lines served in the main as the most convenient dividing compartments. Across these lines it was forbidden to have such contacts as inter-eating, intermarriage, and, to a certain extent, inter-worship. As it stands now an Indian born in any of these thousands of divisions or sub-divisions of the major castes cannot expect and does not hope to improve his position nor to have more than limited contacts with those of other similar divisions. Any attempt to cross any of these rigidly drawn lines can only mean expulsion from the caste privileges which the person may already have. Family ties and human sympathy do not operate in such a case.

Changing religious affiliations, as is involved in becoming a Christian, is one of the most serious breaches of caste customs. Consequently, few Indians are permitted to make the move freely. While I was at Champa, a case arose of a man who had expressed a desire to become a Christian. His own family locked his house against him, took his child away, and refused to permit him to see his wife. It was only after the matter was taken to the courts that he was able to get back possession of his child. Good relations with his family will probably never be restored unless the Spirit of God is able to move hearts.

Caste has many other surprising effects in church work. One of the most curious to me was the way it was necessary in the Champa hospital to provide kitchen facilities for each patient to do his own cooking, or have it done for him, and to provide for his whole family to stay in the hospital with him. No central hospital kitchen is possible, strict dietary supervision is difficult and all of the activities of nurses and attendants are circumscribed.

Religious Consciousness

There is a pronounced difference in the Indian and Chinese background regarding religious consciousness. The Chinese are religious, of course. Confucianism, Taoism, and the popular superstition which developed native to China testify to an interest in religion. Besides these systems which originated in China, Buddhism and Mohammedanism are widely popular. Practically all Chinese adhere to one or more of these religions, or to Christianity which is their greatest rival. However, admitting that both peoples are religious, there are two notable differences in the Chinese attitude toward religion as compared with the Indian.

Chinese religious lines are not drawn with the distinctness characteristic of India. In India a definite demarcation can be made between the adherents of the different religions—Hindu, Moslem, Parsi, Sikh. To be sure, Hinduism is able to absorb a wide variety of sects and thought; yet throughout India a Hindu is a Hindu. In China, apart from the Christians and the Moslems, there is no such distinct line. A worshipper may be a Confucianist and at the same time venerate Taoist deities and worship in Buddhist temples—all without formally adhering to any of the three. Popular religious thought in China makes no attempt to distinguish the deities according to religious systems and indeed in much of the popular thought they are all mixed up. It is inconceivable that in China political lines could be drawn on the basis of religious affiliation, yet in India that is the case. Because of the strong Hindu or Mohammedan majority and their religious consciousness, Christianity in India exerts little influence in political and national circles. Everywhere it exists by sufferance only, and it was told me that in 170 of the 562 independent states the preaching of Christianity is not permitted. In China, on the other hand, Christianity is no where proscribed and, though Protestants and Catholics together make up barely 1 percent of the population, Christian schools, medicine and social reforms have become standard for the country.

Perhaps a more important difference is found in the relations of religion and morals. Intelligent Chinese attitude toward religion is always conditioned by moral demands. Chinese conceptions of God as found in "Shang Ti," the Supreme Ruler, or "T'ien," impersonal

Heaven, always involve a Being who is righteous, punishing evil and rewarding good. Chinese religion even in its most superstitious aspects does not countenance immoral conduct. The best of Chinese thought as expressed in classical Confucianism is really ethical rather than religious. Confucius, himself, is easily one of the world's greatest ethical teachers. Chinese religion really over-emphasizes moral demands and under-emphasizes the spiritual aspect of religion. Indian religious thought in this respect is practically the opposite of Chinese. The Indians have always had a sense of the spiritual which the Chinese lacked. In its classical development Hinduism has developed this "spiritual" aspect until God has been recognized as pure spirit, or better pure Being, without any qualifications. The personal was ruled out and with it the moral qualities of religion which depend on personal values. This lack of moral and personal emphasis is the greatest condemnation under which Hinduism labors. It is due to this that Hinduism has no incentive to a missionary program corresponding to Christian missions and has no help to offer for depressed classes or any interest in social welfare in general. The Hindu deities are not recognized as offering or demanding moral living and Hindu worshippers get little incentive from their religion for moral living.

MENNONITES THE WORLD OVER

By Cornelius Krahn

A Mennonite Encyclopedia The Mennonites of Germany, during the past decades, have shown most interest in their own past and in the status of the Mennonites the world over. The two men who have devoted nearly their entire lives to this endeavor are Christian Hege and Christian Neff. The crown of their achievement is, no doubt, the Mennonitisches Lexikon which was started before World War I and is almost completed now. One of the editors, Hege, passed away during this war, and Neff is more than eighty years of age. He is still actively engaged in this enterprise, but under present circumstances is not likely to complete it.

The Mennonitisches Lexikon, when completed, was to consist of three volumes. It is an encyclopedia which, in a popular and illustrated form, deals with persons, places, subjects, and other matters which pertain to Mennonites everywhere including the past and present. Recognizing the significance of this piece of work Mennonites of America have supported it by subscriptions and financial contributions. They will, no doubt, be willing to help complete the work.

American Edition: For some time the need for an English edition of this encyclopedia has been recognized. Plans are underway to find the best possible set-up to provide such an edition. There is no doubt that this should be a task in which possibly all Mennonite conferences should cooperate.

Our Neighbors to the South: The so-called Old Colony Mennonites from Canada moved to Mexico two decades ago to live their own way of life in greater seclusion. In Mexico they can teach what they please in their own schools. Recently we received the text books that they are using: Bible, "Gesangbuch," Catechism and a Reader. The print and binding of these books would arouse the envy of any Mennonite publisher in the States. These German books are the only printed source, with the exception of the Steinbach Post, from which they draw spiritual and cultural food. When a few of them came to Kansas this spring to buy second-hand machinery, some boxes of old religious German books were included in the car-loads. The man who took the books along wrote: "The books are hardly ever at home. Everybody wants to read them." A few weeks ago a young Mennonite from Mexico inquired about the possibility of attending Bethel College.

"We Appear to be Treating the Jews . . ." Have we ever asked what happened to the survivors of the concentration camps? Or were we too busy reading and listening to horrible stories of those who perished in these camps before our troops got there? Our press tells us now that our President wanted to find out what happened to the survivors and therefore sent a representative to investigate. The report: "Displaced Jews are being held in unsanitary, barbed-wire camps . . . Their guards are U. S. troops." The report goes on . . . we appear to be treating the Jews as the Nazis treated them, except that we do not exterminate them . . ." (See Time, Oct. 9th)

There is no doubt that these Jews are displaced Jews, that is, they have come from Poland, the Baltic Coast, Rumania, Bulgaria and other countries which are now under Russian control. They refuse to go back. No one can blame them for that. It is wonderful that the President of the United States sends a personal representative to investigate the case.

What About the Others? The Jews are only a fraction of the millions of displaced persons who are crowding the highways westward to escape the iron fist of Stalin. There are the Letts, Lithuanians, Estonians, Prussians, Poles, Rumanians, Ukrainians, Bulgarians, the Czechs, Austrians, Hungarians and many others. There are Greek Catholics, Roman Catholics, Lutherans, Baptists, Reformed Mennonites, and others. All these are displaced persons behind barbed-wire. Many of them do not want to go back to Russian-occupied countries. No door to the West has as yet been opened for them. That is why they are behind barbed-wire even today. Where is the Moses who will lead them to the "Promised Land?" Hasn't the time come to talk less about the horrors of the concentration camps of the past and do something about the present?

(For some time we have been casting about for a heading of a column which would give news from all over the world. The two words "One World" came to us and stuck. The cut seemed to match the words very well, for the banner of Christ ought to encircle the whole earth; the Good News is for the world. The words "For God so loved the world. . ." seemed to fit in next. So although this heading may not be specific and limited enough for all that may come under it, it will suggest Christian salvation as the prime necessity of "One World." Until we are persuaded to change we shall seek to put under this heading such world news as may be of special interest to the readers of a Christian journal.—Editor)

A service man to the pastor of the First Church, Philadelphia: "Your Service League and similar organizations in many other churches throughout the country are doing a commendable job. You have an even bigger job after the war, and I hope the Church can take positive vigorous steps to assist us in our gropings for a permanent peace. After all the years of their existence, don't you think the different churches should be able to get together and present an international religious united front to build future peace, somewhat along the lines of the political, economic, and social suggestions that were made for the potential International Organization by the Dumbarton Oaks Conference? COME ON, CHURCH! We're now living in a world, not a Country and we must think and act accordingly."

Scholarships for German students are being planned by Valparaiso University, a Lutheran church school in Indiana. To begin with twenty-five students from northern Europe will be brought to Valparaiso and educated at the school's expense. It is hoped that the re-educated students will return to their "native areas for leadership in the spiritual and civil reorientation of their people."

A total of 17,000,000 unchurched children of school age are reported in the United States.

German Methodists have suffered the loss of churches and hospitals along with their personal losses in this war. Bishop F. H. Otto Melle of Berlin states in The Christian Advocate that food is a very pressing problem and that it is feared that 2,500,000 people may starve in Germany next winter. The church in Berlin seeks to give shelter for at least one or two days to Methodist refugee brethren who are pouring in from the East in a great stream, but are not allowed to stay in Berlin. The church has a second collection in which a basket is passed for little pieces of bread that friends may share from their meagre bread rations. The Church had money, but all bank accounts are closed.

Since replacements for the Lutheran ministry in Alsace, France, will be hard to secure, it has been suggested that Lutheran clergymen from the United States be sent there on a loan basis (sounds a little like religious lend-lease). They would regard it as mission work and seek "the establishment of sound Lutheran confessional congregations and the strengthening of the confessional standards of the church."

"Some Americans, such as the Mennonites love their religious principles so much that they will leave the country if the May Bill (Peacetime conscription) is passed."—Editorial in Life, September 17.

A team of Quaker relief workers was called into Germany during the last week in August to work with the UNRRA near Munich on a project involving the care of displaced people and victims of concentration camps.

Food in Helsinki, Finland, is meagre. "There is some oatmeal, black bread, dried peas, a few vegetables, eight cents worth of meat a month, and a half pound of cooking fat or butter or margarine a month, with butter almost impossible to buy on the legitimate market. . . . Everybody goes to the country and scours about among friends and relatives."

Sweden has a unique way of helping needy Finland. Each Swedish town of any size has adopted a Finnish town to which are sent relief supplies.

What rebuilding means is described by a relief worker in Italy who writes: "One gets a completely helpless feeling when one stands in the midst of rubble on a sharp hillside and cannot distinguish the outlines of most of the former houses or even see the streets where had been."

"The material destruction is so evident it is monotonous; to walk or cycle about is to be covered with dust from the heaps of what used to be houses."—Relief worker in Le Havre, France.

Of U.S. farm homes, 88 per cent have no modern bathroom, 85 per cent have no mechanical refrigerator, 82 per cent have no running water, 78 per cent have only outside privies, 75 per cent have no telephone, 67 per cent have no electricity, 66 per cent use kerosene or gasoline lamps, and 40 per cent have no radio.—Figures from "Economic Outlook"

Outline of Ephesians

By Jacob J. Enz

II. Our Common Walk in Christ—the practical implications of this bond. (chaps. 4-6)

Throughout the doctrinal section repeated indications concern the conduct of the sons of God. Christianity always insists on holiness and moral uprightness.

A. Our Walk in terms of human relationships (4:1-6:9)

1. In the Church (4:1-16)

The unity of the church and of its impact upon society is of more importance than any individual member, hence there must be a willingness on the part of the individual to subordinate his own interests to the interests of the Church. However, this does not mean that he is to withdraw, for each has an indispensable part to play. Not only is the talent of each one necessary for reaching out but for building up; each one needs the church for his own full development too. The goal of the whole process is the incorporation of every penitent sinner and the building up of every believer to the full stature of Christ. On this basis what is the answer to those who claim to be Christian but refuse to ally themselves with the Church? What is the "fullness of Christ" (4:13)? What value does this place on the individual personality? In what way does every member of the Church have a calling according to this passage? Why is it almost impossible for the individual believer to get along without the Church? What is the principle of growth in the Kingdom and the Church according to 4:15,16? How would you square our present denominational outlook in America with this teaching? Can we legitimately extend the idea of individual gifts or talents to groups such as denominations in their relationship to Christendom at large? If so where shall the line be drawn in view of the multiplicity of sects?

2. In Society (4:17-5:21)

a) The Walk in General (4:17-24) of the Christian is to be in sharp contrast to that of the pagan. Contrast the words that characterize the pagan and the Christian. Note: sin alienates from God. What are the sins most subtle to the new man in Christ? What effect do our moral choices have on our thinking as indicated here?

b) The walk in the face of specific situations (4:25-5:14) (1) Speaking the truth has a direct relationship to Christian unity (2) Control of temper—there is a direct relationship between temper and Tempter; what is the difference between anger and hatred? (3) Stealing vs. honest labor; what is the ultimate goal of honest labor? (4) Clean speech (5) All divisive elements and all malice to be eliminated (vs. 31) (6) Qualities that unite to be cultivated after the pattern of Christ and God (4:32-5-2). (7) Sexual sin (5:3-14) Sexual sin was taken very lightly in these areas. Paul warns not only against the act but against the thinking and the talking that lead up to the act. For such sin to enter the church would be like a cancer breaking out on a clean body. Note the results of such sin; it dulls the intellect; it divides. What is Paul's antidote? Has our freedom to discuss sex in recent years abated the problem of immorality as some thought? Remember the Christian Church stood in heathen darkness and immorality as the land of Goshen in benighted Egypt; is the testimony of the Church as clean today?

c) Summary (5:15-20) Suggestions and warnings. The contrast is repeated in pictures of drunken revelry an as over against Godly praise. Mark how the church is pointed out by Paul as having sufficient exercises to help the individual against these varied pitfalls.

3. In the Home or Household (5:22-6:9)

a) The wife (5:22-24). As the Church accepts the headship or authority of Christ because of His offer of love so the wife is to accept the authority of the husband as it is offered in love.

b) The husband (vss. 25-30), if the wife is to accept his authority, must give her the fullest love and care of which he is capable even as Christ gave Himself utterly to his Church.

c) The fathers and children (6:1-4) have each one a responsibility to the other.

d) The Servants and Masters (6:5-9): servants as wives are to be under authority. Masters are to conduct themselves in such a way as to be worthy of the authority they possess. All labor is to be regarded as a sacred trust. A good piece of work is as eternal in its moral results as a good deed.

Summary questions and suggestions: Consider why Paul should give attention to the home in the practical section of this book. What importance does this place upon the home as a stabilizing element in society? As an agency for the unity and spread of the Kingdom? It appears that the home is to be a Kingdom in miniature. What light does this throw on marriage? In the whole section on the Christian's walk among humans note any helpful suggestions with respect to such divisive factors in present day life as labor disputes, divorce, delinquency, immorality, profanity, drinking, lying, war, race prejudice, and cults and sects. What would be Christ's way of meeting these great issues?

B. Our Walk in Terms of Our Spiritual Struggle (6:10-20)

Here the curtain of the flesh is drawn back so that we may catch a glimpse of the spiritual forces in conflict when we take our walk in the world of men. Our enemy is greater than we ever thought him to be, but our spiritual resources are much greater too than we thought if we in truth belong to Him. List the parts that make up the spiritual armor of the Christian,

Public Health Work at Mulberry, Florida

By Dallas Voran

IN SEPTEMBER, 1943, the thirty-five-man Mennonite unit of C.P.S. No. 27 opened in Mulberry, Florida. It was designated as a public health project to work with the Polk County Health Department in a program designed to eradicate hookworm.

Every year many Florida boys and girls fail in school, lost interest in ordinary activities, feel generally run-down, and are well on their way to becoming failures—all because of a little parasite called the hookworm. From the records of the county school nurse, statistics based on tests of school children reveal a hookworm infestation ranging from five per cent to eighty-seven per cent, with an average of about fifty-five per cent in rural areas.

Hookworm

The hookworm is found in tropical and semi-tropical countries all around the globe, and everywhere the effects on its victims are the same: listlessness, physical exhaustion, stunted growth, anemia, susceptibility to other diseases, and in advanced cases, edema, pasty yellow skin, and indigestion.

The interesting life history of the hookworm begins when the female in the host's intestines lays eggs which are eliminated from the body in excreta.

The young larvae hatch in about a day. If the privy is such that they are free to crawl onto the surrounding ground or to be carried there by rats, pigs, or chickens, the young worms are in a position to enter the human host. When they come in contact with bare skin, usually the feet or hands, they puncture the skin and burrow in, sometimes causing the irritation called ground itch. They enter the blood stream and are carried to the heart and then to the lungs. From there they enter the bronchial tubes, are coughed up, and are swallowed. After leaving the stomach, they fasten themselves to the walls of the small intestines and suck blood. There they mature and the females lay about 9,000 eggs daily.

Medicine can be taken that will kill the worms in a person; but as long as improper sewage disposal exists, there is danger of reinfestation. Thus, the obvious answer is: provide proper disposal of waste. If the larvae hatch in a sanitary pit privy where there is no chance of getting to the surface of the ground and in contact with bare skin, the cycle is broken and the hookworm is licked. That is where the men of C. P. S. No. 27 fit into the picture. That is why we build and install sanitary privies.

Project Work

Men live in Mulberry, a phosphate-mining town of about 1,500 inhabitants, located in Polk County. This country, one of the largest and richest counties in Florida, supplies eighty per cent of the phosphate of the United States; and one third of Florida's citrus crop. The four buildings we occupy—the dining, the twenty-two-room U-shaped bunkhouse, and the shop—belong to the local phosphate-mining company and are quite pleasant and comfortable.

There are several phases of this work which is under the direction and leadership of Dr. Lawrence Zell, head of the county health department. A two-man crew has nearly completed a survey of the sanitary conditions of the premises of each home in the county, filling out form cards prepared by the State Board of Health. From this survey we learn that there are about 6,300 insanitary privies in Polk County, each one playing a principal role in the spread of hookworm disease, typhoid, and other fly-born diseases. By the end of May, 1945, 1,662 of these 6,300 had been replaced.

The privies, built according to state specifications, are prefabricated. The wooden sections are constructed on templates in the shop; and the concrete foundation, floor, and riser are poured in three separate pieces. If digging is good, two men can install a unit in one-and-a-half or two hours. A wooden curbing holds the sides of the fifty-four-inch-deep pit.

Other phases of our work include the moving and placing of Burr cottages, small buildings for the isolation of advanced cases of tuberculosis; the installation of a small number of septic tanks; typhus control, in which three of our men rat-proofed several blocks of business houses in Bartow and may go into rat-proofing school buildings this summer; and the lettering and putting up of thirty highway signs along country and state roads in Polk County, proclaiming "Hookworm Control Begins with Home Sanitation," "Good Sanitation Protects Health," or "Better Sanitation Means Cleaner, Healthier Living," and undersigned by the Polk County Health Department.

Camp Life

The Mulberry camper's day begins with the rude, rasping sound of an auto horn at 6:00 a.m., which is a signal for him to sleep ten more minutes before dressing and dashing a block to the dining hall for the 6:15 breakfast. After the meal there is a short, camper-conducted devotional period. The camper begins work at 7:00 (7:30 in the winter), has an hour and a quarter off at noon, and quits at 5:30 p.m. The evenings he devotes to study and attending relief training classes (for this is a relief training unit), to keeping up with current reading, and to correspondence.

On Sunday the Mulberry C.P.S. man attends the worship service in camp at 9:00 a.m., at which time a talk or sermon is given by a camper or a visiting minister. At 9:45 he contributes to the Sunday-school discussion. By having these services this early in the morning, he can also attend church in downtown Mulberry. In the evening there is transportation for him to attend church at Lakeland.

The Camper

The average camper may be almost any variety of Mennonite, but he stands the best chance of being either Mennonite (Old) or General Conference. He is twenty-five years old, ready for his junior year in college, and is unmarried. He is most likely from Kansas.

And he likes Mulberry. He likes having a voice in deciding camp policies. He likes the idea of rotation of jobs and the quarterly election of new foremen. He likes having a room to himself or shared with one roommate. He likes the mild winters and the swimming and the plentiful citrus fruits. He knows there is some opposition to him in the community, but because it is neither very active nor very vocal, he doesn't meet it often. More often he meets the many friends he has made in surrounding communities, some of whom agree with his attitude toward war, more who do not, but who all have helped to make him feel at home in Florida. He likes the easy access to the many tourist meccas and the Saturday afternoons for shopping.

This is not a complete picture of Mulberry; it is not that much of a Utopia. The Mulberry camper is disturbed by the race problem as it exists in the North as well as in the South, and he is often bothered by a feeling that he isn't doing anything to help improve the situation, and that the home churches may not be aware of or concerned about race conditions. The blocked efforts to do foreign relief work and the uncertainty of possibilities along that line are also depressing. He experiences some of the disappointments, frustration, and tensions that plague group living, especially under compulsion. But these things he realizes are relatively unimportant in the long run, for he knows that the service he is rendering is a Christian witness to the people of Polk County, Fla., and will have a good and a lasting effect on their lives.

RELIEF

Mennonite Relief Workers Arrive in China

After more than a year of waiting and negotiating, S. F. Pannabecker and P. P. Baltzer have finally reached China. They arrived October 1 and established headquarters with the American Advisory Committee in Chungking, according to a cable received from Brother Baltzer. The same cable states that Brother Pannabecker is stricken with malaria and has been hospitalized. The prayers of the church are requested for his full recovery and also that the Lord will further lead as the relief program in China gets under way.

Shipment for Holland Leaves

Seventeen tons of clothing and two tons of soap left M.C.C. Headquarters at Akron, September 28, for shipment to Holland. Mennonite relief workers in that country will receive these materials and distribute them to Dutch war victims. This is the second shipment for Holland to leave Mennonite centers within the past two weeks. An earlier shipment, consisting of five tons of clothing, was sent from the Kitchener, Ontario, center. Additional shipments are in preparation and will leave as shipping space is allotted. Food shipments will begin as soon as initial donations are collected and crated.

Collection of Canned Goods

This morning, October 2, a trailer truck, bought for use in the "Food for Relief" Program, left Akron on its first trip to gather up food for relief and C.P.S. The truck is operated by two C.P.S. men, Robert Benner and Wayne Liechty, who have been detached from the camps for this work. On this initial trip they will stop off at Mennonite communities in Delaware and Virginia. En route they will stop at C.P.S. camps at Powellsville and Grottoes to deliver donations, but relief donations will be trucked to East Petersburg, Pa., where they will be crated for overseas shipment.

War Prisoner Service in Belgium

John Thut, Mennonite relief worker who served among war prisoners in England, went to France on September 26 with a truck loaded with relief supplies. The truck with its supplies was desperately needed in the M.C.C. program in France and filled an urgent request. Brother Thut, however, has gone on to Belgium and is now serving in Brussels in behalf of prisoners of war.

Bring Relief to Flood Victims in India

According to an airgraph from J. Harold Sherk, director of the Mennonite relief program in the Far East, dated September 1, the services of the relief unit have been employed in behalf of flood victims in the North Bihar district in the area in which the missionary work of the Brethren in Christ denomination is located. Brother Sherk writes: ". . . About 400 villages with a total population of about 300,000 have been inundated. These floods are due to the annual rise of the Kosi River and when people are prepared for them, they bring more benefit than harm because of the deposit of silt upon the land, but the course of the river changes more or less every year and when there is, in addition to this, a higher flood, as has happened this year, extensive damage is done. Wherever we went, people were asking for kerosene, food, cloth, and medical supplies.

"Following discussion with local government officials, we concluded that the best service that we could give at this time would be the provision and distribution of medicines. We are planning, therefore, for Titus Lehman and P. P. Baltzer to go up there as soon as possible and establish centers for medical relief in the worst affected areas."

C. P. S.

Directors' Conference at Colorado Springs

Annual M.C.C.-C.P.S. directors' conferences are times of searching, times of discussion of mutual

C.P.S. problems, times of testing theories and practices of camp administration, times of new visions, and inspiration—and the conference this year was no exception. In fact, the testings and the discussions were intensified by a realization that likely we are in the eve of the camp program and much remains to be done.

The conference sessions were centered around two main concerns, namely, our Mennonite faith and heritage and personnel and administrative concerns. H. S. Bender brought a series of messages on Mennonite faith and heritage. D. D. Eitzen led discussions in the area of counseling and problems of human relations which arise in administrative procedures. Both of these emphases seemed to be pertinent in light of the possible demobilization of C.P.S. men and the situation in which campers will find themselves after leaving camp. The necessity of ending the program on a strong note was emphasized.

C.P.S. Transfers

In C.P.S. fall is the time of the year for transfers to special projects. This year, with probable demobilization entering into the picture, the whole matter of transfers is quite indefinite. Selective Service has indicated that they will approve transfers from the western camps to special projects when the fire season closes. However, the opening of additional units seems quite unlikely. Selective Service has also announced that they will no longer approve replacements for certain projects. In the Mennonite administration of C.P.S., this applies to Colorado Psychopathic Hospital at Denver and C.P.S. Unit No. 100—the dairy herd testing units.

Music and Craft Instructors to Serve M.C.C.-C.P.S.

Two high school teachers have volunteered their full-time services in behalf of the camp program. Alvin Reimer, Buhler, Kansas, will devote his time to the teaching of courses in sight-singing, hymnology, music appreciation, conducting, and choral literature. Edna Quiring, Canton, Kansas, will serve as an instructor in arts and crafts. Both of these teachers will begin their work in the month of October.

WHEN MOTHER GAVE IN

Roland Hayes' love and reverence for his mother and his respect for her criticism is outstanding. The mother was very deeply and sincerely religious. A song without a spiritual message was only an agreeable noise to her. When Roland Hayes cabled his mother that he had sung before the King and Queen of England, she simply replied, "Remember who you are and give credit where it is due." She held out against his musical career until after a Sunday afternoon concert in Symphony Hall when one of the critics wrote about his singing that it had not been a music hall recital but that he had conducted a religious service.

"Well, son, I give in," she said, "I see now what you are trying to do. I'm not afraid for you any more. I see that yo' feet are on the Rock."—Anna C. Linscheid Roland Hayes Concert, Memorial Hall, North Newton, October 19, 8 P.M.

C. A Personal Note and the Benediction (6:21-24)

Summary Suggestions and Problems

1. Summarize the teaching of the book as far as the resources for Christlike living are concerned.

2. Trace the various lines of thought suggested at the end of chapter three to the end of the book.

3. What hope does this epistle have for any line of reasoning or system of thought that calls itself Christian but departs from the pattern of Christ in crucial areas particularly in the field of ethics.

4. Consider the picture that the epistle gives of the tremendous mission of Christianity as the only possible cement to rebuild a crumbling world. Without Christ we continue to build with materials that will only cause future disintegration.

5. In how far does this epistle fit your needs as far as a consistent system of Christian thinking is concerned?

entirely nil, the thermometer registers so-to-say daily above 115.

5. The small missionary force for evangelistic work available. One time the number of missionaries peaked way beyond 6,400. The decrease came after 1933, reached its lowest point in 1936, since then a gradual increase was noticeable, nevertheless the working force is only about 3,350. There are 3,050 institutions, nearly all of them under personal supervision by European missionaries. There are 14,655 primary schools. Direct evangelistic missionaries are comparatively few. On the average about 9 missionaries among a million people. Where will this end?

Looking over this situation the challenge of the hour is evident, namely to return to widespread evangelism in the power of the Holy Spirit (Zech. 4:6), to reach the unreached wherever they may be spotted, whatever that might cost, and disseminate the Gospel far and wide.

This is India at large. Our General Conference Mennonite Mission field is needy to limit as this year's composite discloses again.

QUOTE

David D. Eitzen, Professor of Pastor Counselling:

"Occasional and spasmodic praying is really not worthy of the name. Effective prayer is a life attitude. To pray is to remain in tune with the harmonious orchestration of God's redemptive purposes."

J. Edgar Hoover of the F.B.I.:

"I have been profoundly impressed with the fact that the 'church going people' are the most substantial group of citizens in the nation."

The late Franklin Delano Roosevelt in final message which he was to have delivered the day after his death:

"We see peace—enduring peace. More than an end to war, we want an end to the beginnings of all wars—yes, and then to this brutal, inhuman and thoroughly impractical method of settling the differences between governments. The mere conquest of our enemies is not enough. We must go on to do all in our power to conquer the doubts and fears, the ignorance and greed, which made this horror possible. Today we are faced with the preeminent fact, that, if civilization is to survive, we must cultivate the science of human relationships—the ability of all people to live together and to work together, in the same world, at peace. Today as we move against the terrible scourge of war, as we go forward toward the greatest contribution of lasting peace—I ask you to keep your faith. The only limit to our realization of tomorrow will be our doubts of today: Let us move forward with strong and active faith."

From "Motive," Methodist youth paper:

"The Soviet Union's most famous girl sniper, Ludmila Pavlichenko, is now a student at Kev State University and is preparing to become a history teacher next year. If she snoops long enough she may find how useless sniping really is."

The London "Economist":

"... can the compulsions of peace be as great as those of war? Can the same energies and loyalties be mobilized for the saving of lives as for destroying them? It would be a poor commentary on the Allies' energy and vision if after winning the war so brilliantly they were now to leave Europe to struggle hopelessly through the first winter of peace."

Harry Emerson Fosdick, who favored the First World War and then became an advocate of non-resistance:

"The age-old emotions of hatred and intolerance have at last been armed with weapons by which man can achieve his own complete destruction in one burst of universal fury. . . If Mr. Wilkie were writing his book today he would undoubtedly give it the title: 'One World or None,' And, since August 6, 1945, that word 'none' rings with an ominous sound."

Life Can Be So Beautiful
Life can be so beautiful in fall:
With aging colors—
Yellows, reds, and browns;
Fields rich with harvest,
Fruits of labor done.
Green is of the springtime,
Yellow of the sun;
Spring holds but the promise,
Autumn, vict'ry won.
Life can be so beautiful in fall—
Trees bare of leaves,
Ready for the winter,
Waiting but the call.
Spring and summer, autumn—
God's purpose in them all!
Life can be so beautiful,
Waiting for the fall.

COLLEGE NEWS

BETHEL COLLEGE

As is customary, all other school activities gave way to Christian Life Week services, sponsored by day, October 8 and ending with the communion the Student Christian Movement, beginning Mon-service on Friday evening. Rev. Russell Mast, now pastor at Wadsworth, Ohio, based daily chapel messages on the theme of "The Plan of Salvation," or "The Roots of Our Faith," and his evening series on "The Fruits of Our Faith." The SCM and Student Volunteers, headed by Eleanor Duerksen (Washington, D.C.) and Arnold Nickel (Mt. Lake, Minn.) respectively, were in charge of the opening worship services and of the prayer meetings held each evening instead of the usual three times a week. These large and active student organizations, with Dr. H. A. Fast as counselor, assume general responsibility for the religious activities among the students, seeking to minister to the needs of all.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

The annual Homecoming was held October 13, 14. The speaker for the Homecoming dinner was Rev. Andrew Shelly, Kitchener, Ontario, member of the class of 1939. Dr. C. L. Pannabecker, Peoria, Illinois, member of the class of 1917, gave the Vesper address on Sunday afternoon. Miss Lavonne Hostetler, member of the Oak Grove Mennonite Church near Smithville, Ohio, was the Homecoming Queen. Statistics show that gifts to the college during the last fiscal year were substantially greater than in the early years of the war. Not counting individual gifts of $1,000 or more, members of the churches comprising the college constituency gave an average of $1.79 to the college Improvement and Current fund during the last fiscal year as compared with an average of $0.71 per member given to the Current Fund in the first war year, 1941-42. Counting all gifts, large and small, the corresponding figures are $2.23 and $1.12. We are thankful for this demonstration of interest and concern.

JOTTINGS

S. F. Pannabecker, who spent several months in India waiting for air passage to China, recently arrived in Chungking, China. However, he had to be hospitalized because of malaria. Mrs. Pannabecker now writes that he has been discharged from the hospital with the malaria cleared, that the doctor has advised him to rest two weeks, and that Mr. Pannabecker hopes to go to Honan Province next month, with the intention of establishing a relief unit, probably at Chengchow, the very place first suggested by Goering and Graber as a result of their trip to China two years ago.

—Miss Mary Becker and Rev. and Mrs. Waldo Harder recently visited three Mennonite communities in Nebraska in the interest of foreign missions. Their first stop was at Madrid as reported in last week's issue. Next they spoke at Henderson on September 28. On September 30 they visited the two churches at Beatrice. Rev. and Mrs. Harder are scheduled for the African field, and Miss Becker plans to leave for Colombia, South America, on October 27.

—First Church, Aberdeen, Idaho: Rev. and Mrs. Malcolm Wenger have spent the past month in Aberdeen visiting at the parental home of Mr. Wenger. While here they served our church with interesting messages of their work among the Cheyenne Indians in Montana. About thirty young men from the C.P.S. camp at Downey are in the Aberdeen community helping in the potatoe harvest. There also are 500 German Prisoners of War camped in Aberdeen helping harvest crops of beets and potatoes. Yesterday a group of one hundred men and boys, who had been recruited in Tennessee by the War Food Administration, arrived for harvest work. In addition to the above we are using one hundred Mexican nationals, who have been here all summer, and three bus loads of Pocatella school children, who are transported here every day. The weather is ideal, warm day and frost almost every night.—J. E. Toews —Rev. Andrew Shelly, pastor of a Mennonite Church in Kitchener, Ontario, coming from Mt. Lake, Minnesota and Freeman, South Dakota, stopped over in Winnipeg, on his way home, and gave a stirring message here at the Bethel Mennonite Mission, on August 29.

—A Mr. Watson from Toronto, Ontario, Secretary of the Fellowship of Reconciliation Pacifism was a guest speaker at the Bethel Mennonite Mission in Winnipeg on September 4. Preceding he had also visited the Mennonite Youth Forum Organization at Altona, Manitoba. (Canadian items reported by Benj. Ewert.)

—Wednesday afternoon, October 3, the ladies of the First Mennonite Church, Geary, Oklahoma, entertained at a tea the ladies of other churches in town, with Miss Dora Jane Armstrong of Dallas, Texas, as guest speaker. Miss Armstrong is Secretary of the Southwest Division of the American Mission to Lepers, and was formerly a medical missionary among lepers in Africa and had a most interesting message on the work both in foreign lands and at the U.S. leper colony at Carville, Louisiana. She also spoke in the evening at an open meeting and next day to the grade and high schools. Many friends of all denominations made voluntary gifts to the cause of leper work, which will be devoted to our own Mennonite Mission in India, through the Board of the American Mission to Lepers.

—Erwin Goering, who is regional director of Mennonite C.P.S. camps in the eastern area and assistant to the General Director of all Mennonite C.P.S. camps, arrived in North Newton, Kansas, on September 29th for a short furlough visit with wife and baby daughter, Mary Jo. Mr. Goering spends about half of his time in the Akron Office and the other half travelling. Jake Goering, who is a brother to Erwin Goering, is Director of the North Fork, California, C.P.S. camp. A baby boy was recently born to Mr. and Mrs. Jake Goering.

—First Church, Shafter, California: The Friday night offering for the new kitchen amounted to $152.22.

—Group Conferences were a main feature of the Eastern District Sunday School Convention that was held on September 29. There were four groupings: school officers, teachers of children, young people and teachers of young people, and adults and teachers of adults. At the evening meeting, each group gave a five-minute synopsis of its discussion.

—The Upper Milford Mennonite Congregation, Zionsville, Pa., commemorated its Two Hundred Fifth Anniversary on September 30, with a special morning service and a Sunday School reunion program in the afternoon. Rev. Samuel K. Piercy spoke in the morning, and the Honorable Harold H. Helfrich, Judge of Lehigh County, spoke in the afternoon. The Upper Milford Church belongs to the charge which is served by Rev. Howard Nyce.

—Wayland Church, Wayland, Iowa: The young people recently enjoyed two social events, one a social at the home of Aaron Liechty and the other a roller skating party. Pictures of all the Sunday School classes, the C.E. societies, and of the Dorcas Society have been taken for use on Christmas greetings that are to be sent to the men in service. The pastor, Rev. E. S. Mulet recently officiated at the installation of Rev. Walter Regier as pastor of the Eicher Emmanuel Church, Noble, Iowa.

—Brother Marvin J. Dirks writes that their new address is: 752 N. Southport, Chicago 13, Illinois. Rev. Dirks is working for his Master's degree in music at Northwestern University, Evanston.

—The address of Dr. A. Warkentin is 3435 Van Buren, Chicago 24, Illinois, and not 2425 Van Buren as mistakenly stated in a recent issue.

—Rev. John Lichti reported from Deer Creek, Oklahoma, on October 4, that they had had ten inches of rain lately and that it looked like more.

—Dr. J. E. Hartzler spoke at the Mission and Thanksgiving Festival of the Bethany Church, Freeman, South Dakota. Meetings were held on three evenings.

—First Church, Monroe, Washington: Rev. M. M. Lehman has resigned as pastor of this church. He gave his farewell message September 9. A farewell was given in their honor the evening before. The many friends who attended enjoyed a program of choruses, short talks, and several male chorus selections. A love offering was taken, after which refreshments were served. We were all sorry to see them leave after being with us eight and a half years, in which we received many blessings. The whole family will be greatly missed. We pray that the Lord may soon send us another pastor.—Mary Stucky, Corr.

—Rev. George Dick, pastor at Bloomfield, Montana, recently visited the C.P.S. camp at Fort Collins, Colorado.

—First Church, Nappanee, Indiana: Everyone was invited to display his hobby at hobby-nite recently. Dr. Slabaugh showed beautifully colored slides. A note in the bulletin says, "Fifty-four chickens were contributed by thirty-six families from our church this week. These were canned with noodles on Friday producing 243 No. 2 cans of chicken noodle soup for Relief. Eight people helped with this canning. This brings our "cannage to 1,961 with the fruit, or about 1,000 quarts." Some of the families have offered comforters and blankets for relief. The average Sunday School attendance the past year was 211 or 70 per cent. Two had a perfect attendance record. The women are collecting kitchen utensils for relief. The men are participating with other Mennonite churches in buying flour for relief. Their share was $300. This amount has already been over-subscribed by $200 with more to come in. Each man has also been asked to collect a kit of tools for relief.

—Saron Church, Orienta, Oklahoma: Average Sunday School attendance the past year was eighty-eight or 66 per cent. The average offering was $18.60 or $0.21 per pupil. Two had a perfect attendance record. H. P. Fast, the pastor, writes that there has been an increase of almost 25 per cent in church membership in the last two years.

—Moundridge, Kansas: Twenty-one churches of this community, including fourteen Mennonite churches, have given 12,943 bushels of wheat for relief and $10,652.20 in cash. The money will be used for buying the sacks and or milling, with the remainder of it to be used for the purchase of more wheat. The mill will grind the first two car loads free of charge and the next sixteen at cost. The eighteen carloads will make 10,8900 sacks of 100 pounds each.

—Miss Luella Smith, registrar at Bethel College the last few years, and Mr. Hans Regier were married on October 5 in the Bethel College chapel.

—The Nazarene Church, which up to this time did not have a seminary, has established its own seminary in Kansas City. It is reported to have about seventy-seven students. About $100,000 were collected for this school prior to its opening. A Nazarene minister reports that in the past the Church lost many of the young men who studied at various seminaries throughout the country.

—Lorraine Avenue Church, Wichita: "Races of Man-kind" was the subject of Mr. Dale Stucky who spoke on a special program arranged by the peace committee. The Friendship Circle is sending a box of sheets, pillow slips, towels and wash cloths for relief. It is also sponsoring a layette project for relief. On October 11 Dr. G. S. Klassen spoke and showed his slides on Paraguay.

—Mrs. Selma Linscheid of the M.C.C. Clothing Center, Newton, reports that clothing is coming in better and that much of it comes in very good conditions. About 5,000 pounds were received in September. The Center is unable to get burlap for baling. However, it hopes to do so in the near future. One company stated it had the burlap but not the workers. The storerooms are full of clothing. September 29 about twenty tons were sent from Akron for use in Europe.

—Bethel Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, has been discussing the question of an assistant pastor. Willard Wiebe, a student at the Mennonite Biblical Seminary, brought the message on October 14.

—Grace Church, Pandora, Ohio: Prof. Russell Lantz led a hymn sing Sunday evening and told about some of the high lights of his training at the Northwestern School of Music held in Evanston, Illinois, last August. Miss Ruth Hilty, who is to do relief work in Holland, spoke on September 30.

—First Church, Wadsworth, Ohio: "Wadsworth will be host to the young people of the Salem Mennonite Church near Dalton, and the First Mennonite Church of Sugar Creek in a youth conference on October 20 and 21. . . . Rev. Jacob J. Enz will be the principal speaker." A questionnaire in a recent Wadsworth bulletin asks about a mid-week Bible study class, about Sunday evening services, and for other suggestions for making the church more effective.

—First Church, Burns, Kansas: Richard Ratzlaff, ministerial student at Bethel College, preached on October 14. The C. E. for October 21 is to be Family Night with each family giving a number.

—Immanuel Church, Los Angeles; Dixie Nealy is doing mission work among the Mexicans of the city. Dorothy Schroeder is leaving for Africa. Elmer Friesen plans to attend Grace Theological Seminary at Winona Lake, Indiana.

—Burrton, Kansas: The Missionary Society canned four bushels of peaches and two of plums for C.P.S. The C.E. will give a program in the Emmanuel Church, Moundridge, October 21.

—Miss Mary Becker spoke to the young people of the First Church, Newton, on the evening of October 7. Her talk was based on the thesis that she has written on the young people's program of the Western District Conference.

—Mrs. Sarah Geiger is making a satisfactory improvement after being critically ill.

—Eden Church, Moundridge, Kansas: The ladies recently spent two days in the church basement canning meat for relief. Three beefs were slaughtered and cut up to be canned. Two were donated by two of the church members and third was purchased with money from the Harvest Festival offering. The meat was processed in pressure cookers. The bones were used for soup, and the tallow was saved for making soap. Result: four hundred quarts of meat and soup. The pastor has worked out a catechism manual which has been printed in booklet form.

—First Church, Saskatoon, Saskatchewan: The women's society served a chicken supper on the evening of September 27, and Rev. Friesen showed slides of Palestine. The money given that evening amounted to nearly $75. This sum will be given to Rosthern Academy.

—The Manitoba young people's organization will have its annual meeting in the Bergthal Church at Lowe Farm, October 21.

—The Eastern District Brotherhood is to have its annual convention on October 27.

—Alberta Community Church, Portland, Oregon: The sound film, "The Prodigal Son" was shown on the evening of October 7. The offerings on September 23 totalled $350, the largest one-day offering in the history of the church.

—Dr. E. G. Kaufman will give Bible lectures at the Zion Church, Donnellson, Iowa, October 21 to 28. His daily lecture subjects will be: "God," "Creation," "Man," "Christ," "Prayer," "The Bible," "The Christian," "The Kingdom," "Christian Missions," and "The Future." The last two will be given on the afternoon and evening of October 28, which is the day of the Harvest Home Festival with a carry-in dinner at noon.

—A hospital auxiliary has been organized for the Mennonite Deaconess Hospital, Beatrice, Nebraska, for the purpose of helping the hospital and the sisters with sewing, patching, and canning.

—"Free the War Objectors" is the name of an editorial in the October 10 issue of The Christian Century, an influential religious journal widely read by many ministers. The editorial ends thus: "It has been conscience that has sent these men to prison and to C.P.S. camps. Now let the conscience of Christian citizens demand that those who are behind bars be freed, and those in the camps be given the same treatment as other draftees in obtaining their discharges."

—You may get a study outline of the Epistle to the Ephesians, printed in neat pamphlet form, by writing to Mennonite Publication Office, 722 Main, Newton, Kansas. Copies are free. Rev. Jacob Enz prepared the outline.

—Correspondents can help to keep the jottings up-to-date by sending in a report of a news event the day it happens.

The service on the front page is taken from an Order of Service for a Harvest Festival, 1945, prepared by the Committee on Town and Country, 297 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y.

—First Church, Newton, Kansas: Speaker at the special Bible Conference and Evangelistic Meetings to be held November 4-11 will be Rev. C. F. Derstine, Kitchener, Ontario. Rev. Derstine is a bishop in the Old Mennonite Church.

—Zion Church, Souderton, Pa., Dr. Jacob H. Janzen of Waterloo, Ontario, is to be the speaker at a week of special meetings to be held November 11-

18. Evening services this year will include some specially planned ones on relief and some special ones. Proceeds of the music programs will go for an organ fund. The church library is being built up to a new position of influence. Already there are four hundred volumes in it and fifteen periodicals. It is to be formally opened on November 18.

—The bulletin of the Bethel College Church quotes a news item from the Christian Century. The item was headed "Newspaper Editorial Lauds C.O.'s" and said: Memphians rubbed their eyes in amazement when they found the leading editorial in the Sept. 3 Commercial Appeal starting off: "It is time to quit using the opprobrious word 'conchies' and acknowledge that they were men of courage and conviction . . . If the human race had been made up of them, there would have been no Anzio and Okinawa . . . There is no greater courage than that which braves taunts . . . there is nothing nobler than dying a decent principle."

—First Church, Lehigh, Kansas: The ladies again served food at the county fair. They bought 144 chickens and served noodle soup and chili, etc. Their gross income was around $1,300. Rev. B. H. Janzen, pastor, estimates that they probably cleared around $1,000. This money will be used for the new basement under the church building. The ladies made a profit of over $1,000 in 1944, and in the past five years they have cleared around $4,000. The church wants to buy a new furnace, but since it is unable to get a suitable new one, it will install a temporary furnace.

—First Church, Burns, Kansas: Rev. W. F. Unruh gave a very interesting message Sunday evening, September 30.

—Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Krehbiel left for Chicago on October 9. Dr. Krehbiel will teach a six weeks course in the Mennonite Seminary. On the way they planned to stop at Milford, Nebraska, and Donnellson, Iowa. Dr. Krehbiel was to speak at the last-named place.

—The Peace Committee of the Western District will very likely recommend to the coming conference: that churches arrange for a service of penitence, prayer, forgiveness, and rededication upon the return of the service men, that contributions be made to help C.P.S. men to continue their education, that churches encourage Mutual Aid, that the plans for "Ministers' Retreats" be endorsed, that our peace witness be strengthened by sermons, catechetical instruction, and study of a text being prepared by the General Conference Peace Committee, and that the peace stand of the General Conference be endorsed.

—Statistics for the coming Western District Conference show: Membership in 1944 was 12,286 and 12,077 in 1943. Local church support rose from $82,092 in 1943 to $105,772 in 1944. Foreign missions rose from $44,135 in 1943 to $51,422 in 1944. Relief jumped from $22,172 in 1943 to $29,214 in 1944. A total of $57,197 was given to C.P.S. in 1944 and $25,973 for education. Total contributions in 1943 were $272,830, and those of 1944, $343,358. With a membership of 12,286 it means that each member contributed on the average of $27.92 towards his church, or $8.61 for local church support, $4.15 for foreign missions, $1.52 for home missions, $2.38 for relief, $4.66 for C.P.S., $2.11 for education, and $4.49 for all other purposes. The returns on the draft question showed: fifty-one churches reported 880 young men in the service of the country. Forty-two churches reported 379 men in C.P.S. Forty-two churches reported 189 men in non-combatant service, and forty-eight churches reported 312 men in the regular army. A survey of the ministers showed: 49 active ministers, and 28 retired ministers, a total of 77. The average age of the active ministers was 47. Thirty-five of the active ministers at one time or another attended Bethel Colleg; 7 attended Wilmarsum; 3 attended Bluffton; 3 attended Oklahoma Bible Academy; 1 attended Goshen; 1 attended Freeman. Eighteen ministers live in church parsonages. Six ministers receive a salary of over $2,000, 5 between $1500-2000, 13 between 1000-1500, and 17 between 500-1000, and 3 below 500. The average salary for all ministers is $1,167. These statistics were made available through the courtesy of Rev. Ronald von Riesen, Statistician.

REMINDER TO NORTHERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE PASTORS

The Ministerial Conference of the Northern District Conference will convene in the Mennonite Churches of Butterfield and Mountain Lake, Minnesota, from Tuesday, November 13 to Thursday, November 15. The guest speaker will be Dr. John C. Wenger of Goshen College, Goshen, Indiana. The Conference theme is: "The Shepherd and His Flock," (Acts 20:17-35. A cordial invitation is extended to all ministers in the Northern District.—For the local planning committee, Erland Waltner, Sec.

Ever Reaching towards the Light

EVER REACHING TOWARDS THE LIGHT

Giant Sequoias—with two to three thousand rings of growth, with great, buttress-like roots that disappear beneath the surface, with a bark that resists fire—tower two to three hundred feet up into the blue, ever reaching towards the light of God. They are one of God's wonders. They are a symbol of the great Christians God would grow. For God wants Christians with a great many rings of experience—not necessarily those of time but rather those of quality—rings of experience that come to be as the roots delve deeper and hold more firmly, rings of experience that come as the harsh fires of life are victoriously resisted, rings of experience that take on great significance as the individual ever reaches up toward the light of God. Christians with a great many experiences, each one of them realized while reaching up towards the light of God, are one of God's greatest wonders.—rw

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

Marie J. Regier Writes from China

Weih sien, C.A.A. Shantung
September 5, 1945

Board of Foreign Missions
General Conference Mennonites
Newton, Kansas U. S. A.

My dear Brethren of the Board:

With my first letter home after the close of the war I also sent a short note to you, but now that we are permitted to write letters daily, I wish to write a more detailed letter. It is so long since we have been able to have any sort of communications at all it is difficult to know where to begin.

Our last moves must have seemed rather independent on our part, but we felt that while we seemed to disobey the letter of the law we did not the Spirit. We believed that it was because the Board felt responsible to the constituency for our physical welfare that we were requested to return, but was otherwise satisfied to have us remain here if we felt that such was God's will. We hope that we did not incur the disfavor of the Board and our constituency by our behavior. It is our earnest desire to cooperate closely with the Mission Board in the future in whatever plans the Board may have for us.

We hope that it will be possible to communicate with us soon. I suppose any such communication should be addressed in care of American Consul since we do not know how long we will be here or whether we will be taken to another assembly center before we are permitted to go to our ultimate destination.

We have nothing but gratitude towards our heavenly Father for the way that He has taken care of us during the period of the war. We have received courteous treatment only, and while we were inconvenienced at times and somewhat short of food, especially before we left the station and came here, we have never been really hungry.

During our stay here we have been privileged to have union services. Our union is called The Christian Fellowship. We attended lectures and classes in Bible, History, Chinese Philosophy, Art. We have had the opportunity to work shoulder to shoulder with people of various classes, nations, and races. It should make it easier to aid in building a world where national lines become dimmed. Ours was one of the best and most privileged camps in existence.

It was sad to receive the news of mother's death. I had so hoped to see her again, at least once more. But I yield my will to God's there too, and I do not begrudge mother the promotion to a higher realm where she will see Him face to face.

Miss Goertz joins me in sending greetings. She hopes to write soon.

Very sincerely,
Marie J. Regier

Note: We had written the sisters repeatedly after the close of the war, but Miss Regier evidently received nothing. We shall try the consul now.

Little Miss Liu

by Laurie Baker

Little Miss Liu was seven years old and lived on a farm about five miles away from a village. She came from a big happy family—there were the great-grandmothers and great-grandfathers, there were the grandfathers and grandmothers and the great-aunts and great-uncles, there were the uncles and aunts and cousins and of course there were Father and Mother Liu. But one day, Mother Liu cried a lot and everyone else was very stern, and Little Miss Liu was told that she would never see her Daddy again. He had caught Leprosy and had run away from home because he knew that if he stayed the others would bury him alive in order to stop the dread disease from being passed on to others in the family.

But she did see him again. For after a long time it was discovered that Father Liu had gone to the Christian Leprosy Home on the other side of the valley, and there he was being fed and clothed and they were also trying to cure his disease! The family forbade anyone to visit him, but secretly, on market days, Mother Liu would hurry through with her shopping and take little Miss Liu to see her Daddy at the boundary of the Leprosy Home.

These secret visits went on for years, and then an awful thing happened. They found that Little Miss Liu had a big round dark patch on her shoulder—it was just the same as the first patch that had come on Father Liu before he ran away from home. Terrified of the disease, the family beat Little Miss Liu and her mother and turned them out of the farm, forbidding them ever to return.

But Little Miss Liu, though bruised and weeping, said, "Now we can go and live with Daddy!" And so to the Leprosy Home they trudged. Very soon Little Miss Liu was being properly looked after and maybe in a year or two she will be better!

Little Miss Liu quickly learned about Jesus and prayed to Him that she might be given a special task of her own to do. Sure enough the task came, and PERSONAL COUNSELING is being increasingly emphasized in the General Conference, as well as in the Christian Church generally. Russell L. Dicks, in his book Pastoral Work and Personal Counseling (page 3) points out that ". . . personal counseling as a method for helping individuals who feel emotionally insecure is becoming popular." A conference minister, who last winter conducted a course for Mennonite C.P.S. men working in one of the mental hospitals, suggests that the men who have worked in mental hospitals will return home expecting their pastors to know something about the terminology and the approach which they have learned to know in these hospitals. For many years now there has been little emphasis upon personal counseling. Dicks (ibid page 4) estimates that "eighty-five to ninety per cent of the clergy today are doing little effective pastoral work or personal counseling of any kind." He suggests that in the past fifty years ministers have become increasingly interested in ideas ". . . and less and less interested in people as individuals." Mary Becker's survey of the Church's youth program in the Western District Conference indicates that many ministers rely mainly on the worship service and Bible study for coming into a helpful relationship with young people and that personal counseling is very, very meager. Perhaps, two facts that partly account for this are: First, in the past our people have been tightly bound by community and church customs. Secondly, our pastors have often farmed and therefore had little time for pastoral work or the non-farming pastor felt little demand for pastoral work because of the customs carrying over from the farmer-minister period. That there is much need for counseling can hardly be doubted. Many souls feel that it could be better with them. But such personal counseling has not been "the natural thing" among us. The fact that it is becoming more so suggests that many will come to a deeper, personal experience of Christ.

ALCOHOL is frequently a "way out" for people who can't stand their own "self-criticism." People have certain ideas of what they ought to "measure up to" in their relationships with others. When some individuals find their conduct far below their ideals they experience intense emotional pain and turn to alcohol as a means of drowning out for the time being that severely painful self-criticism and the criticism that they feel others are leveling at them. Alcohol enables them to forget; it enables them to feel more adequate in themselves and with others. However, the balm to their feelings is temporary. Coming out of their drunken stupor, they feel a larger degree of guilt and inadequacy than before. The result, another drink to drown this—more guilt, more drink. And the drunkard is made. The fundamental problem of such a person lies not in his drinking, as bad as that is. It lies deeper; it lies within the person himself. Help him to overcome his painful feelings of inadequacy and guilt in a positive way through the grace of God, and then he will not have to use alcohol to drown his consciousness of them. Let a man know and feel himself to be a son of God, and he will not desire alcohol. Addicts of alcohol do not need to have the finger of condemnation pointed at them; they need the "how" of salvation. May World Temperance Day, which falls on October 28, serve toward this end.

AS KAGAWA sees Japan's Future, is the head of a significant article in the Christian Century of October 10. The navy correspondent who wrote the article found Kagawa preaching in a small church in the suburbs of Tokyo. It is reported that during the war he was jailed twice because of his pacifistic preaching but not kept in jail because the authorities feared he would use the time for writing. He still teaches and preaches in the way he used to. Kagawa has refused a position in Japanese politics to keep his hands free and is now engaged in uniting a number of diverse groups in a political party. He does not believe that communism is a threat in Japan. General MacArthur's generosity, liberty, and justice are winning the Japanese, he says, and he warns against any change in policy. "Cotton, silk, kitchen utensils, bicycles, toys and fisheries will be the basis of Japanese industry in the future, according to Kagawa." Freedom from the armament burden will help economic life, as will also the opportunity to carry on trade with China, which no longer needs to fear Japan. More land on the mountain slopes can be cultivated. Kagawa wants the women of Japan to have the right to vote. The government talks of twelve million unemployed, but Kagawa thinks the figure is nearer twenty million. Asked about foreign policy, he suggested that "Christian cooperatives must be the foundation, not only of Japan, but of the entire world." The report also incidentally points out that 250 Christian churches in Tokyo were bombed or burned out and that only thirty-nine remain intact. We are glad for this report by Thomas Mackin. It sounds considerably different from some of those that came out during the war. It reveals a thought and spirit consistent with the Kagawa whom we knew before the war.

The Honorable Rhys J. Davies, Labour Member of the British Parliament, in his speech at Bethel College on October 15, pointed out in a number of ways the essential likeness of all peoples. He informed his audience that Kansas and England are about the same size, but that whereas Kansas has about two million inhabitants, England has forty-two million. "You begin there and you will understand the difference of our public," he declared. In the past four years the Englishman has had to do without oranges; he received one egg a month, two ounces of butter a week, and one-half pound of meat a week. On top of that he experienced death and destruction through bombing. No wonder that the feelings of the Englishman are slightly different from those of the Kansan although fundamentally they are alike as human beings, was the impression he gave one. Let such abject poverty and unemployment as overwhelmed Germany after the first world war come in any country and that country can produce a Hitler, he declared. No just and sound peace can be made except by taking the defeated people's viewpoint into consideration. That such factors as race, customs, and languages do not necessarily keep people apart, he stated, is shown by the harmony and cooperation of many peoples in such cities as New York and Chicago. He furthermore suggested that one can find among all the peoples the kind of people one makes a point to find. His concluding admonition that the 140,000,000 Americans drop on their knees each night and thank God that they happen to be living in this spot on the globe suggests that we simply have a unique advantage over others in our tremendous natural resources and in our geographical position. Mr. Davies left the impression that fundamentally the people of the world are very much alike. Mr. Davies is a pacifist. In the last election there was a 2,000 soldier vote in his district. A be-ribboned army general was his opponent. Nevertheless, 1,800 of the 2,000 soldiers voted for Mr. Davies who has been re-elected eight times. He stated that there were 12,000 C.O.'s in England during the First World War and 65,000 during the recent war. He predicted that there would be half a million if there were another war in ten years.

By Cornelius Krahn

Minister Shortage in Holland: The Mennonites of Holland fear an acute shortage of ministers. Reasons: Three joined the navy as chaplains, two died in concentration camps, one ministerial student was shot, one minister disappeared because he was affiliated with National Socialists, three will reach the age of retirement, sixty-five this year, etc. The Mennonite Theological Seminary, Amsterdam, has at present approximately twenty students, but it will take about four years before the first ones will be able to accept churches. (Personal letter)

Swiss Report About Fate of Mennonites Around Danzig: Among some Swiss who were eye witnesses to the invasion of Danzig by the Red Army, two report the following: Before the Reichswehr retreated it flooded the Vistula Delta. Those who had not yet left their homes were forced to do so. Most of the refugees fled by ship to Western Germany and Denmark. Four of these ships are reported to have been sunk with all passengers. Copenhagen alone had more than one hundred camps with up to 4,500 persons in one camp. Many died daily and were cremated. Many others are reported to have perished during the campaign around Danzig. A Mennonite Daily Devotional Calendar for Russians. The Mennonite Brethren Church of North America has published a Russian daily devotional calendar for missionary purposes. It is to be distributed to Russians in this country and abroad. The Mennonite Brethren have previously carried on mission work among Russians in Dakota and Canada.

Stalin and Religion: If asked, nearly every one in this country would say that religious conditions in Russia have improved. The Greek Catholic Russians of this country are not so positive in their answer. They say that the church of Russia has become so entirely dependent upon Stalin that he dares to use it as an instrument in foreign politics. The Patriarch of Moscow, inspired by Stalin, claims the loyalty of the Greek Catholic Russians of America, but the same American Russians who supported Stalin 100 per cent in his war efforts against Hitler refuse to take orders from the Patriarch at Moscow for no other reason than they consider him a puppet of Stalin. (Facts based upon Russian Church Abroad and the Patriarch of Moscow by I. Chervavin and Russian Life.)

OBSERVATIONS IN INDIA

By S. F. Pannabecker

(The following is the third and concluding article on "Observations in India." Dr. S. F. Pannabecker, the author, has drawn upon his extensive missionary experience in China and upon his recent stay in India for making a very interesting and enlightening comparison between the peoples of the two countries. We hope he will make further contributions as he establishes and conducts relief work in China.—Editor)

Christian Work

Against this difference in background the procedure of Christian missions and Christian churches in India must naturally differ in certain aspects from that in China. With persecution to be expected by a prospective convert from caste and religious sources there is little advantage to be expected from conversion to Christianity. In fact, from the viewpoint of economic and social relations the new convert in India can only anticipate trouble. His family disinherits him, his neighbors ostracize him, his business associates and fellow workers boycott him. Making a living may be almost impossible. Thus the very willingness to accept baptism may be regarded as a test of the new convert's sincerity.

In China this is not true. To be sure, there are cases where family trouble follows conversion, with persecution and disinheritance, but it is not necessarily so and the action of the community may be quite different from that of the family. In many cases, perhaps it could be said in most cases, there are possibilities of reward in conversion to Christianity. It may mean increased influence, it may mean opportunity for a salaried position, it may mean educational opportunities. Actually it means many things to many converts it should not mean. The problem therefore in China is to pick out the sincere from those prompted by ulterior motives. The reports of the last year before the war show that in our China mission field barely one-fourth of the eight hundred applicants were accepted for baptism.

One of the most remarkable characteristics of Christianity is that it has expected rebirth to result in a new person. So we have never hesitated to accept converts from an evil once their sincere faith in Christ was assured. Apart from the power of God it would be an unwarranted gamble to accept converts from heathenism and expect to make church pillars out of them. Yet this very thing happens, if not every time, at least time after time. In India our mission frankly accepts an expressed desire for baptism as an indication of faith leading to rebirth. They have had experiences where new inquirers were in a moment of delay whisked off by their friends and sent to the coal mines or elsewhere where they had no further opportunity of showing interest. Consequently, they are now ready to baptize immediately almost any applicant who is mature and knows his mind. They realize that then after baptism must follow a long period of constant attention and training.

In China we have found it more practicable to insist on tests of sincerity from applicants for baptism and to give them preliminary training before they are accepted for formal baptism. It is customary to expect a half year's church attendance before catechism instruction and probably attendance at two instruction classes separated by six months before examination for baptism. Thus the average candidate for baptism would have year's church attendance and two periods of instruction before acceptance into church membership.

Moral Life of New Converts

In all cases of conversion from a non-Christian background there are aspects of the old pre-Christian ideas and customs carried along. Many of these are not incompatible with Christian standards, such as forms of dress, greeting customs and aspects of the wedding ceremonies. Others are a definite detriment to Christian belief. Superstitious belief, for instance, may be an impediment to the working of the Spirit. In India the biggest problem with new converts seems to be that of moral relations between the sexes. This grows out of the lack of moral conscience on this point. Hindu laxity in sex relations is well known—additional wives are freely taken, temple prostitutes are approved, religious leaders, and even gods, themselves have illicit relations, and religion is sometimes interpreted in sexual symbols. With this background still in mind it is not surprising that new converts are easily tempted. It was presumably an unusual condition but yet significant that one church could have thirteen cases of moral aberration to consider within three months and that another church could have a woman member who had been suspended over ten times for the same reason.

While this evil cannot be said to exist in the Chinese church, it is suppressed by the strict Chinese moral feeling on the matter. When cases do occur they are usually dealt with rather drastically and the offenders are not likely to seek further fellowship with the church. A spirit of self righteousness and Pharisaical superiority develops which is often quite as harmful to church life as grosser sins. Unworthy aspirations for wealth and position and compromise with the "world" are the more likely sources of sins among the Chinese converts. These again are closely related to the background from which they come.

A difference in the methods of church discipline has already been hinted at and its reason will be obvious. Excommunication from the Chinese church is the simplest way of punishing serious misdemeanors. The offender goes back into society and is regarded by many of the church brethren as no better than a

MCC Reports Progress on Food for Relief Program

By John M. Snyder

The response of the churches of the United States and Canadian constituencies of the Mennonite Central Committee to the Food for Relief Program has been most encouraging. It is the purpose of this report to give information as to what is being done, and what we hope will be done in the coming months.

Food for Relief Folder Being Distributed

The printed folder on the relief food program is now off the press and has been mailed out to the ministers of the churches. Anyone wishing extra copies of this folder may receive them by writing to your M.C.C. office for them. The delay in getting this folder out has resulted from the many matters which needed to be cleared in arranging for receiving and exporting home processed foods for relief. Most of the information contained in the folder has been sent out earlier in mimeographed form to leaders in the canning programs of the various communities. It is hoped that the printed folder will serve to further stimulate interest in the program, particularly in view of the fact that the most important part of the processing of foods for relief namely, meats and fats, will come in the months just ahead.

Collection of Foods Now Under Way

Judging from the letters being received, and from the requests for jar labels for relief food, there has been a very considerable amount of fruits and vegetables canned during the past months. Collection of these foods is proceeding, and they will be processed for shipment abroad with the least possible delay.

Russell Massanari, director of the food program in the U. S. and C. J. Rempel, director of the Canadian program, have visited the Mennonite communities where the regional food warehouses in their respective countries are being set up, and they have also given assistance in organizing local collection centers in these communities where necessary. Appropriate announcement of the location of collection centers to which contributions of food are to be brought will be made through church papers or by notices to ministers and leaders.

To those who did not receive information on the Food for Relief Program in time to raise or provide extra fruits and vegetables for this purpose, we offer the suggestion that sharing a few quarts from supplies canned for home consumption during the winter would be a worthy expression of Christian love for our neighbors in need provided we "give of our best to the Master." Or, better still, perhaps, since the most needed home processed foods are meats and fats, and the meat processing season is just beginning, extra effort might be put forth along this line.

The fact that the collection of food contributions has begun should not be taken as an indication that the Food for Relief processing is considered to be completed. Collection is proceeding in order to get foods now on hand to their destination as soon as possible. It is hoped that there will be a sustained interest and effort throughout the coming months in processing meats and fats, which are needed in unlimited amounts.

Ways in Which the Program is Being Carried on

In one conference district the District Mission Board has assumed active responsibility for promoting the Food for Relief Program in its district. A brother has been placed in charge of the work for the district, to give as much time as is required in helping local communities to organize their efforts and in getting information before the people. Several brethren of the district are building a portable canning plant which will be placed at the disposal of the District Mission Board for use in canning meats, fats, and other foods. This canning plant will be taken to farms or other places where canning is to be done, thus greatly facilitating the canning, particularly of meats and fats without violating requirements for exemption from Federal inspection.

In another district there is a tomato canning plant owned by two brethren and located on their farm. They have offered their facilities to the surrounding community for canning any meats or other foods which need not be inspected. Chicken, turkey, and other fowl will be canned here during the coming months. Also, since pork and beans do not require inspection, it is planned to can considerable quantities of pork and beans with a high percentage of pork and pork fat at this plant. Further, these brethren do some cattle raising and they are offering to persons who might wish to do so the privilege of acquiring beef which was produced on their farm, slaughtering it there, and then using the facilities of the cannery for processing it. It would thus meet the requirements for exemption from inspection and at the same time could be packed in tin cans and pressure cooked.

From still another community comes the following: "Our people are canning for European relief with much enthusiasm and earnestness. Those in authority at Smithville High School have offered the facilities of the Home Ec. room and cafeteria for relief canning. Three times groups of women made use of this, processing over 100 quarts each time. Also in one home a number of sisters gathered to make about 40 quarts of vegetable soup but ended up with 105 quarts, and so it goes on by groups and individuals in their homes. Two Sunday School classes also are planning to kill and process a beef."

Reports coming from Mennonite communities in Canada show a live interest in the processing of meat for relief. One congregation of sixty-five members has already butchered five steers and two hogs which were donated for relief. Others are planning similar efforts. Through the very fine cooperation of Canadian rationing officials up to 100,000 quarts of canned meats and fats may be processed and donated for relief point free, which will greatly facilitate the operation of the program there.

Personal Sugar Rations Contributed for Relief Canning

Both in the United States and Canada it was impossible to obtain special canning sugar rations for relief canning. In spite of this handicap there has been a considerable amount of jams, preserves, and butters, as well as sweetened canned fruits, contributed. One church in Canada, where sugar is more strictly rationed than in the United States, reports that they received enough sugar from individuals to make 500 quarts of jam. Other communities, both in the United States and Canada, have likewise contributed generously from their own rations of sugar. These contributions are indeed a worthy expression of the principle of sacrifice for the sake of our fellowmen in need.

Other Kinds of Food Being Contributed

A number of tons of dried prunes, raisins, and other dried fruits, some dehydrated potatoes, a carload or more of navy beans, several thousand quarts of home canned salmon, several tons of soy beans, also sorghum molasses, honey, and other products of our Mennonite and Brethren in Christ farms, gardens, and orchards have been reported as among the contributions which will be received for this program.

Wheat and Flour Contributions

The Mennonite Central Committee is in a position to handle all contributions of these commodities which our people will wish to give. In the United States approximately fifteen carloads are in prospect for shipment within the next two months. Most of this will be flour, which is preferred to whole wheat because milling facilities in European countries have been badly disrupted. The first contributions of one carload wheat and four carloads flour will go to Holland. Arrangements are in process for shipment of some later contributions of flour to France, where our workers have made specific request for this commodity.

A number of carloads of wheat and flour from Canadian Mennonite Communities are also being contributed. Since these contributions are coming largely from the Western Provinces arrangements have been handled in large part by Bro. C. F. Klassen of Winnipeg, Manitoba. During his absence in Europe inquiries relative to wheat and flour contributions in Canada may be directed to the Kitchener office.

Whole wheat flour is acceptable, but it is not preferred because it is more liable to deteriorate in storage. White flour, 85% extracted, is preferred, according to advice received by the Akron office. Flour may be pecked in 100 lb. cotton bags, and each bag should be marked so as to identify the contributions as from Mennonite sources. This is to facilitate transfer of the flour to our own workers abroad for distribution. Printed tags for marking the bags are available from the Akron office for the United States and from the Kitchener office for Canada.

Following are outlined procedures to be followed by United States contributors of flour or wheat for relief: (This does not apply to Canada. Contact the Kitchener office or C. F. Klassen for information on handling of Canadian shipments.)

1. Some local person or committee should assume responsibility for determining the amount of wheat or flour which will be contributed from their locality or group.

2. Write to the Akron office, advising of the amount being contributed, and specifying whether wheat or flour. In the case of flour, request the number of tags needed for attaching to the bags.

3. At the earliest possible date advise the Akron office of the date when the shipment will be ready. Allow two weeks time for exchange of correspondence if possible. The Akron office will immediately obtain necessary permits for moving the shipment to the point of export and will advise the local person or committee in charge of arrangements of permit numbers and full shipping instructions. Shipments will be picked up at the local elevator or mill. In the case of shipments to Holland all transportation will be borne by the Holland government or affiliated organizations. In the case of shipments to France, transportation to port of export will be borne by M.C.C. unless arrangements may be worked out by which the French government or affiliated organizations will assume it. From port of export to France shipping costs will be borne by the French government. Shipping permits for movement to port of export are required for wheat, but not for flour.

4. Straight bill of lading should be used for billing all wheat and flour shipments. Immediately upon date of shipment the ORIGINAL BILL OF LADING should be mailed to the AKRON OFFICE. Necessary records will be made from this, and it will then be forwarded to the proper person for handling the shipment at point of export.

Packing of Additional Shipments of Canned Foods Begins at Lancaster Warehouse

With the arrival of the C.P.S. men who have been assigned by Selective Service to our food program, packing of additional food shipments to Puerto Rico, Holland, and France is going forward. Surplus foods on hand from the 1944 C.P.S. canning program will go forward first, to be followed as rapidly as

CORRESPONDENCE

OKLAHOMA CONVENTION MET SEPTEMBER 15-17

The Oklahoma Convention held its sessions September 15, 16, 17 at the Medford Mennonite Church. The convention theme was "That in all things he might have the preeminence" (1) In Salvation (2) Separation (3) Glorification.

The convention theme was very ably presented by one of our speakers Rev. Orlando Wiebe of Meade Kansas. The other speaker was Missionary P. J. Boehr, at present from Pandora, Ohio, who spoke along the line of missions. From all reports the messages were timely and many were blessed through them.

For the next year the officers are: Chairman, Rev. H. A. Fast, Orienta; Treasurer, Otto Pankratz, Cordell; Program Committee, Rev. C. B. Friesen, Bessie and Mrs. H. J. Buller, Orienta.—Ernest Voth, Sec.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH Colfax, Washington

September 17 to 21 was a red-letter week for us, as we were privileged to hear two "sets" of missionaries. Mr. and Mrs. Lester Wuthrich came September 17 and gave some of their experiences of internment in the Philippines. On Friday evening, Rev. Wedel and Miss Foth joined us at a pot-luck supper at the church. Later in the evening they gave vivid descriptions of their work. Rev. Wedel told of the conditions which exist among the negroes of the south and their dire need for both the spiritual and material. Miss Foth told some of her experiences with the children in the tenement districts of Brooklyn and the change salvation made to people steeped in sin. The Waltner girls are attending Biola. Marjorie Aeschliman is teaching music in Idaho Falls, Idaho. Lucile Buri has enrolled at Washington State College and Betty Aeschliman is beginning her senior year at W.S.C.

Lt. Flossie Aeschliman has just returned from Europe. It has been nearly four years since she was last home. We are thankful that not one of the twenty-four stars on our service flag are gold. Harvey Rubin has just received his discharge and at present is working in Portland, Oregon.

The Women's Missionary Society has packed seventeen Christmas relief packages and several dozen quarts of fruit in the last three months, besides filling requests of the district supply committee and packing a kit for an eight-year-old girl.—Mrs. Alvin M. Rubin, Corr.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH Madrid, Nebraska

Our Harvest Home Service of September 23 was followed by four days of missionary Bible conference. The Spirit of the Lord was felt in all the services. Our speakers were Mr. and Mrs. Waldo Harder, who have been working with the Hopi Indians, relieving the Sudermans for almost two years, and now plan to sail for Africa; Miss Mary Becker, a candidate for South America, and Brother Abraham Unruh, working in the Kentucky Mountains. We were glad for the cooperation the Mission Board gave us at this time. The people showed their gratitude by their generous offerings which totalled $831.48 during the five days. Offering for Home mission work held Sunday morning amounted to $154.64. This was divided into three-thirds, one-third to the Home Mission Board of the General Conference, one-third to the Northern District, and one-third for local mission work. The afternoon offering was for foreign missions and amounted to $359.85. The evening offering of $215.83 was for European Relief. Sunday offering $730.32. Monday evening, $14.66, Tuesday evening $63.70. This was for Kentucky Mountain work. Wednesday evening $12.20 and Thursday $10.60.

GRACE MENNONITE CHURCH Pandora, Ohio

During the summer the Ladies Missionary Society presented a religious drama, entitled, "Living Characters," which was a vivid portrayal of the history of the Bible and its eternal, Message to every generation. They also sent twenty-four Christmas gift boxes, filled by various organizations and individuals, to the M.C.C.

The adult Sunday School classes again were joined for the month of August, as is done each year, and were taught by Rev. Ernest Bohn, and Dr. L. L. Ramseyer of Bluffton College.

Other visitors in the pulpit the past summer were Miss M. Della Moon of Bluffton College. Rev. P. E. Whitmen of Bluffton, and Rev. E. J. Hostetler of Kent, Connecticut.

At the weekly prayer meeting service favorite Psalms are being studied.

A Social Action Committee has been appointed by the church council to assist the pastor in meeting the problems of the post war era in the community. Such problems as assisting the young men in the service and any other of a community nature will be the work of this committee.—Corr.

UPPER MILFORD MENNONITE CHURCH Zionsville, Pa.

Forty-seven members and friends of the C.E. gave the September 2 afternoon program at the Home for the Aged. The pastor brought the message. The new Sunday School song books were dedicated September 9. The books are a gift from one of the members. At the request of the young people of the church, Rev. Howard Nyce, Pastor, has started a Bible study course, beginning in the New Testament. The C. E. is again meeting on a Wednesday evening, once a month, as before the war. The church celebrated its Two Hundred Fifth Anniversary on September 30, and in connection with it held the Eighth Reunion of the Sunday School. The morning pro-

What Should Be Done with the Beverage Alcohol?

One of the oldest problems which has plagued mankind is that associated with the drinking of the beverage alcohol. We can find evidences of this beverage's use in India and China as far back as 3,000 years, and there is good reason to believe that primitive peoples discovered its pleasurable effects as long ago as 10,000 years.

Almost every society has attempted to control the consumption of it. The Vedas of India, for example, prohibited it entirely, and even to this day a good Hindu does not drink. The Mohammedons have likewise stringently prohibited its use. Russia, France, and the United States are among the many modern countries which have experimented with national prohibition.

There have been individuals who have declared that the very fact that alcohol has been used for so long by mankind is proof that its beneficial effects outweigh its harmful effects. These people assert that should alcohol have been definitely harmful, society would have eliminated it long ago. This statement is sheer poppy-cock! Who questions the harm done to society by war? Or by prostitution? Yet these practices have not been eliminated by mankind over a long period of years.

There are those who emphasize the fact that alcohol is a food. They point out that white rats which are nurtured on a partial diet of alcohol will eat less and yet grow correspondingly larger than those which are which are fed on a normal diet. They say that barley seeds placed in a solution of alcohol will sprout far more rapidly and grow larger stalks than seeds placed in distilled water. They declare that alcohol is assimilated directly through the membranes of the stomach and small intestines into the blood stream where it is oxidized and produces energy. Therefore, assert these individuals, alcohol is a food! Granted. But what type of a food it is? Per calory it is at least ten times as expensive as milk, and its rapid assimilation and oxidation with a consequent rapid release of heat, plus the fact that it contains no minerals, vitamins, or proteins—basic essentials to a good food—make it unique in relation to all other foods.

Great emphasis has also been placed upon the pleasurable neural effects derived from the consumption of the beverage alcohol. Protagonists of this point of view affirm that since alcohol is slightly narcotic in its effect, and strikes the central nervous system, its moderate use helps take the nervous tension away from one and make one more amiable, affable and friendly. Perhaps so, but its moderate use just as often has diametrically opposite effects. Furthermore, it should be noted that a meagre quantity has a decided effect on the cerebrum of the brain, and its indiscriminate and excessive use incapacitates the latter. The cerebrum controls the senses of speech, sight, smell, and touch. It also controls the imagination, judgement, memory, and powers of reflective thought—capacities which distinguish man from the rest of his animal brethren. The drinker literally paralyzes those capacities which make him a man, and places himself in the same category as that of the brute.

The argument has been proposed that the progressive, leading nations of the world, such as Japan, United States, Great Britain, and Germany, are huge consumers of hard liquor, while such nations as India, China, and those of the Near East, which have limited its consumption over a long period of years, have been unprogressive. Hence, the conclusion is drawn that the use of alcohol is conducive to national vigor. Now you can readily see that such an argument is as illogical as to say that the increase in the consumption of peanuts has caused the increase in the rate of cancer. No, the causes for the leadership of the nations listed are far more complex. The causes are historical, geographical, and economic, rather than the result of a huge consumption of hard liquor. On the other hand, unfavorable factors of an identical nature have retarded the progress of India, China, and the Far East. Furthermore, there is actual question as to the cultural supremacy of these so-called "leading" nations. True, in the political and economic realm they are the leaders. Their cultural pattern is more complex. In the art of war they cannot be excelled. But are these the criteria by which to judge a nation or a culture great? The Eskimos, who have offered time and again to teach the white man how to live at peace with his neighbors, or the Yakuts of Siberia, who have the custom of sharing all food, and allowing none to starve, are in some respects far superior to our Western civilization of bitter competition and strife.

By this time you have undoubtedly discovered that we are opposed to the consumption of the beverage alcohol. We are interested in eliminating its use because we are interested in making this world a better and a happier place in which to live.

When you suggest to a person that he shouldn't drink, he will probably tell you that "it's nobody's business whether he drinks or not except his own". That's where he's mistaken! Drinking is society's business, because there is no way in existence in which a man can drink and not effect someone else. The facts that he spends his money to purchase the drink effects someone else, because someone else has produced it and has sold it. The fact that this money could have been spent on someone else, or for something else makes alcohol a social problem. The fact that alcohol has certain reactions upon the individual, and that this individual must eventually mingle with other individuals in social relationships makes the consumption of alcohol a social problem. The fact that habits are largely the result of imitation and that culture traits are largely the result of diffusion or borrowing makes the consumption of alcohol a social problem. So complex are our social inter-relationships that an ancient seer declared, "no man liveth unto himself", and Ernest Hemingway can declare in For Whom the Bell Tolls that "should one grain of sand fall from the cliff, the continent will be the less, and the sea will be the more."

Money spent on liquor is money that frequently should be used to provide children or wives with food and clothing, should be used to provide families with adequate shelter. For every three dollars spent on liquor in the United States, only one is spent for education. The amount of money spent on liquor yearly in the United States, could build every family in the city of Chicago a $3,000 dwelling place. How can any drinker say truthfully that "drinking is his own business"?

The drunken driver who hits an innocent victim cannot say that his drinking affects only himself. The worker who gets to work late, or who is guilty of absenteeism caused by "hang-overs" from liquor cannot say that his drinking is only "his business." "Clear Heads Choose Calvert" becomes a paradox when considered in the light of our huge industrial accident rate. Are industrial accidents and automobile accidents just one man's business?

MATERIAL FOR TEMPERANCE TALKS AND SERVICES

Material on temperance may be secured from the School of Alcohol Studies of the Laboratory of Applied Physiology at Yale University, 4 Hillhouse Avenue, New Haven, Connecticut. About one-third of the 147 persons enrolled in this school during the summer of 1944 were clergymen. Others were educators, physicians, lawyers, social workers, probation officers, members of staffs of state liquor authorities, officers of temperance organizations, employees of the alcoholic beverage industry and individuals who have become free from the drink habit. These numerous lecturers considered the alcohol problem in its psychological, physiological, sociological, anthropological, educational, medical, legal and religious aspects. Proceedings of the sessions are in book form and may be obtained from the above address.

Contemporary society has devised very careful laws to deal with narcotics. We have long ago discovered that we cannot permit the indiscriminate use of opium and morphine, the social costs were just too high. Recently we have discovered that phenobarbital (or common sleeping tablets) might have harmful social consequences, and we do not tolerate its purchase without a doctor's prescription. Yet, we are illogical enough to permit an individual to get a narcotic equally as potent from the tavern across the street. The social costs we are paying in terms of broken homes, culminations of marriage in divorce and separation, often caused directly by the consumption of alcohol, are sufficient to make the assertion by any drinker that his drinking is "his own business" seem ridiculous.

Our nation is paying a tremendous economic bill for its consumption of liquor. Consider, for example, the huge crime bill which we pay annually, some fifteen billion dollars in a peak year before the war. Many criminologists affirm that numerous crimes are committed by men and women under the influence of liquor. Or consider the huge bill we pay annually on venereal disease. Many doctors will affirm that there is a distinct connection between the use of liquor and the patronage of prostitutes, for not only is alcohol an aphrodisiac, but in addition the sober man invariably has too much pride and self respect to degrade himself in such a contemptable manner. Consider the industrial bill we are paying caused by laborers who could be more efficient should they not be victims of habitual drinking. Consider the cost we are paying in terms of expenditures on institutions for inebriates and occupational derelicts caused by the use of alcohol. Consider the medical bills society is paying—medical bills which can be traced directly to the excessive consumption of alcohol.

But don't forget, the individual drinker also pays his compensation to alcohol. Although only two or three per cent of the drinkers suffer from alcoholism and die inebriates, yet there are a host of diseases which scientists assert can be either caused or aggravated by the use of alcohol—diseases ranging from stomach ulcers to nephritis. Insurance companies through actuarial computations state that drinkers are poor risks—that they live on the average ten to fifteen years less than non-drinkers.

But the whole trouble is with the excessive drinker, you protest. Why prevent everyone from drinking just because a few abuse their privileges? Moderate drinking does not have the detrimental effects which you so alarmingly portray. But consider for a moment: Do we ask whether individuals can consume opium, morphine, or phenobarbital in moderation? No. We recognize that these drugs have socially harmful potentialities, and therefore we prohibit their indiscriminate use entirely.

In conclusion, is Prohibition the answer? It can be asserted in this connection concerning our experience with prohibition that it was not given a fair trial. No real effort was made to enforce it. It had no governmental support. Should the government have been genuinely interested, it would have appropriated and could now appropriate huge amounts of money for popular education against the use of alcohol. It could utilize the movies, radio, and newspapers, in short pungent, informative skits. Instead, leading governmental officials drink to their hearts content, and a former president's wife spoke enthusiastically about "bringing beer into every American home."

Taking cognizance of the present state of popular opinion, the widespread lack of information concerning the facts, and the wide prevalence of the habit, we suggest that our nation make a more realistic effort at cutting down the social costs of alcohol by a more rational regulatory program. We might well emulate the Canadian system of control. In Canada the distilleries are owned and operated by the Dominion government. The profits are taken out of the private production of liquor. There is positively no newspaper, radio, or magazine advertising. People are not encouraged to drink. The dispensaries are owned and operated by the government, and are put in unobtrusive places. There are no glaring neon signs luring customers in to purchase a bottle of Schlenley's or Four Roses. Only licensed purchasers can obtain liquor, and the license is subject to revocation upon the commission of several offenses, such as a domestic disturbance or an automobile accident. The actual drinking must be done at the home of the purchaser. Canada is learning that civilized man can control his vices. She is learning that drunken men in street gutters are not a necessity in a modern, civilized state. She is learning that education plus proper measures of control can bring tangible results. It is about time that we are taking notice of our neighbor's good sense! Carlus O. Basinger, B. D., M. A., University of Chicago; and Deloris Virginia Henson, Y. M. C. A. College, Chicago, Illinois—June, 1945.

heathen. In India the return of a convert to his old society is not so simple since he has made a serious breach of caste. Consequently, excommunication which puts the offender out of church fellowship may cause untold harm, for out of church and out of caste a lone individual has no place in Indian society. Indian church discipline thus tends to be a little less drastic, more in the nature of suspension from fellowship. While thus suspended the erring convert retains some church connections and eventually takes steps for reinstatement. This is usually accomplished through a public confession and a period of limited church privileges.

Lest someone should think that the churches on the mission field are filled with weak converts who have been or need to be disciplined, I would like to add my testimony to the strength and vitality of mission churches. For their understanding and in their environment the average members are not one whit behind average home church members in character and conduct, their ministers compared with their people are as well trained and as sacrificial, and the members are standing faithful in the face of more dangers and persecutions than our churches in America have had to endure.

sure enough she did it. It was to befriend and help and love the next little new-comer, whom we found on the mountain side, badly beaten and bruised and left for dead by her relations because she too had caught leprosy.

I wonder what would have happened to Little Miss Liu and the little new-comer if the Home had not been there to take them in? You will pray for these people, won't you, and do all you can to help them?

possible by the food being gathered from the 1945 program. Shipment will be made as frequently as sufficient quantities accumulate and shipping arrangements can be cleared.

A Word of Appreciation

To those who have labored faithfully during the past months to produce and process fruits and vegetables for relief canning—to those who have contributed of their personal sugar rations for this purpose—to those who have been processing and those who are planning to process meats and fats in the coming months for relief—to those in many communities who have enthusiastically lead out in organizing and encouraging the work—to all who have had a part in providing food which is more than mere food because it is a product of love given "In the Name of Christ"—we express our appreciation in behalf of those for whom it is given. May God bless and reward these efforts and multiply the fruits thereof to His glory and praise.

INDEFENSIBLE NEGLECT

Editor, The Mennonite:

Ever since the close of the General Conference session, last June, I have been tempted to write to "The Mennonite" and give my impression of the Conference.

I was present at the opening of every meeting and every meeting was opened with singing, Scripture reading and prayer. Each devotion was conducted by a different minister. At only one meeting was prayer made for our President, the Government of the U. S. A. or the San Francisco Conference, then in session. If there was ever a cause which we as a Mennonite group could and should support with our prayers, it seems to me it is the San Francisco Conference and still our Conference officers and ministers chose or neglected not to bring the matter before the throne of God in prayer. Our President and men in high office and our Government certainly should not have been slighted in this manner.

On Thursday evening, May 31, immediately following the communion service, the Thanksgiving service for the returned missionary couples and their children was conducted. These Missionaries, who had just returned a few months ago from the prison camp in the Phillipines Islands, thanked God for answer to prayer and for God's keeping power during their imprisonment, but not one word of thanks did they utter for the American soldiers who liberated them. God could have brought about the release of these Missionaries if He had so desired, but in this instance He chose to use American soldiers to bring about their liberation, so why not give credit where credit is due. These folks would probably be rotting in the Phillipines today had it not been for the sacrifice made by our soldiers and sailors. Many of these no doubt gave their lives that they might be saved. I believe this neglect or oversight was indefensible.

After the liberation these Missionaries were brought to Leyte and there they were fed and clothed by the Red Cross until they were strong enough to be brought home to the U. S. A. Not one word of this was mentioned by any of the missionaries in a public meeting and not one word of public recognition for all this has ever been made by them or the Foreign Mission Board. Privately they have told of the thrill which was theirs when they knew that American troops had come to liberate them. Would it be offensive to some Mennonite had the Army and Navy been mentioned in the Memorial Hall or are we so devoid of common decency that we cannot express a word of gratitude or thanks to those to whom we owe so much?

The Resolutions Committee, in my estimation, also "missed the boat" when they failed to pass a resolution, thanking the Government for the permission to hold the conference, and to thank the U. S. Army for liberating our missionaries, and in failing to mention the San Francisco Conference.

I might add here that I did not attend the conference session on Tuesday when the Resolution Committee gave its report, as I had to leave Newton in the morning of that day.

Aside from this I enjoyed every session of the conference.

gram included a message by Rev. Samuel K. Piercy, and selections by the local choir. The afternoon program was composed of marimba solos, selections by the Neapolitan Male Chorus, Allentown, several piano selections by a blind member of the chorus, and an address by Harold H. Helfrich, Judge of Allentown. During the noon hour sandwiches, cake, and coffee were served by the ladies.—Esther R. Geissing, Corr.

EAST SWAMP MENNONITE CHURCH Quakertown, Pa.

Sunday afternoon, September 16, Rev. A. H. Schultz was installed as pastor of the East Swamp Mennonite Church near Quakertown, Pa. Rev. Olin Krehbiel gave the charge to Rev. Schultz and Rev. Freeman Swartz gave the charge to the congregation. Rev. Howard Nyce, President of Eastern District Conference, officially installed Rev. Schultz. Others participating in this Conference service were Deacon Robert A. Landis of the local congregation who had charge of the service, Rev. John Boehr son of the congregation who directed the song service, and Rev. Walter J. Dick who lead in the devotions. Special music was provided by the local choir and a solo by Mrs. Walter Jenkins. Other pastors that gave their greetings were: Rev. J. J. Plenert, Rev. Regier, and Herbert Fretz. Greetings were sent by Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, Rev. Ward Shelly, as well as Rev. Harold D. Burkholder former pastor now serving Immanuel Church, Los Angeles, California.

September 18 to 23 the East Swamp Mennonite Church had the privilege of having Dr. H. Framer Smith back for their fall Bible Conference. Dr. Smith is a well known Bible teacher and preacher. His subjects were centered around "With Christ in the Gospel Accounts." A rich blessing was received by all who attended.—Marie Landis

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. CATHRINE CLAASSEN, daughter of Heinrich and Marie Penner, nee Penner, was born August 17, 1867, at Warnau, West Prussia. She was baptized in 1884 by Elder John Toews. In 1888 she married John J. Claassen, and in the same year they migrated to Beatrice, Nebraska. She was called to her reward on September 19, 1945. Three sons and four daughters mourn her departure.

AMOS LUGIBIHL, seventy-six, Pandora, Ohio, died August 1, 1945 on the same farm where he was born and resided all his life-time. He was never married. Surviving are two sisters: Mrs. Levina Basinger, Salt Lake City, Utah; Mrs. Barbara Basinger, and a brother, Lewis, of Pandora. Mr. Lugibihl was a member of the Grace Mennonite Church.

MARIA UNRUH, oldest daughter of John and Helena (nee Ediger) Unruh, was born May 4, 1856, in Poland, and passed away in death August 25, 1945. She lost her mother in infancy and her father after they had moved to Russia in 1862. With her foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Unruh, she migrated to Marion County, Kansas, in 1874, where she was baptized in 1875 and received into the Alexanderwohl Church. In 1888 she married Jacob Unruh, who preceded her in death in 1918. She is mourned by two children; William, Goessel; Mrs. Maria Voth, Walton; and five step children: Henry J. Unruh, Peter J. Unruh, David S. Unruh, John A. Unruh, and Mrs. P. U. Schmidt.

RELIEF

Clothing Shipments During September

The clothing and soap shipped abroad from Mennonite collection centers during the month of September totaled approximately twenty-six and one-half tons and was valued at $48,891.98. Shipments were made as follows: from Kitchener, September 15, 10,225 pounds of clothing to England for Holland; from Winnipeg, September 15, 2,385 pounds to England for Holland; from Akron, September 23, 36,130 pounds of clothing and 4,450 pounds of soap to Holland.

Four Workers Leave for Northwest Europe

Four Mennonite relief workers—Siegfried Janzen, Winona, Ont.; John Fretz, Kitchener, Ont.; Harry Willems, Waldheim, Sask., Cornelius Dyck, Laird, Sask.—sailed from New York, October 8, for assignments in Holland and England. They are expected to disembark at Le Havre, France, from which point Brothers Janzen and Fretz will proceed to Amsterdam and Brothers Willems and Dyck will travel to London.

Nurse Arrives in Ethiopia

Nancy Hernley arrived in Addis Ababa, October 3, according to a cable received at Akron.

Report on "Food for Relief" Program

With the relief notes this week, the Akron office is releasing a report on the progress being made to collect food and prepare it for shipment to relief areas. This report not only tells what is being done but also contains some instructions regarding the program. Particular attention is called to the explanation regarding wheat and flour contributions. The M. C. C. will process such donations along with other types of food contributions our people may wish to give. See progress report for further explanation and instructions.

The Mennonite Relief Program in France

The present phase of the M.C.C. relief program in France—"Secours Mennonite aux Enfants"—began in March of this year when Samuel Goering and Henry Buller were able to enter that country. At the time of their entry, three children's homes were in operation. Since that time three additional homes have been set up and a central office has been established. Eight Mennonite workers are serving in this part of the relief program and four more are under appointment.

The six children's homes in operation are: (1) the former Canet-Pilage convalescent home now at Lavercantiere, in south-central France about sixty miles north of Toulouse; (2) the "Le Dolivet" nursery at Plottes, about seventy miles north of Lyon; (3) the "Chateau Mont Simon" children's colony, near Vesours, also north of Lyon; (4) the "Chateau du Chevagny," a babies' home near Macon, also north of Lyon; (5) a children's home at Wissembourg in Alsace; and (6) a children's home at Anetz par Ancenis, a town near Nantes in western France.

The central office of Secours Mennonite was provisionally set up at Pont-de-Vaux, a town north of Lyon and the former home of Roger Georges, the French Christian who directed the Mennonite work during the German occupation. More recently the central office has been permanently established at Chalon-sur-Saone, a city about ninety miles north of Lyon. Besides providing a center for the relief personnel in France this office is also serving as a clothing depot and distribution center. A center has also been established in Paris in cooperation with the Brethren Service Committee. This office in the capital city will serve incoming workers and also be the headquarters when official and business contacts have to be made in the city.

Relief Briefs

Orie Miller arrived in Akron on October 5 after being abroad for almost four months.

Church-School Day in C.P.S.

Mennonite and Brethren in Christ colleges are cooperating with the C. P. S. Section at Akron in providing for a Church-School Day in all Mennonite camps and units sometime in the month of November. During the month representatives from the colleges will be released for a period of about two weeks for a three-day period and the smaller units, one or two days. With demobilization in sight, this endeavor has grown out of the concerns of the colleges to challenge C.P.S. men to continue their education in high school, college, or in a less formal way in their home community. Church-School Day will be provided only for those who wish to take part.

C. P. S. Demobilization

While the way has been cleared, as far as Congress is concerned, for Selective Service to proceed with the "systematic release" of C. P. S. men, progress has been bogged down evidently by the pressure of several veteran groups who are holding national conventions during the month of October. There have been indications that Selective Service looks forward to closing a number of camps at an early date, but to date no releases have been processed except those for assignees thirty-nine years of age and over. Released October 10.

COLLEGE NEWS

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

Two hundred thirty-five guests attended the Homecoming Dinner October 13 and listened to a stirring address by Rev. Andrew Shelly, '39, pastor of the Mennonite Church at Kitchener, Ontario. The first monthly faculty discussion meeting was held October 19. It was in the form of a picnic attended by faculty members and wives. The topic was "The Faculty as a Spiritual Force." Rev. E. J. Bohn, Rev. P. E. Whitmer, and Rev. J. N. Smucker spoke and led the discussion. Rev. Homer Leisy, Vice-president of the General Conference, was the chapel speaker on October 11. The program has been arranged for the Ministers' Conference to be held during Bible Lecture week, November 13, 14. The first day will be given to a study of the educational task of the church, the second to pastoral visitation and counseling. In addition to speakers chosen from the group itself, Rev. Walter H. Dyck, Secretary of the General Conference and Pastor of First Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, will discuss the topics, "Teaching the Peace Doctrine" and "Counseling Young People in the Church."

BETHEL COLLEGE

A high point in the school calendar this year was the Sunday of October 14, when Founders' Day was celebrated throughout the day's services, culminating in the evening program of thanksgiving for the sacrificial effort of our people in liquidating the college debt. Rev. Arnold Epp read from Psalm 96 and prayers were offered by Rev. J. M. Regier, P. A. Penner, and Dr. P. H. Richert. The addresses were given by Dr. P. J. Wedel on "Glimpses into Bethel's History" and by Dr. E. E. Leisy (Dallas, Texas), on "The Second Mile." Young people's choirs from Alexanderwohl, Eden, and Pretty Prairie furnished special music. The afternoon was given to the twelfth annual observance of Parent-Student Day with "Open House" at all dormitories and faculty homes from 1:30 to 3:30. The traditional program and fellowship hour followed in Memorial Hall, during which Neva Schmidt (Chouteau, Oklahoma), spoke for the students, C. D. Kaufman for the parents, P. F. Quiring for the Board, and President Kaufman for the Faculty.

THE MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY AND BIBLE SCHOOL

The Home Mission Board of the General Conference has taken official action to support the Practical Work Program of the Seminary in and around Chicago. The churches also show a kind attitude toward the work. That is of the Lord, and we praise Him and the friends most heartily.

Dr. C. Henry Smith, Bluffton, Ohio, has greatly added to the spirit of hope and enthusiasm in the school while teaching his survey course in Mennonite History. He completes his work on Friday, October 12. Our gratitude goes with him as he leaves us. Next Monday we shall be happy to welcome Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Krehbiel from Newton, Kansas. Brother Krehbiel will teach a class in Menonite Polity during the coming six weeks. Both Dr. and Mrs. Krehbiel will contribute much to our Mennonite fellowship.

The Board of Directors has voted in favor of the monthly publication of a seminary bulletin. The first issue is to come out on November 15. Faculty and students have agreed to cooperate in the enterprise.

The formal opening of the schools on October 4 brought a large number of friends to the institution. It was an hour of inspiration and dedication, the power of which will be felt in years to come. The addresses of the four speakers were uplifting and challenging. Other participants in the program, including the Seminary Quartet, contributed much to make it "very good."

A saintly poet once sang: "The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof; the world and they that dwell therein." Ps. 24:1. That shall be true also of our Seminary and Bible School. They are the Lord's dedicated unto Him for service and praise.

By the leading of God, the work is going on. New students have applied for admission. The Seminary and Bible School look forward toward greater aims. —A. Warkentin, 3435 Van Buren, Chicago 24, Illinois.

"Others"

*Lord help me live from day to day,
In such a self-forgetful way,
That even when I kneel to pray,
My prayers shall be for—Others.*

*Help me in all the works I do,
To ever be sincere and true,
And know that all I'd do for you,
Must needs be done for—Others.*

*Let self be crucified and slain,
And buried deep; and all in vain,
My efforts be to rise again,
Unless to live for—Others.*

*And when my work on earth is done,
And when my new work in Heaven's begun,
May I forget the crown I've won,
While thinking still of—Others.*

*Others—Lord yea—Others,
Let this my motto be,
Help me live for—Others,
That I may live like Thee.*

OUR MINISTRY OF EDUCATION

J. H. Langenwaller Reports on Visit to Ontario, Canada

Ontario lies nestled between the Great Lakes and Hudson Bay and is spotted with a surprising number of lakes, both great and small. It is also skirted by the Niagara and the St. Lawrence Rivers. That makes it a wonderful country from the standpoint of natural scenery.

On the trains and in the cities one soon becomes aware of the fact that this wonderful country is also a land of at least three major languages, English, French and German. This fact suggests a host of problems which have confronted it almost since white men set foot upon its borders.

A recent visit was devoted not to natural resources or points of interest, nor to the differences among men because of a variety of backgrounds, but to a relatively small group of people, most of whom have lived in Ontario for less than a quarter of a century. They are people who have grouped themselves about half a dozen Mennonite churches. Here we find variety also. All the way from rural districts to the midst of the city of Toronto which compares in size with Boston, Massachusetts. This fact also suggests a variety of problems confronting our people and one admires the heroic and determined way in which so many of them set about to face these problems.

The Sunday School Conference held on October 5 and 6 near Niagara-on-the-Lake was well attended by both old and young. The participation was also representative. There was evidence of a desire to learn how to do things the better way. They have had to learn too many things the hard way since they were compelled to flee for their lives from Russia about a quarter of a century ago. One cannot blame them for seeking so earnestly to find a better way for themselves and their children.

The first retreat for youth was scheduled to be held on an experimental form near Port Rowan, Ontario. The eagerness with which the young people of all six churches were looking forward to this event was inspiring. It meant rather long distances—our people in Ontario have the same problems of distance that so many of the groups in the "States" are also facing—but that did not seem to be a particular hindrance. The situation was met with evidences of ingenuity worthy of a great cause such as giving our children the best opportunities possible.

There is a sincere and earnest desire to become better acquainted with our people in the United States. That augurs well for the future of the church and her work for the good of all. Youth has a way of believing that the way to get together is simply to get together. The youth of Ontario is no exception and we may look for some really worth while contributions from them in the days of reconstruction before us.

—An outline study of Ephesians, in the form of a neat, concise pamphlet, may be secured free of charge from the Mennonite Publication Office, 722 Main, Newton, Kansas. The outline was prepared by Rev. Jacob J. Enz and is the one used in the visitation of C.P.S. camps and in the study program recommended to the churches.

JOTTINGS

—Rev. John P. Suderman wrote from Altona, Manitoba, on October 9: "Since September 1, I have been visiting churches in Montana, South Dakota, Minnesota, and Manitoba, in the interest of missions. I have spoken forty-one times in thirty-five churches and five schools. I spoke at the harvest and mission festivals at the Bergthal churches on September 30 and October 7, also visiting other churches during the week. I hope to get back to Oraibi by October 26."

—Dr. J. D. Unruh, President of Freeman Junior College, was the guest speaker at the Home-Coming services of the Menno Church, Lind, Washington, October 14.

—The Fairfield (Pa.) Church is participating in an autumn series of union evening worship services.

—Rev. Willard Claassen of Freeman, South Dakota, recently held extended meetings in the Friedensburg Church, Avon.

—John Boehr is registered at the Reformed Episcopal Seminary, Philadelphia; Herbert Fretz is attending Westminster Seminary, Philadelphia; and Hugo Mierau is attending Hartford Theological Seminary in Connecticut.

—The Springfield, (Pa.) congregation and the Old Mennonite congregation, which worships in the same meetinghouse, had a joint "Home Coming Day" October 14. Rev. Freeman Swartz was the speaker for the afternoon.

—The Bluffton College Board of Directors are to meet November 12.

—The Altoona mission property was sold to the Salvation Army for $19,000, according to a report in the Church Messenger, Schwenksville.

—First Church, Newton, Kansas: On Sunday afternoon, October 21, members brought gifts in kind for relief. After a fellowship supper a farewell program was held for Miss Mary Becker, and Rev. and Mrs. Leonard Hanes who are to take a plane to Colombia, South America, on October 27.

—First Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, is taking a survey by card to see whether church members favor building a new church building now. The church has donated a total of 1,141 quarts of fruits and vegetables to Relief and C.P.S.

—Donation Day at the Mennonite Deaconess Hospital, Beatrice, Nebraska, resulted in 120 families participating and gifts including 1,100 pounds of potatoes, 500 pounds of flour, fruits, vegetables, and $175 cash.

—The Bethel College Church observed Forefathers' Day on October 14. A note in the bulletin says,

"Our Sunday School curriculum is now set up so that every boy and girl will be privileged to take a serious course of study in such fundamental subjects as The Life of Christ, The History of the Church, O'd Testament History, The Life of Paul, and The History and Teachings of the Mennonites. The courses are correlated with the six months catechetical instruction given each year by the pastor."

—Dr. Marden Habegger, son of Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Habegger, wrote from C.P.S. Camp, No. 148, Weaverville, California, September 24, that Selective Service had transferred him there because of the critical need for medical care. The county has only one physician and he is over seventy-four. The next nearest town with medical care is sixty miles away. It is in this area that the heavy gold rush took place a century ago. Dr. Habegger writes, "There are many quite severe medical and psychiatric cases here."

—Fairfield Church, Fairfield, Pa., The booklet "How To Pray" by E. Stanley Jones was distributed during worship services, the theme of which was prayer. Robert Geigley, former relief worker, is to undergo an operation for a detached retina at University of Pennsylvania Graduate Hospital, 19th and Lombard, Philadelphia, Pa. With copies of "The Angelus" distributed among the worshippers, an interpretation of this masterpiece of art was given during the evening worship of October 14.

—Immanuel Church, Barnes Crossing, Saskatchewan, Canada: Rev. and Mrs. Peter B. Friesen observed the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding and of their ministry on September 23. In spite of cold and rainy weather the church was filled to capacity. An inspiring program was rendered by members of the local group. Rev. George Elias gave a short message in German, and Rev. I. Epp spoke in English. He pointed out how Rev. Friesen pioneered in the north and became the nucleus of all Christian activity in this district. A beautiful set of silverware was presented to the couple as a token of appreciation of their services. After the service the ladies served a delicious fowl supper. Everybody present realized the nearness of God throughout the day, and the prayer of our hearts is that the Lord may continue to use them in a mighty way.—Isaac Epp (Thank you very kindly for this news. May more of the Canadian churches send in news, jottings.—Editor)

—Bulletin, First Church, Nappanee, Indiana: The church board has endorsed a plan whereby once a quarter a student from the new Mennonite Seminary will bring the message.

—Bulletin, First Church, Upland, California: The pastor and his wife, through the invitation of Dr. Kirby Page, are attending a seminar of five Tuesdays, which he is conducting in his own home. This study is proving to be very timely, discussing problems of the present day, political, social and religious.

—Souderton, Pa., J. N. Byler, director of relief for the M.C.C., spoke on the evening of October 21.

—Aberdeen, Idaho: Over six hundred quarts have been canned for relief and C. P. S.

—Rev. David C. Wedel, Rev. H. T. Unruh, and Rev. Ronald von Riesen were respectively re-elected as President, Vice-President, and Secretary of the Western District Conference at its fifty-fourth session, held October 17 and 18.

The Mennonite

VOLUMN LX

NORTH NEWTON, KANSAS, OCTOBER 30, 1945

NUMBER 43

They Named It "The Mennonite"

The "Mennonite" was first conceived in the mind of N. B. Grubb, then pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Philadelphia, Pa. Faced with the task of building up "a dilapidated church in a great city," this progressive pastor contemplated issuing an English paper as a means of making his local, pastoral work more effective. Later he wrote, "The need for an English church paper was, however, realized quite early, and the need of the one congregation was acknowledged need of the entire conference." (1)

Riding on the Lake Shore Railroad, between Cleveland and Toledo, Ohio, on November 5, 1884, to attend the General Conference in Berne, A. B. Shelly and N. B. Grubb "discussed the propriety of having an English church paper published in the East, and under the direction and control of the Eastern District Conference." The two men talked the matter over but came to no definite conclusions other than to talk the matter over with the brethren upon their return home. (2)

"On Monday, Dec. 8th, 1884, Revs. A. B. Shelly, A. M. Fretz, C. H. A. van der Smissen and N. B. Grubb met at the home of Isaiah T. Clymer, at Quakertown, Pa., and consulted about the matter. The impossibilities outweighed the possibilities and the project was abandoned." (3)

During August, 1885, the matter was talked over once more in N. B. Grubb's study when Allen M. Fretz called upon him there. They agreed to meet once more and then make "final disposition."

This important matter was disposed of on September 9, 1885, when N. B. Grubb and Allen M. Fretz met in the home of William Landis near Quakertown, Pa., and after "sincere prayer" to God for help, direction, and ultimate blessing "proceeded to give formal existence to what struggled for life" in their thoughts. The conceived child had to have a name. So the two brethren christened it "The Mennonite," naming it after the church they loved and whose cause in Christ it was to represent. (4.) The two men decided to order a prospectus of 1,000 copies. These were to be laid before the conference that was to convene at Bowmansville, on October 6. It was hoped that conference would assume publication of the new venture. Should conference refuse, then conference was to be asked for permission to publish it as a personal enterprise. (5.) But conference approved "The Mennonite," and thus this paper began life sixty years ago this month.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

"Come to Heaven Singing"

By S. T. Moyer

The passing on of Bro. P. J. Wiens to his heavenly home on June 7, 1945, has removed from our fellowship a pioneer of the work of Christ in India.

Bro. Wiens came to India with Mrs. Wiens in 1906 and finally returned in 1926. Hence he rounded out a full thirty years of service on behalf of India.

When I first came to know him intimately at his Station Mauhadi, I was amazed to learn that he seemed to know the name of every plant, weed, tree, and shrub which grew within miles of his bungalow. If I mistake not, in those days he could read the New Testament in seven or eight different languages. His gardens were full of all kinds of fruit trees.

He pioneered in opening one of the five Mission Stations of our field in India. Starting almost at "scratch" when it comes to workmen, materials and land, only one who has been through this knows what exacting drive and what physical and mental endurance and patience this requires. He was one of the early great builders of the Mission. Two bungalows, a large church, the primary and middle schools, and hostels, a medical dispensary, homes for fellow-workers, all were erected according to the plans and immediate supervision of Bro. Wiens.

He was no less an evangelist. Many years after the Phuljhar field was opened, when he had baptised hundreds, and manned the field with farmer-preachers, erected outstations throughout the area, I was talking with Dr. D. A. McGavran, a most energetic missionary, builder of the Church in India. When people come into the Christian fellowship by the hundreds in the space of a few years from amongst the underprivileged peoples of India, they create some almost overwhelming problems, and difficulties. Before Dr. McGavran I fully justified the work of Bro. Wiens, whereupon Dr. McGavran added,—“Some Missionaries would have let this opportunity slip by, and would have done nothing. It is the everlasting credit of Wiens Sabib that he seized it for the ultimate glory of Christ.” Bro. Wiens was God's instrument to further that work by which today there are thousands of Christians in upwards of 100 different villages.

Beginning 1918 with Mrs. Wiens he would make an annual cold season trip of inspection over rivers, mountains, rocks, roots, through jungles, forests. They would take with them a family of five children, amongst whom were little babies, in a way not every one would attempt, nowadays. During the cold season of 1919 he baptised 108 on such a trip. During a tour of 1921 over 100 were baptised. Such trips would cover a hundred or more miles, and a number of weeks absence from home, the base of supplies.

After he returned to U.S.A. for the last time and the floods came to Mauhadi Station, and trees were uprooted, buildings washed away, bungalows and lives threatened, an old resident of Mauhadi said, “If Wiens Sahib had been here, this would not have happened.”

During his last illness in Newton, Kansas, U. S. A., when he was very weak, another pioneer, Bro. P. A. Penner at his bedside asked him, “Brother P. J., if the Lord should see fit to take you home, what shall I write to the Christians in India.” He replied, “Tell them to come to heaven singing.” One of his last requests was that his friends should not spend money for tokens of appreciation at his funeral, but rather give the money to Foreign Missions. He died as he lived,—for Christ and India.

CURT CLAASSENS TO BE ORDAINED

The Lord willing, Brother and Sister Curt Claassen of the Swiss church, Whitewater, Kansas, are to be ordained as missionaries for India November 11, at 2:30 in the afternoon in the Emmaus church, which has more room than the Swiss church. All mission friends are invited to participate with intercessory prayer for them and the whole work.

Program

1. General song. 2. Introduction, Theodore Roth. 3. Song. 4. Ordination sermon, P. A. Penner. 5. Song. 6. Ordination, D. J. Unruh. 7. Song. 8. Brief addresses by Brother and Sister Claassen. 9. Song and offering. 10. Closing remarks and prayer, J. C. Kaufman.

(The Swiss church is requested to serve with some special music, perhaps two or three songs.) —P. H. Richert, Sec.

EDITORIALS

THE SIXTIETH ANNIVERSARY of The Mennonite very fittingly falls in October, which is observed by many churches as Protestant Press Month. During this month attention is called to the importance of the religious press. President Truman has written a letter in which he commends the observance of a special period for the promotion of religious journalism. Roswell P. Barnes writing on "Protestant Press Month" says:

"Every church family should read at least one church paper. This is important for two reasons. First,—our culture is so saturated in secularism that it is important to see the world as it is seen by the editors and writers in religious magazines. Second,—Christians should be informed about the life and work of the Church.

"Our world needs devoted and enlightened Christians and strong churches. We seldom have either without the other. The religious press helps to develop both.

"It must be admitted that few religious periodicals compare favorably in glamour and color with other magazines on the library table. But thoughtful people will realize that the circulation of the church papers is not large enough to produce huge income from advertising, which in turn pays for expensive paper and colors.

"Surely the thoughtful people, those who can make our churches strong, are willing to judge their reading matter primarily on its contents. On that basis, the religious press merits a wider reading."

We believe that Mr. Barnes is right in saying that every church family should read a church paper for the two reasons he gives. The atomic age in which we live should convince us that man's achievements in the secular far outreach his attainments in the spiritual. In America it is not uncommon to live more abundantly physically than spiritually. Secondly, how can church members promote the work of the church if they don't know about it?

Lastly we like his emphasis upon content. It is primarily this which gives a church paper its importance. It is to carry the news of Christ and his Kingdom. The daily newspaper frequently carries the novel, the sensational, without overly much regard for the moral consequences. The religious journal cannot do this. However, it is our conviction that people are genuinely interested in reading that which untangles their lives and makes The Way clear and compellingly attractive. We believe that our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ is great and good news and forever will be.

If you feel that the paper could be improved in some way, then give us specific and workable suggestions. The suggestions of true friends are important to us, and we welcome them.

Today we owe a great deal to those who began the paper while loaded down with other work and to those who encouraged it. In gratitude let us do our bit for the cause they so nobly began.

UNDUE SELF-CONCERN makes for a weary and burdened feeling. God in his wisdom made life so that self-centeredness would not work out for the individual. Christ came to save men from such self-centeredness and its devastating effects to both the individual and society. He said, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light." The plow needs to be pulled, that is, the conditions of life must be faced. But the kind of attitude with which they are faced makes for the difference of weariness or rest. Jesus bearing the yoke of life had the same load to pull as others did. The difference was not in the load but in the yoke; His yoke was "easy." Christ suggests that it was so because he was "meek and lowly in heart," suggesting that there were other yokes that were unduly large and awkward thus causing weariness and a burdened feeling. Undue self-concern or considering the self unduly important is a hard and heavy yoke, or attitude, that makes the load of life very hard to pull. "Come unto me . . . Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me . . ." is an invitation to be born spiritually. Spiritual birth means the beginning of a life whose dominant attitude is love. It means beginning life all over again with a different point of view. The old pattern of undue self-concern does not fit. Once self-centeredness was proper and natural in babyhood and on into childhood, and a certain amount of self-love is natural for the adult. But God has so made life that a different pattern is to succeed the one of babyhood and childhood. This transition or spiritual birth is a "must" in God's order of things. The individual who fails to undergo it remains a sinner in rebellion against God who is Love. However, once born spiritually, the individual needs to grow just as a child grows physically. If he has lived by a pattern of self-concern, he must learn to live by a pattern of love. He can take it for granted that his old pattern of undue self-concern had penetrated into every relationship and area of life and that is must now be replaced by a "vital concern for the welfare of other personalities." To come to love neighbor as self is a matter that is far-reaching in both time and area of life. Spiritual birth and growth does away with undue self-concern and brings to the individual rest and life abundant.

The Future of "The Mennonite"

By H. J. Andres

Chairman, Board of Publication

At the time of an anniversary, it is customary and well to review the past, to take stock and inventory of the present, and also to give thought to the future.

Elsewhere in this issue, you will find an account of The Mennonite, our official conference publication, which reviews its history to the present time—its sixtieth anniversary. The beginning was not easy, and the going sometimes rough. The language question added its problems. But we have made progress, and today this sixteen-page publication has a circulation of nearly seven thousand. But what of the future?

A certain commercial firm has adopted the well-known slogan, "The future belongs to those who prepare for it." There is no question that our failure of achieving certain results is often due to our lack of definitely planning and preparing for that which we seek to accomplish. But before we can plan and prepare, we must know what our goal shall be.

When we think of the future of The Mennonite, we think of it from two different angles, one from the standpoint of circulation and the other from the standpoint of content. When the Board of Publication met in 1941 in connection with the Souderton conference sessions, it set for itself two objectives. The first was to put forth every effort to place a conference paper into every conference home. The second objective was that we, at the same time, improve the quality and usefulness of the materials presented in our papers as much as our resources would permit.

With reference to circulation, it was felt that we could never have full conference coverage unless the individual churches would shoulder the responsibility for their own members. This brought forth the "one hundred per cent subscription plan" and to tell you that the subscriptions to The Mennonite have increased from approximately twenty-five hundred in 1941 to almost seven thousand at the present time speaks for itself. This, however, is not sufficient. Our goal can be nothing less than a conference paper in every conference home. If our present rate of increase continues, it is possible that we may substantially achieve this objective by our next conference session.

When we think of the future of our paper with reference to the editorial content, the quality and usefulness of the materials presented, the planning is not quite as easy. The needs, wishes, and desires of our individual churches as well as the individual members of our churches are so varied. Furthermore, we do not all evaluate the various spheres of conference activities and projects on an even scale. It should, therefore, not be surprising that one and the same article can bring forth letters of commendation as well as letters of criticism. However, in spite of our variation in needs and desires and of our evaluation of conference activities, we can and must still have a certain goal which we try to achieve.

First of all, the editorial policy of our paper is and must remain definitely Christian, using as its motto "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Christ Jesus," and serving as an inspiration and a guide to the thinking of all of its readers.

Then our paper must promote the activities of our General Conference as well as those of our district conferences and our conference institutions, serving also as an avenue of information on all of these projects. This includes foreign missions, home missions, relief, education, peace, and all other activities undertaken by the conference.

Next in order, we should mention the obligation of our paper to the individual church and its organizations as the Sunday School, Christian Endeavor, and young people's organizations.

Last, but certainly not least, we refer to the responsibility our paper has to the individual family. Our paper must be a family paper, serving old and young alike.

What are our future plans for The Mennonite? The answer is, "Our plans are to publish a paper which will best meet the multiple needs and requirements of the various categories enumerated above. It may mean more pages or additional supplements. It will call for additions to the editorial staff and to the contributors.

During recent months, our editor has included a questionnaire in one edition of the paper to ascertain where the deficiencies lie and how some of the needs might be more adequately met. Your reactions are serving as a guide for future plans.

This means that the responsibility does not rest solely with the editor or with the publication board. We appreciate your suggestions and trust that we may work together for the good of our conference and the glory of His kingdom.

"The Mennonite" Is Sixty Years Old This Month

The Eastern Mennonite Conference in session October, 1885, went on record as recognizing "the want of an English church paper, through which our younger members, our young people in general and all such as do not read our German papers, may be made acquainted with our church affairs. It therefore greets with pleasure the prospects of an English paper—The Mennonite—as published and laid before conference by a few of our brethren (see page 1). Conference elected N. B. Grubb, A. M. Fretz, and A. B. Shelly as Publication Committee and guaranteed the costs of the new venture.

Volume 1, Number 1 of The Mennonite is dated October, 1885. This six by nine inch, sixteen-page monthly offered the reader: the present motto, a seven verse poem, inspirational articles, "Golden Thoughts," "Sayings from Menno Simon," "Family Circle" column, "For the Children" column, "Scripture Searcher" column, editorial, "Church News" column, "Mission Department," "The Sabbath School" column, "Religious Notes," another poem on "Where Is Your Boy Tonight," death and marriage notices, and advertisements of Mennonite papers and printing.

N. B. Grubb, former farm boy who had studied at Frederick Institute and at Wadsworth and who was now serving the First Church, Philadelphia, became managing editor of the paper. His editorial policy: To reach those who did not read the German church papers with good news which would help to bring them into the right relationship with God, to instruct them in the doctrine and the doings of the church, to promote mission work, and to foster cooperation among Mennonites. Allen M. Fretz, serving in the capacity of what we might term associate-editor, edited five of the divisions named above. Their pay? Conference had said "the committee is to receive the excess of income over and above the cost of publication." There was no such excess.

U. S. Stauffer of Quakertown printed the initial number of The Mennonite and all the rest during the time that the paper was the organ of the Eastern Mennonite Conference.

At the end of six years N. B. Grubb declined reelection on the basis of "other pressing duties."

"The Mennonite" from 1892 to 1902

A. S. Shelly was elected into the Publication Committee in N. B. Grubb's place and was forthwith made editor. As a farm boy from the West Swamp congregation he had gone to Wadsworth at seventeen. Later he taught there for twelve years. He returned east to be pastor at Bally and from there edited The Menno- nite had come out with eight pages, nine and one-half by twelve and one-half inches. This made it look more like a newspaper than a magazine. It still contained very little news from the churches. Sunday School and C. E. reports took up much space. Advertizing during these years was pleasantly absent.

The Mennonite was in hot water financially from the very beginning. The cost to the subscribers was only 50 cents, but already in 1889 the editors pled that subscriptions be paid at once so that the committee could "pay what they owe" to the printer. The committee complained, "A number that had bills sent them have never, it seems, taken notice thereof." In 1893 it took $260.97 to print The Mennonite and mail it to 606 subscribers.

After ten years A. S. Shelly gave up the editorial work. A new era was to begin.

. . . From 1902 to 1905

Already in 1893 the General Conference had decided to adopt The Mennonite as its official English organ. However, the Eastern Mennonite Conference continued to publish it until 1902, when the General Conference took over its publication. Now for the first time it appeared as a weekly. It had eight pages, ten and one-half by fourteen inches in size. It looked even more like a newspaper than before. Its four columns gave it variety and interest.

Harvey G. Allebach, graduate with honors from the University of Pennsylvania and thirty-three years old, now became editor. His editorial policy: "It shall be our endeavor to present our readers each week with a clean, wholesome, inspiring sheet, full of spiritual reading matter, the ultimate object of which is to be the conversion of souls to Christ and the supplying of nourishing food to those already in Christ. Whatever of an edifying character Mennonites ought to know of their brother Mennonites will appear from time to time. At the same time the paper will cling to the traditions of the past and will thus stand not as a purveyor of news simply, but as a bringer of good tidings of good. The news will aim to be heavenly rather than earthly." The first issue of 1902 carried a C.E. column and the "News of the Week" page gave domestic and foreign news like those of a non-religious journal. Allebach was paid $500 a year for editing The Mennonite and the Bible Lesson Quarterly. Because of ill health he had to give up his editorship with the issue of January 12, 1905.

A total of 680 people subscribed to The Mennonite by 1902. The price was raised from $1.00 to $1.50. The General Conference now footed the deficit bills, which were not always small while the paper was published at Berne, Indiana.

...From 1905 to 1912

I. A. Sommer now became editor of The Mennonite. He was the first non-Pennsylvania man to do so. He had a background of study at Wadsworth, teaching, and preaching. He had edited the German church papers for twenty-one years when he accepted the editorship of The Mennonite in addition to the load he was carrying.

Silas M. Grubb, son of the former editor, N. B. Grubb, began writing the editorials with the issue of June 21, 1906, and by July 14, 1910, he was made associate editor. Part of his duty was to consist in "securing as many original contributions to the paper as possible."

During this time the paper continued with the same size, type, etc., but much advertising was inserted. Undoubtedly, this was more profitable to the publishers than edifying to the readers. Even train advertising got in. "The Electric Lighted Overland Limited" dazzled its splendour in the issue of January 4, 1906

In the end Sommer had to lay down his editorial work to regain his health. When he quit The Mennonite with the issue of December 21, 1911, he said, "On account of much other urging and pressing work he often felt that we would not fully do justice due to this periodical . . ."

...From 1912 to 1915

C. H. A. van der Smissen became editor of The Mennonite with the issue of January 4, 1912. He had studied at various universities in Europe and had continued his studies upon his arrival in the United States, also studying at Wadsworth where his father taught. Thereupon he entered the ministry. In 1911 he was called to the editorship of the Bundesbote, Kinderbote, and The Mennonite. No radical changes were made in the paper during this period. In the issue of December 4, 1914, Editor van der Smissen wrote, The Mennonite will make a change, the associate editor becoming sole editor. We bid farewell to our friends."

...From 1915 to 1937

Silas M. Grubb came from a rural background and was another Pennsylvania-born editor. He was a son of the founder of The Mennonite. He graduated from the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Episcopal Church in 1898. When he came to the editorship in January, 1915, he was forty years old and had both business and ministerial experience. During his editorship he served as pastor of the Second Church, Philadelphia. S. M. Grubb was a vigorous editorial writer. In the issue of January 7, 1915, he wrote: "The paper is, above all things, committed to the divinity of our Lord, the integrity of the Bible and faithfulness to the historic principles of the Mennonite Church. We shall always endeavor to state these doctrines as clearly as God gives us ability to do so and to defend them with all the ability we possess." Brother Grubb had to practice long-distance editing, first from Philadelphia to Berne and later to Hillsboro, Kansas.

With the issue of July 10, 1930, The Mennonite shrank to a size of ten and one-half by seven and one-half inches, the present size, for the purpose of making it easier to file. It now again had sixteen pages. By January 27, 1921, one no longer finds the secular news of former days, but on the front page is a column entitled "In Mennonite Circles." The editor encouraged the churches to send in correspondence. A new feature appeared with the issue of November 22, 1923. General Conference in session at Freeman, South Dakota, had decreed that the young people were to have one page in The Mennonite. Rev. C. E. Krehbiel introduced the new section and edited it ably until December 23, 1926, when Rev. A. R. Keiser of Dalton, Ohio, took over. He kept up a high standard of work in the section with a number of unique features. The section now numbered several pages. By January 3, 1929, Rev. Keiser withdrew from the work, and Rev. Lester Hostetler contributed "The Christian Exponent Chat" instead until July 10, 1930, when Rev. Keiser resumed the youth section and continued it until 1935, when Amelia Mueller took over. She was succeeded by B. Bergen in 1936. Another new and important feature made its bow in 1923. "The Jottings" appeared on the back page.

In 1934 The Mennonite and The Christian Evangel of the Central Conference were merged into a bi-weekly of twenty-four pages for the stated purpose of a wider field of influence and for economy. S. M. Grubb and Rev. William B. Weaver were co-editors. The arrangement ended with the issue of December 17, 1935, when Editor Grubb wrote of the "temporary arrangement designed to meet the situation brought on by the depression," and said, "Now that the emergency is past and we can look into the future with clear eyes there is not so much need of a joint publication." Perhaps, the long distance editing and divided responsibility of two over-worked men made short work of an arrangement that could have seen happier days. The Mennonite became again a weekly of sixteen pages.

By the end of 1936 the paper had 1,600 subscribers. The depression days had been hard on it.

At the end of 1936 Silas M. Grubb retired from a long editorship of The Mennonite with the words, "I have learned that it is difficult, if not altogether impossible, to hold down two jobs and do my duty by both of them."

Dr. J. R. Thierstein, long-time teacher and professor in our colleges, became the new editor. He was the first layman to edit the paper. He also had the distinction of being foreign-born and of having earned a Ph.D. degree. Furthermore, he was unique in assuming the editorship at an old age, namely seventy. But he was far from lethargic. With his passion for work he often worked late into the night. He edited The Mennonite vigorously and put more publication write-ups into it than it had seen since the days of N. B. Grubb. He succeeded in raising the subscriptions in three years from 1,600 to 2,500. Besides this he worked on the new Hymnary and other projects. He actively promoted church correspondence and gave Christian education a prominent place.

The paper was now printed at the Bethel College Press, and after shaking off a huge debt, it finally managed to escape from the red. Mission numbers now appeared quite regularly. B. Bargen resigned as editor of the youth section, and R. Weinbrenner took up the work January 10, 1939.

Dr. J. R. Thierstein passed to his reward May 8, 1941, the first editor to die in the harness of editing The Mennonite. Previous to his death Miss Mary Becker had given valuable stenographic and other assistance to the editor, and she now assumed the work and carried it ably on until October 21, 1941.

... From 1941 to the Present

Reynold Weinbrenner, the present editor, assumed the work with the issue of October 21, 1941. Some changes that have been made during this period are: 1. Editorial page moved from the front to the third page and a bit of "dressing" applied on the front page. 2. Financial statistics published quarterly in tabulated form instead of monthly in untabulated form. 3. Jottings and other items in 8 point type. 4. Omission of Sunday School and C. E. material and Devotional Messages, which were no longer widely read. 5. The use of more cuts.

During this period subscriptions have risen from 2,500 to 6,700 at present. The 100 per cent subscription plan has appealed to the churches, and forty-nine churches in thirteen states have adopted it. Others have declared their intention to adopt the plan with the coming year.

We are now very happy to announce that Esko Loewen will take over the editorship of the Mennonite Youth section, beginning with the issue of November 6.

The Mennonite is sixty. Let's hope that for it, "Life will begin at sixty." —R. W.

HOME MISSIONS

A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

Close Memorial Mennonite Church, Altoona, Pennsylvania

In 1916 Bethany Mennonite Mission was conducted in Altoona, Pa., by the Eastern District Conference. This work was taken over by the Home Mission Board of the General Conference in 1917 and named Memorial Mennonite Church. Rev. Jacob Snyder, Roaring Spring, Pa., was the leader of the mission group at that time.

The Mission has had a checkered career all these years. At times it seemed that the spiritual fires were burning brightly and the work was making progress; when as it seemed, over night, a very different spirit would be at work. Membership and attendance at worship and Sunday School varied greatly from time to time. Workers would become discouraged and seek work elsewhere.

As we look back, 1929, no doubt, marked the high point of the Mission. It was in that year that the Eastern District Conference was entertained in this church.

The gospel was faithfully preached these many years, people were invited and urged to come. They came, but many stayed only a short time and then dropped out.

The same kind of unresponsiveness could be cited in respect to church offices. When there is so little appreciable willingness on the part of local members to assume responsibility and leadership, it is well-nigh hopeless to build up the work. There were few, one is compelled to say, very few exceptions of those who took responsibility, and these were often compelled to leave the work because their work took them elsewhere. When adults, such that professed faith in Christ, absented themselves from Sunday School, growing boys and girls soon followed the example of these older ones and no matter how gallantly the Mission workers labored, the loss equalled and often outnumbered the recruits they could bring into the School.

In the year 1941 the Board weighed the matter seriously, whether to continue the work or to close it. It was, however, decided to keep on, and Board members gave more time and effort to the Station by visiting the church more often during the pastorates of Rev. and Mrs. Emerson F. Slotterback and Rev. and Mrs. Delbert E. Welty. In spite of all that was done, in the face of sound, faithful, gospel preaching, the local response was diminishing.

Early in the summer of 1945 Rev. and Mrs. Welty asked the Board to be permitted to leave the station.

The Board then had to make a decision what to do next. It is useless to try to keep someone who feels that there is a decreasing response to the call of Christ, so the Board accepted the resignation. Another decision was reached reluctantly, that was to close the work with leaving of the present workers.

Congregational Meeting, August 29th

On Wednesday evening, August 29, a meeting was held in the church, when two members of the Board, Rev. John Plenert and Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, were present. Rev. Plenert brought a devotional message from the first Psalm and after that the service was turned into a business meeting. Although the meeting had been well announced, there were only a very small number present. Rev. Neuenschwander, Secretary of the Board, had charge of this part of the meeting. Rev. Welty read his resignation to the group. It was explained that the Board had already acted on the resignation and accepted it, whereupon the group took similar action. The decision of the Board to close the field with the departure of the present workers was then announced to the small assembly. Amid tears the few present admitted that the response was such that it must have pained the workers and the Lord often. Finally the Deacon got up and said, "Brother and Sister Welty did not fail. They labored faithfully for the Lord, it is our people that failed." One could not but think of the Lord's words in Matthew 23:37 when he said, "How often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!"

The Repair Program

During the past two years a number of repairs had to be made to keep the property in good shape. Rev. Welty carried out this program and did a good job. First, the old frame church building, on the back of the lot, that served as garage, had to be torn down. Part of the lumber was used to build a two-car garage, and the balance was used in building the addition to the Napier parsonage. Second, for a long time the church roof leaked near the chimney. Professional roofers tried to make the repairs but failed. Finally Rev. Welty went to work and succeeded to mend the roof. Third, the interior of the building needed something, either to be redecorated or a new insulating ceiling needed to be installed. It was decided that it would be more economical to put in the new composition ceiling and paint the walls. When this was completed, the pews, pulpit furniture and wood work were varnished to complete the beautification of the sanctuary. Fourth, the outside wood work needed paint and this was done. Previously the Worker's Home had been redecorated, some alterations had been made, and the kitchen was modernized. Everything is in the finest state of repairs and preservation.

With the closing of the work about the first of October, the Board put the property up for sale and engaged a good Real Estate firm to take care of the transaction.

Are All the Efforts Lost?

We as a Board do not believe that the efforts for the Lord are lost. Many of those that attended at one time or another and have received spiritual help have moved elsewhere. We believe that a goodly number of these have been saved as a result of the years of preaching and presenting of Christ as the only Saviour. The Word of God says "So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereunto I sent it."—A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

Meet the New Editor --- Esko Loewen

This is to present your new editor. Readers who know Esko will read the words he writes as if they were spoken and visualize him as he usually grinds them out in his own deliberate and friendly way. Those who know him not, should in order to appreciate the weekly, four-page section of The Mennonite which he will begin to edit in November. At present Esko is Educational Director of the Farm and Community School sponsored for the off-time hours of the group at the Lincoln Agricultural unit, C.P.S. No. 106, 3605 Holdrege, Lincoln 3, Nebraska. His home is in central Kansas. After release from CPS Esko plans to return to the home farm and then study at the Mennonite Biblical Seminary.

Picture Esko, twenty-eight years old, bony framework, semi-bald with the few strings falling on his ears—as he sits behind the typewriter, thoughtfully pecking away on his old typewriter, trying to get out the script for the paper. This will be the third major editorship assignment for him. During his time at Bethel, 1936 to 1941, he served one year as editor of the student paper, The Bethel Collegian. Two of his four years in CPS were spent at the Mennonite Central Committee headquarters as editor of the CPS Bulletin, well known to all CPS men. Although this is not his first editorship, he feels deeply the responsibility of this present task, he asks your prayers, and keenly desires to be led by the Holy Spirit in this task.

Meditation, thinking on things in terms of their spiritual value, is very much a part of Esko's life and to read his writing in this spirit is essential to understand it. This basic habit gives his words the deep ring of sincerity that you will learn to appreciate. He likes to read much and of a wide range—from theology to cartoons. Wherever he lives, he soon owns a radio, record player and thus interests others in good music too. You will note this appreciation in his writings. He is one who loves the out-of-doors, hikes, farms; you will find many figures in his writings that refer to such.

To know Esko to some extent at least one must know his exploring, creating nature. If you make a suggestion that strikes him, he's likely to say "That's a good idea. Why don't we do something about it?" And after careful deliberation something usually happens. So many little things in his experiences were begun in this way—driving an old Model T to Estes Park and up Trail Ridge Road where he attended the Christian youth conference, taking a Christmas vacation trip to see the South, to visit a rural mission in the Ozarks, volunteering a summer of work in Maine to help in a tornado devastated area, and even building his own two seated bicycle. We hope he brings this creative spirit of youth into this youth section.

The appointment of Esko was made by the Young People's Union Executive Committee and approved by the Board of Publication as recommended at the June meeting of the YPU. In addition to the weekly pages he will be responsible for the quarterly supplements which will give special emphasis to subjects of vital importance to Mennonite and other Christian youth. It is the sincere prayer of the YPU Executive Committee that the Mennonite Youth can be vitalized, built up over a period of time, so that youth will have a confidence in its helpfulness and look forward to reading it each week. We appeal to all our Mennonite youth, all youth group advisors, to help dedicate this section to meet the needs of our youth so that we as youth can be united in service for Christ. We shall welcome your suggestions.

PURPOSE

(Recently there came to our attention the following statement of purpose as defined for the young people's organization of the Middle District Conference and as published in their district paper, "The Vnepress." We think it is so well put that many readers will be interested in it. It was written by Rev. Jacob Enz of Nappanee, Indiana.)

"Progress" was the title of our last editorial. We were glad to note evidences of progress in our Middle-District Y.P.U. Progress implies measurement; all measurement involves an invariable standard. By what standard are we progressing? What is our goal or purpose?

Are we just another denominational young people's organization with vague objectives? Sometimes we get the impression that organization has almost become oppressive in every phase of our culture. The obvious reason for this is that objectives are not specific and demanding enough.

To determine whether our objectives are demanding enough let us clarify them. The name of our organization sets forth the basic objective. We are a geographically and denominationally determined group of young people united to set forth the way of Christ as seen through the eyes of a Mennonite. This last point is important; it sets us apart. And let us make no mistake about its being legitimate. A denomination exists actually or supposedly because it makes a contribution to Christendom which has been lost to the main stream of that larger body. One glance at Christendom and the world today is sufficient to show that our Christianity would be bereft of something infinitely precious if the testimony of the peace churches were withdrawn now. The Mennonite Church together with the few peace churches and her young people have a world-wide task! It is not to make Mennonites of the whole world. It is rather to give testimony to the world that Christ is Lord of all of life in all of life's relationships or under any conditions whether in war or in peace. This means that we will never be satisfied as a denomination as long as the Gospel, the missionary program, or the educational program of the Church of Jesus Christ leaves out the unconditional law of love as set forth by Jesus Christ but which has been forsaken by the Church at large. The main business of the Church in all its aspects will always be the salvation of souls, but it must be total salvation.

This is the unique challenge of Mennonite youth. If we fail ours will be the greater judgement because we have had greater light. On this conviction we build specific objectives. Out of this conviction grows our stress of C.P.S. and Relief in our budget. Out of this conviction we seek to unify our groups through Retreats, youth conferences, and the visitation work of our field secretary and president. Out of this conviction let us unite to keep the torch of Jesus Christ as Lord of all of life burning brightly—our purpose!
—Jacob J. Enz

Russell L. Dicks, Chaplain at Wesley Memorial Hospital, Chicago:

"All that the physically handicapped ask is a chance to overcome the difficulty and not to be further burdened by the attitudes, sympathies and sentimentality of the non-handicapped. The only person who is really handicapped is one who thinks he is—it is not what happens to us that is important, but what we do with what happens to us."

Rev. Bernard Iddings Bell, Episcopalian clergyman:

"Let a nation have its heart so set on its own domestic comforts that it does not hear the cry of other people in sore distress and it will soon find itself in Hell."

D. W. Bittinger, Editor of the "Gospel Messenger" on strikes:

"Problems can be solved best when, with a reciprocal interest in one another's welfare, we sit round the council table and iron out the difficulties. Problem solving is always more a sharing than a demanding process."

"Infantry Drill Regulations" published by the War Department in 1925:

"The one aim of military training is success in battle, or victory—which means, disposing of your enemy as quickly and effectively as possible. The most successful soldier is the one who kills and disables the most opponents."

Rev. J. E. Entz, Elder First Church, Newton, in church letter of October, 1944:

"As I look out of the window I see the golden and red leaves falling. There is only a gentle breeze, but the slightest swaying of a branch causes hundreds of leaves to tumble toward the earth. . . there is a feel of death in the air; dead leaves falling, all fruit gathered, gardens gone, flower beds brown and bare, sky gray—the end? Oh no! I glance through another window and see a greening wheat field—a promise of life."

Frederick C. Kempner, international lawyer of New York:

"The peoples of Europe are calling upon us for help. We hear their call and are anxious to do all we can. But material support, however essential, cannot cure their disease. We must aid them, but not with goods alone. We must convince them 'what to do with Germany' is no longer the central, much less the sole issue; that Europe's resources must be pooled, political boundaries bridged, not enforced; that every attempt at self-sufficiency is suicidal, every policy of national prestige a luxury no country can afford; and that charity and tolerance benefit those who practice them no less than those toward whom they are shown."

ONE

"For God so loved the world."

"We look forward to the day when the United Nations Organization will displace the anarchy of competing and unrestrained sovereign states. . . We believe the treatment of Germany and Japan and aim to bring these nations at an early date into normal relations with the world community. . . We desire to be associated with Christians everywhere in the task of making the United Nations Organization an effective instrument for the removal of the political, economic, and social causes of war, for the peaceful settlement of disputes and the achieving of justice in international relationships. . . . The world's most pressing need is the pouring of the spirit of God's everlasting love upon all flesh. . . . We proclaim again and yet again our citizenship in a kingdom that is without geographical or racial division. We are one in Christ and our prior allegiance is to Him whose we are and whom we serve.—From a message to Christians in all lands by The Federal Council of Churches, The American Committee for the World Council of Churches and the Foreign Missions Conference of N. A.

Little is being done as yet to get relief to sufferers in either Japan or China. The churches of Christ should move quickly into this area of opportunity." So says D. W. Bittinger, Church of the Brethren editor.

"Nearly two thousand Chinese students are now in the colleges and universities of the United States. These have been sent by the Chinese government or by the Christian institutions and societies of China."—D. Carl Yoder.

The premier of Japan recently invited missionaries who remained in Tokyo to his home and apologized for their "inconveniences and unpleasant experiences" during the war and expressed the hope that they would remain in Japan to help lift what he termed the "severely deteriorated morality" of the Japanese people. So reports the Christian Century.

Clarence Picket of the American Friends Service Committee, in a recent letter to President Truman, warned that the people of the East will watch how America treats Japan "to see whether we manifest in our conduct those principles of justice, humanity, and respect for the individual for which we have fought and sacrificed."

Most of the babies born in Germany during the last two years are expected to die. In one town ninety-nine out of 108 babies born in July have already died. This winter Germans may receive on the average twenty-five pounds of coal per person for both cooking and heating. So reports a staff member of the World Council of Churches.

"At least 20 pacifists or pacifist sympathizers won seats in the British Parliament during the Labor Party sweep last summer . . ."—The Reporter

With the official approval of President Truman and General MacArthur, a deputation of four high ranking Protestant church leaders left New York October 19 by plane for Japan to confer with representatives of the Japanese Christian Community on the common tasks of the churches of the two nations during the period of reconstruction and to study the relief and rehabilitation needs of the churches in Japan.

MENNONITES THE WORLD OVER

By Cornelius Krahn

The Fate of a Family: Jacob Rempel studied in Switzerland and returned to Russia to become the Elder of the Grunfeld Church and to teach Bible. In 1925 he was delegated to the Mennonite World Conference in Switzerland but because of his Russian citizenship was not admitted to that country. In 1929 he and his family were ready to leave for Canada, but he was arrested and sent to a concentration camp instead. From there he escaped but was sent back again in 1936 and died in camp. Mrs. Rempel and the children were taken along with the retreating German army. She is now with a Mennonite family in Lautenbach near Heilbronn in Germany. One of her sons is in Italy. Rev. Rempel was one of the outstanding Mennonite ministers and leaders during the crucial times after the Revolution.

Elder Bruno Ewert From Heubuden Writes: The Heubuden Church was one of the largest Mennonite churches of Prussia. Word has been received from Bruno Ewert, the Elder of this church, who along with most of his congregation is now in Denmark where they are scattered in many camps near Copenhagen, that he takes lists of names from camp to camp helping people to find their relatives and friends. Great joy is being expressed at the arrival of C. F. Klassen and the willingness of the American brethren to help them. If you have relatives among the Mennonites in Denmark, contact the M.C.C. about the possibility of helping them.

Do Mennonites Have a Theology? Some say they simply have a way of life. E. Stauffer claims the early Anabaptists had a theology. He says that it centered around martyrdom, that is, they believed in a three-fold baptism—by spirit, by water, and by blood. Their living and thinking proved them willing to suffer for the cause of the Lord, not passively, but aggressively. The Anabaptist Theology of Martyrdom was first published in German in 1933 and has now been translated into English and published in the July issue of The Mennonite Quarterly Review. This, no doubt, is one of the best attempts that has been made to analyze the essence of early Anabaptism that has recently appeared in English. A Mennonite Aesop: I. A. Krylow (1768-1844) was a Russian Aesop. Old and young love his fables. They are read and enjoyed in all schools. The Mennonites of Russia took such a liking to them that Peter J. Klassen, now in Canada, has translated a great number of them from the Russian into German and Low German. A collection of thirty-five fables illustrated by the translator can be obtained from him (Box 75, Superb, Saskatchewan) for one dollar.

RELIEF

Work Among Mennonite Refugees in Europe

The interest and concern of North American Mennonites for Mennonites in Europe who have been displaced by the war continues to be represented by C. F. Klassen of Winnipeg, Manitoba. Bro. Klassen at the time of this writing is on his second trip into Germany to further investigate the situation of Mennonites from Russia who have been interned there.

Bro. Klassen, from August 30 to September 11, visited internment camps in Denmark where thousands of Mennonites from East Prussia and Poland are confined. The following report provides a brief account of Bro. Klassen's visit to Denmark:

"During the next few days I learned to know more about the refugees and their sad story. Their registration is not finished as yet, but according to estimates there are approximately 300,000 German refugees from Prussia. These 300,000 people are kept in about 600 camps located over the entire country of Denmark and the Danish Government has quite a problem on hand. After five years of German occupation, the sentiment of the population is not pro-German at all, as you may imagine. When you add the fact that it costs the Government around one million kronen a day to maintain these refugees, you can readily understand that the authorities are anxious to see them leave the country. As it looks at present, they will have to classify them according to their political views and past behaviour. In the meantime we are on the alert to help them as soon as conditions permit. . ."

Tomato Puree Arrives in Holland

One hundred cases in tomato puree which were shipped from New York on July 17 have arrived in Holland, according to a recent announcement. This is the second shipment of food, sent through the Mennonite "Food for Relief" program, to arrive in Holland. This entire shipment was donated by the Glick Seed Farm Cannery, near Lancaster, Pa.

Christmas Packages Shipped

Mennonite and Brethren in Christ groups prepared and donated 6,208 Christmas packages during the past few months for needy families in Europe and Asia. These packages were sent to New York during the past week where they will be prepared for shipment abroad by the Church Committee for Overseas Relief. The contents of the packages consist for the most part of non-perishable, concentrated foods and have been given as a token of Christian remembrance and fellowship. The packages will be distributed through Protestant churches at Christmas time.

Anyone still holding incomplete packages should complete them and send them to Akron as soon as possible.

Tools and Utensils for Relief

Initial donations of tools and utensils for relief are being received. It is urged that shipment be made as soon as collection by local groups is completed so that preparations for export may be gotten under way at an early date. Please note the following changes from the earlier announced instructions: (1) Tools and utensils for relief will now be handled at the warehouse at East Petersburg. Shipments should be addressed to Mennonite Central Committee Warehouse, East Petersburg, Pa. Correspondence should be addressed to the Akron office. (2) All tools and utensils should be thoroughly cleaned and repaired but need not be oiled or greased. Rustproofing will be done at East Petersburg.

Relief Donations

C.P.S. assignees in Mennonite camps have given liberal money donations to War Sufferer's Relief. In a period of ten months—December 1, 1944, to September 29, 1945—a bit more than $11,000 was given. Three of the units, Denison, Greystone Park, and Ypsilanti, gave over $1,000 each during this period and Belton approached the figure. Several of the smaller units in proportion to their size gave with equal liberality.

The Mennonites in Mexico have indicated their desire to help along in the relief program. The following letter was received recently at Akron: "I am enclosing therewith a letter addressed to the Mennonite Central Committee together with a bank draft for $1,565.00 which our community has collected as a contribution, although on a small scale, to help relieve the terrible suffering created by the horrible war in Europe." This contribution was made by the Durango Colony in the State of Chihuahua, a community of Old Colony Mennonites and the largest in Mexico.

Relief Briefs

The London office has been able to purchase two 3-ton and two 1-ton Ford trucks in England for use in providing transportation for Mennonite relief units in France and Holland.

Mary Emma Showalter is transferring from the Middle East to England where she will serve as dietitian at the London Center.

Harry Willems and Cornelius Dyck arrived in London, October 16. John Fretz and Siefried Janzen arrived in Paris about the same time.

C. P. S.

Discharges from C.P.S.

Selective Service is proceeding to discharge a certain number of C.P.S. men but has indicated that no announcement of a definite plan for release will be made. At the present time, assignees thirty-nine years of age and over with at least two years of C. P. S. experience, are being discharged. Seventeen from Mennonite camps have received their release papers during the present month. It is believed that the group to be processed next will be men thirty-five years of age with two years of experience. After this men with four years of camp experience will be considered. While these groups will be discharged on the basis of age and length of service, consideration is also to be given to dependency and hardship.

Veterans and Demobilization of C. P. S.

The attitude of one veterans' organization, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, toward the demobilization of C. P. S. men was revealed by a resolution passed at their national convention held in Chicago recently. A part of the resolution is as follows:

"Whereas certain citizens of the United States have refused to bear arms or otherwise serve in the defense of our country against its enemies . . . Therefore be it resolved . . . that we protest the early release of any so called conscientious objectors and furthermore we are strongly in favor of not releasing any of the said so-called conscientious objectors until all of our fighting men have been returned home and discharged from military service . . ."

Sugar Points Available for C. P. S. Canning

The Akron office has a considerable balance of C. P. S. canning sugar ration points on hand. These points would be available for making jams, butters, and preserves. Any persons or groups wishing to obtain additional canning sugar points for such purposes or other canning for C. P. S. may secure them upon request.

Friends C. P. S. to Be Concluded by March, 1946

The C. P. S. Committee of the American Friends Service Committee recently reached a decision to terminate their part of the C. P. S. program by not later than March 2, 1946. The basis for this decision was the feeling that their responsibilities ended six months after the signing of the Japanese surrender. Because of this action, it has been reported that Selective Service is considering plans to take over A.F. S.C. camps and units as of March 2, 1946.

C. P. S. Briefs

Two of the Lincoln C. P. S. units have recently been approved for an increase in camp strength. The unit at Malcolm is to receive seven additional men and the Two Rivers Nursery project at Waterloo five additional men.

Richard Weaver, formerly an assignee at the Harrisburg State Hospital, made his transfer to the smoke jumpers camp at Missoula, Mont., by flying a plane which a group of C.P.S. men at Missoula had purchased to learn flying during their off-time. Richard is assigned to the camp as camp clerk, but will give spare time to flight instruction.

OUR MINISTRY OF EDUCATION

By J. H. Langenwalter

WHAT JESUS TOOK FOR GRANTED

Jesus was a sower of good seed rather than a mere giver of information. He expected results. For that reason He took certain things for granted in those who set out to follow Him.

A. Jesus took for granted that His followers were willing to learn. He called them disciples—people who were willing to be disciplined.

B. Jesus also took for granted that His followers would not try to counterfeit great values. They were to seek to be right in the sight of God rather than to seek the approval of men. Matthew 6:1.

C. "Wherefore thou doest alms," Matthew 6:2, when you do good. There is no command to do good. There is simply the implication that they would do good, they who had followed Him up the side of the mountain to hear what He had to say to them. Their danger did not lie in the direction of doing no good but of undertaking to do it in the wrong spirit.

One reason why the words "alms" and "charity" have lost so much of their meaning is because people have not heeded the admonition of Jesus to undertake to do good in the right way. Doing good as a matter of hard duty or in order to gain the praises of men is an attempt to counterfeit a great idea which God has implanted into the spirits of people. That robs those, who undertake such a perversion of the intent of God, of the finest fruits of their deeds. They reap no satisfying reward.

D. Jesus took for granted that His followers would pray—take an attitude of consecrated, expectant effort God-ward. Again there is danger of substituting false motives for an attitude of true gratitude and thus counterfeiting a great experience provided for the good of human beings. Prayer can neither be sanctimonious begging nor can it be a hypocritical show and represent what Jesus had in mind in what we call the Lord's Prayer. His Spirit makes of prayer a healthful, wholesome exercise which lies mostly beyond the depth of many to appreciate.

E. Jesus did not ask men to "fast" He took for granted that those who followed Him would have the sacrificial spirit. That is what "fasting" was supposed to represent before it had lost its real meaning through hypocrisies of the religious leaders of Jesus' day. Men were to learn again that a great undertaking calls for a willingness to "pay a price"—to sacrifice.

Sacrifice is a great Christian virtue, provided it is not imposed by others. Failure to appreciate this fact has been a great hindrance in the progress of real Christianity.

COLLEGE NEWS

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

The first of a series of four musical concerts was given in the Ramseyer Chapel on Tuesday October 23. This was given by the Leola Turner Concert Company of the Chicago Opera Company. Other concerts include Franz Bedfors, pianist, January 7; the Guardsmen-Male Quartet, February 25; and Myron Carlisle, baritone, April 5.

Rev. Paul Shelly visited the Medaryville C.P.S. camp on the visitation program sponsored by the Home Mission Board. Pres. Ramseyer recently visited the Cleveland and Ypsilanti units on the same program. Progress is being made on the North Central Association study. The subject selected is, "God, the Integrating Force of the Student's Curriculum." Five special faculty meetings have been organized. Dean Schultz is chairman of the study.

BETHEL COLLEGE

An audience of 2,500 enjoyed the artistry and excellence of the Roland Hayes concert on October 19. The second number in the Memorial Hall Series will be Ruth Bryan Owen Rhode, lecturer and diplomat, appearing on December 10. Made possible by the series is a lesser group of numbers, free and open to the public, but usually scheduled for lengthened chapel periods. Rhys Davis, British Labour M. P., was the first of these on October 15 and a week later Donald Scott-Morrison, pianist and harpsichordist, gave a "Conversational Concert." Jerome Davis will appear next, speaking on Russia on the evening of November 26. The Rev. George Buttrick, New York City, has been announced for the Booster Program in April. The A Capella Choir made its first public appearances this fall during the past week, singing on Founder's Day and the Western District Conference. Students from among these fifty-two voices, selected by Professor Hohmann, also make up the Sunday morning church choir.

THE READER SAYS:

BEGIN EARLY

Editor, The Mennonite:

Greetings. I have just read in The Mennonite your editorial on Childhood Impressions. It was interesting to me since I have also made some observations along that line. In a Christian home there was a tiny baby boy. The parents never had daily devotions without the presence of their little boy. Pictures of Jesus were often used to tell Bible stories. At eight months the baby recognized Jesus to be his friend. At the age of seven the boy was converted and to this day at the age of thirteen he is well grounded in his faith. Some child Psychologists have said that parents will give to their children one-half of all they ever will impart to them, before the child is three years old. Other observations also indicate that the average child receives his impulse for becoming a Christian at or near the age of twelve years. If he does not become a Christian at that age, the impulse is repeated at fifteen or eighteen (every three years) but every time it is weaker, until it rarely ever comes back. These facts show how important it is to begin the Christian training early.—John P. Suderman

In 1926, prominent citizens of fourteen countries signed a manifesto to give substance to President Wilson's earlier proposal to make conscription illegal in all countries affiliated in the League of Nations. This plea read:

"We call for some definite steps toward complete disarmament and the demilitarizing of the mind of civilized nations. The most effective measure toward this would be the universal abolition of conscription. We, therefore, ask the League of Nations to propose the abolition of compulsory military service in all countries as a first step toward true disarmament. It is our belief that conscript armies, with their large corps of professional officers, are the grave menace to peace. Conscription involves the degradation of human personality and the destruction of liberty."

JOTTINGS

—$7,608.45 was the total of the thank offering brought by the Menno Church, Lind Washington, an Home Coming and Harvest Thanks Day held October 14. Amounts given for various purposes were as follows: Relief—$2,706.50; C. P. S. —$727.50; Home Missions—$304.50; Foreign Missions—300.50; Building Fund—$1,400; Bethel College—$592.50; Freeman Jr. College—$332.50; Mennonite Biblical Seminary—$510; Minister's Pension Fund—$118; Missionary Pension Fund—$171; Boards of Publication and Education—$70; Mission School in India—$260; Salem Mennonite Hospital—$51; Miscellaneous—$118.45. This, the fifth consecutive Home Coming and Harvest Thanks Day, was attended by a record-breaking crowd. Dr. J. D. Unruh, President of Freeman Junior College was the special speaker. He spoke on "Our Christian Hope" in the forenoon and on "Christian Education" in the afternoon. The church was most beautifully decorated with potted chrysanthemums, gladioli, and other cut flowers. Special music was furnished by the young people and a bountiful fellowship dinner was served at noon by the ladies of the church.

—Immanuel Church, Los Angeles, has asked Katheryn Ragolsky, a member of the Reedy Church and candidate for foreign missions, to visit the community until a permanent worker is obtained. Dr. John Hubbard of the Bible Institute and Secretary of the Pacific Office of the African Inland Mission, ordained Dorothy Schroeder, who is leaving for Africa.

—The Mennonite Aid Union of Kansas will meet at Hillsboro, November 1.

—Rev. John P. Suderman, after visiting churches in Manitoba from September 29 to October 14, returned via North Dakota and Montana to the mission field in Arizona.—Contributed by Benjamin Ewert.

—Rev. Howard G. Nyce is to conduct meetings in the Freeman College Auditorium from November 9 to 11. The meetings are sponsored by the Mennonite Ministerial Association of the Freeman community.

—Wisner, Nebraska: Two days long to be remembered are October 20 and 21 when Rev. Erland Walther and family were in our midst. His preparatory sermon for baptism and communion was on "The Wonderful Gift of God Through Grace." The communion sermon was on "Around God's Family Table." A very encouraging offering for missions was received. After a fellowship supper Rev. Walther spoke on "Wings."—Henry Boehr.

—Aberdeen, Idaho: Rev. P. K. Regier, who is visiting C.P.S. camps, conducted two classes in our community and preached morning and evening. Married recently: Helen Klempel and Eldon Harder, and Catherine Harder and Herbert Crocker.

—Rockwell C. Smith is the author of the new book, The Church in Our Town.

—Dr. A. Warkentin of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary, Chicago, brought several messages at the recent Western District Conference. Dr. Cornelius Krahn showed interesting slides of Mennonite history and relief activities.

—Rev. Lester Hostetler visited the C.P.S. camp at Hill City during the week-end of October 28.

—First Church, Madrid, Nebraska: On Friday evening the ladies aid served a covered lunch in the church basement. Their husbands were guests. Twelve couples attended. The men entertained.—J. G. Unruh —First Church, Reedley, California: Chaplain Harold Eymann spoke on "The Power To Overcome Evil" and on "The Church Battles for Europe's Soul" at the morning and evening services October 21. Miss Florence Auernheimer told the Senior C. E. about her experiences in a Japanese relocation center.

—C.P.S. Camp, Downey, Idaho: Rev. H. N. Harder of Aberdeen has consented to teach a Bible class once a week.

—Rev. Don Smucker, who is attending Princeton Theological Seminary, writes that he is preaching and lecturing regularly for the C.P.S. units at Grey-stone Park, Marlboro, and Poughkeepsie.

—If your church or society wishes to earn some extra money by selling Scripture Text Christmas greetings, the Mennonite Book Concern, Berne, Indiana, has a very attractive offer. A post card or letter will bring samples and full particulars.

—The Annual mission sale of the Hebron Church, Buhler, is to be held on Saturday, November 3. The morning session will begin at 10:00 with a short mission program and the sale of articles. A Fellowship dinner will be served during the noon hour. The ladies will start to serve at 11:30. The afternoon session will begin at 1:00 o'clock. Many articles to be sold have been made by the three mission societies of the church. The public is cordially invited to attend.

—The Hanston, Kansas, Church had its annual fall dinner October 21.

—There are nearly 2,000,000 Americans who are handicapped so seriously that they require special rehabilitation service to keep them in competitive industry.

—Rev. Laverne Rutschman, student at Mennonite Biblical Seminary and prospective missionary to Colombia, South America, spoke at the young people's rally held October 27, 28, by the Salem-Zion Church, Freeman, South Dakota.

—Halstead Mennonite Church, Halstead, Kansas: We have set for ourselves certain goals which we would like to attain this fall and winter. We call this our "Spiritual Advance Campaign." The goals are: deepening of spiritual life of church, increased worship attendance, reception of new members and increased practice of maintaining family altar. Special activities that have been prepared include mid-week studies, and special services. One of these special services will be the Harvest Thanksgiving Festival with missionaries Martha Burkhalter and Waldo Harder speaking in the morning and afternoon and a noon meal in the church basement. The C. E. program on October 14 consisted of a Bible Quiz contest. It was enjoyed by all.—Corr.

—The Mennonite Book Concern reports that they again have automatic-feed duplicators on hand. This should be welcome news to ministers and churches who have been waiting for such a machine since shortly after the war began. A post card or letter to Box 31, Berne, Indiana will bring full particulars.

—The Education Committee of the Western District is organized as follows: Dr. P. S. Goertz, Chairman; Joanna S. Andres, Secretary; and Dr. J. H. Langen-walter, Treasurer. All money for the work of the committee should be sent to Dr. J. H. Langenwaller, North Newton, Kansas.

—Upland, California: A group of C.P.S. men are to give us a program from five to six Sunday afternoon, October 28. Light refreshments after the program will be followed by a social hour. Rev. J. M. Franz is to be here November 11-14.

—The Mennonite Relief Clothing Center, 220 Main Street, Newton, Kansas, has been an exceptionally busy place during the last few weeks. With the coming of the fall months more clothing has been delivered to our doors. Not so long ago over 2,700 lbs. were received during one day. Various groups of women have come to our rescue with the mending and repairing of the clothing. This latter would not be necessary if the clothing would come in as it should. Groups of students have helped with the polishing of shoes. Monday, October 22, 349 bales, weighing over 40,800 lbs. were loaded into a freight car by men from the Newton First Mennonite

GENERAL CONFERENCE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING

The Chairman, Brother J. N. Smucker, opened the session with a meditation based on John 15:4-5. He also referred to Resolution No. 47 of the 1945 Conference which asks "that leaders in the General Conference dedicate themselves anew to the teaching and the experience of the foundational fact of regeneration through Jesus Christ and the resulting principles of conduct for which our fathers sacrificed so dearly." All members present joined in a season of prayer.

Members of the Executive Committee present were the Brethren J. N. Smucker, Homer Leisy, A. Andres, H. A. Fast and W. H. Dyck.

The officers reported acceptance of the resignation of Brother J. H. Langenwalter, North Newton, Kansas, as member of the Board of Education, and the appointment of Brother L. L. Ramseyer, Bluffton Ohio, to fill the vacancy created by this resignation.

The Executive Committee appointed the Brethren H. M. Detweiler, Souderton, Pennsylvania, Hans Regier, Whitewater, Kansas, and Julius Franz, Lind, Washington, to the Mutual Aid Committee. Members of this committee elected by Conference are J. W. Fretz, North Newton, Kansas, J. A. Showalter, Newton, Kansas and William Stauffer, Sugar Creek, Ohio. (This committee had its organization meeting at North Newton on October 19. Temporary officers are J. A. Schowalter, Chairman, and J. W. Fretz, Secretary.)

The date for the Annual Conference Sunday is to be set by the conference officers with the suggestion that it come soon after the Annual Meeting of the Boards. Officers were instructed to set up a suggested program for observance in local congregations.

The secretary was encouraged to work toward more uniform statistical forms for use in all of the districts of General Conference.

The balance of day was spent in discussing the various phases of our Conference work, as well as ways in which the work of the Lord might be furthered in and through our churches.

We wish to sincerely request your intercession for the Executive Committee that it may always feel definitely led of the Lord in each and every decision which it is called upon to make. Yours in His Service, J. N. Smucker, Chairman; Walter H. Dyck, Secretary.

MEETING OF THE BOARD OF MUTUAL AID

The first meeting of the General Conference Board of Mutual Aid was held on the Bethel College Campus on October 19, 20 and 22. At this time Rev. Walter Dyck, Beatrice, Nebraska and Secretary of the General Conference Executive Committee, was present to organize the Board temporarily. Chief consideration at this series of meetings was given to the writing of a constitution for the Board and discussing plans of its operation. Members of the Board are: Harry M. Detweiler, Souderton, Pa.; Julius Franz, Lind, Washington; Winfield Fretz, North Newton, Kansas; Hans Regier, Whitewater, Kansas; J. A. Showalter, Newton, Kansas; and William Stauffer, Sugarcreek, Ohio.

FOOD FOR RELIEF

A few of the many ways in which individuals and communities are giving Food for Relief are shown in the following reports by the M.C.C. While all these instances apply to the States there is evidence that Canadian communities are responding with equal liberality.

1. A congregation in California has donated more than a carload of raisins—35 tons—and is planning to contribute additional dried fruit.

2. A community in Idaho has donated one carload of dehydrated potatoes.

3. An urban congregation in Pennsylvania regrets that they are not in a position to give directly of the fruits of the earth but have decided to assume the cost—$1,731.00—of shipping a carload of wheat from the West to the eastern seaboard.

4. The Virginia Conference is about ready to operate a portable cannery. Upwards of 100,000 quarts of beef, poultry, apples, and other types of meat, fruit, and vegetables are to be canned.

5. A congregation in Oregon is preparing 5,000 quarts of salmon for shipment to relief areas. One brother in Oregon wants to know how to process twenty-five lambs.

6. One community in Kansas is processing seven carloads of wheat flour for relief; another community in the same state is preparing four carloads.

7. A brother in Pennsylvania makes available his commercial cannery for the processing of large quantities of beef, pork and beans, fruits, and vegetables. Another congregation in the same state is preparing to slaughter twenty-five hogs.

8. A community in Ohio is donating a carload of corn. A congregation in Michigan has shipped a carload of navy beans.

Millions upon millions in Europe are hungry, homeless, and heavy-laden.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

"WHO OWES ME AN EDUCATION!"

Sahodra, a girl of 14 or 15 years, had been a patient in the hospital for more than a year. She was not a Christian nor of Christian heritage, but during her stay in the Champa Hospital she had almost become one of the members of our hospital family. She considered herself a Christian and only her family had kept her from taking baptism. Her one great ambition was to attend our Mission Middle School at Janjgir. Sahodra had osteomyelitis. She had had several operations, her leg had been dressed several times a week, she had received medicines daily. For these services she had paid little. Now she was being dismissed. She came to me and thanked me for all we had done for her. And then, true to the psychology of the Indian mind, she asked, "And now what provisions will you make for my future?" —Mrs. H. Ratzlaff

Correction: "Brother Wiens came to India with Mrs. Wiens in 1906 and finally returned in 1936." (not 1926 as stated on this page last week)

WUTHRICHS ENJOYED VISITING CHURCHES

Dear Mission Friends:

We completed our itinerary through Idaho, Washington, Oregon, and Oklahoma earlier in the summer. We were not personally acquainted with a good number of the ministers and members of our churches, so we counted it a real privilege to visit your mission friends. We feel that we know better how to pray for the pastors and the church members whom they are shepherding. We trust that God may call many of the young people from these churches out into service for Him. Yes, may He call some into that field that is dear to our own hearts, even the land of China, so that the Chinese too may hear of the Saviour who loved them so much that He shed His blood for them that they too might live.

It seems the Lord gave us a special blessing as we neared our journey's end, for I had the privilege of showing a young man the way of salvation as we were traveling on the bus the last day. He professed to accept Christ as his personal Saviour, and we are praying that the Holy Spirit will lead him on into spiritual things as we find them in the blessed word of God. May the Lord continue to bless you all until He comes. Yours in Him, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Wuthrich

FLAGS

Flags are symbols. Rightly used they tend to discipline one for the ideals for which they stand. Wrongly used they become an expression of a very subtle type of hypocrisy.

Decorations detract from rather than add to the values of symbols. That is why flags should be displayed in the simplest possible ways. Fringes, decorative cords and emblems, usually attached to the top of the pole, are signs of commercialism more than of loyalty. These things are foisted upon the public at times of emotional surges and tend to cheapen the appreciation for the ideals for which the flags stand.

President Truman has recently made an interesting announcement concerning the Presidential Flag and the Coat of Arms thereon. He said: "The eagle now not only faces to its right—the direction of honor—but also toward the olive branches of peace which it holds in its right talon. Formerly the eagle faced toward the arrows in its left talon—arrows symbolic of war."

One is thankful for the thoughtfulness which the foregoing statement portrays despite the fact that it came about the same time when there was every evidence that our President was in danger of yielding to the pressure toward the establishment of a subtle militaristic power in our own beloved Country.

Perhaps it is time that Christian institutions should exercise a little more thoughtfulness—and greater consistency—in their use of the flags. Why try to talk peace and have spearheads on the flags displayed in places of worship and of mental and moral enlightenment? That is particularly true of the "Christian Flag."

Why not place a replica of the Statue of Liberty upon the poles on which the Flag of the United States is displayed instead of the eagle or the spearhead with their suggestions of cruelty and brute force? Perhaps our young men and women, returning from all kinds of experience, obtained under compulsions brought on by fears which led to the recent war, may help us see how our professions and our practices do not work together.

Why not display our flags so they can be fully appreciated? This can be done in buildings by properly hanging them against walls so that the full meaning of their symbolisms can be seen.

Perhaps, after we have learned to use our flags properly, the words "with liberty and justice for all" will have a meaning which they now lack in the lives of too many who too often repeat them with a glibness which has become repulsive to many of our youth.

EDITORIALS

WORLD ORDER SUNDAY falls on November 11 this year. The day is to be used for a "renewed dedication to God's purpose for the world of nations." It is hoped that on this day Christians will consider the meaning of American participation in the United Nations. It has been pointed out that the member states are to promote "respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion." They are also to tackle "the social and economic causes of war." The Christian Church throughout the world must call upon peoples everywhere to work for the fulfillment of these aims. Today the peoples of Asia and Europe are greatly concerned about freedom from want. They want food. Hungry people feel that the United States is a great bread basket, and so it is. Therefore, it is significant to note two recent events. The New York Times of September 23 told how a crowd of 49,614 set a world record on September 22 by betting a total of $5,016,745 (admitting that some of this money went through the machines several times, it is still a huge sum). This amount was bet at one of many race tracks on one day. The next day the American Secretary of the World Council of Churches asked the Church Committee on Overseas Relief and Reconstruction whether the American Protestant churches would be able to raise more than five million dollars for church relief in Europe this winter. "Probably not," was the answer. What might starving people in the world say if they read of the betting record? Yet at the same time there are American Christians who are giving sacrificially for relief. They believe that orderly and happy relationships among all mankind can only come as men everywhere take the attitude of being their brother's keeper.

THE ATOMIC BOMB must be controlled is the general opinion, but how to do it is the problem. Some points that enter into a consideration of this problem are: 1. The fundamental "secret" of the bomb is generally known, although some of the necessary phases of production are not. 2. It would be impossible for the U. S. to monopolize the raw materials of the bomb. 3. It is estimated that other nations may be able to make atomic bombs in a period of from three to five years hence. 4. Present bombs are so outmoded that new ones will dwarf those demonstrated. 5. There is no known defense against the bombs. A dispersment of industry and population could be met by the enemy with an increase in the number of bombs used. 6. Leadership in atomic developments is hardly possible, for capacity for greatest production loses its value when the other side has sufficient initial bombs to blast all cities with industries. 7. Primary advantage in atomic war is suddenness and effectiveness of attack. 8. Fear will not prevent the use of atomic bombs but will rather stimulate sudden attack. 9. Secret mining before hostilities with detonation by radio when attack is to be loosed has been mentioned as a possibility. 10. Many people seem to hold the view that no valuable information should be disclosed until a satisfactory arrangement for international control has been made. 11. A group of Christian Leaders speaking of a single world control have declared: "Unless it can be achieved in the short period while the United States alone possess atomic bombs, it may be difficult or impossible to achieve. We urge our government to state now its intention to place the new discovery under a world-wide authority as soon as all states will submit to effective controls. We also urge the government to press without delay for the creation of such controls." 12. In regard to the above it is pointed out that unless the United States is successful in winning the confidence and goodwill of Russia, that country may "prefer to await its own scientific development of atomic energy rather than to enter into international commitments concerning the bomb." 13. As an alternative it is proposed that Russia be allowed in on the secret now. From the above it is evident that either way we turn we need the confidence and goodwill of everyone, and furthermore it makes clearer and clearer that this good will can not be won by force. One writer on atomic power says, "It is now becoming clear that such power knows no restraint except inner restraint." Only by convincing others that we have a vital concern for their welfare, can we hope for that inner restraint. "O Pow'r of Love all else transcending" is a reality that we must accept if we would survive.

THE YOUTH SECTION of this paper is to consist regularly of four pages from now on. Esko Loewen will carefully plan and fill these pages every week. This will make The Mennonite much more valuable to both adults and youth, we feel, for adults want to know what youth is thinking and doing and for youth it means a definite body of literature. May we suggest that: parents call attention to the section, pastors refer to it in their announcements or bulletin, C.E. leaders stress it, and district Y.P. papers announce it.

Mutual Aid in the Local Congregation

By J. Winfield Fretz

Many local congregations are greatly interested in the whole program of Christian mutual aid. This was evidenced at the General Conference when the question came up and the proposed plan quickly and unanimously adopted.

The first session of the newly created Board of Mutual Aid were held on the Bethel College Campus on October 19, 20, and 22. Complete plans have not yet been made but the Board decided to urge the local congregations to organize committees as soon as considered practicable. The Board suggests that these committees might follow the standards and the suggestions in the pamphlet recently printed by the Mennonite Central Committee entitled "Is Your Community Organized for Mutual Aid?" In this pamphlet two questions are answered:

What is a Local Aid Committee?

It is a committee appointed or elected in the local congregation for the purpose of looking after the needs of the congregation that fall within the general sphere of mutual aid. The members of this committee should be chosen with great care. They should be individuals who have demonstrated ability in their own chosen fields of work; they should be men of the highest ethical standards and the deepest religious devotion. As suggested in Acts 6:3 members of local aid committees should be "men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom". It would seem natural that the function of the deacon should qualify him for membership in the aid committee. Local committee members should be the kind of people in whom the young people of the church have confidence and to whom they will willingly come for help in matters pertaining to advice and financial assistance for vocational purposes.

Functions of the Local Aid Committee

Local aid committees can serve members of the church in various ways. Perhaps the most immediate and urgent needs will be those of C.P.S. men who will have served their country anywhere from one to four years without pay and without provision for their dependents. Each local committee should find out what the plans of its returning men are and whether any of them need counsel or financial assistance to get started at earning a living. Some men will need jobs, some will need small amounts of money to set up house keeping, others will want to rent land or buy equipment to start farming or open small businesses in the local community. Alert local committees will quickly sense needs and will quietly try to work out solutions to their young men's problems. In many cases it will mean a heart-to-heart talk in which the younger men will want sound advice on what job to take, whether to start farming or not; where to start in business and how best to proceed. The local committee members as individuals or as a group can provide much help to their young men and women. In cases where money is needed it may sometimes be merely a matter of bringing the member with a need in contact with the member with money to loan.

The local aid committee might well be the agency to receive contributions as gifts or loans for the group's central aid organization. It should be prepared to assist the Aid Section representative or the director of the Section whenever necessary to work out a local applicant's problem by giving character references and by evaluating the soundness of the project proposed by the applicant for a loan. Local committees could report job openings or jobs wanted to the MCC Aid Section which would in turn let those things be known throughout the Mennonite Constituency

SAMUEL PYESKY was born in Russia April 12, 1892. Having been confirmed in the Lutheran Church when fourteen, he was rebaptized when he joined the Zoar Mennonite Church, Goltry, Oklahoma, in 1914. He married Marie Koehn in 1915. In church he served as Sunday School teacher and superintendent and as a member of the church board. He departed this life October 17, 1945, and is mourned by his wife; Mildred and Laura of the home; Mrs. Harry Reimer, Medford; and Alvin of Goltry.

A. B. REIMER, son of Abraham Reimer and Anna Thiessen Reimer, was born in Friedensruh, South Russia, February 18, 1871, and passed to his reward October 16, 1945. He migrated to America in 1884 and in 1892 was baptized and received in to the Hoffnungsau Church, Inman, Kansas. In 1903 he married Katherine Dyck. For many years he served as a school teacher. In church he was either Sunday School superintendent or teacher for more than fifty years and a deacon for twenty-five years. He is mourned by his wife; John, Washington, D.C., Mrs. Harry Martens, Aibonito, Puerto Rico; and Alvin, Buhler, Kansas.

"My Peace I Give unto You"

By Marden C. Habegger, M. D.

Dr. Marden Habegger is a son of Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Habegger, missionaries. An assignee under Civilian Public Service he is stationed at Weaver-ville, California, where there is a critical need for the medical service that he is rendering as doctor. Previous to his transfer west, he served as doctor under the National Service Board for Religious Ob-jectors, Washington, D. C.

We have all been happy since peace finally came. Yet there are those with deep sorrow who know that their loved ones will never come back. With them we share our deepest sympathy and our helping hand in the future. These widows and children have suffered a loss which money cannot restore. Our sym-athy and words of encouragement will help, we trust, to lighten their load at this time.

Must Reconsider Our Christian Duty

I want to express some serious thoughts which we should think about at such a time as this. We should reconsider our Christian duty in a world which has just ended the terrible war. We should take stock of our shortcomings and think about our obligations to a very sick society.

The Peace of Christ

In the fourteenth chapter of John we read the words, "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you." In this verse Jesus speaks of a peace with which most of the world is totally unfamiliar. Jesus says the peace which he gives you is not as the peace which the world giveth. The world has given peace to humanity hundreds of times. The world has given our country peace about six times since the Declaration of Independence. Jesus points out that his peace is different. His peace is not a temporary peace, or a peace brought about by the forceful destruction of the enemy. The peace of Jesus is brought about by the directions in Mat-thew in which Jesus says, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And a second like unto it is this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Of the people in the world only the Christians have done this, and even a large share of the Christians have failed to carry out this order of Jesus. This order is the difference between the peace of Jesus and the peace of the world. This is what enables a Christian to be at peace with his fellowmen, even in a time of war between governments.

The World We Live In

Let us consider for a while the world we live in and the events which we have lived through. We have just lived and passed through the most destruc-tive five years the world has ever known. During this period unknown millions of people have been killed. This doesn't concern us very much now. It is something we just do not think about. Unknown millions of bodies have been starved and mutilated. Unknown millions of children have been morally and spiritually destroyed. The bodies of the children are stunted, diseased and crippled. They practically have three strikes against them before they reach the age at which they can make their own decisions. They have practically no chance for the good life on this earth, and they have very little chance of receiving the peace of which Jesus talks. Their minds and en-vironments have been blighted and burned out.

The First Real Scientific Age

We are now living in the first real scientific age this world has ever seen. We have made nature our servant so that living is easier and so that we can eat and live with less work. Yet in our scientific age we have failed utterly to improve the friendship and the brotherhood between men. The last five years have pointed the most terrible indictment at our scientific age. They have also pointed out the failure of humanity to recognize the precepts of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ and to follow these precepts to bring about a better world.

Our country has developed the most powerful in-strument of destruction. It has become the power of our country to wipe out cities with the release of one bomb. It has become the power of our country to liquidate unknown thousands of lives with the pushing of a button. Our country not only has this tremen-dous power; it has used that power, and it has used it for the liquidation of cities and human lives.

How the U. S. Will Be Regarded

Now that we have used this power, how will we be regarded by the world? We will be regarded as sci-en-tifically powerful, we will be regarded as militarily powerful, we will be regarded as wealthy, and last we will be regarded as ruthless and without conscience. The people of our country will be pictured as having scientific power, military power, wealth and ruthles-sness. These words do not mean love, they do not mean honor, they do not mean Christianity, but they do mean fear. We will be feared. Would instead that we were loved and respected by the nations of the world. This is the future work of the people who believe in the verse, "Love suffereth long, and is kind; love seeketh not its own, is not provoked, taketh not account of evil; beareth all things, believeth all things, endureth all things. Love never faileth." We must believe that love never faileth if we are to be loved instead of feared.

High Time for Improvement

One of the ironical conflicts of our intelligent world is the fact that medical science has developed so far in the last one hundred years that the average person now lives sixty-four years instead of the thirty-five years of a century ago. This could be considered as progress. Yet while we have medical science trying to save and prolong human lives, we have military and political power to starve, cripple and kill large masses of population which were saved by the art of medicine. One must feel a sense of futility in this tragic comparison and this has all occurred in a presumably enlightened and civilized age. This is no recommendation for our scientific or our civilized age. We have mastered science but failed to learn how to live together and have failed to use that science for bringing about brotherly love. It is high time that some improvement come about in the brotherhood of man on this earth, if we are to prevent the destruction of all our cities and most of the human race.

The Price of Victory

What is the price of our military victory? This is a price greater than the price in money, the price in lost time and the price in lives. Let us see some of the prices we are paying and will continue to pay. One of the prices is that we are regarded as the symbol of might and ruthlessness and are feared. We are going to have trouble proving that we are a Christian nation. Although we had Christian brothers in Japan, it probably will be too much to expect that these Christian brothers can maintain their faith seeing what their American teachers have done. We may never again be able to do successful missionary evangelism in Japan and probably in some other countries. We have heard it said, "When the Orient is conquered, the possibilities of spreading the gospel will be unlimited. All that will be lacking will be sufficient teachers." Be not mistaken. The sword has never been able to spread the gospel. It will be practically impossible to show anyone in the conquered countries that we have any elements of Christianity left, after what we have recently done. No, I fear we will not be able to do much missionary work in Japan for several generations.

One oriental leader has said, "I can love your Jesus, but I cannot love your Christianity." By this he meant, he approved of the teachings of Jesus but could not approve of the way that our people, called Christians, follow those teachings of Jesus. Has the possibility of doing missionary work in some of the countries of the Orient vanished? It may well be.

Our only chance of doing missionary work in the Orient is if we repent. The church and each of its supporters must repent. We must realize that we have fallen short beyond all words of living as a brotherhood of Jesus. Only after we have repented will the oriental mind believe what we say when we tell them that we are believing Christians, doing the work of Jesus our master. It is not enough to tell them, "Do as I say, and not as I do." We must first practice what we preach. Right now there is little indication that anyone in this country has the slightest feeling of repentance of the actions that have just transpired. Let us remember the words which Paul gave us in Ephesians when he said, "Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamour and railing, be put away from you with all malice: and be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving each other, even as God also in Christ forgave you." The words are so apt that Paul might well have written them specifically for this day.

We Have Lost:

The victors always lose something as well as the vanquished. What factors have we lost in this victory? What are we giving up? Within the next years you will see several million broken marriages. The war has been the cause of many hasty and ill-advised unions. Broken homes will be common. Marriage will be considered as just another event. The children of such homes will suffer, and our country will have a weaker generation. The integrity of the home in the United States, and its moral and spiritual value, will be lost. A high percentage of these homes were broken by the war, and this is the price we are now paying.

One week ago I was working in the emergency department of a Washington hospital. Early in the morning two policemen brought in a baby about four months old. The baby was covered with soot and dirt. There was dirt in the eyes, dirt in the ears and dirt in the mouth. The clothes were not recognizable as previously clean baby clothes. The baby's feet were cold, and the baby was crying bitterly as if it had nearly exhausted itself. This little baby was abandoned in a hole by the railroad tracks of our national capital. After we cleaned the baby and warmed it, it turned out to be a beautiful baby girl with bright blue eyes and an intelligent face. Why was this baby abandoned by the railroad tracks? What has happened to mother love in a country when a sweet helpless baby is abandoned in a hole on a cold morning? This may be part of the price we are paying for this war. This is part of the moral destruction which has occurred to a triumphant nation in war time. Our moral fiber is breaking. War destroys the vanquished and the victor. The vanquished have been destroyed by force. The victor is now being destroyed by moral disintegration. Only God can save that moral fiber which makes a nation great.

A Sick Society

The next few years will see still further increase in alcoholic consumption. Maybe because of my contact with the mass of sick people I see many more alcoholics than the average person. Maybe I am more pessimistic because of the number of alcoholics that I do see. I hope that I am wrong. Welfare workers in Washington state that the national capital has 40,000 alcoholics, and an alcoholic is not one who drinks occasionally. An alcoholic is one who has developed to the point where he is morally, spiritually and economically bankrupt. He is saddled with a habit which he cannot break. Who is capable of rehabilitating these 40,000 men and women? I do believe that there is very little hope for them, and their number is increasing. The war has helped greatly to increase that number. I have seen many discharged veterans who have become victims of chronic alcoholism. Alcoholism is a symbol of a sick society and of demoralized humanity. It indicates that these individuals are frustrated, that they have been disillusioned, that they have been misled, that they have reaped the seeds of a sick society. Prosperity will not cure this sick society. It will take hard-working ministers, social workers, organized societies, doctors, and every Christian church member to help improve this sick society.

A Spiritual Awakening?

We have heard it said that this war will cause a spiritual awakening. I wish to repeat what I said before that the Gospel "has never been spread by the sword." We have frequently heard it said that "there are no atheists in fox holes." We certainly must admit that some men have found their religion during periods of great peril. Yet ministers have generally found now that what we call "fox-hole religion" does very little good when the man leaves his point of peril. Religion is rapidly forgotten. It never was sound religion which had had a chance to grow. Such religion was brought about by feat of eternal obliteration, and not through the desire to bring heaven on earth, or to live the Christian life, or to Christianize the world. No, I fear that the war has not caused a spread in religious fervor. Such proof will still have to be forthcoming.

Many will remember the work done by the Methodist Peace Commission before the war. A large number of people signed pledges against participation in another war. Actually many of those who did sign, later entered the war. One man who signed such a pledge entered the armed services and recently wrote back, "I am no longer a conscientious objector or a Christian. I wish that I could believe but I cannot. I am too deeply involved in the destructive machinery of this sinful world. I hope, however, that you will accept the enclosed check to help another man with more courage than I." The check which he enclosed was for fifty dollars. This man tried to honestly state what the war cost him. He stated that he was no longer a conscientious objector or a Christian. Let us hope that before long, somehow, he can see his way to become again a Christian.

Everyone Loses in War

I have told you about the terrible price we have paid for victory. This price is not in dollars, but in moral disintegration, spiritual disintegration, the breaking up of our homes, the breaking of the mother's love for her children, the increase in alcoholism that we are now seeing, and the fact that we probably will not be able to do successful missionary work in some parts of the world where we have sown the seeds of hate and destruction. I have tried to show that in war everyone loses. We should recognize these losses. Only in recognizing these losses will we know where to build constructively.

The Teachings of Jesus

The first building block to lay down is living the teachings of Jesus. This should be our cornerstone. Upon this can be built the institutions and society of human relations which will not permit our scientific age to be utterly uncontrolled. Spiritual growth, growth in respecting our neighbors, and loving all our neighbors, and growth in tolerance and human understanding are now necessary elements to prevent the complete destruction of the world. Only God can help us in this matter, and most of the effort now depends not upon God, but upon us.

Our Hope Today

Let us remember the words of Jesus in the book of Matthew where he states "Love your enemies and pray for them that persecute you: that ye may be sons of your father which is in heaven." This is the hope of our world today. Loving our enemies is not only a request on the part of Jesus. It is a component part of the Christian life, and only when we are able to love our enemies do we have the kind of Christian life which Christ was talking about.

RELIEF

Soap Arrives in Holland

Twenty-nine cases of soap, weighing 3,988 pounds and valued at $797.80., have arrived in Holland October 20. This shipment will meet an urgent need.

Shipment and Collection of Food

Two carloads, one of wheat from Cordell, Oklahoma, and one of flour from Belleville, Pennsylvania, have arrived at Baltimore preparatory to overseas shipment. An additional carload of flour from the Belleville community is scheduled to arrive.

The trailer truck, secured for gathering food donations to C.P.S. and relief is scheduled to visit congregations in Ohio and Indiana. Arrangements are also being completed to provide a similar trucking service for communities west of the Mississippi River.

Middle East Workers Serve in Emergency

While many thousands of the Yugoslav refugees who were tented on the sands of Egypt during the war period have returned to their homeland, 9,000 still remain and the large camp at El Shatt is still a city of refugees, especially since the influx of Greek refugees. Henry Detwiler, Mennonite relief worker in the Middle East, reports that during the last weeks in September, 1,100 Greeks from camps in Ethiopia were transferred to El Shatt and Nuseirat; the large Greek camp in Palestine with 3,700 refugees, was also brought in. These Greek refugees are assembling at El Shatt to prepare for repatriation.

Several flights of returning Greeks have already left for their home. The first flight met with disaster when the ship caught fire thirty miles out from Port Said. While the crew and most of the refugees were rescued, a few, of the less than fifty who jumped into the water during the confusion, were drowned and all the meager possessions of the returning refugees were lost. Henry Detwiler writes: "It certainly seems like a cruel twist of fate for these people to suffer so, almost at the end of their refugee journeyings, and lose everything they had except what they were wearing."

Opening in China Relief

A cable from Chungking states that S. F. Pannabecker is recovering from a malaria attack and that he with P. P. Baltzer will be ready for work soon. They report that negotiations of the American Advisory Committee with CNRRA (Chinese National and Rehabilitation Administration), the coordinating government agency of relief in China, has resulted in prospects for opening a church relief work in the province of Honan. A beginning in this work is to be made in the early part of November.

Mennonite Missions in East Indies Continues

The Mennonite mission field in the East Indian islands of Java and Sumatra, which is administered by the Mennonites of Holland, but supported in the main by workers and finances from Mennonites in France, Germany, and Switzerland, has survived the war, according to information reported by Peter Dyck after an interview with church officials in Holland. Scant information has been received but it is known that most of the workers are alive and active, although two have been killed. The principal station and a leper colony have been functioning. Brother Dyck reports that the Dutch officials are much perturbed about the uprisings and revolutions in the East Indies. No doubt, this factor will prevent more detailed information from coming through for some time.

The mission field in Java and Sumatra is the oldest Mennonite mission field, having been organized in 1849. According to the Doopsgezinde Jaarboekje (1940), the yearbook of the Dutch Mennonites, there were in 1930, 2,112 baptized members and 534 catechumens on this mission field with at least ten foreign workers and a score of stations.

C. P. S.

Two Carloads Transfer East

Seventy-eight C.P.S. assignees in camps at Camino and Belton, whose homes are east of the Mississippi River, were scheduled to transfer to Luray and Grottoes, respectively, on October 23. With the end of the fire season and the abandonment of side camps, a number of men in the western camps are being shifted back to eastern camps. Assignees who are thirty-five years of age or over or who have had four years of camp experience are not to transfer because of the imminency of release. A considerable number of men in the smoke camp at Missoula are also transferring out. In this case, shifting is taking place by individual assignment.

Unit at Tiffin Closes

The C.P.S. unit at Tiffin State Institute, Tiffin, Ohio, will be withdrawn as of November 1, 1945.

Members of the unit will transfer back to base camps, especially to Medaryville where an effort will be made to continue the school in church music which was begun at Tiffin.

C.P.S. by Administrative Agencies

As of October 15, 1945, religious and governmental agencies had the following number of C.P.S. assignees under their direction:

Mennonites 4,195; Brethren 1,974; Friends 1,582; Selective Service 482; Catholics 89; Methodists 74; Baptists 33; Disciples of Christ 20; Evangelical and Reformed 15; Detached Service 110; Hawai and Alaska 3; Total: 8,587.

Youth's Voluntary Service to the Church

by Elmer Ediger

It is not uncommon to hear a C.P.S. man wish that his younger brother could get about a year of C.P.S. experience. This is not said in spite, as one might lightly suggest, but a sincere feeling that his brother is missing a valuable experience by having to stay at home. Now with the approaching end of C.P.S., we should evaluate our experience in terms of deciding whether we would favor a peacetime voluntary equivalent of C.P.S. Certainly it would seem foolish if we would need to wait for another national draft law before we could set up a program which would provide such a valuable experience to the individual and utilize the services of young church members in the work of the church. Let us consider before the end of C.P.S. whether we do favor some peacetime program.

Why do some of us wish a year of the C.P.S. type of experience for our younger brother? It would be good for him to be away from home for a year, under good leadership, and with stimulating friends. To be away makes one appreciate many things we had taken for granted—our home life, the Mennonite church, our friendly Christian community, and perhaps even the rich farming country. It helped us on our own to take responsibility in camp activities. We'd like to have our younger brother become acquainted with many other Mennonite groups, experience a close Christian fellowship seven days out of seven, become more conscious of our Christian principles. Although we may not always mention it, the experience of working for a Christian cause in a non-profit way becomes a lasting part of one. Our church needs more than a few missionaries out in the field—it also needs church members who will go out as a leaven, as a good neighbor, and will then come back with a new zeal for the program of the church. Aren't these some of the factors which lead us to want the "C.P.S. experience" for the next generation of young people?

If reasons like the above prompt us to encourage a voluntary service program, what are some of the essential characteristics of the program we would

ON OCTOBER 23, PRESIDENT TRUMAN appeared before Congress and urged the passage of a National Training Act calling upon all able-bodied youth to take a year's training that the military might of this nation may be great and that a future war may be fought swiftly and conclusively.

This proposal, whether accepted or not, reflects the way a power-mad and fear-stricken world proposes to handle the frictions of neighbor with neighbor. And the world continues to live in cynical suspicion one of another.

Christ proclaimed the good news that through Him there is peace and a way of peace which discipleship calls for on the part of you and me. These articles reflect the thinking of a few of many individuals and groups in the church on a way of giving expression to Christ's peace through a church-sponsored voluntary service program.

Service?

I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord,
Real service is what I desire.
I'll say what you want me to say, dear Lord,
But, don't ask me to sing in the choir!
I'll say what you want me to say, dear Lord,
I like to see things come to pass;
But, don't ask me to teach girls and boys, dear Lord,
I'd rather just stay in my class!
I'll do what you want me to do, dear Lord,
I yearn for the kingdom to thrive;
I'll give you my nickles and dimes, dear Lord,
But please don't ask me to tithe.
I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord,
I'll say what you want me to say;
I'm busy just now with myself, dear Lord,
I'll help you some other day!

promote? Should it be for those above high school age? Is it important that the project be a considerable distance from home to make it appealing? Should the project require a group of not less than five or more than fifty in order to have fellowship and good leadership? Is some physical labor an essential for an experience that should "level" individuals, particularly if some of the group are to become ministers and teachers and professional workers? Should the projects involve contact with people who are not Christians? With people who need help physically, or mentally, or spiritually? Should there be opportunity to volunteer for some projects which have an off-time study program? Would the church groups individually sponsor, finance, and administer all of the projects or should some of them be operated cooperatively? Would the individuals pay or earn anything?

Above are given some of the questions we need to answer. These are based upon the individual and Church's experience with the compulsory program during war time. We should learn from our C.P.S. experience whether there is a place for such a program in our church which challenges youth with an opportunity to give a short period of his life for a full time Christian service.

A Proposed Program for Voluntary Service

(The following statement was adopted at the Educational Director's Conference at Bluffton, Ohio, August 19-23 as representing the attitude of a considerable group of men in C. P. S.)

Why a Voluntary Service Program?

As C.P.S. men we have been directed into a situation through conscription that has considerably affected our thinking and outlook. Instead of thinking of life as our daily work in earning a living and making ourselves secure for the future with a little attention given to the church on Sunday, this C.P.S. experience has given us a sense of mission in life.

Realizing that it would be easy to go home and again become engrossed in the ordinary routine of life, we feel that something should be done to help perpetuate in us and other young people this feeling of mission. We are strongly of the opinion that a voluntary service program should be initiated now which would help broaden this vision, and be of great service to mankind and in the Kingdom of God.

We feel, for a number of reasons, that there is need for an outlet in real active Christian service for our young people:

- (a) To develop a greater loyalty to the church.
- (b) To give concrete expression to the "hope that is in us," through applied non-resistance, love expressed in service and denying self for the advancement of the Kingdom.
- (c) To demonstrate to the government and society that our willingness to serve is not confined to a period of forced conscription, but will carry itself over into peacetime in the form of free voluntary service.
- (d) To demonstrate that Christianity is definitely a way of life, with a program of Christian service, evangelism, non-resistance, and humanitarian acts all totally Christ centered.

Possibilities for Voluntary Service

The following are possible areas in which youth could perform voluntary service:

(1) Work with migrant labor similar to that performed by Lenore Friesen and Katherine Andres under the Women's Missionary Association.

(2) Home missions: City, Rural, Mountain Regions. In such areas there are possibilities of Summer Bible Schools, recreation projects, ten or twelve individuals helping in areas where one mission worker is struggling with an all too heavy program. The volunteers could teach and do personal work along with their other duties.

(3) Foreign mission work: If some would volunteer for a year or two, it might be possible to use them to good advantage in South America or even as far away as India.

(4) Mental Hospitals: Robert S. Kreider of the Hospital Section of the M.C.C. informs us that there would be ten institutions only too glad for help with additional possibilities in the future. This would be a good chance to continue Christian care of the mentally ill.

(5) General Hospitals: Caring for hospital patients including those in wards for the mentally ill.

(6) Old People's Homes

(7) Health projects like Gulfport. Rehabilitation projects as in Puerto Rico.

(8) Work Camp Projects: In coal mining towns and other under-privileged areas.

Recommendations for Organization

In order for such a program to function, some organizational procedure would need to be followed. The following recommendations were made:

(1) Establish a board to coordinate the program. This board would have representatives from all constituent groups. It might be an organization similar to the present Mennonite Aid Section. This would embrace the several branches of the church.

(2) Each constituent group would work out and administer its own program. The board would be used to prevent competition in any given area, serve as a clearing house for suggestions that might benefit other constituent groups, and where advisable arrange for joint projects.

(3) Contact the Home Mission Boards. We feel that the program could well be operated in cooperation with these boards in each group.

(4) We recommend a minimum period of service of three months with one full year highly recommended. This would be free service under one's own church group supported by that group. If certain types of service such as mental hospital work proved to be remunerative, the money would be used to finance other service projects and missionary activities.

(5) We recommend an educational program for those giving this service. A director would be in charge and he or other competent leadership would help interpret the significance of the work to the workers, show its relationship to the total church program, its value in the Kingdom of God. A course of Bible study, the basic church doctrines such as nonresistance, and other courses might be offered.

Make Plans for Youth Section of Mennonite

Whenever new officers are elected, or new leaders are appointed to an organization, evaluations are made and then plans are laid. Even when an editor is appointed, this age-old process is followed. He must find what his job is and then plan for it, then work toward the realization of those plans.

A meeting was held at the Mennonite Biblical Seminary in Chicago, October 1-2, at which plans were made for the youth page of The Mennonite. In order to share with the readers these early plans, we submit this report.

1. By action of the Board of Publication, a section of The Mennonite was designated to be written especially for Mennonite youth. Reynold Weinbrenner served as editor of the youth section. Since Bro. Weinbrenner has edited The Mennonite for some years, he has requested that this section be edited by someone else.

2. The Young People's Union of the General Conference has served as sponsors of the Youth Section of the Mennonite. By decision at the business meeting of the Young Peoples Union at the General Conference held at North Newton last June, it was agreed a new editor would be appointed. Esko Loewen was appointed to this position by the officers of the Young People's Union effective November 1, 1945.

3. The Youth Section of the paper is to be written with the general age group of 15 to 30 years of age in mind. Realizing that this is a very broad age classification, special emphasis should be placed on the high school and college age group.

4. The editor is responsible to the Young People's Union officers since the Young People's Union sponsors the paper.

5. The plan of having a list of contributors to the paper representing the church youth was discussed. Such a list would include: (1) the officers of local, district, and national youth groups within the church; (2) Students in seminaries and ministers; (3) Student Christian leaders in the schools and colleges; (4) Youth leaders serving in other capacities; (5) Other interested individuals.

(6) Quarterly Supplements to the Youth paper have been planned. These are planned to deal with pertinent topics of interest to the youth in the church. Such topics as Voluntary Service for the Church, Missions, Retreats, the work of the Canadian churches were discussed as topics for the Quarterly Supplements.

(7) Contributors in different areas of interest were listed. Some suggestive areas in which contributions could be made are: (a) Art work, (b) Poetry, (c) Music, (d) Sports, (e) Nature, (f) Recreation, (g) Relief, (h) Health, (i) Home mission work, (j) Foreign missions, (k) College and Seminary, (l) Youth service, (m) Medical, (n) Ministerial.

These general plans will serve to inform the reader of the trend of thinking for the future of this section of The Mennonite.

Those attending the Chicago meeting were: Ruth Ewert, secretary of the Young People's Union and student at Chicago; Elmer Ediger, president of the Y.P.U. and C.P.S. man at Akron, Pennsylvania; Dr. J. H. Langenwalter, advisor of the Y.P.U., North Newton, Kansas; Esko Loewen, editor of the Youth Section of the Mennonite and C.P.S. man at Lincoln, Nebraska.

Your Letters and Opinions are Welcome

Anyone wishing to express himself about the four page section devoted to Youth in the Mennonite, may contact the editor by writing to Esko Loewen, 3605 Holdrege, Lincoln 3, Nebraska. Your letters and opinions are welcome. Any news about your youth group is also very welcome.

Witness of a Mennonite of 1760

At Monalen, a Friend gave me some account of a religious Society among the Dutch, called Mennonists; and, amongst other things, related a Passage in Substance as follows:—One of the Mennonite society at a considerable Distance, and being with his Waggon on Business near the House of his said Acquaintance, and Night coming on, he had Thoughts of putting up with him; but passing by his Fields, and observing the distressed Appearance of his Slaves, he kindled a Fire in the Woods hard by, and lay there that Night: His said Acquaintance hearing where he lodged, and afterward meeting the Mennonite, told him of it; adding, he should have been heartily welcome at his House; and from their Acquaintance in former Time, wondered at his Conduct in the Case. The Mennonite replied, Ever since I Lodged by the Field, I have wanted Opportunity to speak with thee: The Matter was; I intended to have come to thy House for Entertainment, but, seeing thy Slaves at their Work, and observing the Manner of their Dress, I had no liking to come to partake with thee: Then admonished him to use them with more Humanity; and added, As I lay by the Fire that Night, I thought that, as I was a man of Substance, thou wouldst have received me freely; but, if I had been as poor as one of thy Slaves, and had no Power to help myself, I should have received from thy Hand no kinder Usage than they.

—John Woolman's Journal

What Do You Think?

How should the Church proceed on this vital question? What should we, the Youth, do when the government no longer expects us to serve? Should we sigh and each of us follow our private pursuits? Or should we seek to serve and witness voluntarily in causes and work that is vital? Or, what should we do? Your expressions on this question are solicited and will be helpful in shaping any plans of this sort. If there is sufficient expression, a symposium of letters will be published.

NEW
APPEAR

The first issue of Mennonite Life, a new, illustrated magazine of about forty pages is to appear in the beginning of December. This new periodical will portray Mennonite life as it was, as it is, and as it should be. The subscription price for this semi-annual publication will be one dollar. Address your subscription to Mennonite Life, North Newton, Kansas. (Picture at left shows cover page of the first issue of the magazine which will be 9½ by 11½ inches in size.)

RUDOLPH STEPHEN MAREK ORDAINED IN CHICAGO

Rudolph S. Marek was born into a Roman Catholic home and was raised as a Catholic. However, one New Year's Eve, he and his wife were led to a watch-night service in a Protestant church, and there that night they found Christ as their personal savior and experienced the true joy of salvation. Soon after this he felt the call to go into Christian service. Both he and his wife attended Bible school for several months in New York, then after moving to Chicago Mr. Marek attended the Moody Bible Institute for several terms. However, to complete his preparation for the ministry, Mr. Marek attended the Evangelical Free Church Seminary for about two and a half years.

Since they had found the Lord in a Presbyterian Church, Mr. and Mrs. Marek joined the Fourth Presbyterian Church of Chicago when they came to this city. But they were not satisfied, for in the seminary and also in the church they found themselves in sharp disagreement with the teachings and the support of the war. Because of his strong stand against war, he was referred to the Mennonite Church and to some Mennonite ministers in Chicago. This they decided was the church they wanted to join and the kind of people they wanted to work with, so they transferred their membership to the First Mennonite Church, Chicago.

Mr. Marek was especially interested in city mission work and was anxious to take over a mission on the north side of the city and start to preach the message of salvation. He expressed his desire to be ordained. Since he wanted to serve as a Mennonite minister in a city mission, his request for ordination was referred to the Board of Home Missions of the General Conference. The Board appointed an examining committee to examine Brother Marek as to his Christian experience and his beliefs, and if found acceptable, and so recommended by the examining committee, he be ordained as a gospel minister.

The committee found Mr. Marek to be in full agreement with the doctrines and teachings of the Mennonite church; also a man of fine character and talents and one whose zeal for the Lord and His work would prove a real contribution to the church.

The ordination service was held on Sunday evening, July 29, at the First Mennonite Church, Chicago. Rev. John T. Neufeld, pastor of the Mennonite Bible Mission, preached the ordination sermon entitled, "The Message of the Minister." Rev. E. A. Albrecht, Pastor of First Mennonite Church, gave the charge to Brother Marek, and Rev. J. J. Enz, Nappanee, Indiana, led in the ordination prayer. Rev. Marek then gave a testimony of his experience of the love of Christ in his life, how it had changed his life completely, and that now by the grace of God he is willing and ready to be used in the service of the Master. The address of Rev. Rudolph S. Marek is 850 Deversy Avenue, Chicago 14, Illinois—E. A. Albrecht.

TO DEDICATE BETHEL MISSION, WINNIPEG. SPECIAL SERVICE TO FOLLOW

The dedication service of the Bethel Mission of Winnipeg, Manitoba, is to take place, November 11. Rev. Harley King of Colfax, Washington, a member of the Home Mission Board, has consented to come for this important occasion. Also other ministers of the Mennonite churches in Manitoba are invited to attend.

Following the dedication evangelical meetings are to take place every evening of that week. Rev. King and other ministers will serve. A cordial invitation is herewith extended. Those who cannot attend are asked to remember these meetings and also the mission as such with their prayers and financial support.—Isaac I. Friesen, Superintendent

FREEMAN JUNIOR COLLEGE

Miss Kaufman has selected the cast for the All-Academy play which is to be given early in December. The play chosen for this year is J. C. McMullens "Be It Ever So Humble." Beginning October 29 students and faculty will disband all school activities for a two weeks "vacation" in the corn fields. Mrs. Esther Ediger, Henderson, Nebraska, has consented to join the College staff as head cook in the dining hall. Mrs. Ediger will begin her duties after the corn-picking vacation. Prof. B. P. Waltner will leave during the vacation period for a visit to the Montana C.P.S. camps in connection with the Church School Day program of the camps. Rev. and Mrs. Delbert Welty were visitors on the campus recently. They were on their way to the Pacific Coast where Rev. Welty plans to visit his parents.

BETHEL COLLEGE

Instruction in dramatics has been resumed this fall under Mr. Eldon Graber. Rehearsals are in progress for the All-School Play, "Going Places," to be given November 9 at 8 o'clock. The action of the play takes place in the home of the president of a small college. The Seniors, formally dismissed during the Friday chapel period, spent the weekend on an educational tour to Lincoln, Nebraska. Dr. L. C. Kreider, Bethel's representative in the Kansas Athletic Conference, returned from trips to Topeka and Emporia to discuss the resumption of Conference athletics. Mr. Eldon Graber will serve as varsity coach, while Mr. P. R. Kauffman and Miss Mildred Becher direct other recreational sports. The annual Bethel Teachers' Luncheon, held November 2 in Wichita during the regional Teachers' Convention, was in charge of Dr. A. J. Regier. The program was based on the theme: "What's Round the Bend?"

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

Carl M. Lehman, whose home is in Berne, Indiana, has accepted a call to become business manager and treasurer of Bluffton College. He is now in Puerto Rico, a member of the Civilian Public Service unit there. In addition to the usual tasks associated with the offices of business manager and treasurer, Mr. Lehman will have charge of the enlargement and improvement of the student work program. He is in line to receive his discharge soon and hopes to be able to come to Bluffton in January. Mr. Lehman will be known by General Conference people as the writer of the Practical Notes in the Mennonite Senior Sunday School Quarterly. He is a member of the First Mennonite Church in Berne. It is felt that his coming will help greatly to strengthen the college.

MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY AND BIBLE SCHOOL

This week the Bethany and the Mennonite Biblical Seminary spent blessed hours in the presence of God. It was Bible Week. The speaker was Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, Pastor of the Church of the Reformation, Washington, D. C. There was power in his messages, the power of the Holy Spirit and of long and deep meditation. A cleaner vision of the crucified Redeemer was the joy of the listeners. His presentation was eloquent and forceful. It is with gratitude that the schools shall remember Dr. Blackwelder.

Six of our Seminary men were engaged in services over the week-end. Names of the students and the places in which they served are as follows: La Verne Rutschman, North Church, Freeman, South Dakota; Albert Janzen, Mennonite Gospel Mission, Chicago; Ernst Harder, Silverstreet Church, Goshen, Indiana; Robert Hartzler, Eighth Street Church, Goshen; Maynard Shelly, Pekin, Illinois; Willard Wiebe, C.P.S. Camps, Medaryville, Indiana. Since school is closed on Saturday and Monday appointments to such distances can be met.

It is a joy to have the Rev. and Mrs. C. E. Krehbiel with us. They contribute much to the fellowship in the dormitory, in prayer meetings, in office and class room. The recent visits of Dr. and Mrs. Herbert R. Schmidt and children, Miss Aganetha Fast, and Mr. Harold Mishler were much appreciated.

Several new students have made application for admission to the Home Study Course and for residence.

Peace Time Military Training

With over a quarter of a million of the flower of our youth resting under white crosses and three times that number temporarily or permanently disabled; with a backbreaking debt of $300,000,000,000 to be redeemed by the sweat and toil of our posterity is it not about time that America should exert its leadership toward bringing about a better world psychology? If America says that the world of the future shall be a warless world it probably will be because the power of our leadership is so great. If America says the world of the future shall be an armed camp with every nation training to spring at every other nation's throat, it will be just that. The two psychologies will not mix. We cannot say to the youth of America, "You must practice the art to kill six days out of the week but you may practice the art to love on Sunday." There is not room enough in our heads for both psychologies.

This is the most serious speech of my life and it is serious because I believe a crisis confronts our nation. I believe the quicker we get such ideas as compulsory military training out of our heads the better it will be. It is still true, that it is righteousness and not big guns that exalteth a nation.—Hon. Louis Ludlow, in the House of Representatives.

Have you written to your representatives in Washington and expressed your opposition to peacetime military training?

JOTTINGS

—Gospel Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: Eleven young people take catechism. Thirty-seven young and old people succeeded in cleaning the church in half a day on October 23. "Prophecy" is the topic of our Wednesday night Bible Studies, which our pastor illustrates on the blackboard. Wish that more would come, although a fine group is out every week. One of the church collectors was recently given $55.90 in nickles and dimes for the upbuilding of the Kingdom. Rev. D. P. Eitzen, pastor emeritus, celebrated his seventieth birthday anniversary in the midst of a host of relatives and Sunday School class members, October 28.—Corr.

—Rev. Henry Hege of Corn, Oklahoma, preached on "The Peace That Passeth Understanding" at the Geary Church on the afternoon of October 28 and also conducted a communion service.—Mrs. E. R. Lehman.

—Deep Run Church, Bedminster, Pa., "On October 14 we voted to extend a call to J. Herbert Fretz, grandson of the late Allen M. Fretz our former pastor, to become our pastor. He accepted the call. Mr. Fretz expects to start his pastorate here on November 18."—Mae Gross, Corr.

—Buhler, Kansas: Prof. Walter H. Hohmann of Bethel College gave an address on hymnology in our church, Sunday evening, October 28.

—The price of two carloads of flour or $4,100 was the goal of the relief offering that Bethel Church, Mountain, Minnesota, held October 28 at its Harvest Festival service. Previous to this one Sunday School class had already contributed more than the cost of one carload. J. N. Byler, Director of Relief for the Mennonite Central Committee was the special speaker for the day.

—The Mennonite churches of the Mountain Lake community have canned about 4,200 quarts for C.P.S.

—A benefit concert for the Bethel College Women's Association is to be given by Katherine Penner Barton in the Bethel College chapel, November 7, 7:30 P.M.

—Buhler Church, Buhler, Kansas: The fifty dollars which the C.E. Society sent to Puerto Rico will supply milk for twenty-five babies for one month. The total cash value of wheat and cash contributed or relief from our church was $1,850. Mission Festival speakers on November 4 were Miss Martha Burkhalter and Rev. J. M. Regier. The C.P.S. chorus from Lincoln, Nebraska, sang. The church is considering the present parsonage as temporary and is making efforts to raise funds for a new one.

—The Schwenksville (Pa.) Mennonite Church is sending two car loads of flour to Europe. So reports the East Swamp bulletin. East Swamp has sent 260 pounds of clothing to their home missionaries, the Unruhs, and 140 pounds to Akron.

—First Church, Reedley, California, has taken up the project of sending tons of raisins for relief. The value of a ton is about $200.

NUMBER 45

"Our Father, who givest every good and perfect gift to man"

OUR FATHER

Who givest every good and perfect gift to man,

If we should count . . .

*The cattle on a thousand hills, the rainbow's colored span;
The checkered shadows of the clouds that fall on fields below.
The bounty tied in corn shocks—wind tattered—row on row;
The sheep that graze in pastures green beneath a willow tree,
The sprouting of fresh winter wheat as far as eye can see;
There are the prairies, reaching far, in purple browns and tans
Through which,—as though to tie them all—the road's gray ribbon spans;
And Autumn's sugar maple aflame with colors bold—
A studded gem amid a world turned suddenly to gold!
The majesty of mountains, its streams that fall and foam
Down rock-beds of the canyons where wild beasts drink and roam;
The pine tree and the silver of spruce with spicy scent—
Their cones—ripe for the harvest—with which the boughs are bent;
The thick and tangled woodland with all its living things—
Where pain is lost and sorrow when Nature healing brings;
The burning in a sunset that turns the world a-fire,
And night that comes a-stealing in shadowy attire—
Sometimes in gown more costly, starred with a million gems
With moonlight touching softly the cloud-fringe of her hems;
The angry voice of thunder, the lightning 'mid a rain—
The scent of earth's refreshing when being washed again!
The wild flow'rs of the meadow—the bed of dahlia's red—
The song of birds at morning when all their young are fed;
The mystic deep of waters whose waves roll at our feet—
A symphony unending in cadence low and sweet;
Our homes—the peace of firesides—the voices that we love—
And over and about us Thy arms stretched from above. . . .*

'Tis so we count today.

*Father, who knowest how to give good gifts to man,
For this we pray:
Remembering the promise of the rainbow's span—
When children call to Thee in anguish for their bread,
Give them the faith to know they shall be fed—
Thou art our Father still!
For this we thank and yield to Thee our will.*

THANKFULNESS does not always come easily to all people. Consequently, it is of interest to note that there is a close relationship between thankfulness and the recognition of grace, the undeserved love of God. A feeling of thankfulness cannot arise in man when he takes food, health, education, etc., for granted as though he deserved it all. And yet the tendency from infancy on is to take satisfactions for granted. Man is born with a biological tendency towards selfishness and unthankfulness. However, as this tendency it outgrows, as the spiritual life of love to God and man transforms the original human being, there is an increasing perception of undeserved love and consequently growth in thankfulness. The thankful person feels undeserving of the love accorded to him by God and by those whom He works. He sees how his own weaknesses and self-concern make him unworthy of the free grace that comes to him. The thankful person must be humble. He cannot be the cold individualist; he must be the brotherly cooperator. Freely he shares the blessings of life, for he perceives that they have been freely given to him. Feeling that he does not deserve them, he is not inclined to hoard them. He sees life as a channel and not as a chalice. He is brotherly, for he sees how much we all need each other. Saved by grace through faith, he is gracious. Thankfulness and an experience of grace are inextricably bound together.

CHRISTIAN MISSION WORK is up against some great problems today. The war has not taught the non-Christian masses to have a great respect for Christianity. Over five hundred Christian churches in Japan, including Kagawa's beloved Ikutagawa Church in the slums of Kobe, were destroyed. American missionaries to Japan will have to contend with memories of atomic bombing. Preaching will have little effect unless the sermons are lived in a Good Samaritan way, and it is a great job to be a good Samaritan when the need is so great. Furthermore, we are facing an age when scientific industrial advance may sweep over China, India, and Africa. The old religions may crumble under this wave of modernity. And as they crumble the peoples may accept Western secularism with Western science. Judging by the difficulty Christianity is having with secularism in America, this problem will not be an easy one for Christian missions to face. America sends out Christian missionaries but also those of big business, Hollywood, armaments, etc. Which missionaries will win out? Christian missions faces the task of securing extensively and excellently trained missionaries, men and women who have an insight into what is taking place in the world and who have good equipment not only for dealing with heathen religions but also for contending with the attitude that sees no need for the God of our Lord Jesus Christ. Christian missions faces the difficult task of teaching "all things" so that mission work will have a vertical emphasis equal to the horizontal, for only in that way can the cross with all its glory be best seen by those in the darkness. Each one of us needs to be a missionary right where we are in all that we experience if these problems are to become less formidable.

PEACETIME CONSCRIPTION would tend to make us a militaristic nation. Webster defines militarism as: "1. A military state or condition; disposition to provide for the strength and safety of a nation or government by maintaining strong military forces. 2. The spirit and temper which exalts the military virtues and ideals and minimizes the defects of military training and the cost of war and preparation for it: of used derogatorily of the spirit which tends to confer undue privilege or prominence on the military class." Was it not peacetime conscription in Germany and Japan that made them seem so militaristic? Today Russia's system of conscription tends to alarm us. If we adopt such a system we will seem more militaristic and less friendly to Russia. Though we may feel that our measures are for defense, others are tempted to fear strong measures or domination. Peacetime conscription would tend to give a universal military mindedness that would make the people as a whole less and less able to see the alternatives to war. Such military power could easily give a false sense of security. It makes for a reliance upon might rather than right. General Jan Smuts of South Africa said after the first World War, "I look upon conscription as the taproot of militarism; unless that is cut, all our labors will eventually be in vain." It is difficult to see how the United States could embrace conscription without embracing militarism.

THE RETURN of the servicemen from the armed forces should stimulate their elders to some searching of the heart. A Ohio Yearly Meeting of the Society of Friends recently declared: "Though we reaffirm our conviction that the way of the sword is not in harmony with the will of God, we realize now only too well that our attempts to understand and live out the implications of the ways of peace have been feeble. We have neglected guiding our children as they have grown to maturity. We have not given them the training which would have provided for them the necessary spiritual bulwark against the opposing forces of our day. All of this negligence on our part saddens our hearts."

Acceptable Thanksgiving

By H. E. Nunemaker

"Oh, that men would praise the Lord for His goodness, and for His wonderful works to the children of men." Psalm 107:8.

The Thanksgiving time is never complete without reflection on the observance of the first Thanksgiving Day. Life had been hard for our Pilgrim forefathers; so hard that many of them did not survive the rigors of their first New England winter. And when at the end of the following summer their toil was rewarded by a harvest, they lost sight of their toil and privations in their gratitude for the blessings they did receive.

God has instilled within His animate creation the instinct of gratitude. The beasts of the field respond to the kindness of their master according to their nature. And man, in his normal relationship with God, is prompted to give expression to his gratitude and in that expression find a satisfying joy. There are, however, certain factors which tend to deaden our sense of gratitude to God for His wonderful gifts. One factor is the result of our modern industrial life in which one group of men depends directly on another group for its living. The clash of the wills of men who are nevertheless dependent on one another for their existence tends to crowd recognition of the guidance and blessing of God out of the picture. A soap-box orator waxed loud in his denunciation of capital and eloquent in his praise of labor. When a bystander asked, "Where does God come in?" he flashed back, "He doesn't come in." How different the boy who whistled cheerfully as he hoed corn on a hot July day. A passer-by in his surprise stopped and expressed his surprise. "Why," the boy answered, "I was just thinking, I am helping God raise corn." The tiller of the soil labors long and hard to prepare the seed-bed and sow the seed, realizing that the rest is in the hands of God. He is dependent on God. If he performs his tasks with the sense of Divine partnership, he has discovered the most thrilling human experience. That sense of partnership with God with its attendant thrill, is becoming increasingly difficult in our modern industrial world. Doubtless, relatively few attain it.

Another factor which contributes to our negligence in expressing gratitude is that His blessings are constant. We enjoy them every hour of our lives. Day after day they are heaped upon us. With unflinching regularity the sun rises, bringing its health-giving light, the clouds come bringing the showers, the harvested crops provide us with food, friends are everywhere, and above all God is unflinching in His offers of spiritual gifts. And because of their unflinching regularity we often accept them merely as a matter of fact. There are of course the special occasions which are recognized, such as the return to our homes of our loved ones and the healing of the body of a serious affliction. But the constant, unflinching daily blessings which constitute life and make it pleasant are often not recognized. "Oh, that men would praise the Lord for His goodness and for His wonderful works to the children of men."

But how may we express our gratitude in an acceptable manner? Surely it must be more than an occasional prayer of thanksgiving, sincere as that may be. Acceptable gratitude is embodied in Jesus' answer to the question as to which commandment He considered the greatest. He answered, "The first commandment is, thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength and the second is like unto it, thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments the whole law hangeth, and the prophets." Jesus was thinking of a life which expressed a grateful love reaching up to God and a compassionate love reaching out to humanity. Genuine gratitude includes both, yet either one is easily overlooked.

The prophet Isaiah observed the worshippers as they came to the temple with their sacrifices and offerings of thanksgiving. But that which disturbed him was the fact that the bringing of the sacrifices and offerings had, in the course of time, become routine and were no longer the expression of an overflowing love to God which found expression in this way. Accordingly, he voiced the disapproval of God in no uncertain terms, "To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices unto me? Bring no more vain oblations; your new moons and appointed feasts my soul hateth." That which God desired is expressed in the later appeal, "Come now and let us reason together, saith the Lord: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool. If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land; but if ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be devoured with the sword: the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." God desires the heart. It is the condition of the heart that gives character and meaning to the expressions of gratitude and the gifts that are offered to Him.

Jesus' summary of the law and the prophets suggests also the horizontal expression—the outreach of that love. We can be certain that the blessings of God are given, not to be enjoyed and stored up within ourselves, but to be shared with others. We were not created to be cisterns. God intended us to be fountains—the channels through which His blessings are shared with others. The Sea of Galilee is the channel through which the waters pass into the Jordan Valley. It abounds with life. The Dead Sea receives the same fresh water, and because there is no outlet it becomes bitter and is without life. So also in life, sharing is the outlet which prevents stagnation. Surely, the tremendous needs of our time present opportunity for the enrichment of the life by sharing God's blessings.

THE MUTUAL RESPONSIBILITY of the Church and Returning Service Men

When I received this assignment, I prepared eight questions which were sent to all of our young men in service (both C. P. S. and Military) to members of our Church Peace Committee, members of our Young People's Fellowship Committee, as well as others.

The questions are these: (1) What are the main responsibilities our church has to its returning service men? (2) Which of these do you feel our church has neglected? (3) What are the main responsibilities which returning men have to the church? (4) Which of these do you feel our service men have neglected? (5) In what sense may the church (or members at home) be the "problem"? (6) Should those who have taken up military service be asked to reaffirm their adherence to the Biblical peace position? (7) If not, in what way do you propose that our church maintain a consistent position? (8) In what definite ways should both the returning service men and the church endeavor to show consideration for each other?

First, then, let us think of the main responsibilities which the church has toward these, our brethren in the faith, who for a time have been away, but are now, one after another, returning to our home communities.

One of our men in C. P. S. writes:

"The main responsibility of the church is to continue to offer salvation in its true and simple form. Accept the men when they return as members who have changed only in that they have grown in wisdom and knowledge, regardless of their experiences during their time of service. Accept them without much to-do but in the spirit of Christian love."

A lieutenant writes:

The Church owes them "the opportunity to regain, in part at least, the delay in preparing for his future. This might be both financial and educational. It is understood of course that the chief responsibility of the church is spiritual in nature and it is taken for granted that spiritual service will continue to be rendered to all alike."

Still another:

The Church's responsibility to its returning men is "no greater nor less than to each other member, encouraging, admonishing, comforting; also praying for each other, thus drawing us closer to God; also early opportunity for participation in church activities."

Briefly summarized, the church owes to our returning men: (1) First and foremost, spiritual guidance and inspiration, presenting the gospel of Christ in a clear and vital way. Christ came that all might have life and that more abundantly. (2) Secondly, the church owes to all opportunities for fellowship—and a sincere welcome. Those who were gone need to be reassured that they were missed and are wanted. A welcome, preferably without stage setting, in which Christ is the center of focus. (3) Then, too, the church needs to continue providing to all opportunities for study of God's Word with the view of strengthening the historic position of our church. (4) It calls for a frank discussion of mutual weaknesses, an eagerness to try to understand the position which a fellow-member has taken, even though it might conflict with our best insights. (5) It calls for tolerance. Many of those who have been gone during the past three or four years have grown immeasurably more than at home. They went forth as our representatives. Why must they necessarily adjust themselves to us at home who have not grown as they have? We do not expect missionaries to return from a foreign field exactly the same as they left us years before. (6) Some of our men will need financial aid to become reestablished. Materially they have given of valuable time and resources while we at home reaped abnormal profits. Some congregations are setting aside a lump sum figured on the basis of length of service. Others are providing long term loans at a low rate of interest. Many churches are exempting service men from paying regular church dues up to six months or a year after their discharge from such service. One or more of the above will certainly be helpful and appreciated. (7) Immediately we should add, the church owes its men opportunity rather than charity, except, of course, in special cases. The church should hardly be asked to buy or pay for loyalty to conscientious convictions. These cannot be genuine and at the same time purchasable. (8) One of our men suggests that churches should encourage Mennonite Publications to "post" periodically job vacancies or farm vacancies, which could be filled by returning men and ask that a free subscription to one of these papers be extended to discharged men for one year. (9) Then, having given them concrete evidence that the church has their spiritual welfare as its major objective, these men should be given real responsibility in the work of the church. In this adjustment period we will need much sympathetic understanding for during the past years they have been displaced men, largely out of touch with the church. None should be preferred above the others. Those who will want to prove themselves in line with the scriptural purpose of the church should be permitted to do so. (10) All should be upheld in prayer and given the benefit of a more consistent example of the Christian Way of Life.

By Walter H. Dyck

Which of these has our local church neglected? We have counseled with them, written them personally as well as in the form of "news letters," put up a Post-War Fund for C. P. S. men, sent them Christmas packages and other favors. We have had a special garden, canned for C. P. S. Camps, we have spoken of them as "our boys" and still we have fallen short in many ways. (1) We have not put sufficient emphasis on the scriptural peace principles in the time of peace, nor sufficiently stressed the wrong of war in our teaching both in our homes and church school. The actions of our young men reflect very largely the attitudes of parents, teachers, and ministers. (2) We have not lived appealing Christian lives that would challenge young people to greater loyalty. Young people like hard things to do. We have lived in "a way" rather than in "the way." Young people are quick to sense "the set of our sails." (3) A young man writes: "We young people have not been sufficiently open to counsel with older Christians and ministers and the older have lacked the deep concern for the spiritual welfare and the establishing of young people in the faith." (4) A young man at home writes: "We often forget that their lot might have fallen to us." Another one at home agrees, "We have not sacrificed our comforts and social activities as we should for their sake." Returning service men will be disappointed when they find that the church is not spiritually strong. (5) In some churches men serving in certain branches are treated rather coolly. We have not considered the reasons why they selected the type of service we could not support. (6) We have not attempted to maintain a larger spiritual service to men in uniform. C. P. S. Camps have been visited by pastors of our General Conference but we have left the men in the army or navy, who certainly are also in need of spiritual help without an organized concern for them. The Gideons, the chaplains, and individual pastors alone have offered spiritual assistance. Since "work of national importance" had the official endorsement of our conference, the church has done more, both spiritually and materially, for C. O. 's than for I-A's and I-AO's. The C. O. 's should not forget that; and the others should not hold it against the C. O. 's or the church. (7) One more "neglect" cited by a service man. He says, "I have long felt that it is a responsibility of the church to provide wholesome Christian recreation for its young people, preferably away from the sanctuary of the church building. What form this recreation should take is a very delicate but none the less extremely important question. The church should use discretion in sponsoring 'recreation' of a purely entertainment variety. Christian recreation should be constructive, inspirational and contribute to the development of the Christian personality. It should aim to give depth and meaning to the individual's Christian life and at the same time help him to relax from his day's toil and enjoy to the fullest the gifts of God that surround him."

What are the main responsibilities of the returning men to the church? No doubt, it will be the same as before. If their loyalty is undimmed they will find ways of expressing it.

Returning men loyal to the church will humbly take their place in the church, be tolerant to other service men who chose a different type of service than they did, attend services unless unavoidably detained, accept assignments in the work of the church, and offer the church the benefit of new ideas and newly developed talents. One of our men writes: "Besides the responsibilities which go with church membership he should furnish the church with constructive ideas and leadership in a program of preparedness in the event of universal military training and future wars." A wife of a C.P.S. man writes: "The C.P.S. men 'should be shining lights in church and community for the way of peace. The financial help they have received should not put upon them a burden of gratitude. After all, the money was not given to them as a person, but for a cause in which the church believed. They should feel obligated to uphold that cause when at home. Only in that way can they repay the confidence and support of the church. I realize that this is a stiff assignment for the C.O.'S and surely we will fail at times in spite of sincere efforts. However, we have turned our faces in this direction and we cannot and do not want to turn back."

One of our men in service summarizes this matter thus: "Returning service men must realize that the church has been their faithful friend during their absence and has carried the load which now must be borne by all alike. The service man must give his complete support to the church; spiritually, morally, and financially. His behavior in and out of church circles should be such that God might be glorified."

Those of us who feel keenly about the compromise involved in taking up arms against our fellowmen will have to insist that there has been at least one point of neglect which will have to be faced by those who took up military service. The oath, or affirmation upon entering the army or navy, definitely commits the individual to the purpose of the military arm of the government. This fact needs to be calmly reckoned with. But we hasten to emphasize, as our men in all types of service readily admit, that they have failed in one or more of the responsibilities listed above. They have failed to always guard their conduct as they might have in their home communities; some have lacked an appreciation for what the church has done for them, and too many are merely yearning to return to a pre-war status. One C.P.S. man writes: "I believe there are many who are endowed with unusual abilities and special talents and who have not developed these special gifts for the glorification of God and the strengthening of the church."

A fellow minister answers this query with: "I am afraid that our service men were ill prepared to witness for the Lord Jesus Christ. Our C.P.S. program was more eager to witness for a cause than to witness for Christ. Our army and navy men were equally unprepared."

To the question, "In what sense may the church (or the members at home) be the "problem"? Answers were wide in range throwing a wholesome light on our many weaknesses. When a "better than thou" attitude dominates the heart and mind we usually find with it an insincere welcome or even abject indifference toward returning men. Then there may also be partiality, an unwillingness to consider "the other side of the question," or even an unforgiving spirit. We dare not condemn those who followed their conscience, unenlightened as it might have been. We at home need grace to be able to distinguish between the real hindrances and furtherances in God's Work. Much of our seeming integrity may deserve nothing more than Christ's "But he willing to justify himself."

One who is in a rut usually regards new actions as divisive and dangerous. We at home are the problem if we either dwell on the changes in men by injurious gossip or by insisting on rapid adjustment to our opinions. The real problem may lie with us at home even though we were not required to take the oath or wear a uniform. We felt that we did not need to get out into the open. There were inconsistencies. Some of our own young people at home, for instance, hesitated to appear in a Summer Union Service Choir of what might have been about sixty or seventy young people of our Mennonite Churches lest it jeopardize their II-C classification. Still, some who enjoy roller skating or the theatre did not seem to feel that attendance at the latter jeopardized their safety. Yes, we follow the Lord, but sometime "afar off." We too often think of the Christian life as the easy, peaceful, care-free way. Our Lord never promised a life of ease. The Apostle Paul says, "Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." (II Tim. 3:12)

The service men, C.P.S. and military, we often feel, willingly chose service under the supervision of the government. We have had the I-wish-the-war-weren't over-too-soon type of farmer and factory worker. Can we say that we shared excess profits sufficiently or do we also still hold blood money? Such action can bring division between the church and the returning men.

One more problem which my attention was called is described as "an undercurrent of tension and conflict which often exists between certain members and groups in the church. This curbs the effectiveness of the Church's message and weakens the fellowship within the church."

Answers to the question, "Should those who have taken up military service be asked to reaffirm their adherence to the Biblical peace position?" were about equally divided between "yes" and "no." Many were qualified answers. One man in military service writes: "Yes, this position is the very distinguishing feature of the church and should be maintained." A man in C.P.S. asks: "If the military service man were asked to reaffirm his position, how about the church members who would have taken military service if they would have been drafted?" Another reasons thus: "Our church has always stood for nonresistance based on the teachings of Christ. These teachings have not changed during or after this war, therefore our position likewise has not changed. The returning military man knows this and probably sees our position more clearly now than before he decided upon his type of service. He should be welcomed in Christian love. The church does not weaken its position by this method and will win him over or he will automatically leave without being turned away." Another feels "If members of the church do not live the 'peace' way of life then it would be hypocrisy to expect the men from the army to make any sort of confession when they rejoin or come back to the church. If the atmosphere in our church is outspoken for peace and nonresistance then men who do not agree won't come back. The desire to be members in such a church is enough of a confession of their change of attitude. If we, who claim to be nonresistant cannot through our lives prove that we have something better—then why bother with words of any kind. There is only one way to maintain a consistent position, in my estimation. That is a rededication of every member to the way of Christ as outlined in the Sermon on the Mount. The pressure of a public confession may be the cause of hypocrisy in some and resentment to the church in others."

An older man at home suggests, "We have need that we all reaffirm, together with them, our Biblical peace position before the Lord. I would suggest a solemn assembly, preceded by a service of invitation, another service of preparation, which in turn leads up to the service of affirmation before the Lord."

A certain service man knows that if the church is to maintain a more consistent position he would, instead of asking some of the members to sign again the dotted line, "rather encourage thorough Bible studies for young and old that firm convictions may be established in the teachings of the scriptures."

It will be your privilege and mine to help bring together these extremes. It will require earnest prayer and much love. Problems will melt away when viewed in the light of our Lord's eternal kingdom. May God grant the leaders of our people, the individual members, and the returning men, much grace to face this readjustment period confidently. Let us proclaim the message of God's love, diligently to our people, but let us not judge, "for the Lord knoweth them that are his." Let us welcome our "boys" back with a heartfelt warmth praying with them for forgiveness and asking Him "Who is able to keep us from falling" for grace to stand.

OUR MINISTRY OF EDUCATION

By J. H. Langenwalter

"I Thank Thee, O Father"

There is something hearty about the ring of these words of Jesus. It makes one think of receiving a gift which one values highly and immediately.

When one studies the background of this expression one feels that there was no immediate occasion for hearty thankfulness. Three proud cities had placed their NOT WANTED signs out for Jesus. He had been helpful within their boundaries before, but He was no longer wanted. All He had been able to do was to give His helpful touch to a few who could not avoid Him because of their condition. It was the kind of situation which might make some men complain or rail against those at whose hands they had been wronged. Not so Jesus. He simply portrayed the ends to which their pride would lead them to and then gave expression to deep and sincere thanks and appreciation toward His Father as Lord of heaven and earth.

Jesus had revealed the evil end of pride. Now He revealed the wonderful end of Love. For Him that Love gave strength to meet the wrongs of pride-blinded men and to appreciate the great good of His relationship with the Father.

We too often consider ourselves thankful when we have received that which appeals to us immediately and have said "Thank you" in a hearty way. That kind of gratitude seems to desert us when we are brought face to face with that which is immediately evil. We are now passing through such experiences. The war is over. That affords some measure of immediate occasion for gratitude, but there is much heaviness and much fear, and much propaganda to increase fears. Thanksgiving Day is immediately before us. Whether we like it or not, there is a kind of dilemma before us. Trying to console ourselves that "It is the will of God" becomes a makeshift the longer one studies the attitudes of Jesus. He sought to subtle explanations. He faced what confronted Him, gave His estimate of things as they really were, and then turned to His father to thank Him for He was the one who stood in a right relationship to Him. Therein lies the true value of thankfulness. True friends appreciate each other for what they are to each other always and ultimately much more than for the gifts they may be able to hand each other occasionally.

Thankfulness makes merciful. Jesus invited people, who had hard loads to bear, to come to Him that He might help them. The world is full of people today who have very hard loads to bear. They will be helped by those who are really grateful to God for what He means to them.

ONE WORLD

The Commission on a Just and Durable Peace, which includes ninety-six representatives from the larger Protestant communions, met at Philadelphia, November 8-9 to "formulate its program of strategy designed to further the successful operation of the world's peace machinery."

The fourth annual rural life conference of the Historic Peace Churches, Brethern, Friends, Mennonite, will be held at Wilmington College, Wilmington, Ohio, November 15-17.

"The President's statement, in which he expressed determination to fulfill the 'pledge made not only to our allies but to the American people' by sending coal and food to the liberated countries, merits the support of Friends. Letter to the President and to the newspapers approving his stand in this matter would be of value."—The American Friend.

Shortly after their arrival in Japan recently Dr. Walter Van Kirk and three colleagues joined thirty Japanese Christian leaders in the Lord's Supper. The first hymn was "Blest Be the Tie That Binds." After the service a Japanese Christian leader said that this historic reunion was "the happiest day of my life." Dr. van Kirk reports that every Japanese Christian they had met received them warmly.

Anna V. Liechty Ordained As Missionary

Anna V. Liechty was ordained as a missionary in an impressive service held at her home church, the First Mennonite Church of Berne, Indiana, Sunday, October 28, 1945. The brethren, Rev. Olin Krehbiel, the pastor, Rev. C. E. Rediger, Secretary of the Congo Inland Mission, and Rev. A. E. Kreider conducted the service. A. E. Kreider, a member of the Foreign Mission Board preached the sermon, using as a text the words of Christ, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," Mark 16:15. After the message Sister Liechty was formally ordained to the office of a missionary. She then gave her testimony, speaking of the manner in which God brought her to the place where she was willing to yield herself fully to Christ and whatever service He might have for her. It was evident that she had found a great joy in her surrender to Christ and His call.

Miss Liechty will go to the Belgian Congo as soon as transportation is available. She will serve under the Congo Inland Mission with which our Foreign Mission Board is affiliated. Under this arrangement our Conference is able to send out those who offer themselves for work in Africa. At the present time eight workers from our Conference are at work in Africa under the Congo Inland Mission. Others in addition to Sister Liechty will go as soon as passage can be secured. The Congo has become a field of missionary effort in which we as a conference have definite interest. It is our prayer that the Lord may richly bless and sustain Sister Liechty as she goes to her field of labor in Africa.

Mennonite Youth

"A United Mennonite Youth in Christ"

GIVING THANKS IN 1945

Long ago a teacher told the story of a religious man who went to the place of worship and prayed to God, giving thanks for the blessings he had received. And he said, "O God, I thank you that I am not like other men, greedy, dishonest, or adulterous, like that tax-collector. I fast two days in the week; I pay tithes on everything I get." The teacher who related the story said that the man's prayer was not true thanksgiving.

How much of our thanksgiving is on this low level! How much is almost as self-centered. In numbering our gifts we consider the things that have happened in terms of our well-being. We trace various blessings from God to us, but there we stop. Our thanksgiving is incomplete. Thanksgiving does include this awareness of God in everyday affairs, and a sense of dependency, but it also includes a humble recognition of our responsibilities and a re-dedication of ourselves to His service. Genuine thanksgiving includes a sense of mission, and does not give us feelings of self-satisfaction and complacent security.

Perhaps half our thanksgiving should be listening to God's answer. Many times the instructions for the use of his gifts may make us uncomfortable; they may be terrible to listen to. But we have been told that Christ's way is not the easy way.

This is the season of Thanksgiving, 1945. Let us speak the thankfulness we feel; then let us listen to God's answer:

"We thank Thee, great God, for the revelation of Thyself we have in Jesus."

"Let those about you see that same revelation in you, my children. I would that all men should see what you have seen."

"We thank Thee for our heritage of a simple, Christ-centered way of life."

"You do well to give thanks for fathers who have kept the faith. But each of you must re-discover that faith for yourself and make it your own."

"We thank Thee, great Creator, for the perfection of a well-ordered universe, for the beauty of nature, for the praise of starlight, the adoration of bird song, and the joy of the bending ear and the swelling apple, the promise of springtime and the fulfillment of fall."

"Recognize me in all the beauty around you. May it teach you to know that when you let my laws operate within you, you will be as beautiful and as orderly as the rest of my creation."

"We are deeply thankful, God of Peace, that the blasphemy called war has ceased."

"Your gratitude is empty unless you have within you the spirit of reconciliation."

"We give thanks, great Provider, for the material gifts of life—for food, clothing, shelter."

"These gifts were given to you to enable you to serve others. These lowly material things of my creation achieve their highest destiny only in your acts of love."

"We thank Thee, our Father, for the joy of fellowship and the blessings of Christian homes."

"As you know the beauty of fellowship with your brethren, may you be reminded of your kinship with all men. But your fellowship will never be perfect until no sharecropper's hungry child cries himself to sleep with no one caring; until no oriental is spat upon; until no dark-skinned boy's personality is distorted by being continually beaten into submission. Your brotherhood is not complete until it includes every man."

"We thank Thee, dear Lord, for the challenge to youth of living in these unusual, exciting times. We believe that the only answer to the world's problem is Christ's way of life, that peace and happiness can come by no other way. We thank Thee that we may have a part in causing men to understand this basic truth. May we be useful to Thee. And may thy thanks we give to Thee this harvest season be merely verbal expressions of lives of thanksgiving which will live every day."

"If you know these things, happy are you if you do them; for that, after all, is the most perfect and acceptable thanksgiving."

"In the spirit of Christ we pray. Amen."

THANKSGIVING AND OUR WORLD

As we turn to God and give thanks for all that He, in His ordered way, has made available to us, we need also to look at our world. We need to look at it to see in sharp clarity the condition it is in. The following facts and figures help give us an idea of what our teeming world is.

Divorce Statistics of Different Nations

Here are some interesting divorce statistics with the United States in the lead:

France: One divorce out of 21 marriages.

Denmark: One divorce out of 22 marriages.

Germany: One divorce out of 24 marriages.

Norway: One divorce out of 30 marriages.

Sweden: One divorce out of 33 marriages.

Great Britain: One divorce out of 96 marriages.

Canada: One divorce out of 161 marriages.

Japan: One divorce out of 8 marriages.

United States: One divorce out of 7 marriages.

From 1906 to 1936 we had three million divorces in the United States. In one generation, we might say, there were three million broken homes. Millions of children have thus been deprived of parental supervision.—Herald of Holiness.

How the U. S. Spends Its Money

Usually people spend their money for that in which they are most interested. If that be true of the American people, then our interests are not what one might expect of a Christian nation. According to figures just released by the Golden Rule Foundation, Americans during the year 1944 used their money for the following purposes:

$900,000,000—churches and all church charities
$1,600,000,000—churches and all charities, Red Cross, War Relief, Community Chest, etc.
$2,200,000,000—cosmetics and personal care
$2,700,000,000—cigarettes and tobacco
$7,100,000,000—alcoholic beverages
$10,000,000,000—jewelry, furs, gambling, and other luxuries
$40,000,000,000—savings
$40,000,000,000—taxes
$86,700,000,000—war
$5,500,000,000—movies and recreation

The Outlook of British Students

A Scottish writer, Alexander Miller, describes the great mass of British students as being exhausted, disillusioned, and world-weary. They suffer from "numbness in mind and soul, a sense of social helplessness, and sheer frustration." Mr. Miller says there are two groups of students who do not fall under this description of the main group. The first is the Christian group, made up chiefly of conscientious objectors. These are developing an interest in self-sustaining rural communities as a refuge from modern totalitarianism. The other group, about equal in size, consists of the Communists who look forward with hope to a new alignment of social and political forces.

Some Facts About India

India outside of Burma bosoms 389 millions according to the last census. Of these, 270 millions are Hindus. Population increases about 5 per cent annually. In some sections there are 2000 per square mile. There are about 8 million Christians and 21,000 congregations. But, here are some additional facts:

Out of a total of 552 native states, only partly under British control, almost 500 are still closed to the Gospel, because the ruler of the states does not wish his people to become Christian. Some of these have not yet been penetrated at all. Out of the 655,000 villages about 500,000 villages have not been as yet reached.

Only 12 per cent of India's population—47 millions—can read or write. This percentage is a trifle higher among Christians.

The Appalling Needs of War Torn Countries

As of September 15, 5,163,000 displaced persons had been repatriated from their respective occupation zones in Germany. A total of 1,380,000 still remained, including 826,000 Poles.

Big headache for UNRRA and the armies is what to do with the more than one million Displaced Persons, who are either repatriables, stateless persons, or who don't want to return to their homes.

The Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations announced that the world faces more hunger than the last year of war. Europe will need 18,000,000 tons imported while the rest of the world will need another 17,000,000. World farm production is 3 per cent below 1935-1939 levels, and decreased reserves, droughts, and war disruptions have kept the level of production lower.

What Christian People Are Doing About It

Amidst all this chaos and suffering, turmoil and sorrow and blindness, some of us are most fortunately situated, not by our own will or goodness, but by good fortune. In humbleness we need to praise God and in Thanksgiving express God's love by reaching out to all these people. What are we doing about all this? Here are some facts and figures:

In India

The Missionary force in India is about 3,350 at present. There are 3,050 institutions nearly all of which are operated by European missionaries. There are 14,655 primary schools. Direct evangelistic missionaries are comparatively few. On the average about nine missionaries among a million people.

In America

A recent Gallup poll reported that in answer to the question "If necessary, would you and your family be willing to eat about one-fifth less than you are now eating in order to send more food to Europe?" the "Yes" answers were 70 per cent.

From Mennonite communities carloads of flour, raisins, canned food, clothing are moving toward the areas of need. One community has a "Hogs for Relief" program canning fifty hogs for hungry people in Europe.

And much else is being done—in a small way—true. The work before men of vision is extremely great. The need is almost beyond measure. You begin to feel your little effort won't help much. But, a carload of raisins from Reedley, canned pork from Beatrice, flour from Buhler, the workers in Holland, France, Italy, India all will contribute to our God-given privilege and duty "to feed the hungry, care for the sick, and give hope to the ones who despair."

Youth faces an awesome world, but one that calls for the strength, idealism, and vision of youth. God grant this generation the grace to think clearly, walk uprightly, and do nobly as a witness of God's goodness to us!

British Christian Youth

With the return of peace in Europe, British Methodists report a gratifying up surge of religious interest among youth. For the first time in many years Sunday-school attendance is showing a decided upswing. There has been a gain of more than 1,000 Sunday-school teachers, alone. Wesley Guilds and Fellowships are reporting an increase of 10,000, while there is, at the same time, a "phenomenal gain" in the number of "youth clubs." In the latter the increase is more than 12,000 over last year, with a total membership of 88,926. Attendance upon public worship services is improving decidedly, and strictly religious activities seem to be attracting new loyalty on the part of young people.

Books To Holland

Some 2,000 textbooks have been shipped to Holland by the European Student Relief Fund, to meet the needs of Dutch university students. Cheese and milk have also been sent. Dutch students are still in great need of books and magazines from the United States, England and France.

HARVEST HOME

Marian Stearns Curry

The good Mother Earth folds her hands now and smiles,

The fruit of her labor is noticed for miles,
The corn and the pumpkins, the apples, and all
Are precious reward for her work, in the fall.

How proud she must feel when the crops of her sod
Are brought to the church to give thanks to our God
For he gave her sunshine and rain—yes, and snow!
In order that all of her seedlings might grow.

And so at the altar we lay at his feet
The best of the good things he gives us to eat.

On all of our hearts is bestowed happy cheer
In this harvest home, comfort time of the year.

PEACETIME MILITARY CONSCRIPTION

Richard L. Feldman, a military instructor and physics teacher in Roosevelt High School. Washington, D.C., testified before the House Committee on Postwar Military Policy in behalf of minor children of prospective draft status. He had served in the navy during World War I. Among statements he made are these:

"The naval militia unit to which I belonged was composed of young men from a small and isolated coastal town. I had known them for several months before we went on our battleship and they were as decent a group of sixty small-town patriotic fellows as you could find. However, before that year in the fleet was up, cursing and lewd remarks were the rule among them rather than the exceptions as formerly; at least half of them had been drunk a number of times, and an unpleasantly large number of them were patrons of the venereal clinic.

"We lived in the midst of continuous thievery, gambling, morbid, lustful and lascivious talk, and among the enlisted men there was almost a total eclipse of honesty and decency. . . . No one can talk to me about moral values to be gained in military service. Anyone who prates on that theme must never have seen any military service and must never have used his eyes."

WE WELCOME CONTRIBUTORS

Articles about the activities of your Young People's group, about your experiences and your concerns, what you think the Youth page should be and do all are heartily welcome. As we grow into the job, more contact with local organizations will be made and we will strive to serve you more adequately.

SOMETHING DIVINE IN THEM

(Ed.'s Note: The following selection is taken from the words of Aristides, an Athenian orator, written to the Emperor Hadrian, 117-138 A. D. It provides an interesting glimpse into the life of the followers of Christ at the beginning of the second century. Might these words be said of Christians, of us, in the twentieth century!)

The Christians know and trust God . . . they placate those who oppress them and make them their friends, they do good to their enemies. Their wives are absolutely pure, and their daughters modest. Their men abstain from unlawful marriage and from all impurity. If any of them have bond-women or children, they persuade them to become Christians for the love they have toward them; and when they become so, they call them without distinction, brothers. . . . They love one another. They do not refuse to help the widows. They rescue the orphan from him who does him violence. He who has gives ungrudgingly to him who has not. If they see a stranger, they take him to their dwellings and rejoice over him as over a real brother; for they do not call themselves bothers after the flesh, but after the spirit and in God. . . . If anyone among them is poor and needy, and they do not have food to spare, they fast for two or three days, that they may supply him commands of their Messiah. Every morning and with necessary food. They scrupulously obey the commands of their Messiah. Every morning and every hour they thank and praise God for His loving-kindness toward them. . . . Because of them there flows forth all the beauty that there is in the world. But the good deeds they do they do not proclaim in the ears of the multitude, but they take care that no one shall perceive them. Thus they labor to become righteous. . . . Truly, this is a new people and there is something divine in them.

TRI-CHURCH YOUTH CONFERENCE AT WADSWORTH

On October 20-21, a youth conference was held at Wadsworth, Ohio, consisting of the three Mennonite churches, Sugar Creek, Salem, Wadsworth.

A banquet was held in the basement of the church on the 20th where a supper was served and Walter Alderfer was the speaker. The group singing was led by Earl Lehman from Pandora.

At Sunday morning services, Rev. J. J. Enz gave the message. A recreation period was held in the basement of the church on Sunday afternoon. Rev. Russell Mast of Wadsworth was the evening speaker.

RELIEF

Shipments to Holland and France

Another shipment from Mennonite clothing centers has started on its way to Holland. This time 3,400 pairs of shoes, valued at $3,381.75, were sent on October 24. Distribution will be in charge of Mennonite relief workers at Amsterdam.

Also, a shipment of new and used clothing has been sent to France. This shipment, weighing 23,360 pounds and valued at $22,442.75, left Akron on October 27. Distribution of this clothing will be carried on by the Mennonite workers in France from the center at Chalon-sur-Saone and likely a part of it will reach members of Mennonite communities in Alsace.

Workers Leave for Northwest Europe

Farewell services were held at Akron the evening of October 29 for eight outgoing Mennonite relief workers. The entire group embarked from New York the following day on the S. S. Argentina. Four of the workers—Ruth Hilty, Pandora, Ohio; Welma Graber, Wayland, Iowa; Marie Ediger, Buhler, Kansas; and Lulu Smith Eureka, Illinois—have been assigned to relief service in Holland. Two others—Mrs. M. C. Lehman, who has been in charge of the Mennonite relief clothing program, and Charlotte Regier, Whitewater, Kansas—will serve in the relief program in France. Cleo Mann (appointed by the Mennonite Relief Committee), Elkhart, Indiana, will serve in Belgium. Delmar Wedel, Aberdeen, Idaho, will be assigned to work among war prisoners likely in Belgium. All of these workers desire the prayers of the home churches that they may be used of the Lord in their relief ministrations.

Shipments of Flour and Wheat

The first two carloads—one of flour sent from Belleville, Pa., and the other of wheat from Cordell, Oklahoma—which recently arrived in Baltimore have been loaded and are now on their way to Holland. Waiting in Baltimore for shipment to Holland is another carload of flour from Belleville, one from Newton, Kansas, (Church of God in Christ Mennonite) and two from Ligonier, Indiana. Additional carloads are being directed to Baltimore for shipment to Holland and to New York for shipment to France.

Relief Service in Italy

Arthur Jahnke, another of the Mennonite relief workers in the Middle East, is now in Italy bringing the number of M.C.C. workers in the UNRRA Italian Mission up to five—the others being Delvin Kirchhofer, Grace Augsburg, Esther Detweiler, and Bertha Fast.

Brother Jahnke after going to Rome and receiving his assignment, he traveled on the back of an open truck down to the heel of the Italian peninsula, la, to Lecce. Here he is supervising work shops for the employment of the refugees. He writes:

"This camp is just receiving a new group of refugees. About 1,500 Polish Jews from the north are coming in. The first lot of 160 arrived last night.

C. F. Klassen had a successful mission into Germany in behalf of Mennonite refugees, according to a cable from Samuel Goering and was able to contact many with whom he had been acquainted.

C. Richard Yoder arrived at Halifax, October 27. Dr. Yoder arrives in this country after more than two years of medical relief service in the Middle East.

C.P.S. Men Approved to Assist with Food Program

Selective Service has approved the placement of an additional fifteen C.P.S. men in the M.C.C. "Food for Relief" program. This recent authorization brings the number of men serving in this work up to twenty-five. A similar quota of men was also approved for the Friends and Brethren. These additional Mennonite men will serve in connection with the operation of canneries, clothing centers, processing of tools and utensils for relief, and the operation of a relief food collection center at Kalona, Iowa, similar to the center now operated at East Petersburg, Pa.

Special Project on West Coast Approved

Selective Service has approved a 130-man C.P.S. unit or the tubercular veterans' hospital at Livermore, California. Assignees in the California camps are being asked to volunteer for this special project. In many ways it is a unique one for the institution is not a mental hospital but a hospital for infected tubercular patients. The unit is scheduled to open December 1.

The Mental Hygiene Program

The Mental Hygiene Program represents the organized interest on the part of C.P.S. men in the proper care and hospitalization of mental patients. Four assignees have been giving full-time service to this end during the past year. Because of the continued interest in this work and the good service which the organization is performing Selective Service recently permitted the transfer of seven additional C.P.S. men to the headquarter office in Philadelphia. Among these additional men are Grant Stoltzfus, assistant director at Woodbine, N.J., who has been doing some writing on the care of feebleminded boys, and Frank Wright, educational director at Greystone Park, N.J. and author of "Handbook for Psychiatric Aides."

BETHEL COLLEGE

The faculty and staff members and their wives, a group of over seventy, held their third monthly fellowship meeting of this year on November 5. Dr. H. A. Fast described the relief program of the M.C.C. and at the December meeting Rev. Hostetler will continue on "Post-War Responsibilities." A varied program, with rotating chairmen and hostesses, has been arranged for the year by the Faculty Welfare Committee—Dr. A. J. Regier, Miss Lola Hill, and Dr. C. Krahn. Katherine Penner Barton, contralto (Woodland, Washington), gave a much appreciated concert in the chapel November 7. The Art Department scheduled an art exhibit and colored film to follow the concert, demonstrating fourteen types of techniques in the craft line. Miss Lena Waltner, art instructor, is at present chairman of the executive council of the Kansas State Art Teachers Association. She has previously also served as its president and as editor of its art publication.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

The Girls' Gospel Team Quartet, accompanied by speakers from the Men's Gospel Team, took a trip to Michigan over the week-end of November 2-5. They gave a program for the C.P.S. unit at Ypsilanti State Hospital on Friday evening and two programs at the Mennonite Church at Comins on Sunday. The Comins church is a member of the Central Conference. Dr. J. S. Schultz visited the CPS units at Cleveland and Macedonia, Ohio, November 7-10 as an educational counselor. This is a part of the program of educational counseling being carried on cooperatively by the Mennonite Central Committee. College faculty members and students were busy the past week helping in various ways with the campaign for European relief which is being sponsored by the Mennonite churches in this vicinity.

MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY

Students in the Mennonite Biblical Seminary are: Willard Wiebe, Aberdeen, Idaho; Ruth Ewert, Hillsboro, Kansas; Ernst Harder, Philadelphia, Paraguay; Albert Jantzen, Paso Robles, California; Mrs. Albert Jantzen, Paso Robles, California; Maynard Shelly, East Greenville, Pennsylvania; Richard Yordy, Chicago, Illinois; Laverne Rutchman, Whitewater, Kansas; Gerhard Neufeld, Enid, Oklahoma; Robert Hartzler, Goshen, Indiana.

Students in the Mennonite Bible School are: Mrs. Gerhard Neufeld, Enid, Oklahoma; Doland Unruh, Newton, Kansas.

Students enrolled in the Home Study Department are H. N. Harder, Aberdeen, Idaho; Esko Loewen, Lincoln, Nebraska; Arthur Jost, Provo, Utah.

The ordination of Brother and Sister Curt Claassen, which was to be held November 11, has been postponed to November 18, according to Rev. D. J. Unruh, member of the Mission Board. See Mennonite of October 30 for announcement.

JOTTINGS

—First Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: J. N. Byler, director of M.C.C. relief activities, spoke to us on the evening of October 28 on the text, "Give ye them eat." The members have been busy canning for C.P.S. and relief. Over eight hundred quarts of chicken, mutton, pork, and beef have been canned. At present we are collecting money for a carload of flour. We are also making an appeal for used or new tools and utensils. In our midweek prayer meeting we are studying the Book of Amos with the aim of learning how to apply it to our day. Missionary H. J. Brown will be the speaker at our harvest festival, November 18. Two older members, Mrs. Aron Sukau and Mr. Abr. Teichrow were laid to rest this past week.—Mrs. P. P. Buhr, Corr.

—Zoar Church, Goltry, Oklahoma: The Grace Church of Enid gave us a fine C.E. program on November 4. An offering was taken to help pay for their parsonage. Rev. Sol. Mouttet plans to be here November 8 to speak and show pictures of the Ozark mission work. We are to have special meetings November 16-22 with Rev. P. J. Boehr, Pandora, Ohio, as special speaker. The choir and the children are practicing for the mission festival to be held Thanksgiving Day.—Mrs. J. W. Bergen, Corr.

—Wichita, Kansas: The proceeds of the bazaar and food sale to be held December 14, by the Friendship Circle, are to be used for furnishing the kitchen of the new church.

—Eden Church, Moundridge, Kansas: On October 30 members of our congregation brought to our church basement a total of 5,211 quarts of canned food, 785 pounds of lard, and 1,267 pounds of dried beans. Of the total, 3,741 quarts were for relief and 1,470 for C.P.S. Our pastor, Rev. Walter Gering, spent a few days in Oklahoma in the interests of C.P.S. Dr. Cornelius Krahn, North Newton, is offering us a course in Mennonite and general church history. He is with us the first Sunday evening of every month. The meetings have been well attended. Our new Hammond organ was installed October 12.—Ellis Goering, Corr.

—Immanuel Church, Delft, Minnesota: A Negro gospel chorus, with Rev. E. H. Willems of the Baptist church of Sioux Fall, South Dakota, brought us a program on November 4. The spirituals and hymns and a fine message by their pastor were enjoyed by a full house. The ladies of our church have canned 1,180 quarts of fruits, vegetables, and meat for relief and C.P.S.—Martha Baerg, Reporter.

—Walton Church, Walton, Kansas. Mr. David Ha-begger was in charge of the morning service, November 4, in the absence of Rev. Von Riesen who brought the message at the Bethel Deaconess Hospital. Mr. and Mrs. Curt Claassen, candidates for the mission field in India, were visitors in our church.

—Bethany Church, Freeman, South Dakota, burned down in a fire on November 4, according to a report by Dr. Harold Gross, who visited at North Newton last week.

—Miss Ruth Ewert, Secretary to Dr. A. Warkentin of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary wrote November 2: "School is moving along nicely. We are nearing the end of the first quarter, so all of us are busy working on term papers and book reviews, etc. I also have a little added work now that Dr. Warkentin is not here—he is to have an operation which may take him out of school for some time . . . He entered the hospital yesterday. . ."

—First Church, Pretty Prairie, Kansas: Mr. and Mrs. Waldo Harder, Mr. and Mrs. Haines and Rev. D. J. Unruh were with us at our harvest thanks festival. The offerings for missions that day amounted to $4,333.45. Brother P. C. Hiebert of the M.C.C. was with us October 21. He pictured the desperate needs of the war-torn world and the plight of a large number of Mennonites who are in that area. The offering for relief held at this meeting amounted to $2,009.60.—Corr.

—First Church, Lehigh, Kansas: On October 25 eighteen members of the Ladies' Aid canned three bushels of pears and two bushels of apples for relief. This totaled 112 quarts. Quite a number of young men from this community have received their discharges. Several figure on making their homes here. Maybe a correction should be made on the report of October 16 in The Mennonite. The food served at the fair was from the whole congregation not just from the Ladies' Aid. Fifty-four chickens were donated and ninety were bought. Grossed $1,303.34 and cleared $837.40.—Mrs. Ferd Unruh, Corr.

—Fortuna, Missouri: Rev. Erwin Albrecht of Chicago recently conducted a series of special meetings for us.

—Souderton, Pa. On November 4 Roy Wenger of the M.C.C. showed colored slides of the Smoke Jumpers Unit he directed during the summers of 1943-44. Dr. Elmer E. S. Johnson is to speak at the formal opening of the church library, November 18.

—Second Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: This church and the First Church have undertaken a "Hogs for Relief" project. This is done in view of the great need for fats and oils of all kinds as well as meats. People who do not have animals to give are invited to donate money for the project. The plan is to slaughter the animals one day, the next day take off the fat for rendering into lard, and the third day bring the meat to a community cannery in Lincoln where the meat is to be canned in quart cans. The M.C.C. will pay for the cans and the canning. Hams and bacon are to be cured at home. Each piece of meat and each can is to have the name of the donor on it. "This is for the purpose of meeting the requirements of the government and also to give the personal touch to those in a distant land that receive it."—Prof. B. Borgen will speak at the Second Church morning and evening, November 11.

—The Fairfield (Pa.) Church has given $1,285 for relief since last May.

—Upland, California: The Gospel Team from the North Fork C.P.S. camp conducted a worship service at 5 P.M., October 28. After the service everyone was invited to the dining room for refreshments and a social hour with the campers.

—Emmanuel Church, Moundridge, Kansas: The women had an all-day sewing on November 6. Mrs. Willis Rich addressed them on the subject "Woman's Place in God's Plan."

—C.P.S. Camp, Downey, Idaho: Campers from this camp going home on furlough may take along a set of slides showing the life of this camp and use them at home for C.E. programs, etc. On the evening of October 28, Rev. P. K. Regier was chairman of a panel discussion on "Helping C.P.S. Men Return to Their Home Church."

—First Church, Madrid, Nebraska: On November 4 a group of young people and Rev. and Mrs. Unruh conducted a jail service in North Platte and also visited with the C.P.S. boys at the experimental farm.—Rev. John Unruh.

—Dr. Jacob H. Janzen of Waterloo, Ontario, is giving Bible lectures in the Zion Church, Souderton, Pa., this week. His main theme is "The Effects of Hard Times on Secular and Church Life." The subjects: "Hard Times and Their Consequences," "The Law and Its Implications," "Sowing and Reaping," "The Coming of Jesus Christ," "Glory," "Stewardship," "Our Pi'grimage and Its Goal."

—Buhler Church, Buhler, Kansas: "At the twenty-fifth anniversary celebration of the organization of our congregation, November 4, some interesting figures were given showing the outward growth and

ADDITIONAL HOUSING FOR GIRLS

The Women's Association of Bethel College, in the past, has undertaken many worth-while projects, among them being the college organ and the kitchen project which included a refrigerator, oven, linens for the dining hall, and drapes for the dining hall and student union room. This year the women have decided to attempt a new and larger project—that of additional housing for the girls. The Board of Directors in its meeting September 19, 1945, acted favorably upon this plan looking toward the erection of a fireproof addition to Carnegie Hall. The Board, upon motion that was properly seconded, "voted to authorize and encourage the Bethel College Women's Association to undertake the project of raising money for a ladies' dormitory annex to cost not less than $50,000."

The Women have decided to make this a memorial building, a home for girls that will be rich to the devoted consecrated godly women who have given, and are giving their lives in the cause of Christ, both at home and abroad.

expansion. We are so prone to appraise the fruitage of a church by its growth in membership and the contributions they make. What is the fruit of the individual Christian? Isn't it some more Christians? . . . At our mission program Miss Martha Burkhalter made a very strong appeal to the young people to give their lives to the Lord and go into the foreign mission field. . . Having an annual mission festival is very good, but that is not enough. Our minister, Brother Franzen, supplements that ever so often by urging our young people to dedicate their lives to the Lord for full time service. We are glad that two of our members represent our church in the foreign mission field. . ."—H. C. Friesen, Corr.

—First Church, Reedley, California: The Senior Choir is practising the "Messiah" for Christmas. We also have a Young People's Choir and a Junior Choir. The choirs take turns in singing for the services. The Worth While Circle held its second meeting in the church social hall on November 5. Its purpose is to promote Christian fellowship, provide opportunity for service, and to maintain missionary interest among the women of the church. The Men's Brotherhood meets every month with a supper served by the Worth While Circle. Chaplain Harold Eymann spoke at the October meeting. A committee appointed for European relief is asking for donations of raisins and money.—Mrs. A. Weinbrenner, Corr.

—Alexanderwohl Church, Goessel, Kansas: The men's chorus from C.P.S. Camp 138, Lincoln, Nebraska, rendered a much appreciated worship concert service Sunday morning November 4. After the services they were served a noon meal in the church basement. Many visitors from neighboring churches came to worship with us. On Sunday evening, November 4, the six sewing circles of the church gave a program of music, topics, readings, and a brief history of the six circles which are active in our congregation.—Wanda Schmidt, Corr.

—Correction: An error on our part caused us to omit the names of A. E. Kreider, J. M. Regier, E. G. Kaufman, and H. J. Andres in the list of members reported present at the recent meeting of the Executive Committee in Chicago.

—First Church of Christian Mennonite, Moundridge, Kansas: A total of 1,261 quarts of fruit, vegetables, jams, and spreads have been canned for relief and C.P.S. The church has decided to issue a weekly church bulletin. It also decided at its annual business meeting to continue the 100 per cent church paper plan.

—Donnellson, Iowa: "We have just completed a week of Bible lectures with Dr. E. G. Kaufman as speaker. His messages were timely and vital and were a blessing to all of us." —H. E. Nunemaker.

—Dr. J. H. Langenwalter conducted special services at the Einsiedel Church, Hanston, Kansas, November 4-8.

—Schwenksville, Pa., "The Eden Mennonite congregation voted Sunday, October 21, to send two carloads of flour to Holland. The order has been placed

"MEN OUGHT ALWAYS TO PRAY, AND NOT TO FAINT"

--Jesus Christ, The Way

Thou, O God, art the source of our spiritual life. As long as Thy Spirit of Love is within us, we are spiritually conscious. When we become unloving and our energies rush into that self-centeredness that so easily besets us, then we lose our spiritual consciousness, our life in Thee.

Then we suffer the blankness of a faint. Then our energies are not released to flow freely in the depth and breadth of Thy Spirit. Then we feel the weakness of a faint and are dismayed by the power of temptation. Then life seems in vain and Thy peace and joy are far from us.

We need Thee every Hour, O God. Without Thee there is no life. We need the breath of Thy Spirit within us.

Thy Son taught us that men ought always to pray and not to faint. He came to bring us life abundant and eternal.

Father, teach us, How to pray, and how to remain in prayer through Jesus Christ our Saviour. Make us want Thee more than anything else. Yet is not the choice ours? That choice which can be awful or glorious. We believe in Thee and want thee, O God. Through Thy grace we would accept Thee as the deep passion of our lives. We would always pray to Thee and never faint!

The Good News of Christ for the Depressed Classes

(Here follows an excerpt of an address by Rev. John Subhan, a leading Christian in India, who spoke to a meeting of the All-India Depressed Classes on this subject. The "Christian World Facts" published a part of that address.)

I count it a great privilege to be present at this historic conference. I may draw your attention to the fact that Christians all over the world are in sympathy with your movement. Prayers are being offered by Christians not only throughout India but throughout Christianity. I come to speak to you out of the depth of my own experience of the living Christ and with the backing of the collective testimony of others, and to tell you what Christ and His Kingdom of God vision can do for you. We Christians are not entering into an auction for souls, neither are we putting extravagant promises before the conference. It may rightly be asked: What have the various religions done for the Depressed Classes of this country. We are here to tell you what has been done already for men who have accepted Christianity.

In the Kingdom of God individual regeneration and social regeneration go hand in hand. Jesus began with the individual. He worked for men and women who were socially and morally degraded. So the first message of the Gospel is that men and women can be saved in the sum total of their individual lives. No one has to wait for good government, or good legislation, or good days, or a good time. No one has to wait for his own regeneration till society has completely changed. Every race and caste, no matter how degraded or depressed, has within it infinite possibilities. Christianity with equality gives infinite worth to individuals. Jesus Christ came proclaiming and demonstrating the value of individuals, however degraded in the eyes of the world. His whole attitude to mankind was that of respect. He saw the future possibilities in every man and woman, no matter how physically, morally, or socially he or she had been degraded. He likened such individuals to a lost coin which must be sought and recovered. Christ came to seek and save every such individual. The tax-gatherer of His time was despised and hated. No respectable Jew would be friendly to him, but Jesus went to the house of such and became his guest. He surprised the out-caste woman at the well by asking water of her. He respected humanity in womanhood, even that of an out-caste woman. So completely did Christ identify Himself with the out-castes of His time, that He made the treatment and attitude to them the basis of the final Judgement. Matt. 25:31-46. He did not bring a "religion," He brought Life. He did not come to give men a set of rules ("shariat"), for rules lead men some distance, and then cease to lead. With the progress of time they become dead letters. Then men begin to break them, or they begin to break men. Christ offers Life, "Life Abundant."

This marvelous transforming power of Christ has continued throughout the ages. Darwin, when he visited Patagonia, thought, he had discovered the "missing link." On his return to England he challenged the missionaries to change those half-beasts and half-men into civilized men and women. Missionaries accepted this challenge and in the life time of Darwin they were changed into civilized men and women and his "missing link" had become redeemed people.

Before Christianity touched the present English people, they were barbarians. Servius, a Roman said, "The stupidest and ugliest slaves in the markets are those from Britain." These stupidest and ugliest slaves have now risen to a culture, education, and world influence of an amazing degree, and the beginning of it dates back to their acceptance of Christianity." The Lushains of Assam (India) were known as "head-hunters." Mothers hearing of their coming, would hide their children and run. Now they are completely changed. They come singing Hallelujah Choruses in honor of Jesus Christ. Men and women rush to listen to their music. The halls where they sing cannot hold the people.

The Christian children of the out-castes are now teaching Brahmins and Europeans in thousands of schools in India. Ninety percent of the Protestant Christians of India are the result of conversions from Depressed Classes at the rate of 10,400 a month. (It is now much more a month.)

Paul says that "Godliness is profitable in all things, and has the promise of this life and the life to come." The above address speaks mostly on the first part of this text. How much more could he have said on the last part. But both parts are included in the blessings of the gospel.

"IT'S A TERRIBLE RESPONSIBILITY to be a Christian in America today." This statement made by Orié Miller, who visited some of the "rubble" areas of Europe last summer, pricks hard when we face some of the reports now coming through.

A CHRISTIAN CENTURY editorial entitled "Are We Murderers?" contains the following statements: "Responsible observers warn that in Germany alone, if present policies continue, as many as ten million are likely to die this winter of malnutrition and disease. . . They will be the old, the women, especially the nursing mothers, and the children." Speaking of Germany it says, "Keeping the food supply at 1,200 calories a day, when it is admitted that 2,000 calories is the minimum required to sustain life, and that mining coal, farming and other forms of heavy manual labor basic to a going economy require even more, is a slow form of mass murder. Herding millions from their homes into a partitioned country in which only 15 per cent of industry is operating and that at only 5 per cent of capacity, nothing less than a death sentence for most of these unfortunates." This paper quotes the following dispatch sent from Berlin to American papers by Donald MacKenzie:

"Children of this city are dying like flies from undernourishment. Typhoid is rampant. . . the shadow of approaching death. . . gaunt faces of adults. . . slowly starving. . . a ration that supplies scarcely half of the minimum necessary to support life. . . Worse is to come. . . No coal or any other heating fuels this winter. . . Tens of thousands will freeze to death before Christmas. . . Coffins trundled on wheelbarrows. . . no lids. . . dead are tipped into graves and the coffins resold. . . . Overworked crematoriums cannot handle all the bodies. . . carted off to a common grave. . . Sewers seeping into the drinking water. . ."

The Bishop of Chichester, quoting a German pastor, states: "Thousands of bodies are hanging from the trees in the woods around Berlin and no body bothers to cut them down. Thousands of corpses are carried into the sea by the Oder and Elbe rivers—one doesn't notice it any longer. Thousands and thousands are starving on the highways. . . Children roam the highways alone, their parents shot, dead, lost."

"Children by the millions are in imminent danger of starving and freezing as winter comes to Europe unless immediate help comes. . . Helpless children cannot survive much longer unless there is a united effort to save them. . . Only by immediate and coordinated effort can a colossal catastrophe be avoided." So states the World Council of Churches, the International Red Cross and others.

Dr. M.R. Zigler of the Brethren Service Committee says, "Suffering women pray to God for help as they bring into the world babies who will die within a few days. Children pray to God for help in their search for their parents who may be dead and for their homes which may have been destroyed. Millions of soldiers are returning only to find their families totally or partially gone. What is the answer of the American church?"

He further states: "In Poland there is a 70 per cent crop of potatoes and 45 per cent of normal supply of cattle. Milk cows have been reduced 4,000,000. Only forty per cent of the horses survive. In Hungary 30 per cent of the cattle and 20 per cent of the horses survived. The lack of draught animals reduced by one half the ability to till the soil. Cereals will be the most needed article. In Budapest no children under one year appear to survive. In all of Hungary it is estimated that out of 150,000 babies, 100,000 need layettes. One million children between one year and fourteen years need clothing and shoes. Among orphans only 40,000 out of 200,000 have homes and 17,000 are already tubercular. Children's homes have neither milk, shoes, nor soap. . . . In Austria and especially in Vienna the situation is very serious. Fruits and vegetables have been lacking. The rations in Vienna are 760 calories for the average consumer and 940 for children. Milk is very scarce and tuberculosis among children is on the increase. In some areas only 40 per cent of the stock is available. . . . No heat will be available for the most of the people in Europe. Shoes and soap are scarce everywhere. Housing is a very difficult problem to meet. . . . Warsaw was completely destroyed; Budapest is only 26 per cent untouched. Salzburg has 7,500 homeless families. Pforzheim in one night lost 80 per cent of the homes. . . . The time of the Good Samaritan has come. The evangelist has already arrived through the churches. The church of Christ will bind up the wounds, will supply shelter for the unfortunate and will minister as long as there is need. Men and women ought to abandon all selfishness and be willing to sacrifice to save these people who are suffering."

We live in America, the land of plenty. What a terrible responsibility it is to be a Christian in America today!

OHIO CUTTING ROOM HAS SUFFICIENT MATERIAL

Cut 28,260 Garments in Two Years

Frequently we get letters inquiring if we are able to get material for relief sewing. It is with a feeling of gratefulness and joy that we are able to report that we have enough material on hand now to keep all our women busy sewing all winter. We are grateful to the Emergency Relief Board that they were willing to lend us money to purchase material in a large quantity when the opportunity presented itself. That loan will be paid back just as soon as enough money comes in for orders for cut garments. This we think will be very shortly.

It is not always possible to get the kind of material that we most desire, but we are always able to plan suitable garments from the material that we are able to get, no matter what it is. Just recently we received a shipment of 2,633 yards of white crepe which we felt was rather thin. But our relief directors tell us that it is very acceptable since many clothes are needed in very warm climates as well as in the colder ones. We have six thousand yards of material on hand now and hope to be able to get some more outing soon. Our supply of cut garments is always kept up so that we are always able to fill the orders quite promptly.

The Ohio Cutting Room was opened in October 1943, two years ago, as a project of the women of the four Mennonite churches in the Bluffton-Pandora community. We started in a very insignificant way, never thinking that the work would develop as it has. We have during these two years sent out garments and materials amounting to $9,500.00. We have cut 28,260 garments from 38,340 yards. We have sent out 762 packages to societies from all over the United States.

The women of these four churches have very much enjoyed working together in this project in a spirit which we hope and pray will continue as long as this type of Christian service is needed, clothing those who are in need, and doing it in the "Name of Christ."

Our Ministry of Education

By J. H. Langenwalter

A. An Experiment

In the Report of the Board of Education in the Mennonite Year Book of 1945 there are found the following sentences regarding the proposed work of the then newly appointed Minister-at-Large: "He will keep in touch with our young people away from home, visit churches, and conferences, and render such assistance to our educational work among our young people as seems necessary and as is requested. It is the conviction of many of our people that this work will serve as a unifying factor among our various educational efforts. We believe that the strength of the church depends largely upon the unity of purpose and aim that exist among us."

That was a forecast of a much larger undertaking than any one could have foreseen. It was an answer to a need of long standing and needed to be undertaken in the spirit of a ministry in the light of the attitude of Jesus expressed in Matthew 20:25b-28. "Ye know that the rulers of the gentiles lord it over them, and their great ones exercise authority over them. Not so shall it be among you: but whosoever would become great among you shall be your minister; and whosoever would be first among you shall be your servant: even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many." It was in the spirit of this expression of Jesus that the work was undertaken as an experiment in order that we might learn as we worked.

Since the work of the Board of Education and that of the Board of Publication are closely related, an arrangement was made that the two boards support the new undertaking together.

Early in the undertaking about five weeks were devoted to another experiment supported by various boards and at least one committee, namely a visiting mission among the churches and the C.P.S. camps. As an aid to a study of the situations and possibilities in our field as a whole this was valuable to the new undertaking by the Board of Education.

Every attempt to get at the heart of the assignment and every day's experiences revealed more and more the needs and the complexities of our work under conditions existing at the time of the beginning of the work.

It became more and more clear that the real work of Board of Education, in a denomination with the congregational system, is to educate the constituency of its particular denomination. That means to minister in the Spirit of Jesus and to supply needed information so that His objectives may be achieved more fully among those who are being served.

A Fellowship Day for Boys and Girls

By Jacob J. Enz

Here they come! There's Johnny, farmer Noah Yoder's boy, stepping from the car with lunch in hand and a big smile on his face. And here comes Patsy Reed, daughter of one of the bakers, with her brother. Now several cars drive up; the Buss children have just come in from the farm; "Sonny" Reichert, whose father is a mechanic, jumps from the car with his lunch, a ball, and a bat. "Hello, Stan!" That's Stanley Naylor, the grocer's son; "I see you've brought plenty of lunch. Well, you'll need it!" Stan brings Billy, a friend and a neighbor boy who doesn't belong to our Church School. Before long almost all the boys and girls of the Church School are gathered in the sanctuary of the church on a Friday morning (summertime).

There is a buzz of a whisper passing through the group, for the flyer or handbill about this meeting which they had received in Sunday School had set them guessing. It told them they would find out about "Soldiers for Peace"—i. e., our Relief workers. It told them they would enjoy singing, handwork, stories, and recreation. It told them to bring friends, lunch, and any play equipment. But it—and this was causing all the talking—it mentioned a secret that would not be told till they came.

The day starts off with the singing of "Onward Christian Soldiers" and other hymns. There is a brief devotional period after which the youngsters break up into separate groups to hear interesting stories about how our Relief workers are helping people in war areas. A brief recess includes group games out on the church lawn. After recess the entire group gathers to hear a panel of about five boys and girls and the pastor discuss what they have been reading about our Relief work in The Mennonite, the special Relief bulletin from the MCC, as well as the "Relief Primer" of the Brethren Service Committee. Each boy and girl on the panel tells of one phase of Relief such as food, clothes, tools, soap, and heifers. (The panel type of presentation affords opportunity to bring out in a natural way with questions by the leader any points omitted, or emphasize essential points. This method also helps keep youngsters at ease more "than a formal talk." This plan worked excellently in a previous month's "Fellowship Day" when C. P. S. men were the "Soldiers for Peace" and the topics were about Soil Conservation, Dairy Testing, Smoke Jumpers, and Mental Hospitals.)

After noticing a number of very interesting reports about some "Fellowship Days" that had been held at the First Church, Nappanee, Indiana, we asked Jacob J. Enz, pastor of the church, to describe them for the readers of "The Mennonite." We are happy to present his article which tells of a very effective way for interesting boys and girls in the work of the Church.

Now the big secret! Everyone is quiet. What will it be? The news is broken. "We, the boys and girls of The First Mennonite Church of Nappanee, Ind. can have a 'miniature dairy' to send to the boys and girls in needy Europe, many of whom have no milk." Do the boys and girls want to start saving for a heifer? Of course! Everybody begins thinking of how much they can save for our "ambassador of good will."

During the handwork period that follows, that is all the "talk." Little cardboard banks are made by the boys for everyone to start saving for the heifer. A picture of a heifer is pasted on the banks. The mixing of a pan of soap for Relief is another interesting project for the boys. The girls are knotting baby comforters that they had helped piece together in their spare time at home. The younger children mounted Bible pictures to be sent to Europe for the empty walls of homes. They also cut out picture puzzles for European children to put together. (For C.P.S. programs, models of a smoke jumpers camp, a mental hospital, a dairy farm, and the soil conservation project were constructed.)

By this time everyone is eyeing their lunch sacks. So after a song and a prayer together everyone gathers in a big circle on the church lawn for lunch.

After lunch the handwork is finished and the whole group gets in cars and on bicycles to go to the city park. There everyone jumps on the merry-go-round; the boys make it go just about every way but around. Some teeter-totter; others play croquet or swing on the swings. Then suddenly there is a mad rush all in one direction. Somebody spied a watermelon. After everyone digs their teeth in this luscious ground fruit for a while and wipes off the excess moisture from face, hands, and clothes, every one agrees it has been a grand day. Only one question remains. When will be the next "Fellowship Day"?

Such days were possible because of the resourcefulness of four Church School workers, the able assistance of several high school young people, the attendance of the boys and girls, a few suggestions by the pastor, and the hearty cooperation of parents.

MENNONITES THE WORLD OVER

By Cornelius Krahn

PACKAGES BRING JOY: Friends from Holland report that they have received packages sent them from the United States. Words fail to express their joy over things which we take for granted in our everyday life. For years they have been unable to buy clothing, household goods, and the many little things of which modern life is made up. Of course food is their greatest need, but they also ask for shoe laces, tooth brushes, soap, etc. In addition to all items of clothing.

Amsterdam: The paper of the Mennonite Church of Amsterdam, De Volk, shows signs that church life is coming back to normalcy. Five full time ministers serve the church of nearly eight thousand members and a sixth minister, a lady, is doing part time work. Church services are held in five different places each Sunday. Each minister has a set time for private conferences with church members, "Catechisatie" (Catechetical instruction), and many other obligations. There are young people's meetings, ladies' organizations, reading clubs, children's clubs and many other organizations. The paper reports that the American relief workers are present in church every Sunday wearing a cross on their arm.

The Story of the Mennonites by C. Henry Smith has just come off the press for the second time. C. Henry Smith is a pioneer, American born, Mennonite historian. Nearly fifty years ago he discovered that there was hardly anything written on the Mennonites in this country. Now there is a wealth of literature on this subject. Much of this change has been brought about through the numerous books written by Dr. Smith. The Story of the Mennonites is a book that is being enjoyed by young and old and is therefore a "must" for every Mennonite home.

Longing for Rest and Peace: "Greatly plagued, tortured, chased about in fear and distress, we long so much, so very much, for rest and peace." These are the words of a Mennonite mother from Russia, now somewhere in Western Europe. She saw the men of her village being driven to Siberia in large columns. Later she herself took part in a large column moving westward. Homeless, without relatives, who can doubt her sincere longing for rest and peace. And yet women like this are kept in concentration camps, mistreated more than ever before, and then sent to Siberia. Most of them will never find rest and peace on earth.

Relief Units of the Mennonite Central Committee in England, Holland, France, Egypt and India were visited by Orié Miller during the past summer. Sunday, November 11, he reported on his findings in North Newton, Hillsboro, and Hesston, Kansas. Thousands of tons of flour, canned goods, and clothing are being collected and shipped to the relief units. According to Orié Miller the peak of relief activities will not be reached before another year or two.

An idea of atomic power can be gotten from the fact that a "single kilogram (2.2 pounds) of matter, if it could be entirely converted into energy, would yield the equivalent of that generated by the entire electric power industry in this country in 1939 in about two months' time."

Recently UNRRA wanted to send 337 cows and 396 horses to Greece. The manpower shortage was such that workers could not be secured to go with the shipment. The Church of the Brethren sent telegrams to local churches asking for volunteers. Within a few days enough men appeared to enable the shipment to proceed. In the eyes of Europe we are consuming food inconsiderately... We are cutting ourselves off psychologically from Europe by not experiencing the rigorous rationing which has characterized life in Europe for a number of years."

According to The Reporter, Robert St. John recently stated over the air that 10,000 doctors in Europe had signed a statement declaring they would never again participate in any form of war.

A delegation of 27 national organization representatives called upon the President of the United States on September 17 and presented a petition on behalf of 48 national organizations having a total membership of over 50,000,000 people, asking him to speed help to the liberated peoples in time to prevent starvation.

RELIEF

Rehabilitation of Christian Fishermen

Clayton Beyler tells about his most recent assignment in India:

"The task assigned to me is the rehabilitation of some 300 Christian fishermen near Kaligram in Bengal. This area is under water six months of the year and hence makes a good fishery. The people live on small islands and their only means of transportation is boats. There are many good rice fields in this area but most of the Christians own very little land so they have to make their living by fishing. The fish market is very good in Bengal at present and fishermen can make good wages provided they have boats and nets. During the famine, and because of the 'denial policy' of the government, many lost their boats. Also because of the cloth scarcity and limited supply of yarn the fishermen have been unable to make new nets for three years. What few nets they do have are torn and rotten. . . . The Christians have a very difficult time to secure any rationed supplies and it was in this matter that I could be of most service to them. After two days at the Sub-Divisional offices I finally managed to get permits for two bales of yarn (approximately 800 pounds) . . . We have permit for timber so we will begin building boats. . . . I find that their biggest need is not money but leadership and help in organizing, securing permits, etc."

French Workers Assigned

Ella Schmidt has been assigned to the children's colony in Alsace, called Mont des Oiseaux, near Wissembourg Elsie Bechtel to the children's home, Lavercantiere, in south central France; Beulah Roth to the Le Dolivet colony at Plottes; and Evelyn Egli to the nursery at Vescours. Mary Miller will serve as matron at the Chalon Center.

Mary Miller reports on their initial task of cleaning the Chalon center:

"So far our 'work' in France has been properly bewildering—as we were warned. We arrived at the Chalon Center immediately after its purchase. The building has immense rooms with cement floors and high walls that have gathered and held the dust of the ages. We washed walls with cold water plus French powder and American soap as far up as a chair on top of a table enabled Elsie and Evelyn to reach. Above that, the walls are still—not quite—black. The dividing line is not always quite straight. Finding rags to wash walls and floors with was quite a chore in itself. Ellen Harder and Henry Buller made a trip of twenty miles and at the end of the day came back with the waited rags which we still guard zealously."

Cattle Attendants

A note from the Brethren Service Committee invites more Mennonite men to apply as cattle attendants if they are interested. They should write to Mr. Ben Bushong, Box 26, New Windsor, Maryland.

Report from Germany

C. F. Klassen who continues his work of visiting Mennonite refugees in Germany and Denmark writes from Gottingen, Germany, October 20:

"The northern part of the British Zone has more Mennonite refugees than the southern part. You should see the joy of these people when I tell them about their relatives. . . . This contact gives them new hope and the future is not as dark as before. All the suffering they have gone through! It is indescribable—the tortures some of the men went through in war prisons and in concentration camps—it sounds unbelievable but I know it is true. . . . The nights are cold and rain makes traveling unpleasant, but I don't mind as long as I can bring some comfort to these, my suffering brethren. Since I left London, I stayed one night in a heated house. . . . The room I slept in here has no glass in the windows. Most of the town people have no fuel for the winter. God alone knows what will happen."-- --

Among Refugees in Italy

Esther Detweiler transferred UNRRA's Italian Mission toward the end of August. She writes from Italy: . . . I was sent to Di Bagni on September 13 to set up a clinical laboratory to serve the dispensary and the hospital. . . . The Jewish refugees are indeed a pathetic group."

A request has come from Italy for additional Mennonite personnel, and plans are being completed for the sending of seven additional workers to this area. Mennonite relief workers entering this service will be appointed for two years, one year of which will be under UNRRA on the same basis as workers in the Middle East have served.

Sam Goering, Europe Director, III

A cable from Paris brings the information that Samuel Goering has received orders from his doctor to begin two-weeks of hospitalization for an arthritic condition. Brother Goering was proceeding to Basel, Switzerland, and had stopped over in France when this condition developed. The prayers of the church are requested in behalf of Brother Goering.

C. P. S.

C.P.S. Transfer Trends

Selective Service has indicated their willingness to approve transfers to special projects as replacements for men who are demobilized. In many ways this changes the transfer picture for it seemed as though the trend was not to make replacements in special projects. A few special projects may be closed but in general they will continue as long as the services of C. P. S. men are needed. The opening of a new unit at Livermore, California, as announced last week, will provide an additional 140 openings on special projects. The C. P. S. Section has sent to the camps an appeal for volunteers for special projects and there are indications of a good response. Only men who have two years or less in camp are considered for transfer to such openings.

C.P.S. Releases

C.P.S. men are being released but rather slowly. At the time of this writing, eighty-six have received their papers and all are in the over-age group. During November and December all the remaining over-age men and assignees who have had four years of service as of November 20, 1945, are to be released. This will affect 546 men in Mennonite camps. Men with three years of service are to be considered early in 1946. While the basis for release has been over age and length of service, consideration is being given to dependency. In the meantime inductions continue.

HOME MISSIONS

A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

MENNONITE MEMORIAL CHURCH, ALTOONA, PA. SOLD

Every new mission field has its ups and downs, but it seems that the Altoona field had more than its share of difficulties and problems. One could easily go on and explain in detail why the work did not develop as anticipated. This, however, would not change matters. It is not the intention of the Board to lay the blame for failure at one or another point, except to mention that the people living in the immediate vicinity of the church seemed to have one ambition, to make enough money to be able to move to another part of the city to make their home.

When those who had made some progress moved away, new people moved into the vacant house and the mission workers had to seek to win these new people to the mission. The vicinity is not one to attract the more diligent and trustworthy people and as a result the Board should have been able to hire Sunday School teachers. More frequently than was comfortable, the message came to the Board, that the minister had to teach all the adults in one class and his wife all the children in one class in the basement, since no other teachers showed up.

When the Board decided to sell the property, it seemed to the members providential that the Salvation Army at that very same time needed to change their location. The Real Estate firm to whom the sale was entrusted contacted the Salvation Army leaders and showed them the property. Immediately they were attracted to the buildings because of the fine condition of repair they were in. Credit for this is due to the last workers, Rev. and Mrs. Delbert E. Welty. When the leaders of the Army decided to buy the property they came to Rev. Welty and asked whether he would be so kind as to introduce the Captain to the Altoona field to the Sunday School. This was done on September 23, 1945. During that week the Weltys left and on the following Sunday the Salvation Army Captain and his force of workers conducted Sunday School and worship. We as a Board rejoice that the buildings did not need to be idle even for one single Sunday. May the Lord bless the work of the Salvation Army "on the hill."

The Sale Price

The sale price was arrived at in the following manner. The real estate representative came to look at the church and the home. He was well impressed because everything was newly painted and in good condition. The cost of the foot frontage was figured, as well as the actual cost of putting up the buildings which are of dark red, rough hard brick. The real estate man computed the price as though it were a business place down town and arrived at the figure of $19,000.00. The Trustees of the Salvation Army inspected the place thoroughly and accepted the sale price.

"I planted, Apollos watered; but God gave the increase." We diligently sought to plant the seed of the Gospel. We also watered it with much prayer; we hope that now, under the direction of the Salvation Army, "the Lord might give the increase."

A QUESTION

Dear Reader: Please, feel free to express yourself as to whether in the future you would prefer the mission materials in a supplement of eight pages or in one of sixteen pages.

QUOTE

"Christian Century" editorial on Potsdam policy:

"After the First World War the conscience of the West became convinced that the destruction of the high hopes of lasting peace for which men had died resulted in large measure, first, from an unjust and implacable peace treaty, and second from an unintelligent and brutal treatment which let great masses of the German people—especially the young—without hope or opportunity. Today the Allies are not simply repeating the mistakes of Versailles; they are compounding them. They are now, in their occupation policies, producing a greater despair and a greater chaos in the heart of Europe than followed the last war."

The London "Economist" on withholding the secret connected with the atomic bomb:

"The decision to withhold the secret has immediately reinforced Russian isolation and will do so still further. . . We shall now see every effort directed in Russia to the elaboration of atomic weapons behind a heavier and heavier veil of secrecy. There are already signs of greater isolationism. They will increase." The Economist thinks a case can be made for "a policy of genuinely trustful cooperation."

Rev. Lester Hostetler after visit to CPS camp at Hill City, which is helping build huge dam:

"To build a dam which will impound 15,000 acre-feet of water is a large task. . . Some of this work requires extraordinary skill and normally would draw a handsome wage. It was said that one man alternating with a C.O. in operating a steam shovel, receives $2.50 per hour from the government. The C.O. does his work with equal efficiency and receives nothing for it from Uncle Sam, not even his board and clothes. It is a penalty demanded of him for taking the Sermon on the Mount seriously. . . ."

What That Church at the Crossroads Really Is Often we go to church and it all becomes quite routine. We attend a little frame church out in the country at a crossroads. There is much whispering in Sunday School and some do not pay much attention to the sermon. We see the same people each Sunday. Some of the young fellows sit out in the car during services. Sometimes it all becomes a little monotonous.

Yet, there are some great truths about the little church at the crossroads. When we understand the reason for it and the hundreds like it and the great purpose for which it exists, we are inspired and see that in reality through it alone can the very world find its salvation. Here are some facts about the church—this brotherhood of disciples of God:

1. It is the only institution that has ever become world-wide in human history.
2. It is the only institution which possesses literature that is translated into well over a thousand different vernaculars.
3. It is the only institution on earth whose members can say something together immediately after they meet for the first time though they come from the ends of the earth. That something is the Lord's Prayer.
4. It is the only institution that has survived the terrific upheavals of the present world storm and stands "unamended and uncompromised" as the basic hope of restoration of order.

When reading of the Church in the Bible, we find that in all cases reference is made to the local church, such as at Jerusalem or Ephesus, or the Church Universal. There is no reference ever made to denominations or to national churches.

And what is the Church made of but of individuals such as you and I? The couplet:

"I wonder what the Church would be If everyone in it were just like me?"

is worthy of sober thought! For when you and I made our confession and took our pledge to discipleship, ours was a sacred pledge to be Christ's true followers. Nothing is more demanding nor as gratifying than to realize and fulfill that pledge!

Any effort put forth on the part of any of us in the work of Christ's Church has a twofold purpose:

1. To share with one another the faith, love and trust that was given us by Christ our Lord.
2. To bear witness to God's love and call others into fellowship with the living God.

During the terrific persecution of the Anabaptists during the Sixteenth century, critics were heard to say that one peculiarity of those people was how they loved one another. That love of God and man is basic to any Christian's outlook and work. All else issues from it.

As we go to our little church at the crossroads, we need to be aware of what it is we are doing. In a world of fear and insecurity, of doubt and scepticism, selfishness and hate, here stands the rock on which you and I can stand and proclaim the way to salvation for mankind. Can there be anything greater than that little church at the crossroads?

A Great Soul in a Small Place

*God set a great soul in a small, small place,
Where the nagging trials grew
Like stinging nettles before his face,
But the soul chafed not in his narrow space,
For he sought the Source of abundant grace,
And He brought him safely through.
God set a small soul in a larger place,
Right close to an open door—
But from Duty's plea he hid his face,
And he turned his back on Love and Grace;
No power he sought for his feeble race,
And he grew more weak and poor.*

First Young People's Leaders' Institute Held

by Verney Unruh

The Eastern District Young People's Leaders' Institute, held at the Grace Mennonite Church, Lansdale, Pa., Saturday afternoon, October 13, was the first of its kind in our General Conference. It was sponsored by both the Eastern District Young People and the General Conference Young People's Union, and was held for several reasons.

Need to Evaluate Program

The district organizations and the YPU both have projects which they sponsor and carry out. Yet within local groups there are many problems and questions about organizations, programs, meeting the needs of young people, etc. There is always the tendency to do the same thing the leaders before have done. It is therefore necessary that from time to time we re-think our whole program and see anew the responsibilities and possibilities of each local group in carrying out district and national projects. In order to have strong district organizations it is necessary to have strong well-organized local groups. It is for reasons such as these just mentioned that Young People's Union in their June meeting recommended that each district consider holding institutes for the leaders of the C.E.'s who are expected to take the lead in all young people's activities in the home church. We are happy to report that this first Institute has been held and as we look forward and plan for such meetings in other districts, let us pray that Christ might have the pre-eminence and God's will be done.

The meeting was opened with a hymn and prayer. Ervin Miller, Eastern District Y.P. President, then opened the discussion by explaining the purpose of the Institute. Following this the reports and answers to the questionnaire which had been sent out were read by the representatives of the various societies. About 50 per cent of the societies responded.

To the question, 'What seems to be the church's greatest problem in providing an adequate program to meet the needs of the young people?' the following major answers were received: (1) The young people have no time—they do not put Christ first and some are not even saved; (2) Outside interests and attractions draw them away; (3) they attend only when they have a topic to give; (4) Someone is needed with nerve enough to take the responsibility to lead. An open discussion followed.

Goals to Work Toward

After discussing the various age groups it was decided that the group which we are primarily concerned with included those from the ages of thirteen to twenty-five. This settled, the group centered their thoughts on goals and objectives for young people. It was understood that the young people with whom we work are Christians—they have accepted Jesus Christ as their Lord and Savior. These are the goals which the group decided should be worked toward.

1. Nurture:
 - a. To know Christ—a growing knowledge of Him.
 - b. To make the Bible a rule of faith and a personal help in such problems as questionable recreation, questionable literature, the radio, war—armed service or not, consistency in vocation, observance of Sunday, relation to secular organizations such as 4-H Club and Boy Scouts.
 - c. To learn and know how to pray.
 - d. To gain the "victorious" life.
2. Visions of the Lord's work that remains to be done (at home and abroad.)
3. Stewardship (self and substance).
4. Training for the Lord's work.
5. The outreach itself.

Young People's Fields of Activities

Elmer Ediger, YPU President, then summed up the afternoon's discussion and classified the young people's fields of activities the following way:

1. Worship and Evangelism.
2. Study.
3. Social and Recreational.
4. Service projects.
5. Individual development.

Before closing the group decided to meet again in about a month, final arrangements to be announced by the executive committee at the Fall Rally, October 28. It is planned to have the discussion center around the first two fields mentioned above. That is—what is an adequate program for worship and evangelism and what do we mean by these terms and how does study fit into a young people's program. Different leaders are being asked to make special studies on these subjects between now and then but each leader should do some thinking of his own and be prepared to make his contribution.

This is only a beginning but already we see great possibilities in such an endeavor. God grant that our efforts might be directed to a "United Mennonite Youth in Christ."

The first Sunday school in America was established in Virginia in 1786 by Francis Ashbury. Soon after this, Katy Ferguson, a poor Negro woman of New York City, organized a Sunday school for poor city children who spent their time wandering about near early churches—yet they had never been inside until Miss Ferguson began her fine work.

How Can the Youth Section Be A Vital Youth Paper?

A paper, such as our church paper, has one sole reason for existence—to bind together a Christian brotherhood. This Youth section serves a similar purpose for the youth of the Church. Its sole motive for existence must needs be to build a fellowship of the far-flung Mennonite youth to which it is written, this is a fulfillment of the motto, "A United Mennonite Youth in Christ."

This does not mean that Mennonite youth should be exclusive in attitude toward Brethren, Christian, Baptist or Lutheran youth. Rather, we need to look upon our fellowship as we do the fellowship of our family in relation to our local church. Because we have family loyalties does not make us exclusive in our attitude toward our church brotherhood. Likewise our church should not make us exclusive in our attitudes toward other church "families." The Christian bond is universal, and we must reach across all barriers and enjoy Christ's bond.

How shall the Youth Section of The Mennonite serve its purpose of uniting our family? How shall it help to bind together and inspire youth spread over a continent? There are some ways which it can serve—perhaps you will think of others:

- (1) Report youth events and activities.
- (2) Present plans and projects youth can support and on which they can labor.
- (3) With articles inspiring each other to deeper commitment and loyalty to an all-loving and all-knowing God.
- (4) Challenge youth to the need of the hour of heroic, consecrated, selfless, Christ-centered lives willing to give freely in service to a confused world.
- (5) Present the need for youth to give full-time Christian service in missions, education, service to needy, hospitals and other areas of service.
- (6) Describe what youth organizations are doing for our youth program. This includes the local organizations, district conference organizations, and the young People's Union.
- (7) Provide an avenue of expression for subjects of vital concern to our Christian Youth fellowship—subjects concerning our personal life of faith, our spiritual growth, the world in which we live and its manifold and complicated problems, our attitude toward and work in this world.
- (8) Spiritual growth—we all need it. True Christians are always humble, and as they grow they become more humble for they see their own great inadequacy when compared with the perfection of Christ. A paper such as this should be permeated by a spiritual tone of the glory of Christ and our lives focused on Him. We should share with each other experiences of growth which would bring us together in our common faith.

(9) Any others? Probably there are. Number nine will be left open for other ways of our realizing the work of a paper such as this.

Part of the work of this paper is the editor's. A greater part of the work is the reader's. He can make such a paper a true sharing of rich faith. He can call forth by prayer and deed the deep fellowship that can be ours. He can help see the vision of the place of young men and women of God in this strange world of love, hate, fear, riches, suffering, sin, and sensate pleasure.

A card or a letter to the editor making a suggestion, expressing a concern, sharing an idea, will help greatly in making this a vital Mennonite youth section.

YOUTH CONFERENCE AT NEWTON

The young people of the First Church, Newton will hold their third annual youth conference November 23-25 with H. Framer Smith speaking on "Victorious Living." Because of the Bethel College Corporation meeting there will be no program on the afternoon of the 23rd. That evening the Mennonite Bible Academy will furnish the special music. The next evening various churches of the city will have charge of the music. Mr. Smith will speak three times on Sunday, the afternoon service beginning at 3 P.M. The surrounding churches are especially invited for this day.—Dora Harder

Peacetime Military Conscription

Americans are from all lands, and of the same stuff as other peoples. It is not our race, but our cultures, that makes America distinctive. Universal conscription, under the prevailing anti-democratic, authoritarian tradition of the army, would produce anti-democratic, authoritarian results. Today the army allows officers favoring conscription to testify before your committee but refuses permission to those opposed. This is a shadow of what might come under conscription.

The genius of America lies in individual freedom and self-direction. The state is only one among various forms of association, subject to the same limitations of judgment and outlook. That it has supreme power is reason for deliberate caution and great reserve in exercising power. If it undertakes wholesale direction and indoctrination, as it would with peacetime conscription under army control, something very precious will be destroyed in American life.—Arthur E. Morgan, Yellow Springs, Ohio, before the House Committee on Postwar Military Policy. Taken from the Gospel Messenger.

Strike if He Cannot Strike Back?

During the brief period between the dropping of the first atomic bomb and the end of hostilities in the Pacific area, a nation-wide survey showed a strange sidelight on the way people think. This survey found nearly 90 per cent of those interviewed in favor of continuing the use of the atomic bomb, whereas considerably less than a majority favored our country's use of poison gas.

The reason which seemed most frequently to be given for the difference was that the use of poison gas might bring retaliation in kind while it was pretty certain that the enemy could not produce atomic bombs to hurl back upon us.

Now this reasoning may be logical enough, so far as the grim necessity of winning a war is concerned. To strike in a way that the enemy is least likely to be able to strike back is an accepted principle of warfare.

But there is something disturbing about the fact that people who pretended to be shocked at the use of gas because it was inhumane approve the destruction of everything living in great areas by this new weapon, because there is no danger of the enemy striking back!

Perhaps it is as well that the mask is off. It was not a sensitive conscience, on either side, that halted the use of gas. It was the knowledge that it could be used by the other side, coupled with the fact that it was difficult to control.

War, so long as there is war, will bring forth new monstrosities. Only a new spirit in the hearts of men can keep them from the desire to destroy each other. Such a new spirit must be the result of regenerated lives.—The Gem

Speaking of Criticism

I see no reason, says a writer in "The Methodist Recorder," why the pulpit should escape criticism any more than the press does. Both preachers and editors have very diverse and sometimes queer folk among their hearers and readers, he continued. After a discourse by Bishop Creighton the following comments were made:

1. Clergyman: "I have not heard a sermon like that for twenty-five years."

2. Lady Jebb: "I have never heard a sermon like that in England."

3. A Prince: "I don't call that a sermon but an essay."

4. A Colonel: "It was too deep for me. I went to sleep."—Selected.

From 1936, when the School of Religion of Vanderbilt University installed a circulating library for rural ministers, some four thousand pastors borrowed over eighty thousand books. Orders came from men in twenty-three denominations.

Non-Resistance in Action

by David H. Suderman

We have heard and talked much of what non-resistance means and what its techniques are. We discuss it freely and yet in real-life situations it seems rather vague—impractical at times. We are sure that it has a Biblical basis; in fact, we hold that it is the heart of the teachings of Jesus as given to us in the Sermon on the Mount, and yet we are at a loss just how to implement it.

To bring a bit nearer to us some characteristics of non-resistance at work, we might set up a few criteria which we could use as measuring sticks. These of course are imperfect, but they may serve to stimulate our thinking.

Can we remain sweet when our neighbor exhibits a feeling of ingratitude and unkindness toward us?

Can we "go the second mile" when we are quite certain that we will have no compensation for it?

Can we refrain from idle talk when the crowd seems engaged in it?

Can we remain "positive" in our attitude and conversation when our neighbor is "negative"—even "gripes"?

Can we put the concern of our neighbor over and above that of our own concerns?

Can we forgive when we feel our neighbor is wronging us?

Can we look at adversity and turn it into an opportunity?

Can we maintain an attitude of kindness toward those who are more fortunate than we are?

Can we put our conveniences subordinate to our common concerns?

Can we love when reason and instinct tells us that it is quite out of place to love?

If we can, we have caught a bit of the spirit and technique of non-resistance as given to us by Jesus Himself.

INLAND EMPIRE GOOD-WILL TOUR

During the last week in August seven young people from the three Inland Washington churches made a good-will tour over the Cascade mountains to the Monroe and Lynden churches to become acquainted with the young people there and to give them a share in Washington State Retreat plans. A fine Retreat is being anticipated for next year for the young people of all the Washington churches.

MIGHTY GOOD COMPANY

Books are among the great ministers God has given to men. "Sell your bed and buy a book," was Alexander Whyte's constant advice to his people. It does not matter what discomfort your body may endure if your mind keeps company with the kings and princes of thought. To read great books is just to keep company with the great minds of the ages. If you have no love for reading now you can cultivate it. There is no doubt about that.—James MacKay.

COLLEGE AND SEMINARY NEWS

MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY

The Practical Work Program

There are eighteen Central Conference and four General Conference Mennonite churches within a radius of two hundred miles from Chicago. Beside these there are five C. P. S. camps and units where worship services are held in the same area.

The Mennonite Biblical Seminary and Bible School are deeply grateful for the enriching fellowship with these churches and groups, and the faculty and students are eager to repay them in consecrated service. Some of the churches have completed plans for the regular student services, others are in the process of making them.

The Practical Work Program requires at least three services a month of each seminary student; the fourth Sunday is set aside for observation and visitation. This service is one of the prerequisites for graduation.

The work in the churches is supplemented by services in C. P. S. camps and in the Cook County Hospital. The Hospital unit is especially privileged because of the profoundly valuable experience in private conselling under the supervision and instruction of Dr. Jesse H. Ziegler, Professor in Mental Hygiene at Bethany Biblical Seminary and author of the book, The Broken Cup.

The objective of the program is to give the student the best possible opportunity to translate the theory of the class room into practice and always to be alert in personal testimony.

BETHEL COLLEGE

President Kaufman, who is now in Omaha attending a meeting of the Association of American Colleges, is expected to return November 15th after an extended trip to CPS units in the South and East. On this trip he gave a series of Bible lectures in Donnelson, Iowa, and visited MCC headquarters in Akron, Pa. Progress is being made in campus planning, particularly in the effort to provide inexpensive apartments for married students planning to return to school. The annual local drive for the World Students Service Fund began on November 11. This part of the YMCA or SCA work all over the world is to serve foreign students in war-torn countries in the form of books or other equipment. Bethel's share in the U. S. goal of a million dollars has been estimated at $250. The SCA has voted to "give more," sharing the proceeds with our own MCC relief program.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

Thursday afternoon, November 8, was cleanup day. Students and faculty members cooperated in a cleanup of the campus, especially in raking leaves. One special project was replacing the railing along the side of Krehbiel bridge, the foot bridge over Riley creek. The Board of Trustees met November 12. Steps were taken to liquidate entirely the college debt within the next few months. This debt has been of long standing, some of the bonds being of the 1917 issue, others 1926. Rev. Wilmer Shelly, pastor of the Mennonite church at Topeka, Indiana, was elected as a member of the board at large. Considerable time was spent in discussing the housing situation, especially as it concerned married service. The future program of the college was also discussed at considerable length. The Minister's Conference and Women's Conference, held in conjunction with Bible Lectures, were well attended and a fine interest was shown.

Tales from Mennonite History

Prof. B. Bargen says of this little ninety-six page book:

To parents with children from age up to fourteen or sixteen years—and even for themselves—Rev. Jacob H. Janzen's new little booklet entitled

"Tales from Mennonite History," will come like a breath of fresh, spring air after a long drought.

Here is delightful reading combined with historical insight in a most charming way. Reverend Janzen certainly has performed a real service in somehow making the link between early Christianity and the Anabaptist movement so that it is not only understandable but enticing reading.

We venture to say that where parents will read this book with the children (not to them), they will have some very interesting evenings together as a family.

"Tales from Mennonite History" may be had for $1.00 per copy from Jacob H. Janzen, 164 Erb Street West, Waterloo, Ontario, Canada. You may want to give it as a Christmas gift.

NEW SLIDES AVAILABLE

The Bethel College Slide Service has now some one thousand slides which are available for all Mennonite churches to be used as visual aids in their religious education. This collection of slides covers three main divisions: Stories of the Bible, The Story of Christianity, and The Story of the Mennonite Church. All these sets have either a description of the slides in connection with the picture or they have a printed lecture guide.

We are listing just a few sets that have been added recently and others which will be added within a week or two.

A. Stories of the Bible

1. David, the Poet King, 20 black and white slides, Rental, $1.00.
2. Stories from the Old Testament, 25 black and white slides, Rental, $1.00.
3. Life of Christ, 41 black and white slides, Rental, $2.00.
4. Parables of Jesus, 65 black and white slides, Rental, $2.00.
5. Cities of the Bible, 65 colored slides, (can be used for several evenings) Rental, $3.00.
6. Symbols of the Jewish religion, 38 colored slides, Rental, $2.00.
7. The getting of our Bible, black and white, Rental, $2.00.

B. Story of Christianity

1. The Early Church, 30 colored slides, Rental $3.00.
2. The Medieval Church, 30 colored slides, Rental, $3.00.
3. The Reformation, 30 colored slides, Rental, $3.00.
4. American Christianity, 30 colored slides, Rental, $3.00.

C. The Story of the Mennonites

1. Mennonites of Switzerland, black and white, Rental, $3.00.
2. Mennonites of Holland, black and white, Rental, $3.00.
3. The Amish Mennonites, black and white, Rental, $3.00.

And many others.

For your Christmas program we offer the following:

1. Childhood of Jesus, black and white, Rental, $2.00.
2. Nativity of Christ, 42 black and white slides,

Rental, $2.00.

3. A Christmas Carol, 22 black and white slides, Rental, $2.00.

4. The Christmas Story, 28 colored slides, Rental, $3.00.

JOTTINGS

—Walton Church, Walton, Kansas: The Ladies Mission Society sponsored their annual mission sale, November 9. Supper was served in the basement preceding the sale. A total of $310 was taken in.—Corr.

—Emmanuel Church, Pratum, Oregon: The Harvest Home relief offering on October 28 amounted to $363. The missionary women have canned 478 quarts of fruit and vegetables for C.P.S. We have several boxes of relief clothing ready for shipment.—Mrs. A. E. Dalke, Corr.

—Inman Church, Inman, Kansas: During the time our pastor, Rev. J. E. Kaufman, was visiting C.P.S. camps in Utah and California, the congregation was fortunate in securing the following speakers: Dr. H. A. Fast, Rev. J. H. Ediger, Dr. Melvin Gingrich, Rev. Victor Sawatzky and Dr. J. W. Fretz. The congregation invites everyone to attend the all-day mission festival, November 25.—Corr.

—First Church of Christian Mennonite, Moundridge, Kansas: The Lord willing, Rev. H. P. Fast will hold meetings in our church from December 9 to 14. Rev. Fast, evangelist and Bible teacher, is minister of the Saron Church, Orienta, Oklahoma.—Linda V. Kaufman, Corr.

—Gospel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: The Men's Chorus, under the direction of P. D. Eitzen, gave a musical program over station KICD, Spencer, Iowa, on the afternoon of November 11.—Corr.

—Woodland Church, Warroad, Minnesota: Missionaries Marvin Dirks, P. A. Penner and H. J. Brown visited us. Our Ladies Aid filled a number of relief Christmas boxes. They also sewed relief clothing which was sent to the Arizona mission. A donation of $50 was sent to C.P.S. to help with the canning. This fall Missionary J. P. Suderman visited us, showed pictures of his work, and told us about it.—Mrs. Otto Unruh

—First Church, Philadelphia, Pa., celebrated its eightieth anniversary the week of October 21-28. Rev. Homer Leisy of Dallas, Oregon, brought a series of messages. Dorothy Leisy led the song service, and she and her mother favored us with special selections. During its existence, fifteen members of First Church have entered the ministry and one the foreign mission field. Our missionary, Wilhelmina Kuyf is at present doing relief work in India. As soon as the opportunity affords she will re-enter China to resume mission work under the General Conference Foreign Mission Board.—Mrs. Howard S. Weiss, Corr.

—Zion Church, Donnellson, Iowa: Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Krehbiel spent the October 14th week-end visiting relatives and friends in this community. Dr. Krehbiel preached at the morning service and emphasized the grace of giving. Rev. Delbert Welty, former pastor, and Mrs. Welty also worshipped with us that day. The church was greatly strengthened by the Bible lectures given by Dr. Ed. G. Kaufman October 21-23. Dr. Kaufman presented deeply spiritual and challenging messages at each service. Waldo Harder, under appointment for missionary service in the Belgian Congo, brought an earnest message the evening of October 23. Rev. Nunemaker attended the College Board Meeting and the Ministers' Conference at Bluffton College, November 12-14. Rev. J. J. Enz, Nappanee, Indiana, is to be with us in the interest of Christian Education on the evening of November 28. Rev. Nunemaker will preach the sermon at the union Thanksgiving service. The chorus is to present the cantata, "The Chorus in the Skies," by Holton at Christmas time.—Corr.

—With an attitude of adventure and service sixteen men from churches in Oklahoma and Kansas left Newton, Kansas, on the streamliner, on November 14, for Baltimore, Maryland, where they were to disembark with a shipment of cattle destined for either Belgium or Poland. Included in the group were Earl Schmidt, Alvin Schmidt, and Edon Voth from the Tabor Church; Herman F. Schmidt, Edward Pankratz, J. H. Decker, Frank Schmidt, Alvin Suderman, Norman Wiens, and Ernest Bachman (unit leader) from the First Church, Newton; Walter E. Ratzlaff, Henry D. Unruh, and Arthur O. Decker, Meno, Oklahoma; and Willis Voran, Wayne Regier, and J. Jason Jantz from the Hesston-Moundridge community. The opportunity for relief service of this kind has come to the Mennonite churches through arrangement of the Brethren Service Committee which is working with the UNRRA in getting cattle to Europe. The men were to begin their voyage over the Atlantic on November 16.

—First Church, Newton, shipped a carload of thirty heifers for relief on November 14. The Men's Fellowship sponsored the project in which over $2000 and thirteen heifers were donated. The group paid the freight from here to the coast.

—Orie Miller reports that there are about 125 Mennonites doing relief work outside of the United States at the present time and that possibly 125 C.P.S. men will be interested in going abroad to do relief work. According to Mr. Miller the M.C.C. relief organization license number in Washington is 269. Mr. Miller, who traveled about 27,000 miles in 114 days last summer visiting needy areas in Europe, the Near East, and Africa, reported that only thirty out of 242 Congregational churches in London missed being bombed.

—Mrs. H. J. Andres, Newton, Kansas, is the editor of the Missionary News and Notes, the official paper of the Women's Missionary Association. This attractive little paper has a circulation of over seven thousand.

—Temperatures at Didsbury, Alberta, Canada, have already plunged to thirty to forty below and the people are driving with sleighs. So reports John Loewen, Bethel College student from Saskatchewan, who formerly lived at Didsbury. Brother Loewen is a ministerial student at Bethel.

—Bethany Church, Quakertown, Pa., On September 16 the Sunday School was "manned" by women. That evening at our harvest home service the guests of the Frederick Home for the Aged were our invited guests. Church members furnished transportation. The foodstuffs and flowers were for the Home. On September 29 the Sunday School furnished a brass quartet and orchestra for the convention at Souderton. Rev. and Mrs. A. J. Neuenchwander recently went to Bluffton for the wedding of their daughter Ruth and to attend the Bible lectures and to participate in other activities.—Mrs. Ed. Stoneback, Corr.

—Saron Church, Orienta, Oklahoma: At our harvest Thanksgiving festival November 11, Rev. H. J. Dyck of Elbing, Kansas, and Rev. Arthur Friesen, missionary to the Indians, Canton, Oklahoma, were the guests speakers. A basket dinner was enjoyed at noon. In the evening Rev. Dyck gave the first of a series of revival messages. The Mennonite churches of Fairview and Orienta have contributed enough wheat for relief to make four carloads of flour. The inside of our church has been painted and the floor finished.—John J. Voth, Corr.

—Second Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: Prof. B. Bargaen of Bethel College spoke twice in our church on November 11. His morning subject was "Art Thou the Christ?" and his evening subject at a combined young people's meeting of the First and Second churches was "Perils of Peace." Calvin Wiebe has left the States for Europe with a shipment of cattle for relief.

—First Church, Bluffton, Ohio: The Ohio Council of Churches is sponsoring its twenty-first year of peace declamation contests. A group of seven gave their orations November 8. Mary Kathryn Bauman won first place and Alice Ruth Pannabecker second. Another group will give declamations on November 18.—Corr.

—The Mennonite churches of the Mountain Lake, Minnesota, community have slaughtered and processed: nine and one-half beefs, fifteen hogs, five lambs and 907 chickens. The meat together with fruits and vegetables of over 11,000 quarts were canned and taken to Kalona, Iowa, to be repacked and sent across to our relief centers. Thirteen hundred seven pounds of fat were also sent. We plan to do some more canning in the future.—P. P. Buhr.

—First Church, Mountain Lake, has collected nearly $3,000 for flour for relief project. It has put in an order at the Buhler, Kansas, mill for two carloads of wheat which are to be ground into flour.

URGENT

Nebraska

To Leaders of General Conference Churches:

On November 8, Orrie Miller, Executive Secretary of the M.C.C., wrote to our General Conference Treasurer, Brother P. A. Penner as follows:

"I do not yet have the October 31 M.C.C. month-end operating statement at hand but was advised by our Controllars office yesterday that the CPS reserve will be at least $15,000 lower than it was a month ago and that actually here at Akron we are now having to borrow from relief cash for CPS purposes. November 30 will be our fiscal year end. November is a five-week month as far as CPS operations are concerned, which means that the November program will cost us at least $80,000.

Under these circumstances I was wondering what it might be possible for your group to do towards its back allocation prior to the end of this month. I am writing today to Elkhart and Lancaster particularly and am expecting both those groups to clean up their back quotas before November 25. Even if both these groups do this, it looks to me as though we will have to have at least $20,000 from the General Conference Mennonites in addition to what we normally get from the smaller groups to enable our year-end report to show that we have not used relief cash for CPS purposes.

It seems to me too that if it is required to use relief funds temporarily for CPS purposes this decision should be made by the groups rather than by us here at Akron. I do hope, therefore, that you folks can find some way to take care of at least the above mentioned portion of your back allocation and have the remittances here at Akron by or before November 25."—Orrie Miller

The October 31st CPS Quota Control Record showed our Conference $60,000 short in its CPS contributions.

Will you please call this matter to the attention of your church at once and if possible arrange for an immediate special offering to help raise at least $20,000 before the end of the month. Send contributions promptly to Brother P. A. Penner, General Conference Headquarters, Newton, Kansas.

Our churches generally have supported the CPS program remarkably well. Some have faithfully and regularly sent their full share of contributions; others have come very nearly doing so, but some have not done nearly as well. Shall we not all respond this time in an out-pouring of generous Christian concern according as the Lord has prospered us?

Please remember that the discharge of men in CPS has just begun and that the CPS operating expense will not materially decrease before March or April. We should therefore continue to contribute faithfully to this cause at the old rate of about fifty cents per church member until the M.C.C. can notify us otherwise, —Signed: H. T. Unruh, Chairman General Conference Peace Committee; Henry A. Fast, Representative on the M.C.C.

—First Church, Newton, Kansas: Bishop C. F. Derstine's recent series of evangelistic messages were based on the twenty-third Psalm and dealt with the following subjects: "The Amazing Discovery That God Can Be Known," "Incredible Wealth," "Rest and Refreshment," "A Tunnel Not a Terminus," "Black and Tragic Crisis," "The Invisible Presence," "The Radiant Certainty." The two Sunday morning messages centered around "The Mountain Men," and "A King's Counsel to Youth." Many decisions were made.—J. F. Sawatzky, Corr.

—Rev. Walter Gering and Winton Stucky recently visited the Deercreek, Meno, Enid, and Medford churches in Oklahoma and showed pictures of Puerto Rico and the Smoke Jumpers unit.

—First Church, Nappanee, Indiana, is making a systematic attempt to invite to church those people who do not attend and are not cared for by other churches.

—Married November 11 at the close of the morning service: Jacob Lingenfelder and Helen Penner of the Bethel College Church.

Dr. Cornelius Krahn has been invited by the Mennonite churches at Beatrice, Nebraska, to give four illustrated messages on "The Early Christian Church," "The Mennonites of Prussia," "The Peace Teaching of Our Church," and "Our Relief Activities," during the Thanksgiving season.

—Bethel Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: Dr. John C. Wenger, Professor of Bible and Philosophy at Goshen College, conducted the recent Bible lectures. The Flour for Relief Fund now totals nearly six thousand dollars. It has been proposed that three carloads of flour be bought.

—The Alberta Community Church, Portland, Oregon, has voted unanimously to purchase property on which to build its future church home.

—Dr. E. E. Leisy, nationally known professor of English at Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas, is the author of a whimsical reminiscence, "Pioneer Life on a Kansas Farm," to appear in the new periodical—MENNONITE LIFE.

—Rev. Walter J. Dick, of Second Church, Philadelphia, conducted special services in the Saucon Church, Coopersburg, Pa. November 7th to 11. The attendance at the services averaged from forty-five to eighty-five. Quite a few local people were in the services. Rev. Dick's messages were very helpful. The Saucon congregation is starting to get a foothold with the special help of Brother Stauffer and Brother Alvin Mumbauer who were so kindly loaned to us by the West Swamp congregation and their pastor. We appreciate this home mission spirit. Rev. Dick will conduct services in the Perkasio Church, November 29th to December 2.—Ward Shelly, Pastor.

The BEGINNING of ADVENT

Sunday, December 2, marks the beginning of Advent, which will reach its climax and end on Christmas Eve. Advent is a period of preparation for the coming of Christ.

In America this period will be, in general, one of increasing joy. Christmas shoppers will throng the stores. Christmas carols will fill the air. Christmas trees will shine forth in their decorations. Fruit cakes and candy—boys and girls practising for programs—adults speaking more gently and smiling more often—thoughtful Christians pondering the grace which gave us Christ. Then Christmas Eve, a happy family, and "Silent Night, Holy Night." Advent in America means increasing joy.

What will Advent be like in the rubble areas of Europe? What will its beginning there signify?

Herbert H. Lehman, head of UNRRA said on October 19, "In Europe alone 180 million people are on the borderline of starvation. . . It's a race against time to save hundreds of thousands from starvation and plague." With the coming of Advent millions upon millions in Europe face increasingly colder weather with less and less food to warm their bodies—and we find our resistance lowered when we miss one meal on a cold day—with little or no shelter—and we get terribly cold in an unheated house although it is very well built and entirely intact—with greater and greater susceptibility to severe diseases—and a cold gets us down though we be well-fed, well-clothed, and well-housed.

Such the beginning of Advent. To end for hundreds and thousands upon Christmas Eve, perhaps, with the stern fact of being forsaken, of lapsing into an unconsciousness from which never to awaken. Death before the birthday of Him who came to bring life abundant and eternal to the whole world.

However, for some—thanks to relief given in the Spirit of Christ—Advent will mean increasing hope, courage, and faith. As their bodies are fed and clothed in the Spirit of Christ, there will come a new awareness of the coming of Christ. As they find Christ ministering to them through the hands and feet and lips of people who care, their hearts will be prepared for the glorious gospel of Christmas Day. They will feel sure that Christ came and is coming again.

The beginning of Advent! The beginning of certain death or of renewed life? We are part of the answer.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

Marie J. Regier Writes from China

(The following letter from Missionary Marie J. Regier was received by Mrs. S. F. Pannabecker, Bluffton, Ohio, October 30, 1945. It had been written October 20 from the College of Chinese Studies, Peking, China, where Miss Regier and Miss Goertz are now staying.)

Here goes another letter to the States, though nothing comes back. We don't understand it. Of all the letters we have written since the war stopped, surely some should have gotten through, some should have been answered, but the fact is that we get no mail. Now if you get our mail, you should have received a letter from Miss Goertz, telling of our trip by plane. She and I did not come by the same plane, however. Her trip was more strenuous. Due to a fog the plane could not land and had to fly back to Tientsin from where the whole party came by train. That same morning a plane carrying Chungking troops and four Americans crashed, due to the fog, into a wireless and all were killed. People were worried at first lest it were the Weihsien group.

A group of men, among them Mr. Hubbard, were flown to Peking and Tientsin earlier in order to get things re-organized. Major David Dean who is always flying back and forth, Chungking, Peking, Weihsien, Tsingtao, etc., brought a letter from Mr. Hubbard telling us where we would all be located when we arrived in Peking. But Mr. Hubbard never had any definite word that we were coming. You see we were first supposed to all go to Tsingtao, then come from there to Tientsin by transport and then by train to Peking.

For some time the railroads between Weihsien and Tsingtao had been broken, but finally they were repaired and the first group of 500 internees left Weihsi. They were all people who were either going abroad, to Shanghai, or else lived in Tsingtao. It seemed that there had been a truce with the Pa Lu Chiün (Eighth Route Communist army) that for ten days they wouldn't blow up the rails. But the transports which were supposed to take away the first internees so that the rest of us would have room, delayed its coming, so that it was finally two weeks before the news came that the second five hundred could go. They were scheduled to leave Monday morning and the rest of us Wednesday morning. When the first group left, they were delayed a day because of rain. But when the second group was supposed to leave the morning dawned clear and beautiful. So everybody got packed up, the first trucks got loaded and were sent off to the stations, the second set was just in the process of being loaded when word came, "Unload." We didn't want to believe our ears, but it was true. The lines were again broken. Then the Army men decided to take no more chances on the RR and they made arrangements to have us taken out by plane.

But taking us out by plane also had its drawbacks. Communications again were faulty and people were taken out to the aerodrome and then no plane arrived, or a refueling plane took off before the party got there. It became to be a regular joke and some wit wrote on the wall of a house, "Make up your own travel parties, free trips through the gates. Safe return guaranteed." But eventually they got us all out, at least all the Peking people are here. I hope the Tientsin people got home too.

Now we are here. We don't have any idea as to how long we'll have to stay. We don't know just what plans the Mission Board has for us, especially since we stayed in against orders. We suppose though that they will agree with us that since we are here, it would be a good thing if we could see how conditions are at the stations even if we should go home before long. As to the mission policies they are quite different as followed by different missions. Some of the missions ask all their people to return, but others stay on. The Chinese seem very glad to have the foreigners back. But they certainly seem to have carried on wonderfully. Mr. McDuell of the Anglican Mission said that he was touched to tears when he heard how the people had carried on. Transportation is so expensive, so people have small group meetings all over the city. Individual evangelists go from place to place and conduct small prayer meetings.

From the Presbyterian Mission I heard that there are many new problems in connection with the new government. When we were still at Weihsien, Huang Mu Shih of the Shantung Presbyterian Mission spoke to all of the missionaries and told how the Chinese had carried on. He had travelled all over as the evangelistic representative of the Union organization. From his talk we felt there was not much use for missionaries anymore. But in private conversation he denied that he had meant that. He thought missionaries were

THE POSITIVE is generally preferable to the negative. It is better to prevent than to cure. It is better to hope than to fear. It is better to emphasize construction rather than destruction or even such a negative matter as control of destruction. Yet the heavy emphasis in our international outlook today is negative. Nations must be kept from using the atomic bomb. A more positive approach would be that of tackling the factors which might make nations want to use the atomic bomb. One can try to keep a highly dangerous weapon from a man who may become murderous. But when it is practically impossible to keep the weapon from the man, then it is much better to keep him from developing a murderous feeling. The more secure and friendly he feels the better it is for everyone concerned. Charles Clayton Morrison brings a new point of view into the present negative discussion of atomic energy by insisting that the United States government cooperate with other governments to aid "science everywhere to speed the civilian applications of atomic energy, throwing all the resources of mankind into the effort to produce a world free from want in the interval before the accumulation of human privation, frustration, and desperation blows off the lid of another world war." He further says, "If properly developed, we may expect this new power to do marvelous things in making richly productive vast portions of the earth which have hitherto scarcely been able to support life, and in lifting the standards of living everywhere. It can so enrich life as to wipe out the distinctions between 'have' and 'have-not' nations. It can eliminate many of the causes of wars." This may be a very optimistic assertion, but it certainly seems more hopeful than the negative premise that is being entertained today. In support of his assertion Mr. Morrison quotes Britain's great authority in the field, who says, "It should be possible for us to develop the first of the practical peacetime aspects (of applied atomic energy) in five years, if we tackle the problems vigorously." While awaiting developments in the civilian use of atomic energy, the United States can emphasize other positive steps towards world friendship. By dropping the idea of peacetime military training it can save an estimated $2,500,000,000 to $3,000,000,000 a year. According to Herbert H. Lehman, this yearly saving alone would amount to about as much as the United States spent for relief after World War I. It would be more than the two billion in cash and supplies that all contributing nations had allocated to the UNRRA by October 19, 1945. The UNRRA relieves suffering. A positive emphasis could expand its work to untold blessing. The emphasis must be positive if we would build for good will and life instead of ill will and death.

GOD'S KINDNESS is intended to lead to repentance those who have gone astray. Paul declares this in Romans 2:4 (Moffatt): "Do you not know that his kindness is meant to make you repent?" God's kindness is like the warmth of a hen sitting upon eggs. It gently brings into being new life and nurtures it. God way is effective. He depends upon it. However, the human being can complicate matters. He can insulate himself against the warmth of God's kindness. In fact, sins acts in just that way. Sin keeps the individual from experiencing the kindness that surrounds him. Yet it is that very kindness that God depends upon to lead the sinner to repentance. God stakes his chance on the fact that his kindness is immeasurably great. He hopes that sometime, somehow, it will warm the individual enough to get him to relax. Once off the defensive a bit, the sinner finds it just a bit easier to get still a little more off the defensive. And he is led to repentance. But how tragic it is when the individual fails to recognize the kindness of God. Paul was warning some Roman Christians of this very thing. These Christians were very critical of their fellow Christians. And while they were so, they failed to recognize God's kindness, forbearance, and patience towards them. Paul warns that continuance in such an attitude would lead to self-destruction. It is a terrible thing to fail to recognize kindness. And yet sinfulness makes for just that kind of blindness. Therefore, Paul's point is so vital. Assuming an awareness of the fact that "all have gone stray," it is of great importance ever to be on the lookout for God's kindness as revealed through fellow human beings. For though blinded by sin, it gives one a better chance to recognize that kindness which can lead one to repentance and thereby save one from destruction.

OUR MINISTRY OF EDUCATION

By J. H. Langewalter

B. THINGS ATTEMPTED

The Minister-at-large of the Board of Education started out with the conviction that all work was to be done in answer to invitations. There was no dearth of work and the opportunities for service increased so rapidly that there was scarcely time for the needed planning.

Among other things attempted there were visits to Freeman Junior College, Bluffton College, Bethel College, Mennonite Collegiate Institute, Gretna, Manitoba, and Rosthern Junior College, at Rosthern, Saskatchewan. At least five days were spent in the vicinity of each of these schools. Only one of them had closed, but there were still faculty members and students enough present to get some idea of what was being attempted and what had been achieved.

At all of the schools visited, the problem of buildings was very much in evidence. There is a definite need in this direction and if our people as a whole understood the full significance of the situation they would lend a helping hand far beyond present realizations. Those who have caught the vision are doing inspiring things with their hands, their tools, their money, their influence with others, as well as their prayers.

Men and women in all kinds of service brought on by the war were reached by visits in camps and units and through many letters to them and their parents or other relatives. Many churches supplied lists of both those in service and their relatives. Three editions of form letters were sent out. Some of these were accompanied by personal notes while others were supplemented by letters of comfort and encouragement. Many letters received by those needing help or information were answered or referred to someone who could answer them in a better or more helpful way.

The General Conference and four sessions of District or Provincial Conferences were attended, and services were rendered in answer to invitations. A number of Youth Conferences and Retreats were attended and served. One of the services was to dedicate the Elim Gospel Beech near Swift Current, Sask. This had been a place of perversion and was dedicated to be a place of "conversion." One marvels at the courage which was shown at this place and the former Experiment Station at Rosthern, Sask. In fact, the spirit of youth is on the march all over the territory of the General Conference. They are seeking their own camp grounds for meeting in order that they may have a better chance to learn to know each other, prepare themselves through study and for more definite Christian service—ministry. There is a very wholesome spirit of wanting to get together between Canada and the "States."

COLLEGE AND SEMINARY NEWS

BETHEL COLLEGE

The annual Thanksgiving dinner for students and faculty was held November 16. Amanda Ediger was toastmistress for the occasion, introducing a program of marimba music by Delsie Tieszen, a reading by Phyllis Gates, two numbers by a mixed quartet, and a closing hymn led by Rosella Reimer. This banquet was one of the regular monthly formal dinners, usually given the last Wednesday and honoring the birthdays of the month. The programs are in charge of the Student Council. Informal dinners are scheduled for other Wednesday evenings. Helen W. Penner (Beatrice, Nebraska) is in charge of the dining hall, with Mrs. Elizabeth Roupp, Elizabeth Pauls, and Mrs. P. J. Peters as her assistants. Examinations for the first quarter were given Tuesday and Wednesday. The second quarter, beginning the Monday after Thanksgiving recess, continues with but minor changes.

FREEMAN JUNIOR COLLEGE

Rev. Louis Linscheid spent several days at Butterfield, Minnesota, helping to work out the program for the next session of the Northern District Conference. Mr. Unruh and Mr. Gross attended the annual meeting of the Church Related Colleges of the West Central Area held at Omaha, Nebraska, November 14th. Rev. Howard Nyce, Allentown, Pa., spoke twice to students and faculty during the chapel hour in connection with the series of meetings sponsored by the Ministerial Conference of the Freeman vicinity. Venetian blinds have been ordered for the chapel windows. An order has also been placed for shadow-proof shades to be used in the chapel. This will make it possible to use the chapel for visual education purposes.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

Rev. Marvin Dirks will be the speaker at a vesper service in the Ramseyer Chapel on Sunday afternoon, December 2. Dr. Albert W. Palmer will lecture at the college on December 11. His topic is "Wanted—A Code for Victors." On December 16 the College Choral Society, with the assistance of the orchestra, will present "The Messiah." Soloists for this concert are Eleanor Starkey, New York City, Soprano; Gayle Howey, Lima, Ohio, Contralto; Carlton Eldridge, Lansing, Michigan, Tenor; and Paul Fuller, Lansing, Michigan, Bass. Bluffton College faculty members held a week-end institute in the Bible Mission Chicago, November 24, 25. Those on the team were Rev. Paul Shelly, Miss Edna Ramseyer, and Prof. J. P. Klassen. Dean J. S. Schultz spent the week of November 18 in educational counseling in the CPS units located in Chicago and Wisconsin.

Dr. Thorfin Hogness, who was the chemical director of the atomic project at the University of Chicago lamented on November 8, that the American "people do not realize the full import of the bomb... how terribly devastating it is; that there is no counter measure; that the next war could be over in an hour's time; and that there is no secret that other countries cannot work out for themselves in a relatively few years."

The Protestant bodies of the United States have worked out a simultaneous program which calls for a special emphasis on lay evangelism in 1946. Jesse M. Bader says, "It is expected that during 1946, more unchurched persons will be visited and interviewed by more Christian lay men and women to talk about Christ and the Church, asking for a definite decision, than in any previous year in the history of the American churches."

When a deputation of English church representatives asked Prime Minister Attlee what Great Britain could do for the refugees "pouring into Germany" from the Sudetenland and Poland, Mr. Attlee's response was, that "the Churches could at least move public opinion so that there should be no impatient demand for larger rations at home while this tragic state of affairs prevails in Germany."

"...relatively few people have yet reached the stage where their pronoun 'we' includes all men and women of the world. The crucial question is whether it is psychologically possible for the rank and file of men to transcend tribal ethics."—From a review of "Bringing Our World Together."

The American Council of Christian Churches, "composed of twelve fundamentalist Protestant groups" has endorsed "the principle of universal peacetime military training," according to a report by "The Protestant Voice."

The report comes from Le Havre, France, that people with no other means of support get a pension of 200 francs a month. Yet it costs 350 francs to have a pair of shoes resoled. Fuel is so scarce that there is not enough to heat the maternity hospital. People live eight and ten in a room and sleep three and four in a bed.

Some 300,000 Germans need insulin, and two-fifths of them will die if they don't get it. So reports a member of the World Council of Churches.

In at least two German towns—Eberswald and Neuruppin—the infant mortality rate is 100 per cent, while at Prenzlau four of five babies born this year and last are dead.

The Methodist Church has set itself the goal of winning one million souls for Christ during this "year of evangelism." Lay members are to participate very actively in this.

MENNONITES THE WORLD OVER

By Cornelius Krahn

Locating Relatives. C. F. Klassen has already located many Mennonites from Russia who are now in danger of being sent back to Russia. They are very eager to hear from their relatives in Canada, whom they would like to join, so that they could finally find rest and peace.

Elder Bruno Ewert has just written from Denmark about his work among the displaced Mennonites from the Danzig area. Rev. Ewert was the last leader of the Heubuden Mennonite Church, whence Mennonites came to this country in large numbers during the seventies in order to maintain the principle of non-resistance.

Mental Hospital in the Chaco: The Mennonites in the Paraguayan Chaco have just completed the construction of a mental hospital for their patients. They have achieved what the Mennonites in the United States have not yet accomplished. There are various reasons for this. They had had their own mental hospital in Russia, and also in the Chaco they were too far away from any other such institution. No doubt, even though we in the United States have never had our own mental hospital, and in spite of the fact that we have access to state hospitals, there are many reasons why we should have our own institution.

Then and Now. Because of severe censorship it was always been next to impossible to correspond with people in Russia. Even now we are criticizing our Russian ally for rigid censorship in all countries which she occupies. Has not the U. S. been fighting among other things, our freedom of speech and press? Why then is all civilian mail service to and from Germany suspended?

Destroyed Churches in Holland. The pastor of the Mennonite Church of Vlissingen has given an eye-witness account of the flooding of Walcheren Island and the destruction of the city of Vlissingen. When the Mennonites of Vlissingen returned after the forced evacuation they found most of their homes, their property, and their church gone. With others who have lost their churches they appeal to their brethren in America to help them reconstruct their churches. The MCC, Akron, Pennsylvania, accepts contributions for this purpose.

Shipment of Clothing to Holland

Another shipment of new and used clothing from Mennonite collection centers has started on its way to Holland. On November 13, 456 bales, weighing 54,355 pounds and having a value of $52,876.75, left the warehouses near Akron for overseas shipment. This shipment like previous ones will be received by Mennonite relief workers and will be distributed by them.

In regard to the distribution of clothing, Peter Dyck writes from Holland: "We have made quite extensive arrangements for clothing distribution and have already received back again mountains of forms filled out by applicants"

Shipment to Paraguay

Forty-two bales of used clothing, weighing 7,184 pounds and having a value of $5,149.98, were also sent to Paraguay on November 13. Along with this clothing shipment, the Akron office also sent six cases of X-ray machinery and other equipment for the hospital in the Fernheim colony.

Rains Arrive in Paraguay

A. M. Lohrentz, Mennonite relief worker serving as a medical doctor among the colonists, writes in a letter dated October 6 concerning the coming of much-needed rains in Paraguay:

"Things begin to look a little better now than they did about a month ago. We had about four and one-half inches of rain since then, and the people are in better hopes. The corn, kaffir, peanuts, beans, and some cotton have been planted and we can begin to see the rows. At places it was very difficult to get enough water for the cattle, but now the low places are full of water."

Arrival of Relief Workers

A cable from Paris, dated November 8, brings the information that the party of eight relief workers, Welma Graber, Marie Ediger, Ruth Hilty, Mrs. M. C. Lehman, Charlotte Regier, Cleo Mann, and Delmar Wedel have arrived safely in France.

Food for Relief

A center for packing relief food donations has been opened at Kalona, Iowa. This center will serve the Mid-West congregations in somewhat the same manner as the center at East Petersburg, Pa., is serving the East. Two CPS men are transferring to this center and will take charge of the crating.

Two carloads of navy beans, consisting of 1,480 bags, have been sent from the Bayport, Michigan, community to New York for overseas shipment to Holland and France. Bills of lading have also been received from the Newton and Buhler, Kansas, communities indicating that two additional carloads of flour are en route to the East. At least one carload of raisins from the Reedley, California, community is also on its way.

C.O.'s in Canada

According to a report of the Military Problems Committee, a sub-committee of the Conference of the Historic Peace Churches in Canada, dated October 23, 1945, there were over 10,700 conscientious objectors drafted in Canada. The religious breakdown of this group is as follows: Mennonites, 63 percent; Dukhobors, 20 percent; Plymouth Brethren, Christadelphian, Pentecostal, 10 percent; other Protestant groups, 3 percent; Jehovah's Witnesses, 3 percent; Catholics, 1 percent.

At present there are six Alternative Service Work camps in operation and 196 persons in the camps. All other C.O.'s have been placed under special contract on farms, in public institutions, and in essential industry. All C.O.'s, however, are still under employment directions of ASW supervisors. Married men over thirty years of age have had their contracts cancelled. Many contracts have also been cancelled because of "compassionate and medical" reasons. Payments of stipulated sums to the Red Cross are still accrued out although they have been reduced. "Up to the present time the government, through the A.S.W., has deducted $2,088,650.09 from the wages and income of C.O.s and turned it over to the Red Cross."

Discharges from C.P.S.

During the month of October sixty-six men were discharged from Mennonite camps. Releases were accelerated in November and by the tenth of the month sixty additional discharges were made. With these discharges practically all of the men in Mennonite C.P.S. over thirty-five years of age have been released. At the present time assignees who have been in camp for a period of four years or longer as of November 15, 1945, are being considered and are to be released before the end of the year. In this four-year group there are 406 men in Mennonite camps. In the meantime inductions continue; fifty-eight new men were assigned to Mennonite camps during the month of October.

QUOTE

Stanley Hamilton, American Quaker:

"In this country many overeat to the extent that they bring on illness while in Europe many barely sustain the flicker of life with the little they can garner—like the crumbs that fall from our tables."

Louise Ludlow, Representative from Indiana on the subject of military training:

"It is estimated by experts that the cost would be at least $2,500,000,000 and perhaps as high as $3,000,000,000 a year . . . The annual cost alone of the compulsory military-training program would equal the total wealth of four states Delaware, Wyoming, Nevada, and New Mexico."

"The World Alliance News Letter"

The task of the churches is clear: keep men's minds awake and aware of human suffering; open their hearts to a willingness to share; and support the agencies working in that direction.

Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, seminary professor, who supported the war:

"Repentance is the inner death which alone guarantees a new life in the affairs of men and nations. Consider, for instance, the position of three great nations, whose common efforts were primarily responsible for our imminent victory. Suppose that each of these three nations should become more interested in preserving its power and prestige than in achieving a system of mutual security. There are, unfortunately, indications that, though all these nations do genuinely desire a mutual system of security, they are also so intent upon their own security and so suspicious of the virtues and good intentions of their partners that an adequate system of mutual security is imperiled. If each of us is primarily interested in gaining power for the event of another war, we will together ruin every possibility of security against war itself."

Rollin H. Walker in the "Christian Advocate:"

Jesus himself had said, "He that receiveth you receiveth me, and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me." Or in other words, if I wish to receive the power and grace of God into my own life, I must by all means with passionate eagerness welcome to my friendship every child of God who comes my way. They are all imperfect, just as I am imperfect. But I cannot have the pulses of divine life throbbing vigorously and healthily through my soul so long as I refuse to learn everything that is to be learned from everybody with whom Providence brings me into contact.

Paul Erb, Editor of the "Gospel Herald"

"Every man, every woman has a past. There is no reason why any of us needs to be singled out with a wink and a shrug, and the whispered remark, He's a man with a past. For every Adam's son of us, and every Eve's daughter, has a past of which he needs to be ashamed. The differences in the degree of our sin are not significant in comparison with the holiness of God and the requirements of His righteous law. All have sinned, and come short of the glory of God."

still needed as Bible teachers and as pioneer workers. That latter statement is interesting, isn't it?

I just finished a letter to the Mission Board and some of the things I just wrote to you I should perhaps have mentioned to them. But I hope to hear more concrete reports of what the Chinese have been doing, and I'll write to the Board later.

The YWCA had a reception in honor of Lelia Hinkley and invited all the Weihsienites to a marvelous tea of cake, doughnuts, Chinese delicacies, coffee and chocolate ice cream. It was a very lovely party. Almost everyone turned out. I heard then that the Salvation Army building had been used by the Japanese for all sorts of purposes, and the basement of the Training School as a torture chamber. So when people asked where they had been tortured, they would say "at the Salvation Army."

There is much ill feeling. One of boys who stays here saw a Japanese killed in one of the bicycle shops last night. If it were not for the American navy here there would probably be many more incidents.

When we came home tonight we had each one a large basket of fruit: fourteen persimmons, five pears, and two bunches of grapes, sent to us from the Chief of Police at the Japanese Liason Office.

It is a queer situation how the Japanese are still helping the Americans protect property. They salute very humbly when they see the American uniform. "They do work hard, you have to hand it to them," one of the Army men told me.

We Pacifists have never had so much to do with the army as we have had these last two months. We are being supported by army rations now to which the Red Cross adds vegetables, milk and flour. This morning we each got a lovely navy blanket. We have had ever so much food given to us by the army while we were still at Weihsien. It was a most thrilling sight to see those parachutes come down with supplies. One plane was rather reckless and dropped parachutes right into the camp. Some of them got caught in the trees. One little boy got enveloped by the parachute, but fortunately the parcels did not strike him.

We have had clothing given to us too, but of course, they are all men's clothing. So you see women running around in army breakers, trousers and shirts. Some of us have made skirts out of the trousers.

Well, tomorrow is our first Sunday in Peking. Dr. and Rev. Corkey are here too. I think Lloyd knows them. Dr. Corkey, the wife, is certainly a fine doctor and an excellent surgeon. She was extremely well liked in Weihsien.

I do wish I had a typewriter, I am sure you wish it too. I had to leave it at Kai Chow when we came to Weihsien.

I really must stop. Perhaps you can pass this on to some of the other missionaries. I have lost Willa Kuyf's address.

Lots of love,

(Signed) Marie

Note: We have repeatedly written to Weihsien but in vain. Yesterday we sent a cable to the sisters in Peking, which they, no doubt, will receive.—P. H. Richert, Sec.

AN SOS

The India mission field from no Christians in 1900, excepting a few imported ones, the number has risen to nearly three thousand, the children and young people not yet communicants included, constitute a blooming Christian community of over five thousand five hundred. It is indeed wonderful what God has wrought!

This community has now fifteen regularly organized churches besides a large number of smaller unorganized groups scattered over the mission area. Mission work has certainly been in every phase worthwhile.

The epoch-making Church Conference of our area is going to convene early in Decemeber at Jagdeeshpur. The conference, since a good number of years, governs her own mission field with seven workers, now thinking of organizing shortly a church in that field. Then she since a year ago took over all the primary day schools, also the church management and property, cemeteries. Just these days her Governing Board with sixteen members besides the various sub-committees were sitting in Champa for three and one half days, laying hold anew how the present enterprises can be more efficiently managed, then most enrouraging were the discussions how the ropes can be lengthened, the stakes set out farther. This all indicates the shouldering of more responsibilities. Its work grows enormously.

The conference's very uplifting aspiration lies at hand visibly resting on the prophet's word, "Not by might, nor by power, but by MY Spirit!"

These lines convey the urgent necessity of ardent prayer these days in behalf of your fellow Christian churches on the other side of the globe, yearning for fellowship with uplifted hands and hearts at the throne of grace.

Immediately following the above conference the Missionary Conference shall convene at the same place. This session contemplates how to surrender more work and responsibilities to the Indian Church conference. These steps have to be most carefully guarded. Furthermore, another phase imposes on us not to let "Evangelism" suffer at this time while our missionary and Indian staffs are "far" undermanned. The same plea for burdening is coveted. Yours in behalf of the conferences, P. W. Penner, Secretary-Treasurer, Champa, C. P., India, October 24, 1945.

HOME MISSIONS

A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

Pioneering at Nipaiou

As it is a long time ago that I sent in a report of the work in Northern Saskatchewan I must take time and do so tonight.

Our little town of Nipaiou is growing rapidly it has a population of about three thousand, with six churches, that is as follows: United, Anglican, Luthern, Holiness Movement, Apostolic and Baptist. The next church to come in is the Evangelical, in fact their building has already been moved into town; but will not be complete for service until after threshing time, as there is so much work left in connection with it. The Mennonites so far have no place of worship, but the Evangelical people have consented to have their services only every third Sunday thus giving us the privilege of using it during the rest of the time. We feel that this work here is very important as we have nineteen German speaking families in town at present with a few more moving in for the winter. This, however, would not mean that they would all attend, as so far they have had no place of worship, and thus have a tendency to attend nowhere. This will all take time and talent to bring them in. Pray much for this special work.

I spent the last half of July in the far northern part, that is in and near Pierceland. Four souls were saved and four others restored. We praise the Lord for this, and trust that they will now grow in grace. During the communion service at least seventy souls took part. We must not forget that these people up there are far from other help. Brother Dyck is their minister, who was ordained sometime last fall.

There are a few young people in the north there that would attend Bible School somewhere this coming winter, but due to poverty they will be unable to attend. The Meadowlake Bible School I understand will be open again this winter and I take great pleasure in saying that it is strictly true to the Gospel, and non-sectarian, and then too, it is closer to the people of the north. The nearest place that the Mennonites have, would be Rosthern.

I would welcome any correspondence and would be glad to give any further information, however, only as time permitted, as I have much work to attend to, and quite a list of names that I should write to, I always try to answer the letters first that concern souls in need.

Your brother in Christ Jesus because of Calvary,

How Can Youth Serve in My Church?

by Andrew Shelly

The point of this article is to present ways in which youth can serve the church from the Minister's point of view. While I will not confine the article to local activities, generally speaking they are those in which we have ventured.

One task of the Church is to lead each member into channels of useful service for the Kingdom. Indeed we are "saved to serve." Not only is this an asset to the Church as an organization committed to the spread of the Gospel, but it is a means of spiritual growth for the individual. Obviously, the two go hand-in-hand, for as individuals grow, the service is more devoted and meaningful.

General Means of Service

When we speak of possibilities of service for youth in the Church we cannot draw a sharp age line. Naturally many things would carry over to older groups. Especially is this true in this first area.

1. Intercessory Prayer. This is the greatest service challenge confronting the Christian. This includes youth. Especially do we think of daily habits, prayer within the organization, and prayer meetings. Young people should take an active interest in the Church through prayer.

2. Financial help. Money is power. It is needed in the extension of the kingdom. The Biblical minimum is one-tenth of the income—the tithe! For personal spiritual growth, joy in Christian service, and increased usefulness each young person ought to establish the habit of tithing

3. Attendance at Worship Services. Absolute regularity should be the rule of life.

4. Personal Example. "Be ye an example. . ."

5. Actively boost the Church. Talk about the services, special meetings, organizations etc. The influence of an enthusiastic booster is great.

Andrew Shelly is pastor of the Silver Street Mennonite Church, Kitchener, Ontario. He is young in age and spirit and deeply interested in the youth program of the Church. He was requested to tell us how youth can serve in his church.

6. Fit into the general organizations and functions of the Church. As Sunday School, choir, etc.

Service Through The Young People's Society

A goal for our Church this year is: "Every person fitting into every organization and service—and every organization and service fitting into the total work of the Church." The goal in terms of the three Y.P.S. groups in "my" Church is each person within the ages receiving the benefit and opportunities of service through the groups. The Y. P. S. groups have distinctive functions to perform. I mention three: fellowship, worship and discussion, and leadership training.

1. Fellowship. This is one of the cardinal tasks of the Church. It was so in the New Testament Church. We think of all members as a "spiritual family." More particularly, we regard all redeemed souls as members of the family of Christ. In some aspects of the work of our Church we think of everyone fellowshiping together. However, there is need for special areas of fellowship. The young people of the Church constitute one of these. The challenge is to bring every young person within the sphere of influence of the Church into this "fellowship." Through meetings, socials, service activities, personal associations, etc., the fellowship within the Church should be the "most looked-forward-to" experience in the life of every young person.

2. Worship and Discussion. Youth should worship together, individually and unitedly dedicating their energies to the service of the King. Worship experiences should be carefully planned, and provide a real spiritual thrill. Discussion includes the great doctrines of our Christian Faith, the distinctive doctrines of our Church, social living, vocations, personal Christian living, missions, relief. They should be thoughtful, frank, and lead to action.

3. Leadership Training. Through offices held, activities promoted, and participation in meetings, talents can be developed. The young person should feel free before the group. It should be a training ground. Naturally mistakes will be made, but that is to be expected. This is a very real service to the Church; for one of the great problems facing every Church is the securing of enough consecrated, trained leaders to do all that should be done.

Distinctive Service Possibilities

The possibilities for interesting, useful, adventuresome projects are limitless. We mention only a few.

1. Sponsor special services. For example, a Sunday evening service. Perhaps it can be for a special purpose—as missions, building fund, etc. Or, a devotional emphasis. Or, a bright musical night.

2. Clerical Work. In our Church this includes the weekly bulletin, and the sending out of monthly "Messenger" to all members. Missionary reports are also sent to our worker's mailing list each month. This can also include posters, circulars. An evening of this sort can prove very interesting.

3. Letters To Boys in C.P.S. and Service. And otherwise remembering them.

4. Visitations. Programs and gifts for shut-ins, institutions, missions, etc.

5. Beautify Church Grounds. Depending upon the need, this could include the making of parking lots, planting and caring for shrubbery, making of lawns, etc.

6. Relief Work. The groups should first study about it—then get busy. What can be done? Cooperate in every way with the program of the Church. Groups can have special projects of their own. Even eight and ten-year-old boys and girls can make things. Odd moments can be used in knitting. Comforters can be knotted by the entire group. Old clothing can be collected. Cooperation can be given to the canning program.

7. Work Projects. Here are truly vast possibilities. Our people are ideally located in open country, small towns and city. Some interesting and productive areas we have discovered are: raising potatoes cooperatively by the acre, corn and other vegetables, poultry, livestock, individual gardens and odd jobs in the city. Young people in any community can find challenging things to do. Hundreds of dollars can be raised for relief, missions, etc.

8. Special Work for Missionaries. Many things that ordinarily are not used can be salvaged for missionaries: for example, the pictures of the old scripture-text calendars. Missionaries should feel free to request anything they can use which Church groups, especially Y.P.S., can give.

9. Crusade On Social Issues. The Bible speaks of orthodoxy of belief and also orthodoxy of conduct. Much is written about everyday living. Opportunities should arise to join others in a crusade on social issues in the Name of Christ! Smoking, drinking, Sabbath desecration, movies, etc., etc. Somehow we have become too complacent about the problems in our communities. Enthusiastic youth can do much in well-planned activity along

Result of Suffering in Europe

A pastoral letter issued by the Netherlands Reformed Church indicates some of the spiritual benefit that may have come to the Christians who have been so severely tried in occupied lands. We quote passages here and there from this letter: "We are first of all to abandon all spiritual pride and to turn to a simple faith in Jesus Christ . . . It is now all important that we should be living Christians, a fellowship of men who are constantly and with much self-denial helping neighbors . . . Precisely because we see in the horrible events of our time God's judgment coming to a world which has turned away from Him, we witness before the whole of the nation that salvation can only come from Him whose name is above all names . . . There is in our time a passionate seeking for new ways and new forms of organization and society. As members of the church of Christ we know, however, that even the best organization of society is of no avail if it is not borne by men who have found newness of life in Jesus Christ . . . We must therefore go out into the world in order to call to repentance; that more and more men may be brought to obedience of faith in Jesus Christ and that the name of our God and Father may be glorified in the world and His will be done on earth as it is in heaven."—Gospel Herald these lines. Meetings can be promoted, literature given to personal friends and in wide distribution, etc.

10. Promoting Inter-Mennonite Understanding How much do we know of other Conference groups? We can study. Also, in many communities joint gatherings can be promoted. Careful, sympathetic, sacrificial effort can accomplish great things. The C.P.S. and A.S.W. boys have had the privilege of mingling closely with other groups, and have come to understand each other better. We have a rich, common heritage and we should feel an ever-growing spirit of love and unity among us.

11. Promoting Inter-Denominational Effort. We are Mennonites. But the Kingdom of God is broader than our denomination. We need to be rooted and grounded in our precious heritage, but we also need to join hands with Christian young people of other Churches in cooperative effort. We need a united witness. We need not compromise to do this. Indeed, we dare not compromise!

Mennonite Youth arise! The frontiers of service are before you. Go forth in the name of Christ, and in His strength "Be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord," realizing that "we are labourers together with God." May the Lord Jesus Christ, your Saviour and Lord, so fill you with His love that you will be "constrained" to give Him your best in service.

Line Fence Religion

by Ford Berg

"This evening we want to repair Jay's fence back along the hayfield, Ford. Will you get the nippers, the staples, the hammer, and the wire stretcher and take them there? I'll be coming soon," concluded my stepfather, as he placed the washed milk buckets upon the rack.

I knew what lay ahead. Again our neighbor's fence needed repairing. My stepfather always kept our half, our share of the fence, in an excellent state of repair. Furthermore, he saw to it that his neighbor's share withstood the caperings of both his and our cattle.

Slowly I trudged to our hayfield, the field then being used for pasture, with the wire stretcher rubbing its rough edges into my aching shoulder as each step was taken. "Why do we need to repair Jay's fence?" I murmured disgustedly to myself. We repair our fence and why cannot he repair his?"

My stepfather soon appeared, hastily surveyed the situation, and soon we were busily stretching a new line of barbed wire. He worked at his customary pace, saying nothing, whereas I labored feverishly, straining to complete the task in order that I might have the remainder of the evening for recreation, for playing ball, for riding my bicycle.

The concept of repairing another man's fence was not in my repertoire of mental adaptations. It did not seem reasonable and moreover, necessary.

Strangely, as we were repairing our neighbor's fence, the man calmly walked out to help us, to assist us in repairing HIS fence! My stepfather talked with him about the weather, the corn, the cows, and of subjects that farmers talk about. Nothing was said as to whose responsibility it might be to reinforce the fence, or in regard to reparations; each man knew his obligations.

Years passed. An interest in Christianity and its everyday involvements and applications was aroused. I began to understand that in order to have proper faith one must be in harmony with God and man. Faith is more than being repentant only; in its program of doing the will of God it includes loving "thy neighbour as thyself."

As my Christian experience grew, I began to comprehend what Christ had said: "Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth: but I say unto you, That ye resist not evil: but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also. And if any man will sue thee at the law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloke also. And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain." (Matt. 5:38-41).

My stepfather knew more about the teachings of Jesus than I had supposed. It was Mark Twain's irony which amply demonstrates my discovery: "When I was fourteen I thought my father did not know anything, but when I became twenty-one I was amazed how much he had learned in seven years."

These verses were not foreign to my parent. His "line fence" religion was not bad, after all; it was a part of Christian living. For ten extra dollars he had maintained friendly relations with his neighbor, had pleased Christ, and had exemplified a scriptural truth to an immature and inexperienced youth.

Complacency

By Grace Helen Davis

Dear God, guard me from complacency, for it is a rust that would encumber me in mind and spirit, and dull and blunt me.

If I have achieved a little, may I be eager to achieve greatly, to achieve to the uttermost of the abilities that you have given me.

If I have learned in part, may I strive toward deeper, more far-reaching knowledge and understanding.

If I have served, may I search for completer service, till I have given of my very self.

If I have found communion with you and enlargement of vision, may I seek to know you ever more closely, as my spirit seeks radiant fulfillment.

Dear God, grant this prayer. May I never be satisfied with what I am and am doing. Give me the onward look and will. Amen.

To Make Rough Edges Smooth

*This small gray stone
I found upon the beach;
The waves have washed its sides
And thrown it upon the rocky shore,
The storms have tossed it to and fro
And all its edges smoothed;
Its sharp rough corners, all
Are rounded off, until
It lies within my hand
A shapely thing and beautiful.
Is this the reason then, that storms are sent?
To make rough edges smooth
And take away the corners sharp,
And shape our lives through storm and stress?
And though we may be tossed on lonely shores
We may find voice to speak His praise,
And resting safe within God's hand
The marvel is, He finds us beautiful.*

Clippings For and About Youth

Traditional Hallowe'en parties were observed by many youth groups in the churches. Notes from Halstead, Kansas, tell of a masquerade party with all races represented and all classes of people. The haunted walk through dark halls and over rough paths started a gay party.

Doubtless many other church youth groups also observed this traditional event. Such events planned and presented by the participants are the most satisfying recreation. Much needs to be done to encourage self-created entertainment

We all eat Hershey bars. Milton S. Hershey, founder of the chocolate firm which made his name famous, died recently, at the age of eighty-eight, in Hershey, Pennsylvania. Mr. Hershey spent his later years in developing the Hershey Industrial School for orphan boys. The fund he made available for this purpose reached eighty-eight millions of dollars in 1944.

The fabulous Hershey empire is located in and around Hershey, Pennsylvania which is near Harrisburg. It includes farms, the school for eight hundred, the factory, a hotel, recreation and entertainment, housing for workers and much more. Mr. Hershey's parents were Mennonites—plain people. Many of his relatives are Mennonites.

The International Correspondence Schools have made their courses available to men in Civilian Public Service Camps at approximately half the standard rate.

It has been pointed out that the incidence of war-induced insanity from the first World War has only now twenty-seven years after the end of the war, reached its peak. This indicates something of the cost that we will be paying for this second World War many years from now.—Gospel Herald

Marble Collegiate Church, New York City, which lists recommended books, reported that of thirty-four current "best-sellers" only twelve could be recommended. Criteria for listing are "readability, general interest, and, above all, Christian decency."—Onward

One hundred and twenty-five Negro children from Harlem spent their vacation this past summer in homes of white church folk in the hills of Vermont."

The total planned cost of the post-war programs of Protestant denominations (about $112,000,000) is equal to the cost of only one battleship of the 42,000 ton class.

FELLOWSHIP ECHOES is the name of the monthly paper published by the Youth Fellowship of the Beatrice churches. The two churches in and near Beatrice have organized a Youth Fellowship of the combined churches. This group has carried on projects mutually such as a garden project and meetings. Good idea to broaden the contacts beyond one's own church group!

A banquet was held at the Wayland, Iowa, church for the forty-two young people in October. C.E. officers newly elected are: Virginia Myers, President; Audrey Roth, Vice President; Vernon Nebel, Secretary; Bonnie Elder, Treasurer.

"The most dangerous thing in the world today," says Dr. Frank Laubach, "lies in the whites' trying to keep the colored people of the world from equality with them. . . The next war will be a colored war if it comes in Asia. It is so easy to change the world if we go out humbly and lovingly and ask "What can I do for you?"

Music Master

I was complimenting our church organist on his phenomenal memory for church music, which enabled him, for instance to play practically any hymn that was asked for without reference to a hymnbook.

"Oh, that's nothing," he replied. "Think of the musical memory of a man like Toscanini, who can remember every note of complicated orchestra scores that he has not seen for many years!"

Then he told me an anecdote of Toscanini. A bassoon player came to the great conductor during a rehearsal to say that his instrument was broken and he could not sound E-flat. Toscanini thought a moment, and then said, "That's all right. You can rehearse with us. The note of E-flat does not appear in your music today."—Clark J. Feiler

Church Bulletins

In order to keep in contact with the activities of the local churches and the youth programs being carried on in them, it would be sincerely appreciated if you would send your Church Bulletins to the Editor of the Youth pages, Esko Loewen, R.F.D. No. 2, Newton, Kansas.

"If we work upon marble, it will perish; if we work upon brass, time will efface it; if we rear temples, they will crumble into dust; but, if we work upon immortal souls, if we imbue them with principles, with the just fear of God and love of fellow men, we engrave on these tablets something which will brighten all Eternity."—Webster.

JOTTINGS

—Margarete Horn of the Herold Church, Bessie Oklahoma, 'ast summer wrote thirty-one scriptural, evangelistic and challenging" Christmas poems, which she has published in a booklet entitled "The Saviour Came!" A copy of the booklet may be obtained for thirty-five cents a copy, or three for one dollar by addressing Mrs. Herman Horn, Route 1, Corn, Oklahoma. Rev. C. B. Friesen, Pastor of the Herold Church, reports that Mrs. Horn is a daughter of the late Rev. Michael Klassen, who was the first pastor of the Herold Church.

—Pastors and Other Church Leaders: Copies of the Week of Prayer booklets may be obtained from the Department of Evangelism, 297 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y., for a very reasonable sum. You may want to write for your copies immediately, for this year we do not intend to carry the week of prayer outline in Indiana. We feel that such an outline is in Washington that since the booklets are so low we may prefer to order enough booklets to meet all the needs of their church program.

—Burrton Church, Burton, Kansas: A Thanksgiving service and mission rally were held on November 25, with outside speakers and a fellowship dinner at noon. The Ladies Mission Society gave a mission play in the evening.—Mrs. Dan Penner, Corr.

—First Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: Rev. Ronald von Riesen brought the morning message on November 18. In the evening the staff members of the local Mennonite hospital gave a program the theme of which was "The Art of Christian Living."—Margaret Albrecht, Corr.

—First Church, Halstead, Kansas: On November 18 the C. E. Society gave a program at the Bethel Home for the Aged in Newton. A 7 o'clock supper of pie and "borscht" preceded the annual church business meeting which was held November 14.—R.M., Corr.

—Herold Church, Bessie, Oklahoma: November 12: Elected Rev. C. B. Friesen for another three years at our annual meeting. November 13: Rev. Sol. Mouttet spoke and showed pictures of the Ozark mission work. November 22: Had our Harvest Thanksgiving and Mission Festival on this day. The women have canned 171 quarts of chicken for relief. They intend to can a beef in the near future. The church is also participating in flour and heifer for relief projects.—Mrs. Jacob Penner, Corr.

—Johannestal Church, Hillsboro, Kansas: The recent special services by Rev. Phil A. Wedel were very helpful and inspiring. On Sunday the special music was by the men's chorus of the Alexanderwohl Church. The past five Sundays Rev. J. M. Regier has preached very effectively on Paul's letter to the Ephesians. A mission sale of sewed articles and food is to be held the first week in December. Sunday School problems were discussed at a workers' conference on the evening of November 11.—Corr.

—Grace Church, Padora, Ohio: Rev. Forrest Musser has tendered his resignation to this congregation. It is to become effective January 1, 1946. Rev. Musser leaves here to become the pastor of the Union Congregational Church of Christ at Rockville, Connecticut. Rev. Musser with his family came to Pandora in June, 1941, and for four and a half years he has faithfully and efficiently served the congregation as its pastor. Miss Prudence Gerber of Africa spoke at the annual banquet held by the women and girls. Rev. Michael Ringenberg of the Methodist Church spoke at the fall supper of the Men's Fellowship.—Mrs. S. W. Steiner, Corr.

—First Church, McPherson, Kansas: October 23 we enjoyed a talk and some pictures on the mission work in India. An offering for relief will be held at the Thanksgiving dinner to be held November 25. The C. E. will give a program in the afternoon. Sealed bids were submitted for a chapel at Camp Phillips, but no definite results have been received. At a special business meeting the church decided to conform to the rules of the General Conference in regard to the lodge question.—Mrs. J. W. G., Corr.

—Two hundred sixty eight women registered for the Ninth Annual Meeting of the Indiana All-Mennonite Missionary Union, October 25. Talks were given on: "Relief in Action," "The Debt I Owe," "Indian women I Have Known," and "Glimpses into the Life in Africa." The representatives from eleven Indiana churches, three Ohio churches, and a group from Illinois went on record as opposed to peacetime conscription and recommended that individuals write their congressmen. The body also pledged its support to the M.C.C. relief program. Another resolution called for renewing of zeal in church and missionary work. The final one emphasized a warm welcome to returning service men and encouragement to return to the fellowship of their home congregation. Mrs. Wilmer Shelly of Topeka, Indiana, is chairman for the coming year, and Miss Elva Schrock, Nappanee, is Corresponding Secretary.

—"Mutual Aid in Pioneer Days," is the title of an interesting article being prepared by Melvin E. Gingerich to appear in an early issue of the new, illustrated periodical—Mennonite Life, scheduled to appear about December 1.

—Lorraine Avenue Church, Wichita, Kansas: Dr. J. H. Langenwaller spoke at the young people's Thanksgiving banquet held November 17. His sermon subject for November 25 was "And the People Had a Mind To Build." For the conclusion of the service the congregation proceeded to the site of the proposed new church to break the sod for this new structure.

—Dr. J. H. Langenwaller has accepted the call to the pastorate of the Lorraine Avenue Mennonite Church in Wichita, Kansas. The installation service is to be held Sunday, December 2, at 8: p.m. Rev. D. C. Wedel, pastor of the First Mennonite Church of Halstead, Kansas, and President of the Western District Conference is to bring the message and conduct the installation service. All are heartily invited to both the morning service when Dr. Langenwaller will bring the message, as well as to the evening service.—Clinton Kaufman, Secretary, Board of Deacons.

GOD PUT IT "IN WRITING"

Bible Sunday, which falls on December 9 this year, might well remind us of the history of the Bible and thereby fill us with renewed appreciation and thankfulness for it.

In the beginning there was human life but there were no Scriptures. Later the Hebrews accumulated sacred writings. But the law and the prophets did not have the deep, effective saving power of Him, who was to come.

Then the Word was made flesh. Sinful men and women found their salvation in Christ. At first there was no written New Testament, but the finger of God wrote deeply in the lives of the early witnesses and men and women read what was written there and were saved. God be praised that that writing never entirely disappeared in the history of the Christian Church!

But God did more than that! He put at least part of His revelation "in writing." Oh how much more we would like to know, for instance, about the childhood of Jesus and about the saving power of His ministry and crucifixion. But what a blessing it is to have the records, which we now call the Bible.

As much as we know, at least several decades passed after the ascension of the Christ before there began to be written records centering around the One and Only Way. The records grew. They were collected. They were not in English, but the Word of God was breaking forth through human tongue.

Centuries passed and the common people had little opportunity to read the Bible. Then came the Reformation and a growing number of Bibles from the newly invented printing press. Since then, millions have become Bible-filled. Today we tend to take the Bible for granted, forgetting the tremendous history it has had in coming to be what it is.

The Bible is precious. However, it can be neglected as it is by many. It can be misused as the Scriptures were misused by the Pharisees. Jesus used them aright. Filled with His spirit, we too will use the Scriptures rightly. Filled with His spirit we will ever yearn to know God more fully.

Below we present the Bible readings which have been suggested for the use of Christians everywhere between now, (December 4) and Christmas: (Heb. 11 and 12:1,2) (Matt. 6) (Rom. 8) (Matt. 7) (Psalm 91) (Gal. 6) (Col. 3) (Eph. 4) (Phil. 3) (I Cor. 3) (Phil. 4) (John 15) (Psalm 1) (Psalm 27) (I Cor. 15) (Psalm 46) (Matt. 28) (II Tim. 2) (John 17) (Rev. 22) (Luke 2).

Three Missionaries Leave for India

Today, November 28, three missionaries leave for India, namely Bro. and Sister Curt Claassen and Eva Pauls. The former are new workers.

In view of the fact that four missionaries in India are due to come home within about three months, it was doubly necessary that new recruits should go to fill their places. Dr. and Sister H. E. Dester hope to leave India about March 1, 1946, and Bro. and Sister J. R. Duerksen will very likely come on the same ship.

India calls for another doctor and for two evangelistic couples. We can send them now only one evangelistic couple and no doctor. The need in the Leper Asylum for a doctor is so great, that Bro. Waltner, who has charge of the leper work, has seriously asked himself, whether he should not come home and prepare as a doctor. But who would then fill his place? We are in contact with some doctors, but so far have no definite promise. Let us pray that the Lord may make some of them willing to go to India, at least one of them.—P. H. Richert

IS GOD INTERESTED?

Is God interested in the everyday happenings of our life? Now and then we have such clear evidence that He is.

The Mid-India Representative Council was meeting in Nagpur and I was to go there. At the same time the Yeotmal Convention was to convene and Yeotmal was beyond Nagpur. Mrs. Isaac was going there. Could we perhaps travel together? We had had only one visit since she came back from U. S. A. We agreed to meet in Raipur—that is, I would get on her train there and we could be together.

I went the five miles to Basna by bullock cart to get the bus. It was a charcoal burner, so it took its time making the journey. Sometimes before the temporary bridge is put in across the Mahanadi River, a bus waits on the other side to take the passengers that cross by ferry. If I could take that then I would be in time to take the train on which Mrs. Isaac was to travel.

We reached the river. No coolies to carry the baggage. This meant that there was no bus on the other side. So there was nothing for us to do but to go on to another village on the railroad and take the train the next morning. I would be late to the meetings and would miss my visit with Mrs. Isaac. But what cannot be changed should be cheerfully endured. I had headquarters at a nice Christian home and had a pleasant visit there. Early, at five the next morning, I was called to go to the train.

When I reached the junction I had just time to walk from my train to the next one. I couldn't get into the ladies apartment because the door was bolted from the inside. A Chinese woman, with a very limited use of Hindi, was trying to open it. Then a "foreign" person bent down to slip the bolt. When she raised up you can imagine my surprise and joy to see Mrs. Isaac. She had had to change her plans and had been so sorry she could not send me word. And the Lord had held me back so that we could be together. We embraced, much to the delight of our fellow passengers who wanted to know what relation we were. We told them we were sisters of one faith, which satisfied them. And we had our desired visit.—Christena Duerksen

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH ought to be concerned about the starving millions in Europe. This is the plea of a recent Christian Century editorial, part of which we here reprint:

"Silent concurrence by the churches in murder by starvation makes the church an accessory to the crime. As a result of the Potsdam decisions, millions of Germans are starving now. Before the winter is over, five times as many Germans will die as died in the recent war, according to Bishop Dibelius of Berlin. By no stretch of the imagination can these doomed babies, their mothers and the aged be called war criminals. They have had no trial. What is happening to them is therefore not retributive justice, but murder.

"Is the church to remain silent while wholesale murder by starvation is committed? An individual who knows that a crime is being committed and who does not communicate that knowledge or go to the aid of the person in peril is held legally responsible for his silence. He is held to be an accessory to the crime. Will history try and condemn the Christian church as an accessory to the infamy of Potsdam? It will and should do so unless the churches cry out in the name of the compassionate Christ against this high crime against humanity. It will and should do so unless the churches immediately mobilize all their resources to aid this part of the world Christian community.

"This aid can be given. It can be given by telling as much of the truth as the churches have been permitted to learn. It can be given by immediate, concerted and large scale efforts to breach the wall of silence which is raised by Potsdam around the millions of dead and dying in central Europe. Public opinion in Great Britain has swung in the last three weeks against the Potsdam policy of mass starvation. The bishops of the Roman Catholic Church, meeting in Washington in their annual conference, have just denounced our treatment of the people of Germany, Austria and Hungary 'in a spirit of vengeance.' They declare that 'every report indicates that unless heroic measures are taken at once, millions will die from starvation and exposure during the coming winter. The feeding and clothing and sheltering of these suffering people is not a work which can be left to some future convenient date.' They hold that Congress must promptly appropriate funds for this purpose and that private relief agencies must be freed to do their part. In this category they of course include church relief agencies.

"We rejoice to hear Catholic leadership in America speaking to the government in this unequivocal tone. How long will it be before Protestant leadership summons equal courage?

"Opinion will change here if the people are given the truth. The church dare not withhold what it already knows. Its mission is to speak for humanity. It is commanded to work for forgiveness and reconciliation. If it fails in this crisis, it has not only missed an opportunity to set its record straight before history. It has also betrayed its mandate from Christ who is its Head.

"If every person in America should immediately start doing everything in his power to save the helpless victims of Potsdam, great numbers would die in spite of all that could be done. But the fate of even greater numbers depends upon the American people, and particularly upon the American churches. The churches are the conscience of the nation. That conscience must now speak to President Truman. It must thunder through the quiet corridors of the department of state. It must demand that the United States government order the release of the 200,000 tons of army rations which were sent to Europe for the use of soldiers who have now returned. It must demand that the ban which prevents all private agencies, including the churches, from sending food or other material relief into Germany, be immediately lifted.

"In addition, the churches must use their own facilities with far greater intelligence and devotion than they have yet displayed. Nothing that is being done to aid the people in other countries of Europe should be stopped or diminished in volume. But the same Church Relief Warehouse in New Windsor, Maryland, to which shoes, clothing and blankets are being sent for France and other countries can also take care of shipments for use in Germany when the way opens. So rapidly is public opinion changing even here that it is not impossible that Washington may relent before the churches are ready to act. On the other hand, the most convincing argument that could be used to change official attitudes would be the accumulation in New Windsor of a great stockpile of life-saving supplies ready for shipment. Every church in the country could and should take steps without delay to collect and ship to this warehouse its own sacrificial share of what is so desperately needed."

As much as we know the Mennonite Central Committee stands ready to begin relief work in Germany as soon as permission is given. Surely, the Mennonite Church should make the most of the opportunity when it comes.

MENNONITES THE WORLD OVER

By Cornelius Krahn

Mission in Java and the Dutch East Indies. The Mennonites of Holland did extensive mission work in Java and Sumatra in which they were supported by the Mennonites of Russia and Germany. Even though detailed reports about the mission work during the Japanese occupation are still lacking, the mission work must have suffered very severely. The fate of the mission stations of the Dutch people on these islands will have become even more hazardous now that the natives have arisen to fight for their independence.

A Message from the Pulpits. Holland, too, has its "war criminals," big and small. There was a National Socialist Movement long before Hitler entered the country. After the invasion many Dutch people collaborated. Therefore the prisons are filled, the courts are busy, and the people are avenging collaboration. Nine churches, among them the Mennonites, appealed to the nation to practice justice and mercy. They state, "The churches appeal to the Dutch people concerning the political prisoners and their children, that strict application of justice must be accompanied by the mercy of Christ."

Peter Dyck Lecturing in Dutch. Peter Dyck has begun speaking at meetings of the Mennonites in Holland in their language. He finds some opposition to the "ascetic" and nonresistant American point-of-view. The Mennonites in the Province of Friesland are, however, more receptive. Five young people are said to be considering going to Canada to join the Mennonites there.

"A Christian Anti-militarist without any Mental Reservations" was recently elected as a second minister by the Mennonite Church in the city of Groningen (The Netherlands). The reporter makes the following interesting statement, "We are seeking more than ever before a positive Christian confession and practice and are longing for international contact in these matters that we may rebuild our Mennonite peace organization standing on a firm historical basis and reaching out for world wide activity."

In the Shadow of Death. M. C. Lehman writes from Switzerland: "The Don Suisse (Swiss Relief Organization) are caring for suffering German war prisoners at St. Louis. . . . I have made several visits to the camp at St. Louis and found deplorable conditions. I saw hundreds of men so weak from the lack of nourishment that they could not get up from their straw beds. The International Red Cross and Don Suisse asked me if I would join them in giving money to get milk for these soldiers. It was life and death for the poor fellows, so I made a donation, and the pleasure of helping feed the milk to the men, many of whom are now again in a good condition to digest solid food."

WORLD

Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam and Henry Knox Sherrill, American church leaders, left November 22 for a two-week visit to Germany, where they were to confer with such men as Niemoller, Bishop Theophilus Wurm of Wurtemberg, and Dr. Otto Dibelius of Berlin. Upon their return they are to report on how the American churches can help those of Germany.

Bishop Wurm, in describing the spiritual conflict of the German nation, has suggested that there is a willingness to repent, but that willingness was increasingly counteracted by the impression that in many ways the actions of the Allied Nations did not correspond to their proclaimed ideals.

Four American church leaders, who have returned from a visit to Japan, state that they were very cordially received and that on the whole the Christian Church in Japan weathered the war. The deputation is recommending "that a small initial group of missionaries be sent to Japan as quickly as possible." The visiting churchmen were also received in audience by the Emperor, who asked them about "the possible significance of Christianity in the reconstruction of Japan." The influential Nippon Times commented: "The work of this deputation is bound to mark a significant first milestone on the road of Japan's return to the international fellowship of peace-minded peoples."

The Evangelical Church of Germany has organized itself for such "breadcrust" relief as it can do. The director of Evangelical Church relief work for the British zone writes from Bielefeld that "the population in Bielefeld has no fuel at all." Evangelical Relief is building there and elsewhere sheds 'where the frozen population will be able to get warm.' The town is overrun with refugees from the east. 'In our railway shelter, where we have every night 700 refugees and returned soldiers, we have a terrible picture of the dying of a whole nation. There is hardly a complete family. As a result of an appeal made from the pulpit we have received for these refugees and ex-prisoners of war from Russia bread and other food-stuffs, so that we have been able to give each a piece of bread and butter. It is for us a wonderful thing to see how people who themselves have insufficient food can still give from their poverty for those who are even worse off. If only we could see that the Christian churches of the world have not forgotten us.'—Facts and quotations from the "Christian Century"

"SOUTH OF THE BORDER"

By Mary Becker

Whether the song-writer had plane travel in mind when he wrote the words:

"Over mountain, plain, and sea,
Here am I, O Lord, send me,"

I very much doubt; but these words are a literal expression of the way in which one who travels by air goes forth for the Lord. Since I had never been "up in the air" before, naturally it was with a feeling of joyous anticipation, but also with a little trepidation, that I ascended the steps to the PAA four-motored plane at the airport in New Orleans on October 27, at 2:00 p.m. en punto (just one of the Spanish expressions I have learned). The joy and peace, of course, far outweighed the other feeling, since I knew that the Lord was sending me forth.

The trip was enjoyable from A to Z (I began to wonder why each seat had to be supplied with a heavy paper sack, for it hardly seemed possible that there would ever be occasion for its use.) The travel companions were excellent—seven missionaries in one plane is not the usual thing, I am sure; but that was part of the "cargo" this particular plane carried. I had the pleasure of traveling with five new missionaries, sent out under the Evangelical Union of South America, also to Colombia, as far as Balboa, C.Z., from where they went to Santa Marta, while I continued to Medellin. Among them were Rev. and Mrs. Leonard Hanes of the Immanuel Mennonite Church of Los Angeles and of the First Mennonite Church of Newton, respectively. Miss Frame, a missionary from China, who was sent out by the Presbyterian Board to visit their Latin-American missions, was with us as far as Guatemala City.

It hardly seemed conceivable that we could have made such a radical change as far as environment, climate, people, etc., were concerned within the space of a few hours when at 5:45 we stopped at Merida, Mexico. At Guatemala City we stopped overnight—if one can refer to two hours of sleep as a night! Personally, I would rather have made a tour of the city since it was well lit up and is supposed to be the "garden spot of the world." Since PAA sees to it that all passengers get to the plane at least one hour ahead of the scheduled time for leaving and apparently instructs the hotels to awaken their charges one hour before that, we were called at 3:15 in the morning, in order to be ready for the PAA taxi at 4:15, in order to be ready to get into the plane at 5:30.

Sunday morning dawned beautifully upon us while we were winging our way southward over jungly mountains, tilled plains, winding rivers, peaceful mountain lakes, serpentine roads, doll-sized cities, and often above thick, billowy clouds that looked like oceans of whipped cream (yum-yum!).

I opened my Bible to Psalm 139 and felt that I could not have chosen a more appropriate passage, for the words: "If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there. . . If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me. . . Marvelous are thy works, and that my soul knoweth right well," seemed to be written specifically for me.

Sunday noon, October 28, we arrived in the Canal Zone. Here I had to wait till early Tuesday morning before there was another plane to Medellin. It was very warm and damp in Panama. Most of us were wearing our heaviest suits (in order to get as much as possible into our baggage which is limited to fifty-five pounds) and were sweltering in the heat when we arrived at the hotel; so it seemed exceedingly ironic when the maid told us that the light in the closet was always on to keep our clothes warm! (Of course, we deduced that it was rather to keep them dry.) The stay in Panama was a good introduction to Latin America, and Colombia, in particular.

Early Tuesday morning both the plane and I were ready to make the last lap of about three hours between Panama and Medellin. The terrain was beautiful! For quite a while we followed the Pacific coast and saw mostly thickly wooded land below. Then the view changed; and for some time I had followed with my eyes a winding highway with its hairpin curves up and down the mountains, noticing with interest the farms along the highway, the burros with huge packs on their backs vying with modern trucks and cars on the highway, little realizing how near to Medellin I was. Upon the suggestion of the stewardess I took a seat on the other side of the plane, and there below in a beautiful valley entirely surrounded by mountains lay the city. You cannot imagine the variegated feelings that swept over me when I got my first view of this city after waiting for over a year for the door to open.

(In compliance with the request of the editor of "The Mennonite," I have tried to write an account of my trip to, and first impressions of, the country "south of the border" to which the Lord has brought me.—Mary Becker)

Rev. Gerald Stucky met me at the airport; and after going through customs, I was taken to my present home. Besides the Stuckys, Miss Janet Soldner, and the folks in charge of the language school, there were a few others who were much interested in my arrival—so I paid friendly visits to the Departamento de la Policia and the United States consulate that same afternoon.

And what shall I say about my first impressions of Medellin without tiring you with many little details? I could tell you about the city with its narrow streets, its very narrow sidewalks with the front doors of the houses opening directly upon the sidewalk; the brightly painted wooden (?) busses designed in pre-streamlined days; the avenues of palm trees; the beautiful mansions of the rich; the refreshing little plazas at frequent intervals; the massive churches, elaborate and ornate, but many of them unfinished; and the shining Buicks, Chevrolets, V-8's, etc.

I could tell you about the people on the streets who represent all classes of society—the well-dressed lady who wears either a black hat, dress, shoes, stockings, and gloves or the newest Parisian fashion; the school girls who look neat and trim in their uniform dresses, each school having a particular kind of dress; the university students who sit on the park benches apparently very studious; the farmers who traverse the streets in their bare feet, blankets with a slit opening for the head serving them as overcoat, and “fancy” bags hung around their necks containing the precious “diner” which they have gained from the heavy loads of products which their backs transported to the market in the morning; the barefoot women walking straight and tall with huge loads of fruit, vegetables, or other things on their heads; and ad infinitum.

I could tell you about the large open market where you can buy anything from big bouquets of flowers for nominal prices, candies, bread (not wrapped in waxed paper or sliced), all sorts of fruits and vegetables, shoes, dresses, and dime-store notions to chunks of meat cut as large as you like from the animals suspended from the ceiling.

I could tell you about the food we eat and the care we take in cooking all the vegetables and fruits except those that have good protective coverings and, therefore, are not contaminated from the sewage disposals; about how carefully we use only boiled water; about the fabulous prices they ask for many things—butter, 1.50 pesos (One American dollar equals 1.70 pesos); flour, 30 centavos a pound or 21 pesos for 100 pounds; vegetable shortening (substitute for lard) 24 pesos for 37 pounds; to say nothing of the prices they charge for American products—Rice Krispies, 90; Shredded Wheat, 1.20.

I could tell you about the work in the language school where about twenty of us young people are putting forth noble efforts to learn to wiggle our tongues the Spanish way in order to serve acceptably the people to whom the Lord will send us. After two weeks in language school I, of course, still find it quite frustrating when clerks in the stores or others cannot understand me or else go into long explanations in which they are not careful to use only the words I have learned.

There are many things I could tell you; but it would be more effective if I could show you; therefore, I would extend an invitation to any and all of you to come over for a week's vacation when you get your private planes. In the meantime, will you continue to pray for us that the Lord will anoint our ears to hear exactly the sounds of the language and help our tongues to reproduce that which we hear as we spend our first year here in language study? The Lord bless you all.

A SERMON

*I'd rather see a sermon
Than hear one any day.
I'd rather one would walk with me
Than merely point the way.*

*The eye's a better pupil
And more willing than the ear:
Fine counsel is confusing
But example's very clear.*

*The best of all the preachers
Are the men who live their creeds,
For to see good in action
Is what everybody needs.*

*I'll soon learn to do it,
If you'll let me see it done,
I can watch your hands in action,
But your tongue too fast may run.*

*While the lectures you deliver
May be wise and true,
Yet I'd rather learn my lesson
By observing what you do.*

*For I may understand you
And the advice you give,
But there's no misunderstanding
How you act and how you live.*

OUR MINISTRY OF EDUCATION

By J. H. Langenwalter

Opportunities

Our experiment and the things attempted throughout fifteen months have led to many valuable and encouraging, as well as challenging revelations. Perhaps the best expression regarding this fact came from a member of the new Young People's Committee at the end of three rather long sessions of planning: "Nothing has ever gripped me before like the possibilities of this work."

One of the most hopeful signs is the definite desire for service more than for control. Young people who have had to give much time are willing to give more time to help rebuild a world which has become the victim of too much control, to serve those who are too often called "unfortunates" and to devote more time and real effort for the good of all mankind.

Another hopeful sign is that there are so many of our youth who feel that the best is none too good for the work of a real Christian. They want more training in order that they might make helpful contributions in meeting the needs of the world today.

Our schools are putting forth strong efforts to serve to the best of their abilities. They are offering free tuition to our returning men and are working earnestly and cooperatively in order to be as helpful as possible to their students who face the tasks of the coming generations. These schools need to be understood, appreciated and supported more fully. They are serving our children faithfully. What we do for them, we do for our own children.

The desire for better understanding and for closer cooperation between our people in Canada and the United States is a source of deep gratitude and a challenge to make the most of it for the good of our work—our opportunity to render service for which men may some day thank God sincerely.

These months of service among young and old over large areas of our widely extended field have made one thing clear. We have waited too long and have done too little where the needs are greatest—at home. We need to come to grips with the fact that we owe our own children at least as much as we think we are doing for the children in far off lands. That does not mean that we do less for those afar off but that we do enough for those at our very doors. The story of the doctor who had time for all other patients but had too little time for the members of his own household is not a mere figment of the imagination. It also applies to the work of the churches.

We have ten provincial and district conferences. Each one of them should have a minister-at-large in addition to one for the General Conference as a whole. These should meet at least three weeks each year for fellowship, for definite study and for necessary planning for a growing work. Cost? Yes, it would cost something, but not as much as it costs now because uninformed members of our group are deprived of their possessions by individuals and groups, who are in no way concerned about the welfare of our work.

QUOTE

Errol T. Elliott, Editor of "The American Friend": Jesus' picture of the last judgement brings a severe measurement to our lives. If we really know the meaning of our present days, we know that we are standing at the judgment bar of God. The old patterns of economics, race, class and nationalism are being given a test which they cannot pass. The convulsions of war, riots, strikes etc. etc. are the symbols of an age that is dying. In a new and better age we shall not ask about the rights of Americans, Japanese, Negroes, labor capital but about human rights in the "one world" that has moved nearer to one humanity"

Henry Smith Leiper, Secretary to the American Committee of the World Council of Churches:

"I have a deep concern over the challenge which the dawning of the Atomic Age creates for Christians everywhere. We are in a split or 'atomized' Church. It is an anomaly in the world of atomic energy. Just as national sovereignty and separatism spell ruin politically in this new age, so denominational sovereignty and separatism spell impotence in the spiritual warfare of the Christians. Christ's followers, now divided into three times as many denominations, are hardly in a position to inspire the politicians to seek unity!"

Five hundred professors and other scientific experts, who recently met in Cambridge, Massachusetts, said:

"The only defense against atomic explosives is the prevention of war itself. Mankind cannot afford a war with atomic weapons. The traditional methods of internal policy have not been able to prevent war. Now national sovereignty in its traditional form will have to be sacrificed."

James E. Kwegyir Aggrey, who has been called the Booker T. Washington of Africa, once said:

"You can play a tune of sorts on the white keys, you can play a tune of sorts on the black keys, but for harmony you must use both the black and the white."

Charles De Visscher, former Minister, judge at the International Law Court at the Hague and member of the Belgian delegation at San Francisco:

"To be honest, we all have an almost irrepressible tendency to confound justice with the interests of the state to which we belong: loyalty to our national group seems to us a cardinal virtue. Let us take care: this is a dangerous phenomenon; it shows the union or the fusion of morality and power, of ethics and politics."

John Foster Dulles of the Commission on a Just and Durable Peace in a letter to President Truman:

"You speak of fellowship with other peoples. That, we agree, is the central problem of our time. There are no purely mechanistic solutions of the grave international problems which we face. Adequate international machinery can be developed only under conditions of fellowship."

MENNONITE FELLOWSHIP IN NEW YORK IS ACTIVE

Rev. A. H. Schultz, of the East Swamp Mennonite Church, Quakertown, Pa., was the speaker at the first meeting of the Mennonite Fellowship at the Biblical Seminary, 235 E. 49th St., New York City, Paul F. Barkman, was chosen as president of the organization, Herman Niebhur as vice-president, Harold Buller as field-secretary, and Melva Lehman as Secretary-Treasurer.

The speaker for the second meeting was Miss Helen Nickel, returned missionary from India, who plans to return to India in December. Paul Barkman showed some films of the Grace Children's Home. A letter from Paraguay, in appreciation for the 110 Bibles sent by the Fellowship this summer, was read.

The Mennonite students at Biblical are: Robert Bontrager and William Sictbery, Elkhart, Indiana; Orlando Schmidt, Buhler, Kansas; Verney Unruh, Ritchie, Montana; Harold Buller, Erna Fast, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Friesen, Mt. Lake, Minnesota; Helen Nickel, India; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Barkman, Henderson, Nebraska; and Mrs. Gerald Fisher, Ohio.

Others who have attended the Fellowship meetings are: Miss Louise Sommers and Robert Neuenschwander, students at Columbia University, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Niebhur, Mr. and Mrs. Gerhart Epp, and Rev. J. Irvin Gnagey of the city.

THE READER SAYS

Editor The Mennonite:

In order that God's Church composed of Christ as Head and we as body members be edified; I would like to see an answer to the recent letter in "The Reader Says" concerning certain faults worthy of rebuke, counsel, and advice.

I have heard good sermons on the subject of being "Overtaken in a Fault" and know they are profitable.

So to edify God's Church I believe that those irresponsible for these "sins of omission" as cited by this Brother, will surely explain or admit the fault and all of us will be "restored" in God's sight.

It is being said that there is such a notable "lack for perfection" among present day church members but I trust that Mennonites are still quite free of this fault.

Toward a Bright Future

Calgary, Alberta

Dear Brethren in Christ:

We are pleased to send in a report of the Calgary Mission Station. Feeling weak toward the work that the Lord wanted us to do, we depended on Him for strength to carry on. All praises to Him for what has been accomplished!

Since we have our own church, attendance has been very good; with the exception of rainy days, there are usually from thirty-five to forty grown-ups and thirty children.

The end of the war has brought changes. Some have left Calgary and others are still leaving, there are some of our best singers and Sunday-School teachers among them, so the work is quite hard at times.

We had summer vacation Bible school with the children for ten days in the month of July. Four ladies (students of the Alberta Conf. Bible school) taught the children hymns, Bible verses, and other interesting facts about the Bible. About forty-five pupils were present.

During the month of July we also had the pleasure of having Bro. Neuenschwander in our midst. He preached at the Mission Church one evening, while he was here, I think it would be of great importance if Members of the Mission Board would make occasional visits to this city. It would give the people here an idea of how far-spread the work of the General Conf. is. We would appreciate having Bro. Neuenschwander in our midst for a longer period than just a couple of days.

We are looking forward to having Missionary Brown with us on the eleventh of October. We intend to have our Thanksgiving services on October 7 in the morning and the Lord's supper in the afternoon. We have invited Bro. W. Martens from Grautham to serve for the occasion.

Our Ladies' aid has also been busy, serving, knitting, making quilts, etc. These articles will be sold on Monday evening Oct. 8.

Although we have some benches, we are still in need of more—and also a piano. We would appreciate some Christian literature for the church library.

We have choir practice every Thursday night. Although we are not many who take part, we enjoy singing songs unto the Lord.

I feel if the Lord will be with us and we all try to do our best, Calgary should have a bright future.

Faithfully, your co-worker in Christ,

Nature Makes the Commonplace Beautiful

By Roy Henry

Many of us, as rural young people, often show a feeling of inferiority when we admit that we are engaged in the farming industry. We seem to feel that such a vocation is a bit inferior and rather below the dignity of a truly "respectable" individual. Fortunately, however, many are beginning to see that this occupation has many advantages. One of the many unique contributions of rural life is the blessing which we can enjoy from nature as we live from day to day. Let us consider a few of these gifts from nature.

Here in Kansas, we have the splendor of sunrises and sunsets which most people of the urban districts seldom have opportunity to enjoy. The months of October and November have furnished us with colorful displays which somehow pervade and give color to our very existence. Who of us would trade the dingy haze of the city for the glamor of our own out-of-doors? Our night-skies are also a source of never-ending inspiration to those who take time to "consider" their beauty and meaning. What an opportunity there is for farm young people to study astronomy in their spare time!

The Birds About Us

Another gift which is ours is that of our feathered friends, the birds. Urbanites often travel several miles by trolley in order to enjoy the sight of a few of these wonderful creatures in the parks or to view their mounted bodies in a museum. Others who are more ambitious must hike long distances if they wish to observe them in their natural haunts. It is our privilege to have them at our very doorsteps, in our gardens, and in the fields where we may listen to their songs and calls and observe them at will. Here is another opportunity to develop our interest in bird-study; learning their names, their migratory habits, their songs, etc. With the fields and streams for laboratories, what youth could not benefit from such a readily-available leisure-time activity? A couple of books which will help the beginner to appreciate and identify the birds are: Birds of America, and Roger Tory Peterson's, A Field Guide to Western (or eastern) Birds.

Wild Plants and Flowers

The field of botany is another area which rural young people can explore. Where could one find a better place to start and extend a collection of various flowering plants, "weeds," grasses, etc., than on the farm? Various projects such as a wild-flowering plant garden, tree-planting, exhibits, and others would not only be enjoyable for the hobbyist but would also prove stimulating for the community. Various books and pamphlets can be obtained which will help in such endeavors.

Beauties on the Farm

Some complain that the farm is a drab place to spend one's life. They long for the "color" and excitement of the gay whiteway. Here, too, there are those who appreciate the drama being enacted on the farm far more than the canned "glamour" of the cinema. Surely the struggle which the farmer must carry on to produce crops and livestock can be one of real interest to one who is devoted to his lifework. The variety of the changing seasons with their unforgettable scenes is another part of our legacy as agriculturists. For who can forget the pictures presented by a field of blossoming clover, a herd of dairy cows grazing on a hillside pasture, a flock of wild geese winging its way through the dusk? These and myriads of other scenes not only furnish us with

ONE OF THE GREAT THRILLS IN LIFE is to discover that you do not have to go beyond your own home and community to find riches and beauty in life. The old tale of the stores of riches lying at our own doorstep is eternally true. It is there and no amount of seeking it elsewhere will find it for us. For it is within us. Our lives are made whole only when we find that the power for completeness comes not from outward conditions or outward things, but from our inner spiritual nature. We need only to surrender ourselves to the life of the Spirit and we discover treasures of great riches.

The accompanying article, NATURE MAKES COMMONPLACE THINGS BEAUTIFUL, points out how simple it is for us to find great joy in God's bounteous nature which lies all about us. Indeed, great riches do lie at our doorstep! We need only open our eyes!

fond memories, but can provide the amateur painter with inspiring material for his canvas. We need more young people who are aware of the many opportunities afforded by farming. Too long we have apologized for our rural background and vocation and have envied the city-dweller who has access to the parks and museums. We have been all too prone to place a lot of value on things which are surrounded by costly buildings, forgetting that the greatest pieces of creation are not enclosed by such artificial barriers. For what art gallery can enclose a Kansas sunset? Or what taxidermist can duplicate the order and beauty of a bird or animal in its natural habitat? It is time that we get over our inferiority complex and face our lifework more realistically. We should use our talents to make the rural community the blessing to mankind which it is destined to be.

A Cowboy's Definition

A Christian cowboy out in the West had been trying to define the phrase "serving the Lord;" the result was as follows: "Lots o' folks that would really like to do something think that servin' the Lord means shoutin' themselves hoarse praisin' His Name. Now, I'll tell you how I look at that. I'm working here for Jim. Now if I'd sit around the house tellin' what a good fellow Jim is, and singin' songs to him and gettin' up in the night to serenade him, I'd be doin' just like what lots of Christians do; but I wouldn't suit Jim, and I'd get fired mighty quick. But when I buckle on my straps and hustle among the hills and see that Jim's herd is all right, not sufferin' for water and feed, or bein' off the range and branded by the cattle thieves, then I'm servin' Jim as he wants to be served." It must be confessed that, barring certain idiosyncrasies of thought and phrase he seems to have come pretty near the root of the matter.

Would You Be Beautiful?

*Beautiful eyes are those that see
Godlike qualities in humanity.*

*Beautiful lips are those that speak
Words of kindness to all they meet.*

*Beautiful faces are those that wear
Whole-souled honesty written there.*

*Beautiful hands are those that labor
In deeds of mercy to their neighbor.*

*Beautiful persons are those who care
And humbly serve him in faith and prayer.*

Beautiful souls are those who give Cheer and comfort while they live.

"It Is Better To Light a Candle"

We are living in an age of darkness. Future generations will likely read their history books and look upon this period as we do when we look back upon the French Revolution of 1790 to 1815. This era will read as being one of unusual destructiveness, cruelty, suffering, force and might. Stories of amazing forces hurled against each other will undoubtedly be told. During such an upheaval or revolution as this, almost all people become involved one way or another. The influences of it reach out into all of life's activity, thinking, and even into one's spiritual life. The darkness of violence, bitterness, and hate is abroad during these days of grief and suffering.

Sometimes we like to point at the darkness about us. We like to point at it explaining what is wrong, who made it wrong, how it should have been done and assuming, of course, we are the ones who could make it right. Such, at times, is our spirit whether the darkness be the darkness of a war weary and war torn world, the darkness of an erring leadership, or the darkness of misunderstanding, blindness, and dissension within our own group.

An ancient Chinese proverb says, "It is better to light a candle than to curse the darkness." Indeed, we could spend all our lives pointing to and condemning the darkness about us. Anyone can, and with little effort, find darkness nearby. In a world of groping, sinful, puzzled people reaching out for one popular idea or machine after another in order to save themselves, it is easy to find darkness. It is all about us and in our lives as well.

It is not so easy to light a candle in the darkness. Lighting a candle takes energy and effort on our part—pointing to darkness is a lazier, much easier thing to do. It is much easier to say, "That's the wrong way to do it" than to say "What would you think of doing it this way?" One way we curse the darkness of error, the other way we light the candle leading to a new and better way.

The problem we face has not changed, but, instead, we have changed our attitude from one that is negative and 'tearing down' to a positive, upbuilding spirit. Thus we can grapple with darkness and drive it away with light!

Such a spirit of facing darkness with a light and not with a curse is sorely needed by us in all we do. Thus we can show the way to lost, seeking souls. We can, regardless of our circumstance, show our faith to be a real upbuilding and living one. We can face the complex problems of life in a way that Christ's love shines forth wherever we go, for it was He who said, "Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house." Matt. 5:15.

We the Mennonite Youth

By Elmer Ediger

Perhaps your experience has been similar to mine. Naturally we think of ourselves as youth in the Mennonite church. But do we think of ourselves as a group who, by being Christian youth and by being in the Mennonite church, might be a vital force in the work of God's kingdom? I had thought of this in general, but had never stopped until recently to analyze how this might come to be. Certainly we can make a worthwhile contribution as individuals of the local church, but actually the church does not have the opportunity to use us as a vital force unless we are organized to work as a group of our age level. In most churches we do have organizations of which youth is a part—usually the Christian Endeavor. We hear complaints that interest is low, that it needs to be revived. What is it that we lack, that we are not as yet what might be called a vital force? How do we make our organization in the local church, in the district, in the General Conference become a live channel for the vital force that Mennonite youth can be?

Our Young People's Union, of which you as a local group are the foundation, is planning a series of YPU Leaders' Institutes, one or more to every district. In the Eastern District two of the approximately four or five half day sessions have already been held on different Saturday afternoons. Arrangements are just being started in some of the other districts. At these institutes we gather as youth and adult advisors for workshop discussions to answer some of the questions I am suggesting below. (Questions were suggested by another denominational youth handbook.)

(1) Why? Why am I in this organization? Have we merely taken for granted that we must do this because it is expected of us? What do we expect to happen as a result of our meetings, activities? Is our program "making a difference in the lives" of those in our meetings? What are we hoping to accomplish not only in our own lives but in the work of God's Kingdom? We must work together to help each other grow so that we may better serve our Leader, Jesus Christ, in bringing God's kingdom on earth as it is in heaven. We want to carry out Christ's challenge "Seek ye first the Kingdom and his righteousness."

(2) Who? Who are we, the Mennonite youth? Earlier some of us thought that the Christian Endeavor in our church is the Mennonite youth. We thought in terms of the Sunday evening meeting group as being the organization with whom we work. It is somewhat frustrating however to do thus because often the local C. E. does not have a youth section. Often it has youth leadership, but the C. E. is for everyone in the church. It is becoming more and more clear when we say we are work-

—"NEITHER DO MEN .LIGHT A CANDLE, and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house." How can you and I put our candles, the vision we see, on a candlestick? How can we feel that the light and hope that is ours can be given to others? How can we share the joy, love and faith in Christ which it is our privilege to have? Perhaps you have felt need for an adequate answer to that question?

Certainly if we are the light about which Christ is speaking, then the Church is the candlestick from which our light can shine. For by each of us working together, we can make the message of love and peace through Christ shine forth. The article Elmer has written suggests some ways of our organization achieving this purpose. It is a challenge to the youth of the church to express themselves actively.

ing with the YPU that we must not confine ourselves to thinking of the C. E. organization. Instead we must think of youth, those between the ages of approximately fourteen and twenty-five, not only when they are in our Sunday evening meeting but wherever they are.

(3) What? What are we trying to do? In our Eastern District Institute we came to the conclusion that youth needs guidance in five vital areas of experience: 1. worship, 2. study, and learning, 3. play, 4. mission and service, and 5. personal Christian habits, life.

(3) When? When do we have time to guide youth in all of these areas of experience? Again we ask, can all of this be accomplished in the time that we are using at present? If the Christ and the Church are to be the center of the lives of our Mennonite youth then we must take the necessary time. What possibilities are there?

(5) How? After asking four questions concerning ourselves as a youth organization in the local church—Why? Who? When?—then we come to the one we often try to answer first. How can we give youth guidance in the five areas we suggest as being necessary in order to make Christ the Lord of all of our life? Briefly we can list about four aspects that need to be examined carefully in our own local organization: (1) Leaders, (2) Places, (3) Materials, (4) Organization.

If we want to be a vital force as a Mennonite youth we will need to decide whether we want to take the time to consider the above, and then whether we will have youth leaders, and adults who will devote themselves to the cause. We pray that the Holy Spirit quicken you.

Letter from Rosthern

By Helene Peters

Greetings in the matchless name of Jesus Christ! To our friends everywhere, from the Bible School in Rosthern, Saskatchewan, Canada.

"Apply thine heart unto instruction and thine ears to the words of knowledge." Prov. 23:12.

On October 31, 1945, a gathering of some forty young people, as well as a few older ones, met in the main classroom of the Rosthern Bible School to open the 1945-46 winter term. After a warm welcome from the three full-time teachers, Rev. John G. Rempel, Rev. J. G. Schmidt, and Rev. Menno Toews, we heard several other inspiring addresses from Rev. Jacob Gerbrandt, secretary-treasurer for the Bible School and Rosthern Academy, Rev. Jacob Nickel, Rev. J. H. Peters and Rev. H. T. Klassen, President of the Board of Directors. What a blessed privilege it is to be back again, studying the wonderful Word.

Some day I hope we will have our own building and dormitory. At present, however, we will try to be satisfied with this one, which was formerly a hospital and later on was purchased by the Colonization board for a tentative immigrant home.

Since the school was once a hospital, there are a number of bedrooms which have not been changed, so about 22 of the girls live here. There are also two classrooms, a kitchen and dining room. The latter is also used as a classroom for the third and fourth year students. The boys live on the Mennonite Youth Farm, about one mile south of Rosthern.

Classes begin with Morning Devotion at 8:45. Classes start at 9 and close at 4 with an intermission of one and a half hours at noon. Some of the subjects are: Synthetic Study of the Old Testament, Life of Christ, Missions, Hymnology, Sunday School, Bible Exegesis, Theology, Spiritual Life, Eomiletics, Catechism, Bible Geography, singing and Mennonite History. These subjects are taught by the teachers mentioned above and the two part-time teachers Rev. C. Boldt, and Rev. J. Penner.

We have singing twice a week, and these are, perhaps, the best times of the week for most of the students. How we love to sing praises to our Lord in the grand old hymns of faith.

Every Saturday evening at 7:30, the Bible School students and usually a number of visitors, gather in the main classroom for Prayer meeting. This, as a rule, is led by Rev. Schmidt, though the opening is quite frequently made by a student. After we have sung a few hymns and heard the message, we go to prayer. Oh, what a blessed time we have then in fellowship with our Lord, and with each other, far, far closer than we have in our ordinary every-day contacts. Sometimes, too, we have a testimony meeting and what a wonderful joy it is to hear of the answers to prayer a number have had, and, especially, when one or more of the students tell of having found their Saviour. That, to us, is joy in its fullest measure.

That is all for this time. Good-bye, and may God bless you, one and all.

"ENGLISH NO SPIK!"

by Jay Hostetler

Since we have grown up in America, we do not find it very difficult to speak correct English. But there are many people in other countries who find that English is one of the most difficult languages to master.

For instance, the majority of foreign languages do not have two or more pronunciations for the same letter or group of letters, as we do in English. "Gh" in "tough" is quite different form "gh" in "through." That is the reason they sometimes stumble over a word like "sow." Is it a pig or what the farmer does with his wheat in the spring?

Students in India especially find English hard to learn, and although they often laugh at our mistakes in Hinde, I think we have the last laugh when they try our tongue. The following way is typical of the Indian High School student.

The Cow

The cow is a wonderful animal, also he is qudruped, a because he is a female he gives milk, but he will only do so when he has got child.

He has four legs altogether, two are forwards and two are afterwards.

His whole body can be utilized for use, more so the milk, what it cannot do? Various ghue, butter, cream, curds, whey, khoa and condensed milk, and so forth.

Also he is useful to cobbler, water mans and mand-kind generally. His motion is slow only that is because he is of amplitudinous species.

He is the only animal that extracts his feeding, after eating, then afterwards he eats by his teeth who is situated inside of his mouth.

He is incessantly grazing on the meadow, in grass his only attacking and defending weapons are his horns, especially so when he is with child.

This is done by lowering his head, whereby he causes the weapons to be paralled to the ground of the earth, and instantly proceeds with great velocity forwards.

He has got tail also, it has hair on the end of the other side, this is done to frighten the flies, which alights on his whole body and chastizes him unceasingly whereupon he gives hit with it.

At night times he reposes by going down on the ground, and then he shuts his eyes, not like his relative the horse, which does not do so.

This is the cow.

"English No Spik!" is by Jay Hostetler of Powellsville Camp Maryland.

RELIEF

Door Opening in China

S. F. Pannbecker and P. P. Baltzer are in Chungking and have negotiated for the opening of a relief project in the province of Honan. A cable requests that workers, funds, and equipment be sent immediately. Several of the China appointees now waiting in India, Lawrence Burkholder, Clayton Beyler, Wilhelmina Kuyf, and Titus Lehman, will be sent as soon as their passports are validated and transportation is available. Additional workers will also be appointed and sent from America. As the groundwork is laid let us continue to pray for the Lord's direction that an effectual witness may be established in this needy country.

Clothing Shipments to France

During the past month shipping space has been allotted for the sending of a large amount of clothing, shoes, and soap to Western Europe from M.C.C. warehouses in United States and Canada. These materials should arrive at Mennonite centers in Holland and France and be distributed before the colder winter months arrive.

A large shipment of clothing, weighing 35,784 pounds and valued at $42,556.44, left the warehouse at Akron for France on November 21. A shipment of soap, weighing 861 pounds and valued at $372.20 was also sent to France on November 20. Both of these shipments are designated for distribution from the Mennonite center at Chalon.

Health of Europe Director Improved

Samuel Goering, director of the Mennonite relief program in Northwest Europe, who was stricken with arthritis in Paris while on his way to Switzerland, reports that his condition has improved although he has not fully recovered. He is proceeding to Basel where he will reside for some time.

Assisting Stateless People

Marie Brunk, one of the four remaining Mennonite relief workers in the Middle East with UNRRA, serves in Cairo in the section for displaced peoples. In a letter, dated November 1, she describes her present service:

"Our section handles the problems of potentially stateless people who hope to find a country which will admit them and allow them to become citizens. Each case must be dealt with individually because there are no two cases alike. We first have the person desiring to emigrate interviewed so that we can see if there really is any hope for their migration to the country they desire to become permanent citizens of, such as the U.S.A., South Africa, or Australia. Then we give them technical advice on what they must do and which documents they will need to enter that country. After all the documents are completed and visas and passports are procured, then we must find shipping for these people. We appeal to priority boards to be lenient with the poor refugees. Occasionally we get a family off to South Africa, such as I did last week. It really is a most exciting moment when you manage to arrange a passage for someone."

French Center Gets Under Way

Henry Buller, in charge of Mennonite relief in France, writes in a recent letter concerning the activity at the Chalon Center:

"Counting John Fretz, there are now ten members in the French unit, a very nice increase since last March. The extra work and noise around the center are certainly welcome—especially the noise of B. F. Hartzler getting the place organized and fixed up with hammer and saw. The trucks from England arrived here at Chalon on Monday evening, October 29. Since that time John Fretz and Robert Goering have been putting motorbikes and bicycles together."

C. P. S.

C.P.S. Releases

The systematic release of C.P.S. men continues and is now affecting assignees with four years of camp experience. As of November 21, the number of men discharged from Mennonite camps by this method, including both the over-age and the four-year men, stood at 175. Fifty-three of these men were assignees with four years experience.

An additional 111 men in Mennonite camps will be eligible for release before the end of the year as the result of a recent decision by Selective Service to discharge assignees thirty-eight years old, those thirty-five to thirty-seven with two years of service, and those with four years of service as of December 31, 1945.

Smoke Jumper Camp to Close

The rumors that C.P.S. 103, Huson, Montana, the Forest Service camp of parachute firefighters, is to close have now been officially verified. According to recent word from Selective Service this camp will close on December 15. There is likelihood, however, that C.P.S. assignees with three and four years of camp experience will remain until they are discharged. Smoke jumping as a means of fighting forest fires, however, will not be discontinued, but discharged service men are becoming available for the continuance of this project.

BETHANY MENNONITE CHURCH

We have been very fortunate to have had a minister to break to us the bread of life from Sunday to Sunday, as we are still without a regular pastor.

Our Christian workers programs, are held once a month. A monthly mission program is sponsored by the ladies' mission society. On November 4 the children's project is to be terminated. The half dollar invested during the summer is to be brought in and sent to some mission enterprise.

Our delegate to the Western District Conference gave us his report the following Sunday morning.

The weather has been rainy, making it very difficult for the farmers to sow wheat. Some fields are still to be plowed and further prepared for seeding. (October 28)—Joe P. Krehbiel, Corr.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH SUMMERFIELD, ILLINOIS

August 26th we observed Mennonite Education Sunday. Rev. Carlus C. Basinger, son of our pastor, brought the message. He emphasized the fact that our Christian colleges have a great responsibility in stressing the importance of the spiritual development of life. Carlus is at present working on his Doctor of Philosophy degree at Chicago University, and at the same time he is pastor of a congregation at Malta, Illinois. Rev. Basinger's son Laverne of Quincy, Illinois, also brought us a helpful message, while here on a visit. During the absence of our pastor, two Sundays, the Christian Endeavor Society and the Young Ladies' Bible Class had charge of morning services.

Our church has been taking a special quarterly offering for our C.P.S. camps and also a quarterly offering for Bluffton College. A teachers' training class is being conducted by the pastor. The Missionary Society Ladies did some canning for the C.P.S. camps, also prepared Christmas boxes for relief, and collected clothing for the M.C.C.

The Young Ladies' Bible Class has been getting out a small paper which is sent to all our young men in the camps.—Corr.

COLLEGE AND SEMINARY NEWS

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

Suggestions are being made to the churches that Christian Education be remembered in making White Gifts at Christmas time. If definite projects are desired, suggestions will be made upon request. Individuals, too, are reminded that the dead line for making gifts, which will be counted as deductions from income tax for the current year, is approaching. Prayers of friends of Christian education are particularly requested that capable and consecrated individuals may be found to add to the staff. A number of such are needed within the next year. There is an immediate need for a field secretary, to represent the cause of the college before the people, and particularly for student solicitation work.

BETHEL COLLEGE

The fifty-eighth meeting of the Bethel College Corporation, an exclusively Mennonite organization, was held on November 23, with a good representation of votes. Rev. J. M. Regier conducted devotionals and Rev. D. C. Wedel, chairman, gave a short address on Hos. 4:6—"My people are destroyed by lack of knowledge." The business session was devoted chiefly to the report of the President of Bethel College and its six supplementary reports on such items as religious life, core curriculum, and housing. P. K. Regier was elected to the Board of Directors from the Pacific Conference, P. H. Richert from Western District Conference, and J. M. Regier from the Corporation. Immediately after adjournment the Board met for reorganization. D. C. Wedel, Arnold Funk, and J. M. Regier serve on the Committee on Teachers; and the Committee on Finances is made up of C. H. Goering, Gerhard Zerger, and P. F. Quiring. From this Executive Committee D. C. Wedel was re-elected president of the Board.

JOTTINGS

Reverend Gerhard Friesen, who was with the group of seventeen men who left Newton on November 14 to serve as attendants for the shipment of livestock to Europe, reports that after their arrival at New Windsor, Maryland, the group was divided into two sections. Included in his section were W. E. Ratzlaff, H. D. Unruh, and A. O. Decker, all of Meno, Oklahoma, and J. H. Decker, Newton, Kansas. This group left November 21, from Brooklyn, New York, with a shipment of 790 horses bound for Danzig. The remainder of the group, under the direction of Ernest Bachman, sailed for Yugoslavia with the shipment of cattle November 23.

—First Church Wadsworth, Ohio, has a pipe organ fund that has passed the $1,500 mark.

—East Swamp Church, Quakertown, Pa., The average attendance out of a Sunday School enrollment of two hundred is 160 to 170. Children with no other church connection attend the school. The Senior Intermediate and Junior C.E.'s promote mission projects. They meet on the first and third Sundays of the month, leaving the other two to preaching services. The church gives for relief. It has purchased two large lots for a parsonage site. It is also considering a new heating unit and a public address system with hearing aids for the somewhat deaf. Of twenty men in service none has been a casualty.—Facts reported by Rev. A. H. Schultz, Pastor.

—Deep Run Church, Bedminster, Pa., "Our new pastor, J. Herbert Fretz preached his first sermon for us on November 18. He called it "Christian Preaching" and based it on II Cor. 4:5, "For we preach not ourselves but Christ Jesus our Lord, and ourselves your servants for Jesus sake."—Corr.

—First Church, Berne, Indiana: On November 18 the church gave a formal welcome to the new pastor, Olin A. Krehbiel, and family. One of the deacons, E. W. Baumgartner, made some welcoming remarks. Two telegrams from the former pastor, Dr. C. H. Suckau, were read, one addressed to the congregation and the other to the pastor. Various organizations rendered special musical numbers. Speakers at the evening service were Rev. and Mrs. Andrew Losier from Africa. Mrs. Losier is a member of this church.—Martha Gilliom, Corr.

—Rev. George Kopper has resigned as pastor of the Mennonite church at Arlington, Kansas, and has accepted a call from the church at Monroe, Washington. The Koppers planned to leave Kansas November 26. Rev. Kopper served at Arlington for a little over ten years.

—Winnipeg, Manitoba: The newly purchased Bethel Mission Church was dedicated November 11. The following Sunday Rev. Isaac I. Friesen was ordained as elder of the congregation.

—The churches in the Pandora-Bluffton area have worked together on European relief. The Amstutz cannery donated its equipment and about forty volunteer workers canned 175 chickens, six hogs, five beefs, fruits, and vegetables—a total of 6,403 large cans. Together with individual donations, over eight thousand cans were transported by trucks to Akron, Pa. Wheat donations and money to buy wheat have been collected for two car loads. A generous amount of cash has also been sent to headquarters with which to buy other foods. A carload of heifers will be sent to Europe, in early December, in cooperation with the Church of the Brethren.—L. I. S. Corr.

—Immanuel Church, Minnesota: Rev. Paul Kuhlman of Omaha, Nebraska, conducted special meetings from November 29 to December 2, the day of our mission festival. Galatians was the subject for study.

—Martha Baerg, Corr.

—Gospel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minn.: At our harvest mission festival, held Thanksgiving Day, Rev. Elmer Dick spoke on "Giving Thanks for Religious Freedoms" and Rev. and Mrs. H. J. Brown stressed thankfulness, praying, giving, and going in their talks. The congregation enjoyed a fellowship dinner at noon.—Elizabeth Lohrentz, Corr.

—The Second Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, recently contributed sixteen hogs and a quarter of beef for European relief. The hogs weighed from three hundred to five hundred pounds and resulted in over six hundred quarts of canned meat and some ninety gallons of lard. The facilities of the Lincoln, Nebraska, Community Cannery were used. Cash contributions for the purchase of hogs were made by those who had none to offer. Prof. B. Bargen of Bethel College recently brought us several inspiring messages, and Dr. Cornelius Krahn of Bethel is giving us a series of illustrated lectures on Mennonite history at the present time (November 24).—W. C. A., Corr.

—Grace Church, Enid, Oklahoma: Our mission Society gave a program on the evening of Thanksgiving Day with Rev. Henry Hege of Corn, Oklahoma, as guest speaker. Our pastor, Rev. Ben Rahn, was called to preach at the Ebenezer Church at Bluffton, Ohio, for one Sunday several weeks ago. On November 25 our C.E. gave a program at the Saron Church, Orienta. December 2nd they go to the New Hopedale Church, Meno. Two new church members bring our membership up to sixty-two. This is an increase of twenty-four during the last year or an increase of 60 per cent.—Corr.

—Zoar Church, Goltry, Oklahoma: Our meetings, conducted by Rev. P. J. Boehr, closed with a mission festival on the evening of Thanksgiving Day. In previous years the mission society had mission sales. This year they adopted a different project instead. Children under ten years were given banks for their savings. Those above ten were given fifty cents to increase in some way. Some raised chickens, one tomatoes and some calves which fathers sold to them, etc. On Thanksgiving night their gifts added to those of the adults totalled eight hundred dollars, more than double the income of the mission sales. Our church canned over four hundred quarts of fruit and sent 155 pounds of new and used clothing for relief.—Mrs. J. W. Bargen, Corr.

—Hanston Mennonite Church, Hanston, Kansas: November 1: Visit by Miss Martha Burkhalter. November 3-8: Dr. J. H. Langenwalter gave us very interesting and most helpful talks on the first six chapters of Acts. The Ladies Aid Society has sent large amounts of clothing and shoes for relief. We made money contributions towards the C.P.S. canning project. At present we are gathering clothing, kitchen utensils, canned vegetables and fruit for a local family of eight, who lost all when their house burned. A relief offering on November 25 amounted to $267. On the same day we took a special offering during the Sunday School hour for our Western District retreat grounds. This amounted to $26.46.—Mrs. A. S. Bechtel, Corr.

—The Bethany Church, Freeman, South Dakota, lost their church building by fire on November 4, due to an overheated furnace pipe. For the present services are being conducted in the college gymnasium. Plans for a new church building are under way. The building and contents were covered by four thousand dollars insurance. This will pay but a small part of the loss. Dr. J. E. Hartzler was guest speaker at the harvest festival. The mission offering totalled $428. A clothing collection for children in devastated Europe, valued at nearly four hundred dollars, was the Thanksgiving Day project of the mission society.—J. M. Hofer, Corr.

—Week of Prayer booklet (thirty-two pages) may be ordered for four cents per copy in any quantity from the Department of Evangelism, 297, Fourth Avenue, New York 10, N.Y. As stated before we do not intend to run the outline of this booklet this year, for we feel that ministers will prefer to get sufficient copies for use in their churches.

—Dr. A. Warkentin, who was operated recently, is doing very well and is receiving visitors. So reports Willard Wiebe, student at the Mennonite Biblical Seminary, Chicago.

—The Eastern District Brotherhood is collecting $2000 to purchase food, etc., for Holland.

—A church architect warns against getting contracts at the present time because of excessive costs of labor and material. He suggests that construction should proceed only when it can be done at the approximate cost of thirty cents per cubic foot.

—Rev. E. J. Miller was the main speaker at the Idaho C.E. Convention, which recently met at Aberdeen. Mrs. Miller gave religious art interpretations.

—First Church, Hillsboro, Kansas, cleared $1258.09 by serving food at the county fair held in October.

—The Stirling Avenue Church, Kitchener, Ontario, had a missionary convention from November 11-18. Miss Martha Burkhalter was one of the speakers. Seventy-five children and young people of this church engaged in special mission projects this summer.

—Walton Church, Walton, Kansas: Miss Martha Burkhalter spoke twice to us on November 25. Rev. Ronald von Riesen has enrolled for the winter quarter at the Central Baptist Theological Seminary, Kansas City, Kansas.

—Bethel Church, Winton, California: Rev. J. M. Franz brought the messages at our harvest and mission festival. One hundred sixty dollars was given for relief and sixty for missions. Union Thanksgiving services were held in our church. Rev. and Mrs. J. P. Glanzer are looking for new living quarters. The house in which they lived has been sold. The Andrew J. Wedels, formerly of Fairview, Oklahoma, and Ernie Smiths formerly from Dallas Oregon, have joined our church.—N. A. Koehn, Corr.

—The Bethel Church and the First Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, have raised $3,385 for five carloads of flour, which are to be sent to Holland.

—Miss Helen Nickel is planning to sail for India during the first week in December. At present she is at Biblical Seminary, New York.

—The Mountain Lake Ministerial Association is planning a religious census on Sunday School and church attendance and church membership or preference.

—An average of $52.56 per member is the giving record for the past year of the Bethel Church, Mountain Lake.

—First Church, Aberdeen, Idaho: Rev. H. N. Harder is spending this weekend (25th) at Caldwell, Idaho, visiting a group of Mennonites who have settled in that thriving and fruitful area. It is hoped that a new Mennonite congregation may be formed in this community. The C. P. S. boys from Downey, Idaho, rendered a fine sacred concert in our church this Sunday evening. This is probably the last time this group will appear here as the Downey camp is to be closed in December.—J. E. Toevs, Corr.

—The Fairfield, Pa., Church has had the first of a series of "missionary and educational film evenings."

—Bethany Church, Quakertown: The Union Thanksgiving service of the Swamp charge was held in our church. On November 25 Miss Helen Nickel spoke at the thank-offering service arranged by the mission society.—Mrs. Ed. K. Stoneback, Corr.

—Johannesthal Church, Hillsboro, Kansas, enjoyed a very challenging Thanksgiving message brought by Dr. L. C. Kreider of Bethel College. The church is participating in the community flour for relief project. Two carloads have been sent, and two more are to be sent.—Corr.

—The Buhler, Kansas, community is sending seven carloads of flour for relief.

—Elbing, Kansas: The Missionary Church, the Gnadensburg Church, and the Zion Church have contributed enough wheat to make two carloads of flour for relief.

—Hebron Church, Buhler, Kansas: Dr. E. G. Kaufman, Dr. H. A. Fast, and Rev. J. M. Regier will be the speakers at the speakers at the mission festival to be held December 2.

BULLETIN SERVICE BEGINS NEW SERIES

The Church Bulletin Service is beginning a new series of the popular "Beacon lights on Mennonite History" feature. The new series is entitled "Menno Simons and The Scriptures." Each Sunday a brief paragraph appears on such a topic as: "The Scriptures," "Sin," "Repentance," "The New Birth," "Faith and Works," "The Church," "Brotherhood," "Faith," "Church Discipline," "Missions," "Human Warfare," "Non-resistance and Peace," "Religious Liberty," and "Education."

This series of brief "Spotlights" is one of the most cherished features of the Church Bulletin Service in the opinions of churches now using this service. The series is prepared by Cornelius Krahn expressly for the Church Bulletin Service and appears in no other church publication.

The Church Bulletin Service is put out by the Secretarial Bureau, North Newton, Kansas. The art work for these bulletins is done by Mrs. Ed. Miller of Lind, Washington. The new 1946 series of write-ups is now in process of preparation.

NORTH NEWTON, KANSAS, DECEMBER 11, 1945

NUMBER 49

ONE FELLOWSHIP

We have read Wilkie's idea of "One World." Another book has been written called "One Nation." It is good to have the concept of oneness stressed. There have been too many divisions and local jealousies in our world. But the world may be held together, at least temporarily, by fear, political pressure, armed force, or economic need. There is a higher goal, it is the goal of ONE FELLOWSHIP.

One fellowship is not a superficial oneness, it involves common feeling, common concern, common love, a realization of common need and destiny. It includes what one veteran expresses as the conviction that men everywhere are the same, whether enemy or friend, with the same general needs, desires, ambitions, and patterns of reaction.

Until this concept of one fellowship becomes active, we will not have real and enduring peace. The greatest single force in bringing about this spiritual unity is Christianity. The realization that we are potentially equal, children of a common creator, who remains the sovereign God of all, is a unifying factor which demands attention. When a German woman heard American soldiers singing the doxology, she remarked, "We sing that too." That unifies the spirit.

If we would unify the spirit of the world through Christ, we must not only talk but act Christian. We cannot do that by granting our former enemies only a starvation diet of 1,200 calories when 2,000 are needed to sustain life, while we fatten and have as one of our greatest concerns the quickest possible end of food rationing. We must show Christian love. Love means action. It implies help to those in distress, friend or foe. "If thine enemy hunger, feed him" (Romans 12:20). "Whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother hath need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him." (1 John 3:17).

Christianity is global. It recognizes neither race, nationality, nor enemy. It is a universal fellowship.

In Christ there is no East or West
In Him no North or South
But one great fellowship of love
Throughout the whole wide earth.

To help to bring about this Christian fellowship of love is one of our major concerns. We have an opportunity to do this through the influence which we have upon government as citizens of a democracy, in giving for relief, in teaching the universal character of Christianity, in conducting our business affairs with genuine concern for the welfare of others, and in the promotion of Christian missions. The real solution to the unrest in the world is a Christian fellowship of love. We must teach and practice Christianity if that is to be brought about.—Reprinted from the "Bluffton College Bulletin."

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

Finally Contact China Missionaries

Yesterday (November 27) two letters arrived from the sisters in China, Goertz and Regier, saying that they finally had received the first word from our Board, namely a short cablegram sent November 5. It made them very happy, because it was the first word they had received from the Board in three years. All other efforts by the Board to send them word by letter and by cable had failed so far. They are both well and anxious to go to the stations from Peking, but transportation is blocked. We have cabled them some money, and hope they will get it. So far they have not suffered any want. The Lord has provided for them in different ways. May he soon open the way to the field. If not, and conditions get worse, they may come home, but only if they see no other way out. But we publish their letters, and let them speak for themselves, thank the Lord.—P. H. Richert

(The following letter by Miss Regier was written from Yenching University, Peiping, on November 10.)

This morning we received your cable and were happy for this message from you. I hope that you have received my letters which will answer the cable at least in part.

We have no desire to go home at present, but neither can we go back to Kai Chow. Things may clear up all of a sudden, however. Today's newspaper sounds more hopeful. We had a letter from Mr. Pannabecker last week. It may be possible to get to the field more easily from where he is than from here.

I have been at Yenching for a week now. It is a very delightful place to be and there is certainly a great field for work. There are about three hundred students and only a small number of Christians. Moreover Chinese students are so responsive and so easily made contacts with. Anything I learn here will be valuable for work with students at Kai Chow. We still have no news so we do not know whether the school is open or not. I do so hope that I may be able to be in student work. It is the type of work I have always longed for.

However, we want to follow whichever way God leads. As far as our health is concerned, it is excellent and we do not feel the need of a furlough.

Our greetings to the home churches. "The Lord watch between thee and me while we are absent one from the other."—Sincerely, Marie J. Regier

(The following letter by Miss Goertz was written from the College of Chinese Studies, Peiping, China, on November 12, 1945.)

It was a joy to receive your cable message yesterday! Our first good home-contact with you since the end of hostilities.

In answer to your inquiry we would like to say that we have two alternatives as we see it:

1. Remain in China (at least for the present)

(1) We are near the field—about 375 miles away. If return to U.S.A. might be many delays and difficulties and expenses.

(2) Living expenses here in Peiping are figured at US$$.50 (fifty cents) per day. We have sufficient funds at hand to keep us until Christmas of the New Year. We are given allowances for three tons of coal now. We will draw this in money and pay our expenses for the next weeks. We cannot see what all is ahead of us, but "one step enough for me" holds for us. God has wonderfully undertaken for us these years and He will not forsake us. Rev. Hubbard of the Am. Board Mission here in the city says he can give us recommendations to local Chinese banks for loans from them at 2½ %, until funds can come from home.

(3) We have openings offered to us here in work among young people and the church. There will be some remuneration to help cover small expenses. The world is the field and the young people want us.

(4) We hope to contact Mr. S. F. Pannabecker, have had one letter from him and will see how conditions will shape themselves. He expects to come from Honan province (his appointed section) to our field. In case of the railroads opening up we much desire to go to the mission field, even if it is still restless. We pray for an open door and are unafraid to go as soon as there is a possibility. Some localities are quite tolerable, we hear, and others are not. Please continue to pray, and we will keep on the alert for any kind of service for the Lord of the harvest.

DR. E. STANLEY JONES tried to serve as a "go-between" for the United States and Japan in the summer and fall of 1941 so that war might be averted. He now describes this story, which could not be told before, in an article entitled "An Adventure in Failure." This article appears in the December issue of Asia and the Americas. Dr. Jones makes clear that it was not a united Japan that entered upon a program of military conquest. "The American citizen is supposed to believe that a united Japan undertook world conquest, with no inhibitions and no internal opposition. But the idea is disastrously false. From the time of attack upon China, the Japanese nation went through a deep struggle of mind and soul." "People burst into tears on the streets of Tokyo, we are told, when the news of war came through." In a well-built case he shows how the Japanese envoys sincerely sought a peaceful solution. The article reveals some of the shortsightedness of international politics. An off-the-record interview with Roosevelt is described. Under nine points Dr. Jones discusses the responsibility for the war. Although the article speaks of failure, it leaves one breathing the high hope of heaven, for it suggests how much could be accomplished in international relations by a stronger Christian approach. Dr. Jones himself says, "It was all an adventure in failure. But if I had it to do over again I would do it again, even if I knew it would end in failure, for it is not our business to succeed or fail, but to be true to the highest we know." Reprints of this article may be had by addressing Dr. Jones at S. Parkes Cadman Memorial Center, Cadman Plaza, Brooklyn 1, N.Y.

TO ACCEPT ONESELF as one really is, without being thrown into panic by the thought of what one ought to be, is a most helpful spiritual experience. It makes for growth. To hold in mind what one ought to be and then to "fight" one's "shortcomings" leads to further discouragement and continued shortcomings. In this realm too, it is unwise to resist evil. It is better to overcome evil with good in the sense of not becoming excited about the evil but rather centering one's attention on the good. The whole matter is not one either of condemning or of condoning. It is a matter of truly understanding. ". . . and the truth shall make you free." It is impossible by sheer power of will to add a single cubit to one's stature, that is, to one's maturity. One must grow in stature. That takes insight and will, and not will alone. To comprehend intellectually through the mind of Christ that which one at first vaguely desired and to be deeply aware of the grace of God promotes growth.

In "fighting" one's sins, one is bound to be somewhat dishonest by acting on the assumption that one does not want to commit the particular sin or whatever goes with it. To accept the fact that one wanted to sin but at the same time also wanted to some degree the opposite is perhaps a closer approximation of the facts. The refusal to accept one's sins as really a part of oneself keeps one from "confessing" them. Yet we are taught that confession must precede salvation from sin.

Mr. X is a man whom one might describe as being overly kind at times. His oral and written expressions ooze with piety. Yet he loses control of "himself" to the extent that he will hurl some inanimate object to the ground in a terrible fit of rage, only to burst out with tears of remorse shortly thereafter. The difference between what he is and what he wants to be is evident, as is also his refusal to accept himself as he really is. With Paul he (and not only he) might lament, "For that which I do I allow not: for what I would, that do I not; but what I hate, that do I." Could Mr. X accept himself as he really is, then his emotional congestion might tend to dissolve and he might find himself freer to grow than now in all his struggles to save his life.

AMICABLE RELATIONS between employer and employee are possible. One wonders whether more "share the profit" arrangements would not eliminate much of the "can—can not" argument of the present strike situation. The following report from Between the Lines shows how mutual consideration was developed in at least one case:

"Many big business leaders didn't like the ideas of Eric Johnston who recently resigned from the presidency of the National Chamber of Commerce. This gives you an idea why some personages in Wall Street didn't like him:

Mr. Johnston, himself an important manufacturer, planned for the employees in his electrical concerns to share in the profits, setting aside 25 per cent of the net profits after taxes to be distributed to the employees on the basis of seniority and wages. Strangely enough, a group of the employees protested this arrangement. They said the stockholders weren't being adequately protected. They suggested that six per cent of the net profits be set aside for the stockholders first, before any division of profits was made among the employees.

Mr. Johnston was reasonable with his workers and wanted to share the profits from their labors with them. In turn his workers were reasonable with their boss and were concerned to keep the company on firm ground for the future. Mr. Johnston's company has had no labor trouble and his business prospers. Why can't other business leaders learn?"

When the Boys Come Home

As Seen by P. K. Regier, Pastor of First Church, Reedley, California

For every home, every church, every community the return of a son or husband or father is a most significant event. Nor is it an event that can be allowed to "shift" for itself without making some definite plans and provisions. Briefly, what is the significance of this event?

We all know that these boys have been uprooted from their normal mode of life. They were taken out of their home environment and placed in an environment that was strange and foreign to them. Consciously or unconsciously our environment has a definite influence upon us. We react to our surroundings. They affect our thinking. To a degree, they determine the trend of our character. Our environment colors our attitude on a good many things. Our concept of religion becomes in a large measure the result of our contacts with life and the experiences which life brings us.

Perhaps the deepest concern of many a wife, as she anticipates the return of her husband, are the questions: "What will he be like? Will he have changed? What will be his outlook on life after the things through which he has gone in these years?"

The church, too, needs to face these questions. Not only the boys, but we all have gone through strenuous times. We have seen civilization at its worst. War reverses many of the ideals of peace-time. Many of the things that were considered good in peace-time are counted bad in times of war, and many of the things that were evil before were justified in times of war. It is facts like these that have caused confusion in the minds of youth.

I

My plea is that we meet these boys with an intelligent, understanding sympathy. We need to remember the circumstances under which they left their homes and under which they labored these years. We need to remember that it was not the result of their own free choice, at least not in the majority of cases.

I want to quote in this connection from a statement made by Chas. S. Tippetts, headmaster, Mercersburg Academy: "You hear persons say, 'These boys are going to be such a problem when they come home.' My feeling is that those of us who stayed at home will be the big problem, not these boys. We shall have to be careful or some of them will wish they had never come home."

My own conviction in this matter is that whether we are the problem or the boys, we need to understand each other. We have looked at world events from different viewpoints. Now the time has come when we again are to see eye to eye and face to face.

II

My second plea is for a spirit of Christian tolerance. We need to recognize that there will be tremendous differences, and sometimes on points that are extremely sensitive. Times the like of which we have just gone through are always times of high tension, when feelings run high and it is so easy to become impatient of the other person's views if they are different from our own. The most beautiful plea for unity and the recognition of each other's capacities in spite of differences is given by the Apostle Paul writing to the Corinthians: "For the body is not one member, but many. If the foot shall say, Because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body? And if the ear shall say, Because I am not the eye, I am not of the body, is it therefore not of the body? . . . But now hath God set the members everyone of them in the body, as it hath pleased him. And if they were all one member, where were the body? But now are they many yet but one body?"

And so the Church, being made up of many individuals with different gifts and viewpoints, capacities and convictions, must work together in unity and harmony. If you in this crisis, because of the deepest convictions of your enlightened conscience, have taken position and said, "I can do this for my government, but I cannot do that," what right do I as a Christian have to despise you for your convictions?

If on the other hand, you have performed services which my conscience would not allow me to do, what right have I to pass judgment on you? The only question that counts is this, "Have You Lived Up To The Highest Light As Reflected In The Holy Scriptures And In The Implicit Teachings Of Jesus?"

In Romans 14:13 we find this earnest exhortation: "Let us not therefore judge one another anymore; but judge this rather, that no man put a stumbling block or an occasion to fall in his brother's way."

When the boys come home, nothing will be easier than to put a stumbling block in their way by a word thoughtlessly spoken, and unkind remarks that sting and wound the feelings of others. My plea, therefore, is for a spirit of Christian tolerance, of

The Returning CPS Man

As Seen by Carl M. Lehman, Business Manager of CPS Unit, Aibonito, Puerto Rico

It would be foolish to think that two to four years in a CPS camp or special project would not leave its mark on the CPS man coming back to his home church. There have been too many intimate contacts with other men from all branches of the Mennonite Church and other churches besides; too much experience in doing all kinds of jobs and seeing all kinds of needs met, from fighting forest fires in the west to lessening the tragedies of the mentally ill in the east, and from conserving the natural resources of the country to controlling hookworm disease in the south, and bringing not only medical care into neglected rural areas of Puerto Rico but also a new concept of supplemental missionary work which shows promise of making a strong influence on Protestant missionary work on the island.

Obviously the effect of this transplantation from home communities, in which the average CPS man had found himself deeply entrenched before the war, into an entirely different and new environment, would have a different effect upon different men. To evaluate this effect in each case would be difficult, for there are both positive and negative factors; there are the inevitable tolls of the frustration and crushing of the human spirit inherent in the evil of conscription, which may leave disillusionment and the shattering of ideals in its wake; and there is the sublimation which has taken advantage of the difficulties in CPS to strengthen the will and the spirit to live above the confining limitations of conscription and to make full use of every opportunity, be they few or many. Between these two extremes all returning CPS men will fit. To tell exactly where a given man belongs would be difficult, but one thing is certain, none of them are going to be exactly like they were when they left home, and the home and church to which they return might as well be prepared for this change.

Granted then that the returning man will have changed, and that the change will not have been the same in all cases, what, in a general way, can the church expect? The following are a number of points to be considered:

First, the returning CPS man is likely to separate chaff from religion. The expression of a sincere and heartfelt faith, tested by the tangibles of everyday living will appeal to him. He has lived too closely with too many kinds of men (including directors) not to have learned something about detecting and detesting sham when he sees it. The minister and his program will have to be a little more real and a little more devoted than it sometimes has been in order to appeal to him.

Second, he will be a more mature man, not only in years but also in experience. He is likely to have a clearer idea of what he wants his life work to be, and should make fewer mistakes in choosing it. He is not going to make a career out of fire fighting and forestry; or soil conservation unless he continues to have a mature interest in it. He is not going to volunteer for foreign mission fields without a clearer understanding of what it means to be separated for a long time from old associations and families, and if he gets on the field he will be prepared for the hazards of group living and of disillusionment. He will have acquired many new skills which should make it easier to adapt himself into new situations. The church should understand all this and be prepared to make use of this more mature judgment.

Third, in most instances he will be interested in cooperating more closely with other Mennonite groups. He will have formed acquaintances among them which he will not forget, and he may not always sympathize too much with old prejudices. He will know other Mennonites as they are, not as he used to be told they were. At least he will not be ignorant of their existence as so often he was before, and the church can expect more inter-relations in the future.

Fourth, he will be interested in an expression of religion in everyday life and projects. In many cases he will have had to take sneers and taunts for the sake of what he believed, and so his faith will have undergone some refining fires. He will want the church to translate Christianity a little more into Christian living and if need be a little less into mere creed, dogma and lip service. He will want some of the better CPS projects continued by the church, for he does not see how the church can preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ without living it as well, and to him living the gospel includes giving a cup of cold water where needed. He is not likely to be less interested in evangelism, but to him evangelism will include more than it used to, and to attempt evangelism without a complete and thorough expression of a genuine Christian life will seem like a shallow thing indeed.

Fifth, more men than formerly will be interested in one form or another of real Christian service. Their CPS experience has taught them new basic values, so that living for making money and accumulating material goods no longer holds the fascination it once did.

Conference To Have Executive Secretary

After careful consideration at the meeting of the General Conference Executive Committee, held in Chicago, October 5, a call was extended to Rev. Walter H. Dyck to devote his full time to the work of the Conference, taking on the duties of an Executive Secretary in addition to his regular work as secretary of General Conference. After prayerful thought, Brother Dyck has decided to accept this new opportunity, and has consequently tendered his resignation as pastor of his church at Beatrice, Nebraska.

In his letter of acceptance, Brother Dyck writes, "If the Lord has plans for the future of the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America, which we are convinced He does, we are willing to do whatever we can, under His guidance and blessing, to ascertain His will and encourage His direction."

Among the duties of the office of Executive Secretary would be the task of coordinating and promoting all phases of General Conference work. For some time the various boards and Committees of the Conference have felt a need for having some such coordinating office to help integrate all the various phases of General Conference work. The combination of the office of such an Executive Secretary with the regular Secretary of the Conference seemed to the Executive Committee to be the best solution to this need, and we are happy to be able to announce this arrangement.

Brother Dyck expects to be able to take up his new duties by April 1, 1946, the office to be established in the General Conference Headquarters building at Newton, Kansas.

Walter H. Dyck, who is to assume secretaryship in April, 1946.

The Executive Committee, as well as Brother Dyck, earnestly desire the prayers of our churches for him in this enlarged field of work. For the executive committee, J. N. Smucker, President

It Is Advent Again!

By Joanna S. Andres

The choir of "The Hymns of All Churches" has just sent its voice into our home. They left the long known song ringing in the heart:

"Tell me the old, old story
Of unseen things above;
Of Jesus and His glory,
Of Jesus and His love."

Never does this story of the evidence of God's love in the sending of the Son grow old, nor the evidence of the Son's love in His coming to become the sin-offering for all mankind. This marvel of divine compassion for the need of man will ever stir our hearts with praise and adoration—even through eternal days.

Sad is the thought and sadder still the stern reality that only a percentage of the human race is stirred in heart with overwhelming story of God's expressed love on that first Christmas day. Even to ponder only on this revelation, through Advent days, gives birth to the joys of Christmas, joys that are lost to the many who know neither the Giver nor the Gift of love itself.

Burdened should we be these Advent days with the pressure of "the wondrous story," How can we lock it within ourselves! How dare we keep it! How can we hold it back in a time like this when the cry of millions comes as a loud knock of alarm on the door of the Christian Church, "Where is love?"—"Where is hope?" To us within the Church the answer is very clear: It came wrapped in the Gift of that first Christmas day. To those, without, it too must become clear.

How much time there is left to the Christian Church to proclaim the story of Bethlehem with its triumph at Golgotha, is known only to the heart of God. Obedient to read the signs of the times as the Son has bid us do, we are assured that the years shall not be many and because in the "latter days" the cry of man shall grow still louder, "Where is love?"—"Where is hope?" the answer must be theirs before the "day" is gone and the "shadows of night" fall upon us.

In the book The Good Shepherd by Gunnar Gunnarson, the author makes the opening statement. "When a holy season approaches men make ready for it, each after his own manner and kind. There are many ways." Upon this brief introduction follows the story of Benedict who in Advent days chose to seek the lost sheep in the snows of Island's mountains from where—for some reason or another—the sheep had failed to return with the flocks in warmer autumn days. Lest these sheep remain lost and find their death in the cruel winter storms prevalent in those desolate regions, Benedict went forth each year when Advent came to spend the weeks before Christmas in search of the lost sheep of the village folds and this at any cost of effort or time—even life itself!

Having so dared so spend his Advent days, Benedict returned victorious in spirit with the light of joy in his eyes—the saved sheep by his side! Advent to him became a word rich and full in meaning—as rich and full as giving of oneself to a need.

If we should so dare to spend our Advent days . . . aside these pre-Christmas weeks to seek "in winter's chill" the sheep that have strayed from the Father's fold or impart strength to the weak of heart and faith to the faint; should we deal bread to the hungry, comfort to sorrowing, warmth to the friendless and visit the sick, be companion to the lonely, yearn in prayer for the salvation of all—if we should so dare to spend our Advent days, we too would return with the light of Christmas joy in our eyes and perhaps—if we dare lose ourselves completely—we too would return with a lost lamb to lay as a trophy at His feet! What greater gift could we bring the Christ on Christmas day.

No one need say today "Where are the lost? Where are the needy?" We need not go far to find them and yet so far—so far from our selfish, material living—until we have lost our life to the need of another!

Christmas was born when the Son left the mansions above to go forth to seek and to save the lost sheep of the Father's fold. For their sake He emptied himself. This is the meaning of Christmas!

"It must be told, it must be told,
The story must be told!"

Advent will become full of meaning and Christmas rich with joy if following the Christ we, too, go forth to seek the lost of the Father's fold; if we, too, go emptying ourselves to the need of men and spread abroad the unquenchable story of Love which is the hope of man.

MENNONITES THE WORLD OVER

By Cornelius Krahn

The Mission of the Amish. Recently in a sermon an Amish minister stated, "We are frequently asked why we do not do mission work." Our answer is "As for me and my house we will serve the Lord." What he meant to say was that they do not delegate missionary activity to an organization or a person. Rather each church member and his family is a living testimony to what they consider to be essential in Christian witness.

Mennonite Literature in Public Libraries. The Mennonite Publication House at Scottdale, Pennsylvania, announces a project of placing Mennonite publications into seminary, college and public libraries. It requests suggestions and recommendations in this matter. Wouldn't it be ideal if all Mennonite branches would promote a worthwhile project like this?

A Mennonite Philanthropist. Milton S. Hershey who recently passed away started his work from scratch and developed one of the greatest manufacturing enterprises of America. At his death he left eighty-four million dollars for the "Orphan Boys of America." Hershey's parents were Mennonites living in the heart of Pennsylvania.

Tragedy of the Mennonite Missions in the Dutch East Indies. Never in its history has the Mennonite mission in the Dutch East Indies suffered as severely as during these last years. This we conclude from the report given by the Mennonite Mission Society at Amsterdam October 8, 1945. The hatred of the native population, especially of the Mohammedans, caused losses of lives and property. A hospital was burned, the manager of the leper colony was stoned, etc. The widow of a pioneer missionary, Mrs. Johann Fast, died in an internment camp at Batavia at the age of seventy-nine. The son of this family, a medical doctor, J. Fast, has also passed away.

Boniface as an Ideal. The heathen Frisian people once killed Boniface, one of the great missionaries. Other missionaries followed to convert the Frisians. Now the descendants of these Frisians (the Dutch) are not discouraged because their missionaries are being treated similarly. They are going on with their work.

What is Man? The chairman of the A.D.S. (General Conference of Holland) asks this question in an editorial of the de Noodbrug. He says that before the last war praise of man was heard in many tunes. Now it is evident that many of those who were considered the bearers of the high cultural values have stooped down. Therefore, the writer calls attention to an old word: "Man in himself is unable to do any good and inclined to all evil." Rev. Nijdam concludes: "Except the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build it."

REV. ALFRED REGIER RESIGNS

Rev. Alfred Regier, Quarryville, Pa., pastor of Calvary Mennonite Church, Mechanics Grove, Pa., since September 1, 1944, has resigned, the resignation to take effect at the end of this year. The Regiers, although not very long on the field, have still made their interest and influence felt in the Calvary Church Attendance in Sunday School increased and it became necessary to start new classes. The board and the congregation are sorry to lose such an energetic worker for Christ so soon after the work was started. Rev. Regier stated in his resignation that it was his purpose to go to college for more training.

REV. ERWIN A. ALBRECHT, CHICAGO, RESIGNS

After serving First Mennonite Church, 73rd and Laflin Streets, Chicago, as pastor for almost five years, Rev. Erwin A. Albrecht has resigned to the Board of Home Missions, also read the resignation to his congregation.

Rev. and Mrs. Albrecht have rendered good and faithful service to the Lord and have built up First Church during a period that was full of problems and uncertainties because of the war. They lived and preached the gospel and their message took root.

The Albrechts have accepted a call to the Bethel Church, Fortuna, Missouri. We pray for them the Lord's abundant blessing as they begin their labors there early in 1946.

We ask all friends to be much in prayer that the Lord might indicate His choice for the future leader of First Church, Chicago.

NEW YORK MENNONITE FELLOWSHIP SENDS BIBLES

About a year ago the New York Mennonite Fellowship decided that they would like to carry on a mission project. In casting about for some phase of work that would appeal to the group, they decided to collect sufficient money to send two hundred German Bibles to the Mennonite settlement in Fernheim, Grand Chaco, Paraguay, South America. A substantial sum of the amount needed was contributed by the C.P.S. Unit at Greystone Park, New York. Frequently some of the men from that unit attend the monthly meetings. The Bibles were bought through the American Bible Society, and they also shipped them. Since the freight was less than anticipated 110 German Bibles could be bought and sent.

Recently a letter of appreciation and sincere thanks was received from brethren in South America. It encouraged them greatly, they said, to know that there is a group of Mennonites in the large city far to the north that is sufficiently interested to send them these much appreciated Bibles. Paul F. Barkman, 235 E. 49th St., New York, 17, N. Y. This is the address of the Biblical Seminary, where the regular meetings of the Fellowship are being held.

MISSION CHURCH BLESSED BY COOPERATION

We have just finished a series of meetings here at the Mission that proved a blessing to our church and were an inspiration in Christian cooperation.

The meetings started with a week-end institute conducted by three members of the Bluffton College faculty. They came here for this institute Saturday afternoon and stayed until Sunday evening. Professor Klassen gave an illustrated lecture on Christian art, Saturday evening. He really has a history of the Mennonite Church in sculpture and carvings and showed these with slides. A very inspiring service. Sunday morning Rev. Shelly spoke on "The Christian Armor," both the offensive and the defensive. A very challenging sermon. The three members of the group then each took one department of the Sunday School. In the afternoon Miss Ramseyer spoke on the relief work of the Mennonite Church. Our people of the church here were greatly blessed with the services and had a good opportunity to get better acquainted with Bluffton College.

Following this week-end institute we had a week of meetings conducted by Rev. Plenert of Philadelphia, member of the Home Mission Board. Here too we felt the Spirit of God moving. Rev. Plenert brought us strengthening messages. Students of the Mennonite Seminary helped in these meetings. Mr. Willard Wiebe led the singing for the week. A men's quartet brought some special music and a number of the students led in devotions. Cooperation was also given by several members of the C.P.S. Unit, among them Albert Buckwalter, Virgil Flickinger, Arnold Claassen. Rev. Marvin Dirks brought special music on one night.

We feel most grateful to all who took part, thus bringing together into one effort, the following: Bluffton College, The Seminary, The C.P.S. Unit, several missionaries and our own Church people here: also the Home Mission Board. All seemed to be of one mind in Christ Jesus. The Girls' Choir of our church and the Youth Chorus also took part in the service. The Mennonite Hymnary was used for the song services, and the leader Mr. Wiebe made us more appreciative of this splendid collection of hymns.

Rev. Plenert, coming from a city church, was well adapted to our needs.

We wish herewith to express our thanks to God for His blessing and to all those who cooperated in this effort. We all have become better acquainted.—John T. Neufeld, Mennonite Bible Mission, 4221 South Rockwell, Chicago 32.

Crusaders Dedicate Year's Work At Missionary Service

Crusaders Missionary Sunday, November 18, 1945, was a day long to be remembered in the Stirling Avenue Mennonite Church! It provided a great climax to the Missionary Convention extending throughout the week. Miss Martha Burkhalter, missionary to Jangjir, India brought challenging messages to large congregations.

The special feature of the day was the dedication of the proceeds of the Stirling Crusader summer relief and missionary projects. The dedication service was held in the afternoon at 2:45 o'clock when the children and young people presented the results of their labors for dedication. In spite of a rather difficult year on account of weather conditions, the results were good. The final figures were as follows:

I. Individual Projects.

A. Busy Bees. This consisted of all sorts of odd jobs; such as giving part of allowances, carrying papers, running errands, minding babies, clerking in stores part time, etc. Twenty-nine Crusaders contributed $109.75.

B. Gardeners. Fifteen had various types of vegetable and flower gardens, proceeds amounting to $38.75.

C. Livestock. Five boys raised a calf and a number of pigs. Their efforts brought in $89.15.

D. Poultry. Good poultry prices enabled five boys to turn in $91.50 as a result of the chickens they raised.

II. Group Project.

Approximately 35 young people cooperatively took care of an acre of potatoes and one-third acre of mixed vegetables. Groups cut the potatoes, weeded and hoed them, and then picked, sorted, bagged and sold the spuds. At the conclusion of the "work parties" a worship and social time was enjoyed.

The total realized in this effort was $255.88.

The total of the Crusader Projects was $635.03 This was presented in a special ceremony. The chairman, Mr. Earle S. Snyder, chairman of the Missionary Committee of the Church, called each leader who in turn read the names in the group and presented the total proceeds. The total was then presented to the pastor for dedication. One half was designated for the "flour project" of the Mennonite Central Committee. The other half was dedicated to be used to help build the new Bible Training Institute at Jangjir, India.

During the ceremony a large banner was displayed.

STIRLING CRUSADERS

WE SERVE BY SHARING

Mr. C. J. Rempel, Chairman of the Canadian M.C.C., in responding for his organization referred to the great needs existing in Europe. He outlined some plans of the M.C.C. to alleviate as much suffering as possible, and thanked the Crusaders for their gift.

Miss Martha Burkhalter spoke in behalf of the Bible Training Institute, expressing her appreciation of the interest of her children and young people in the school. She outlined very graphically the possibilities of the school.

Other offerings during the day increased the amount for the Bible Training Institute to $550.00.

Crusader Worship Service

A group of young people took charge of the first part of the evening service which was in the form of a pictorial-musical service. In addition to reproductions of famous paintings, specially made slides of local groups and crusaders projects were featured. The service opened with the singing of the theme hymn and chorus: "Jesus Saves," and "We Will Give, and Pray." Thorwalsen's Christ was then shown while a vocal solo "Jesus, Wonderful Name" was heard. During the showing of "The Open Bible" the Scripture Lesson was read. Illustrated hymn slides "From Greenlands Icy Mountains" were used for the singing of that hymn.

To illustrate the truth that Christian Missions is the business of everyone, pictures of children, young people and older people of the church were shown. A reproduction of an Indian Congregation in the Central Provinces served to present the challenge. Slides showing Crusaders and projects were next shown. A Girl's octette sang "To The Regions Beyond" as this part of the service came to a close.

EVENTS AROUND US

1350 CALORIES FOR GERMANY

Reports from the U.S. Occupation Zone of Germany state that German citizens will receive a diet of 1350 calories this winter. This is below the lowest diet received by the C.O.s last summer who participated in the starvation experiment. Scientists who administered this guinea pig experiment state that distinct psychologic effects resulted from the experiment. The starved C.O.s lost all interest and concern for others and were driven only by the passion for food. Doubtless, this will be Germany this winter. A partial reason for their starvation this winter is punishment being administered by the victorious nations, it is alleged. From such conditions permanent peace is to come!

BICYCLES FOR EUROPE

Transportation for relief workers in Europe is extremely difficult. In certain areas, no public transportation is available. Bicycles are even precious and scarce. There is a move afoot that relief workers be sent bicycles by youth in our churches so that they can do their vital work.

YOUTH IN EUROPE

Pastor Traar of Austria, head of the Evangelical church's youth program, said that wartime suffering and the shallowness of Nazi teaching had combined to create a positive attitude toward the church work on the part of Austrian youth.

Doubtless the trials of Europe these days will bring forth the true saints. In the face of trial and tribulation your true nature shows forth. Out of the blackness that is Europe, we trust God will bring forth beacon lights of faith. We pray for those Austrian youth.

CHALLENGE OF MISSIONS

Dr. Frank Laubach, noted missionary and linguist who is responsible for making millions literate in Asia, South America and Africa, stated that America is the most hated of nations. Why? Because of her great wealth and power. In the filth, poverty, and disease of the backward nations, some of the natives know of our wealth and their poverty, our power and their weakness.

Dr. Laubach stated that in India, natives were asked to list the most loved white men they knew in India. In the first one hundred listed not a single statesman, or businessman appeared. The first one hundred most loved white men were missionaries. They were loved because they came to share and to help, not to dominate or exploit. Christ came to serve and when we go forth to serve in a like spirit, we are received gladly and joyfully.

"We have learned to fly through the air like birds, and to swim under the sea like fish (in a submarine). All that remains is to learn to walk the earth like men."—Halford Luccock, in The Chaplain

Two Evangelistic Youth Movements

Two modern evangelistic movements have become very prominent and demand one's attention. One is the child evangelism campaign. Thousands of children as a result of this movement have accepted Christ as Saviour. We do not doubt the possibility of child conversion and we rejoice in whatever good is being accomplished. There is some evidence, however, that the once-in-grace-always-in-grace philosophy is implicit in the movement. If these children once accept Christ, it is held, they will always be Christians. There is accordingly little emphasis on the proper teaching program to follow up the evangelization.

The other movement which is rising to enormous proportions is the Youth for Christ campaign with its center in Chicago but operating also in many other large cities. On Memorial Day of 1945 more than 50,000 persons, mostly young people, attended a rally of this movement in the stadium of Soldier Field in Chicago. Thousands of young people are accepting Christ. Again we rejoice in whatever good this movement is accomplishing. Youth is the time for decision and we trust that many of these young people have really accepted Christ and that they will live truly Christian lives. But again one has some mental reserves. According to one observer repentance is not mentioned in these meetings. The thing of sole importance is "to give your heart to Christ." There is little attention given to the subsequent and necessary growth in grace and Christian living. Another thing that causes misgivings is the way in which patriotism, particularly support of the country's military program, is linked up with the evangelistic appeal. War bonds are sold during meetings and people in military service are singled out for special honor. One newspaper writer called the Chicago meeting a "smooth blend of religion and patriotism." But the movement does show that young people are hungry for things that belong to the spirit and are ready to respond to a leadership which appeals to them.—Gospel Herald

Eleven Hundred Experiments

It is said that the great inventor Edison performed about 1,100 separate experiments before he found the exact material to use in his incandescent lamps. A friend, congratulating him on his success at last, remarked, "But think of all the time you wasted in those 1,100 other experiments!" "No," said the inventor candidly, "for I learned then 1,100 ways not to proceed!" No apparent failure is ever wasted—we can learn a worth-while lesson from every experience, whether "successful" or not in the conventional sense. It might be added, too, that if the inventor had not had the patience and teachability evidenced in the 1,100 "unsuccessful" experiments, he might never have hit upon the one "successful" one, leading to the great invention of the incandescent bulb. No matter how you look at it, the 1,100 experiments were by no means wasted time.

Differences Between Argument And Discussion

By Munro

Arguments and discussions are often confused. They are not the same...in fact they work quite differently. But it is so easy for discussion to lapse into argument that the confusion between them readily occurs.

Argument and discussion have this much in common: both are forms of conversation. Both arise out of differences of opinion about an issue which is of such vital importance to participants that they have feelings about it. Both are prompted by the belief that opinion can be changed through conversation.

Argument is divisive, negative, competitive, often destructive, and usually fruitless. Discussion is unifying, positive, cooperative, constructive, creative and usually fruitful in discovering larger truth and unifying group thinking.

PURPOSE

My purpose is, in

Argument

To prove the correctness of my opinion or position

To discredit opposing opinions or positions and silence opponents.

To win over those who are neutral or uncertain.

To come out with my opinion or position accepted by the group.

Discussion

To get others clearly to understand my opinion or position.

To seek out and to understand opposing opinions or positions in order to use their contribution toward the search for truth.

To get the frank, objective judgment of those who are neutral or uncertain.

To come out with a group opinion or position, cooperatively achieved and based on broader experience and wider judgment than any individual opinion with which the discussion started.

ATTITUDES

My attitude toward my own opinion is, in

Argument

Certainty that it is the right position and the only right one.

Cocksurenness or dogmatism is expressing it.

The position that everyone else should accept.

To defend it against all critics.

To change it is to compromise.

Discussion

Conviction that it is the best I have been able to achieve so far, and I'll hold it until I can improve it.

Humility and reverence in expressing it.

A position which others should understand and consider as possibly modifying their own.

Less concern to defend it than to understand and profit by criticisms of it.

My attitude toward the differing opinion of others is, in

Argument

To refute and discredit them.

To insist upon my own definition of the opposing opinion.

To magnify the contrast between opposing views.

To use their weak points to strengthen my position by contrast.

To oppose them as endangering or misleading to group opinion.

Discussion

To understand and evaluate them.

To insist upon a definition of all opinions or views in terms satisfactory to the respective advocates of such views.

To search for common ground in apparently opposing views.

To use their strong points to improve my position by modifying it to take account of them.

To appropriate what is valid in them as a source of group opinion.

My attitude toward other persons is, in

Argument

To regard persons as means to be used in winning my points.

To appreciate and rate highly those who agree with me.

To suspect either the intelligence or sincerity of those who disagree with me.

To concentrate attention on the contest between opponents, leaving neutrals inactive.

To appeal to the prejudices of those who are neutral or uncertain in the hope of enlisting their feelings if not their reason in support of my position.

Discussion

To regard all persons as ends to be served by a clearer understanding and application of truth by all concerned.

To evaluate carefully the competence of those who agree with me.

To respect the initiative and originality of those who disagree with me and try to put myself in their place, at the same time seeking a fair evaluation of their competence.

To draw into the conversation all views especially alternatives to or modifications of the most sharply opposed views.

To keep feelings, both my own and those of others, thoroughly subordinate to reason; to avoid supporting faculty reasoning by appeal to prejudice or emotion.

My attitude toward facts is, in

Argument

Use of facts as instruments of debate.

To overlook or discount facts which militate against my opinion.

When there is doubt about facts which are relevant to the issue, to continue arguing that facts favorable to my opinion must be the true facts.

Low interest and some feeling of insecurity in a search for new facts.

When new facts are introduced to suspect them until their bearing on my position is evident then to trust them accordingly.

Discussion

Reference for facts as guides to truth.

To give special attention to facts which my opinion has not taken into account.

When there is doubt about facts which are relevant to the issue, to shift at once from discussion into a cooperative search for the relevant facts. To insist that a question of fact must be settled by investigation, never by debate.

High interest in and hope of reaching a stronger, truer position as a result of search for new fact.

When new facts are introduced, evaluate them objectively and take them fully into account in modified opinions or positions.

My attitude toward the "larger-truth" is, in

Argument

I already have it.

Other sincere, intelligent, and well-informed people have it.

It is my duty to proclaim and advocate it.

Discussion

My opinion is a part of it, but all human opinion is a mixture of truth and error.

Sincere and intelligent people are continually discovering new aspects of the larger truth which is progressively correcting errors and filling gaps in our thinking.

It is my duty to share with others in the further search for it and to appropriate the results of our cooperative effort.

When opponents become more concerned with combating or discrediting one another than with understanding one another, argument has set in.

Here is a plan which has been used successfully when argument threatens to divide the group:

Ask a leading proponent of one position (A) to state clearly and carefully the opposing position (that of B). He must state it in terms which B approves, so that B admits A has given a clear and fair statement of B's position. It will usually be apparent by this time that much of the argument was over wrong or ambiguous definitions. With these cleared up, the real issue will be apparent and a discussion of it can then proceed with new data, variant or modifying opinions, and alternative positions carefully considered.

RELIEF

Clothing Shipment Arrives in Holland

A cable from Peter Dyck in Amsterdam, dated November 26, brings the information that a twenty-seven-ton shipment of relief clothing with two tons of soap has arrived at a Holland port. Brother Dyck asks for the future contribution of "shoes of all sizes, including men's."

This is the first shipment of clothing sent from Mennonite centers to reach Holland. Three additional shipments of clothing and shoes from both United States and Canada are enroute.

Relief Activity in Holland

Writing from Amsterdam on November 1, Peter Dyck tells about the work in Holland. "Mennonites in Fredeshiem" is a reference to the group of Russian Mennonite refugees in Holland who have been provided for by the relief workers and the Mennonites of Holland.

"To date we have received three shipments of food: 36 cases of home-processed food, 15 cases of tomato puree, and about two tons of soap. This has, of course, all been distributed a long time ago. The tools bought in England are a great help here and at the moment the Mennonites at Fredeshiem, under the leadership of Elma Esau, who is also giving them lessons in English, are sewing the 1,000 yards of linen which was brought from England, into sheets and other useful garments. I am glad we have a sewing machine and material for them and when I return from England again I intend to bring much more of this material with me: As you know the number of refugees has come up from thirty-three to thirty-nine. Ds. Hylkema has procured a large house near Utrecht which will be more useful in the event more such Mennonites come to Holland."

Response to Food Program in Canada

The announcement in Canada of the setting up of collection centers to receive food for relief had the result of overcrowding all the warehouses except the one at Yarrow, British Columbia. At Kitchener the center was so overtaxed that it was necessary to ask that deliveries be held off. The centers at Winnipeg in Manitoba and at Saskatoon in Saskatchewan found that their quarters were inadequate. At Saskatoon, seventeen workers are kept busy at regular intervals and in Yarrow fifteen people find plenty to do in preparing the donations for overseas shipment.

Flour and Wheat Contributions

Two carloads of flour have been loaded on ships at Baltimore and are now on the way to Holland. Twenty-eight carloads of flour and wheat are moving or in transit to eastern ports for shipment to Holland and France. An additional thirty carloads are in prospect. The first carload of flour for France is due to leave from Houston, Texas, December 18. These figures, however, do not include the twenty to twenty-five carloads which are being gathered in Canada. This amount is the quota which Canada is permitted to ship through Mennonite relief channels at the present time.

Shipment of Foodstuffs

In addition to the carloads of wheat now moving to eastern ports, quantities of foodstuffs have been processed and sent to New York for overseas shipment. Included in these shipments are 300 cases or 6,000 quarts of canned chicken from Lancaster County, Pa.; two carloads of navy beans from Bayport, Michigan; 100 cases or 1,200 quarts of tomato puree from Smoketown, Pa.; and a carload of raisins from the Reedley, California, community. The chicken and the raisins have been consigned to Holland, the tomato puree to France, and one carload of beans each to Holland and France.

Meats and Fats Now Ration Free

Since the announcement of the end of meat rationing in the United States, requests for ration points on meat and fat donations for relief will no longer be necessary. All requests now on file in the Akro office will be considered null and void.

India Worker Receives Assignment to Purchase Equipment

R. C. Kauffman, one of the eight Mennonite relief workers in India at the present time, has been giving his services in an executive capacity to the Bengal Christian Council Relief Committee. In this office he was recently asked to proceed to New Delhi, where the American Army has a large supply depot, to negotiate for the possible purchase of equipment for relief and missionary organizations in Bengal. Brother Kauffman was given a period of six weeks to carry out this assignment.

Relief Briefs

A contribution of $160 for war sufferers' relief has been received from a C.P.S. quartet at Howard, R. I., who have been rendering programs of vocal music.

The Church Committee on Overseas Relief and Reconstruction announces that the 6,208 Christmas packages, donated by Mennonites and Brethren in Christ, have reached New York in good condition and will be sent to Europe in the next few days.

C. P. S.

Additional Camp and Unit to Close

Besides the camp at Huson, Montana, base camp No. 67, Downey, Idaho, and special project, No. 127, American Fork, Utah, will also close. The camp at Downey will be discontinued December 15. The work project, which consisted of dam construction, has been completed and no further work has been planned. The unit at American Fork, in connection with the Utah State Training School, will also close on December 15. The closing of this project is related to the influx of a considerable amount of local labor and the release of a considerable number of the C.P.S. personnel.

B.S.C. to Continue Administration

As has been announced before, the American Friends Service Committee has officially decided to withdraw from the administration of C.P.S. on March 2, 1946—six months after V-J Day, the time when they feel their agreement with Selective Service ends. Recently, the Brethern Service Committee considered a similar proposal but decided to continue sponsorship. The Committee said: "While we had hoped that C.P.S. would be discontinued by March 2, 1946, and indeed recommend such to the government, we will continue our participation in C.P.S. for the sake of the men yet to be inducted and for the men now in our camps who desire to continue under church administration."

Another Special Project to Open

Another special project on the West Coast has been approved to receive a Mennonite C.P.S. unit. This proposed unit of forty men will be in connection with the U.S. Veterans Hospital for mental patients at Roseburg, Oregon.

C.P.S. Briefs

A poll among C.P.S. men in Mennonite camps is being taken by the Education Office in the C.P.S. Section at Akron to determine the favorite Bible chapters of C.P.S. men. This idea was suggested by a Mennonite minister as a parallel to the poll taken by the American Bible Society in the armed forces.

Twenty-five men at the Greystone Park, N.J. unit have volunteered their services as attendants on cattle boats upon completion of their C.P.S. service.

Peace Section Notes

Peacetime Conscription

Shortly after President Truman made a speech advocating a system of peacetime military training, the House Military Affairs Committee began hearings preparatory to action in legislation which would include the President's proposals. Testimony in favor of conscription was given during the month of November. Groups and individuals who are not in favor of such a program may give their testimony December 3 to 15. The tentative date for testimony from a delegation representing Mennonite and Brethren in Christ concerns is December 3. At this time when our nation is faced with a grave decision, Christians will do well to pray for Divine guidance and wisdom.

FINALLY CONTACT CHINA MISSIONARIES

2. The other alternative is:

(1) In case of it being impossible to go into the interior and in case it gets too dangerous to stay on in Peking and consul prefers us going home and passage can be secured—we will plan to come home.

We say "Hitherto the Lord hath helped us" and "Henceforth" our lives are in His hands to guide and keep us. What have we to fear?

Mrs. Louise Schrag of Tsoachowfu, Sung. (China Mennonite Mission) is with us here. Hopes to travel with us.

This will reach you in plenty of time for Christmas and we take this opportunity to send Hearty Wishes for a most Blessed Christmas Season and an Abundant New Year to all our Conference, Churches, Supporters, Families, Friends!!!

A Chinese pastor recently explained that 'abundant' means 'sufficient for our use' and we add: with God there is enough and to spare. We are both very well and happy in the Lord. We are meeting many old friends and making many new acquaintances among missionary and Chinese groups. We attend church services in both English and Chinese, have classes in Bible study, and meet for prayer often. Here in the language school (which seems like our old home to us) we help with sewing of sheets, linens, and other work as the need presents. We do our own laundry and cleaning, but our rooms, board and light and heat are included in the above mentioned $.50 a day.

We will be glad when mails can come freely and will look for messages from all our friends and dear ones. The Lord bless us all! In His service, mutual respect and honor, regardless of how we may differ in our innermost convictions.

This does not mean that we must sacrifice our convictions, or that we must compromise in any way with our own conscience. But it does mean that we grant to the other person the same rights we claim for ourselves, namely the freedom of the conscience and the right to believe as God has enlightened him by His Spirit and His Holy Word.

III

My final plea is that we now all cooperate in an endeavor to make the Church and all its activities minister to the spiritual needs of the returning boys. Happy is the church that has commanded the respect of the boys in these terrible years when they were away from home. I do not suppose that there is any church that feels that it has fully met its obligation to her absent boys. But I believe that most of them have tried to do all they could to keep in touch with the boys by correspondence of some sort or another and by various ministrations of love and regard. It is our hope and prayer that these things may have been enough to persuade them of our good faith and our deep concern for their physical and spiritual well-being.

And now as these boys come home another door of opportunity stands open to us. Above all other things, it is the business of the church to minister first of all to the spiritual needs of her members, and incidentally to the economic and social needs. Fortunate is that church which shall enjoy the confidence of her returning boys that they may turn to her to seek counsel in the difficult problems of a re-adjustment to a normal, civilian mode of life. May the Church meet this need in a spirit of good-will, respect, mutual esteem and dynamic helpfulness.

More and more CPS men are saying that they will never again be satisfied with living for money, but that they want to put their stakes on something higher and more enduring, something which will bring more real satisfaction and happiness in life. For this the church too should be prepared, so that she will go with the men and support them, and where necessary provide opportunities for just such work. If she does not, she may lose some of her best men. Already existing Mennonite institutions, such as our colleges, mission boards and the Mennonite Central Committee, should be fully awake to any such desires that may exist, and wherever possible make full use of them. We may need additional institutions, both to round out our Christian witness and to make full use of this aroused interest in Christian service. Additional hospitals including a mental institution, and perhaps mutual aid organizations may be needed.

Yes, the CPS man is coming back. He has days and weeks and months of adjustment ahead, getting used once again to normal life and to finding his place in it. By working hand in hand, he and his church can make the past four years a useful training and refining period which will bear much fruit.

COLLEGE AND SEMINARY NEWS

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

Dr. Frank Clippinger, coordinator for the North Central Association study, was a campus visitor on November 30, giving help in the study in progress on the Bluffton College campus, "God, the integrating force in the students' curriculum." He spoke in chapel, met with administrators and faculty committees, had a conference with the entire faculty, and spoke at a faculty dinner on modern trends in college education. Dr. Clippinger is Professor of English and Dean of Men at Drury College, Springfield, Missouri. The regular faculty club meeting was held in the Lincoln Hall lobby December 3. The program consisted of a Christmas play and carols. Rev. Paul Shelly spent several days in educational counseling work in the Ypsilanti and Kalamazoo, Michigan, CPS units. The Messiah will be given on the evening of December 16 in the high school gymnasium.

BETHEL COLLEGE

Colleges from Kansas and surrounding states participated in the first practice debate tournament of the Great Plains Region at Bethel on December 8, using the question of "Free Trade." The local debate class, under the supervision of Dr. Gingerich, entered two teams: David Habbegger and James Wheeler, and Joan Fletcher and Katherine Launhart. The same eligibility rules in representing Bethel College apply to all departments. Mr. David H. Suderman, recently discharged as a regional CPS director, has returned to the music department, on a part-time basis while completing his doctor's dissertation for George Peabody Teachers College. Widick Schroeder, (Newton) Graymaroon photographer, has been busy throughout the week taking individual and organizational pictures for the college annual. Elvera Voth (Walton) heads the yearbook staff of eighteen members, assisted by Elaine Siebert (Larned) and Ruth Smith (Pawnee Rock).

JOTTINGS

—Upper Milford Church, Zionsville, Pa., After an absence of three weeks, during which time he spoke at Freeman, South Dakota, and Busby, Montana, Rev. H. G. Nyce has again returned. He preached the Thanksgiving sermon, November 25.—Mrs. James Miller Jr., Corr.

—First Church, Bluffton, Ohio: Dr. McClure of Ada University spoke to the Sunday School workers November 19. A social hour followed. The Brotherhood had a pheasant supper November 28. The speaker was Paul Rhodeheffer, who recently returned from accompanying a heifer shipment to Europe.—Corr.

—Inola, Oklahoma: Rev. Kuhlman from Grace Bible Institute and Vice President of the "Go-Ye Mission" served as special speaker for the dedication of two mission homes on Thanksgiving Day.

—Proof by actual official correspondence of who really introduced Turkey Winter Wheat—about which there has been so much controversy—will be presented in one of the early issues of the new, illustrated periodical—Mennonite Life.

—The Apostolic Mennonite Church, Trenton, Ohio, held its thank offering services on November 18. The Missionary Society sponsored them. Rev Paul E. Whitmer, Miss Edna Ramseyer, and Miss Aganetha Fast were the guest speakers. The entire offering of $311.25 was given for European relief. A collection of clothing for relief was also made.—Lydia A. Augspurger, Corr.

—The Universal Week of Prayer booklets can be ordered for four cents a copy from: The Department of Evangelism, 297 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, N.Y.

—Saron Church, Orienta, Oklahoma: On December 2nd Miss Martha Burkhalter presented the need of a Bible school for the mission field in India. She gave a message and showed pictures.—John J. Voth, Corr.

—Hillsboro, Kansas, November 29: "The response to the appeal for flour for relief has been most gratifying," says Rev. J. M. Regier. Nine carloads of flour are now assured. Almost daily donations either in wheat or in money are still coming in. Two carloads were sent off to Holland last week and two more will be shipped out this week. Next week another carload can leave. That will exhaust the supply of sacks ordered at first. There will be a short delay before the other four cars will be sent out— or will it be the other FIVE? The campaign has officially closed, but as long as donations keep coming in, the Milling company agrees that we shall continue to accept them. We may even get to round out a full ten carloads.—"Hillsboro Journal"

—The Mennonite Central Committee has secured a warehouse in Lehigh, next door to the I. G. A. Grocery Store. All processed foods for C.P.S. and Relief should be brought to this place immediately. This is for the Kanssas and Oklahoma churches. (This item is from an exchange paper. If you have any questions about this item, write to Rev. B. H. Janzen, Lehigh, Kansas.)

—If you have friends or relatives whom you wish to become acquainted with our papers (Bundesbote or Mennonite) why not subscribe for them and make them a Christmas present?—Bulletin, Menno Church, Lind, Washington.

—D. W. Bittinger, former missionary to Africa and at present editor of the Gospel Messenger, is to speak on missions at the Bethel College Bible Week to be held the week of March 17. Rev. J. N. Smucker, President of the General Conference, will also speak.

—Dear Pastor, are you encouraging the church paper correspondent in your church to send in short, prompt news reports? Such reports are preferred to the church bulletins, for however good the bulletins may be for news, they are limited by the local factor. News especially written for the church paper is preferred.

—Zion Church, Souderton, Pa., worked out a letter of protest to peacetime conscription and then solicited signatures during a week of special meetings. Copies were sent to the two Pennsylvania senators, to the representative, to Andrew May, and to the President. Furthermore, all fifteen members of the church council signed another letter of protest and mailed it to all the congressmen, etc.

—First Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: The "Hogs for Relief" offering November 11th amounted to over $1,000. Over 1000 quarts of meat have been canned.

—Men of the Fort Collins, Colorado, C.P.S. camp recently sent $176.81 to the M.C.C. The money was given during October and November and is to be used for rebuilding churches in Holland, for the refuges in Denmark, for China relief, and for feeding the hungry in Holland.

—First Church, Nappanee, Indiana, recently used its new projector to show pictures of Africa. Elva Schrock spoke.

—Zion Church, Elbing, Kansas: Workers from the Newton M.C.C. Clothing Center visited us Sunday, November 25. A fellowship meal and social hour followed the morning service.

—Rev. and Mr. C. E. Krehbiel returned to their home in North Newton on November 29. Dr. Krehbiel taught a course on Mennonite Polity at the Mennonite Biblical Seminary this past quarter.

—Ebenezer Church, Bluffton, Ohio: The church voted Sunday to call Rev. Benjamin Rahn of Enid, Oklahoma, for its future pastor. Rev. H. P. Fast of Orienta, Oklahoma, held a series of evangelistic meetings from November 18 to 29. They were quite well attended and very inspiring. The exterior of the church is being repaired.—Mrs. Neuenschwander, Corr.

—First Church, Aberleem, Idaho: The Kings Daughters served the fall festival dinner at which an offering of $463 was received. Following this, a program was presented in the sanctuary of the church, and the question of taking up an offering for relief was discussed. This offering is to be taken next Sunday and the proceeds used towards purchasing a carload of flour for European relief. Milton Bartel and Henry Wiebe have left for Baltimore, Maryland, from where they will accompany a shipment of milk cows that are being shipped to Europe by the Church of the Brethren. (A recent offering for the Board of Publication amounted to $100.70.)—J. E. Toevs, Corr.

TO THE CHURCHES OF THE WESTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Greetings:

It is with thanksgiving to God that we wish to report to you of the gratifying progress of the First Mennonite Church of McPherson, Kansas. The church is alive and active. The matter of lodge membership has been cleared away. Plans are underway to provide for their own house of worship. They have collected an admirable sum among themselves towards financing it. They have purchased and paid for a well located and desirable building plot in the eastern part of the city. And they have taken steps towards the securing of building materials. However to be able to bring to completion this undertaking they need the prayerful and financial support of the conference churches.

Convinced of the worthiness of this conference undertaking the Home Missions Committees has adopted the following resolution: "Since the First Mennonite Church of McPherson has satisfactorily solved the problem which heretofore delayed their admittance into the conference, and since there is definite need for this Church to secure its own house of worship now, and since they have done well in the soliciting of funds among themselves for this purpose, we would recommend to the churches of the Western District Conference that when they are approached by said Church they graciously receive the appeal of this church and respond to it as the Spirit shall lead them."

The Lord Is Come Let Earth Receive Her King

The Lord is come! But with forty million dead from a second world war and, perhaps, millions more to starve and freeze before spring, it can hardly be claimed that earth has wholeheartedly received her King. Yes, He reigns in a greater or lesser degree in individuals, families, communities, and within nations. But between nations His rule is either largely unknown or despised and rejected.

The prodigal nations have gone their self-willed way of selfishness, war, and vengeance until they have come to a very "dead-end," where, according to an English atomic expert, there exists an atomic gas which used with an atomic bomb can kill every living thing within a radius of one thousand miles. It is now one world or none. Mankind is facing its crisis.

A crisis demands either new life or destruction. The Chinese word for crisis consists of two characters, one meaning danger and the other opportunity. A great psychologist insists that conversion can only be brought about by a crisis. That is the opportunity part.

Is the crisis great enough or perceived clearly enough to lead to a new way of life among the nations of the earth? Scientists and religious leaders lament the fact that the great masses of people do not seem to be sufficiently aware of the seriousness of the crisis. Furthermore, the Church has not made too clear the opportunity side, the practicability of Christ's reign of "truth and grace."

Will the nations repent to new life or will they destroy each other? The danger is great. The opportunity is great. In the face of great darkness the Christian Church has a chance—nay, a duty—to proclaim the joyous message, "The Lord is come: Let earth receive her King."

Father in the Highest Heaven . . .

Father in the highest heaven,
Open wide our hearts, we pray,
For the gift of Love Incarnate
Sent to us that Christmas day
When the voices of the angels
Dropped the sweetest notes to earth
Telling of the wondrous story
Of Incarnate Love's new birth.
Bedded was He in a manger—
Seedlet small on earth to grow—
Until on the Cross this Stranger
Should bloom forth His love to sow.

Father in the highest heaven,
Hear Thy children when they pray,
Thy great gift of Love Incarnate
Bed within our hearts today;
Stoop in mercy to our weakness—
In our hearts there must be room
To receive Thy full compassion
That would bring redemption soon.
Now, as then, to Thee all knowing,
Lies the earth in sin's deep night—
Reaping bountiful a harvest
Of its strife in hate and might.

Father in the highest heaven,
Though at last our wars have ceased,
But amid the ruins and ashes—
Have the fires of hate increased?
Where the vanquished stand 'mid wreckage,
Dreaming once again of home,
Grant that neither hate nor malice
Shall go in the walls of stone.
Hear us, lest there be a morrow,
Darker still than all the past;
Send earth Love Divine Incarnate
That our new-born peace may last.

Father in the highest heaven,
What of wanderers far from home
Seeking aimlessly for shelter—
How much longer must they roam?
How much longer must the hungry
Faint and fall along the way
And the wounded ones seek healing
Through the night and through the day?
Father in the highest heaven,
To our hearts in holy birth
Give again Thy Love Incarnate
To spread peace, good-will on earth.

THE REVELATION of God in human life is always very helpful. It was so with Jesus, who showed in and through human life what God was like. We cherish what He said. In this one particular, unique case a man's sublimely divine words were equivalent to what He really was. Being divine He could transform others into a likeness of himself. Had he spoken with the tongues of angels but been an essentially selfish person underneath it all, then He would not have been our Saviour. No wonder then that in this time of giving gifts the most precious one that men can give one another is a Christ-like self. It is not so much what a man says but what he is that really matters. Unmindful of that, the most "spiritual" expressions merit the reproach, "What you are talks so loudly that I can't hear what you say."

After a second world war we are conscious that sin is very real in the world. Something is tragically wrong. Mankind has revealed its fury-of-hell side. Dr. Fritz Kunkel levels the charge that our culture is basically egocentric (selfish). In all of this we would expect Christian people to be a tremendous and convincing power for the victory of good. But not all of the Christian religion leads to the doing of His will upon earth as it is in heaven. Something is wrong with much of Christianity. It has lost its savour. Its big and holy words have become meaningless for many. Why? Dr. Kunkel may shed some light on the answer by suggesting that the religious attitude of people of today is not so much determined by what they hear in church or are taught in Sunday School as by their own selfish behaviour patterns. That is, the content and method of ordinary religious education have little power to change the basic and primary aims and goals of the individual. In fact, religion provides some of the best sheep's clothing for disguising aims and goals that are primarily selfish. Furthermore, to have the holy contents of the gospel imparted by people of marked egocentricity makes many turn away from religion only that much more sharply. What is needed, says Dr. Kunkel, is a conversion experience that will break the power of this sinfulness.

What people are transmits itself to others much more effectively than what they say. This may explain the success or failure of much of Christianity. It is right here, however, that there is great cause for rejoicing. The birth of Jesus Christ set loose in this world a "chain-reaction" which continues to this day. Some may make high and holy words meaningless by their selfishness, but the Light of Christ cannot be snuffed out regardless of how great the darkness. There are those, and always will be those, who make contact with the Christ and shine as the beautiful lights of Christmas. The clear, pure light of those who have contact with Him, who came to minister rather than to be ministered unto and to give His life a ransom for many, is a great cause for rejoicing. But in back of them lies the appearance of the Light of the World. The darkness is great. But the Light is shining in the darkness. Thank God.

"MENNONITE LIFE" is the much-alive name of a new illustrated periodical, to which many writers from various Mennonite groups are contributing. Seventeen men and women have contributed to the first issue. It brings information about Mennonites in various countries. One reads about Dutch, Canadian, Paraguayan, Russian, German, and American Mennonites. The subjects are varied: C.P.S., literature, (even some delightful low-German masterpieces are included) economic life in a rural community, the devastation of war in Europe, the plight of Mennonite refugees, the pioneer life of the Paraguayan Mennonites, and autobiographical-historical sketches from well-known Mennonites. The pictures enable one to go places and see things. The opening editorial on "Active or Passive Christianity" is suggestive of what the paper may mean to Mennonites everywhere, namely, "aliveness." Out of the interplay of information and views to be expressed in this semi-annual magazine should come a new insight into Mennonitism as it was, as it is, and as it should be. At the price of one dollar it may be welcomed by many as an ideal Christmas present. Subscriptions may be sent to Mennonite Life, North Newton, Kansas.

CHRISTMAS can hardly be Christmas without thinking of others. Someone has said something to the effect that "sensitiveness is life." As man becomes conscious of the life that exists in other human beings, he is united to them. What happens to them, then also happens to him. In this day of rapid and far-reaching communication we can extend ourselves into the lives of peoples living across the ocean. May not Christmas this year mean weeping with those who weep?

A Blessed Christmas

Christmas "In the Name of Christ"

By Barbara C. Smucker

The little village that last Christmas had jutted peacefully above the snow with steeples, roof tops, and warm red chimneys was this year flat and dead. Months ago its life had ended with the dropping of a single bomb. A bomber returning from a bigger mission, someone said, had simply emptied his remaining load and hit the little town.

Those who lived moved into caves nearby, for not a single home remained. They shared their scant supplies of rescued clothing, food and fuel and when they sought for more there was no more.

Now winter snows had come again, and only ten were yet alive: among them a young mother, her dying child and a ten-year-old boy.

This night iced winds cut through the jagged rocks around the cave. Sifting snow swept in whirlpools over the hard earth floor. Wrapped in blankets and clasping in her arms a tiny, starving child the mother talked excitedly with the small and huddling youngster near her side.

"Tomorrow, Hans, you must go to the city again. You must find food. We have nothing, nothing left at all . . . Even the old men are weakening and cannot cut the trees for fuel."

She drew her baby tightly to her breast. "The baby, Hans, it mustn't die. Oh God, it mustn't die!" And suddenly she wept again—a dry and weary weeping as though her heart could yield no further sorrow and her eyes no added tears.

The boy was silent, but she talked on.

"You say, Hans, the people are dying in the streets; that they starve in the homes; that the shops have nothing. I believe you. I believe all you say. Still, it is our only hope. Supplies might come from somewhere if its true that war has ended. Troops may have passed through and left something. Please, Hans, please say you will try once more."

"Once more, Lisa, once more," and his tired small head fell against her shoulder. He was asleep.

But for the girl, there was no sleep. She must listen for the breathing of her child. He could die this night, and all she had to give him was water—water from the melted snow. Once he might have looked like Nickoli, but now. The small drawn face, the hungry eyes—none of these were his, her husband's—at least not on the day he left, the day before they shot him.

All night she sat and waited and all night the child miraculously breathed. At dawn she shook the sleeping boy beside her.

"Hans, you must be going now!" she whispered.

He moved as though still sleeping and walked mechanically from the cave. He didn't even seem to see her.

That day there was nothing left to do. The others like the girl had little strength to move. Only Lisa hoped for the boy's return. For hours she prayed, fervently and beseechingly for strength and food and for the child. Once she fell asleep and woke in terror to touch her son, expecting death. But still he breathed.

The night came early on this day. There was no sun. A slate grey cloud stretched over the sky, cold and filled with wind and snow. Hans could freeze on such a night as this. . .

And then she heard him, crawling through the entrance rocks. She hardly dared to call his name. But he spoke first.

"Lisa, Lisa!"

Was it gladness or despair?

Suddenly he knelt beside her. In both arms were bundles tied with string.

"It's food!" His words were choked and breathless.

"FOOD!" The others in the cave crawled toward the very sound of it. Someone from another corner shook the dying embers of the fire and placed the last remaining log upon them. . .

On this night the baby supped on powdered milk. The others felt the nourishment of chocolate. And Hans, his small hands, cupped beneath a radiant face, told his story.

He had found a relief organization just arrived . . . Long rows of people waiting at the door for food and clothes and council . . . His turn had come and they had given him the bundles. Tomorrow someone would visit in their cave and bring them help. . .

Over and over in her hand Lisa turned the tiny tag sown neatly in the folds of a newly knitted sweater. It, too, had been inside the bundle. "IN THE NAME OF CHRIST," it read.

"And Lisa," Hans' excited voice went on, "tonight is Christmas Eve. They told me at the Center."

Late, late that night, when the crumbling embers of the heatless fire were small and dim, Lisa sang her child a lullaby:

"Silent night, holy night
All is calm, all is bright
Round yon virgin mother and child
Holy infant so tender and mild
Sleep in heavenly peace,
Sleep in heavenly peace."

"No Room for Jesus"

By Ellis Graber

The accounts of the birth of Jesus as given to the world in the gospels according to St. Matthew and St. Luke are among the best known stories in the world. We read and sing and tell them over and over again each Christmas till we are thoroughly familiar with the Shepherds, the Wise Men, the Star and the Manger.

We recall that Joseph and Mary journeyed from Nazareth south to Bethlehem as did many others. But being among the late-comers they had to hear the phrase, "no room in the inn." Of course, there would have been room had the occupants known who Joseph and Mary were, and that Jesus was to be born. Had someone known that the Saviour of the world was to come that night he would have said, "Here, you may have my room. I'll find a room the stable or some other place." But as it was no one knew and so the Christ child was born in a stable because there was "no room in the inn."

Although the phrase is nearly two thousand years old there is something about it that sounds strangely modern. Thinking Christians during this Christmas season of 1945 have a feeling that even today there is in all too many instances "no room for Jesus."

No Room in Business—

There is during the Christmas season a keen eye for business. That is what the inn keeper had on the occasion of our Saviour's birth. The time of a great influx of people was a good time to make money. Why not choose customers carefully and cash in on some easy money? Why take in a poor carpenter and his wife? After all what has securing a room for a poor couple from the little town of Nazareth to do with religion?

Just the other day, in this very Christmas season, a financially successful business man said, "Oh, I know there are Christian principles that should be followed but there are also business principles that I must observe if I am to succeed." The words may at first sound harmless but the context definitely revealed that unconsciously he was admitting that as far as he was concerned business comes first. In his mind religion and business do not mix. He was thinking of religion and business instead of religion in business. Business comes first and if there is something left for Christ, good and well, but if not—well, business is business. "No room for Jesus."

No Room in the Home—

Have you ever really observed how we commemorate our Saviour's birth? We recall that first Christmas—

"Silent night, Holy Night,
All is calm, all is bright."

"O little town of Bethlehem,
How still we see thee lie;
Above thy deep and dreamless sleep
The silent stars go by."

"—How silently, how silently the wondrous gift is given."

Contrast that with the hurry and the hustle, the noise and the confusion, the strenuous ordeal which characterizes the Christmas of 1945.

What does Christmas mean in our home? Long before the 25th the shopping list must be prepared, being sure not to neglect any who remembered us with gifts last year. The Christmas savings are withdrawn and the task of Christmas shopping begins. A Christmas tree must be secured and decorations must be put up. Then there is the Christmas dinner—whom to invite? What to serve? Christmas day arrives. There is the exchange of gifts, there is visiting, reminiscing and it just wouldn't be like Christmas without that feeling of being uncomfortably over-fed. There are parties and programs; there is a rush from one engagement to another until at the close of the holiday season we find ourselves tired, fatigued and in need of physical and mental rest. It is then as we pause to draw a deep breath and as we reflect back upon the true meaning of the Christmas just passed that we again feel we have somehow missed something great and vital—some great spiritual blessing which was there for us to claim but which we in our haste failed to receive. Our "inn" had been so full that unconsciously and without intending to do so we turned aside that which was holy, sent Him on to find another place, probably a lowly, quiet, humble environment where things were somewhat less crowded, and where He could find an appreciative reception.

Is not our home the place where Christ is to be born anew each Christmas? Why not have a family worship service and in quiet reverence have the Christmas story read from the Bible, prayer offered, and poems and carols given? Why not make it a time for rededication to the Christ of Bethlehem who came to bring peace among men of good will? Right now is the time to have the light shine over our home as it did over the manger!

One of the most striking things about the innkeeper is that he turned away the Christ from his own inn without knowing it. From the gospel account we gather that a short business-like answer was all that was necessary. There simply was no room. And so, unaware that the birth of a child could make his inn famous for all time he rejected the Saviour of men.

By and large it would seem that that is the very thing that is happening today, not only in the home and in business but in every web of life. In a land of commercialized Christmas persons are so involved in movies, clubs, associations, parties, socials, athletics, dramatics, societies and other organizations apart from the church that it would appear such activities are the very foundation of society. Throughout the year they have all too often been of primary importance, and during the Christmas season they become representative of the Christmas mood.

Where is the voice of the Church? Have we no room for Christ? Are we going to sit idly by while Christ is removed from Christmas? Have we no voice concerning the proper observance of our Saviour's birth? Just where are the long periods of solitude with God, the assured calmness, and the broad vistas of quietness in holy communion with God that give us the peace that passeth all understanding?

This Christmas there are millions of men, women and children in war torn areas who in stark reality have "no room." They have little or perhaps no food or clothing. Due to our sins of omission and commission they are so suffering. Above the din and confusion of the world as it strives to right itself we hear the voice of Him who was a babe in the manger.

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Yes, this very Christmas we will either have room or "no room" for Jesus. We must ask ourselves—do we show that kindness and patience, that gentleness and courage, that strength and honesty which are such vital parts of Him? And have shared with others by giving ourselves that others may have the abundant gospel?

There are a surprising number of Christians who during the past year and even now in this season are clothing the naked and feeding the hungry. Many are not showering gifts upon one another. Some are not having a Christmas tree. Why? Said a consecrated Christian the other day, "How can we commemorate our Saviour's birth with tree and tinsel, with luxuries and delicacies when others have not the necessities of life?"

There are still those who make "room for Jesus." Pray God that we may be numbered among those who take seriously the words of that Christmas hymn—

"Oh, come to my heart, Lord Jesus,
There is room in my heart for Thee."

IN MEMORIAM

JOSEPH A. SCHROCK was born August 25, 1857, and died October 31, 1945. He was united in marriage with Lina Augspurger February 19, 1884. Of four sons born, two survive. They are Homer and Merlin of Middletown, Ohio. He is mourned by his widow, two sons, seven grand children and seven great grandchildren.

MRS. JACOB KLASSEN, daughter of Peter P. and Anna Ewert Harms, was born November 25, 1868, in Michalin, Russia, and died October 6, 1945. In 1888 she became a member of the Gnadensburg Church, Whitewater, Kansas. She and Jacob Klassen were married in 1894. In 1937 he preceded her in death. She is mourned by four sons: Frederick, Ruben, and Nathan, Whitewater; and Rudolph, Larned; and three daughters: Mrs. Alfred Harms, Whitewater, and Hilda and Edna of the home.

ANNA DECKERT (nee Schmidt), who died at the age of ninety, was born December 28, 1854, in Russia. In 1874 she and her husband migrated to South Dakota. After the death of her first husband she married David Deckert and lived with him until his death in 1888. In 1904 she, with two children from the first marriage and William from the second, moved to North Dakota. She is now mourned by William Deckert, the only surviving child. The funeral was held in Zion Church, Arena, South Dakota.

JACOB I. ENSZ, son of Isaac Ensz, was born January 5, 1879, at Marion Junction, South Dakota. In 1898 he became a member of the Bethesda Church. In 1899 he married Aganetha Schmidt, with whom he lived for forty-five years. The end came September 11, 1945, in a hospital in Vancouver, British Columbia. The body was sent to Neidpath, Saskatchewan, where his home had been. Three sons and seven daughters mourn his passing.

GEORGE P. EITZEN, fifty-four, banker at Mountain Lake, Minnesota, died suddenly November 27 while at work. The death was attributed to heart attack. A member of the Bethel Church, Mr. Eitzen had served on many committees and had played a prominent part in the building of the new church. He is survived by his wife, Cpl. LeRoy Eitzen in Kentucky, and Allen a senior in high school. Also surviving him are six brothers and four sisters.

Our China Mission Field

by S. F. Pannabecker

Recently I have received two letters that give some information regarding our China mission field, and I know you will all be interested. Mr. Liu Chung-an, the brother of James Liu who was in America, has written me what he has heard from home. Liu Chung-an is in school in Szechuen, at Chengtu, so we can correspond quite freely. One of our girls, Wang Shu-ying, is also at school in Chengtu. Mr. Liu just graduated from theological seminary and is now taking two more years work in West China Union University (Christian) which will complete college work for him. Miss Wang also graduated from seminary and after a year's work in the Baptist Mission has now entered Cheeloo University in Chengtu where she is studying child welfare with the idea of working in that field. Both hope to return to our field in time. There do not seem to be any other young people from our field in school out here now, though two more graduated last year and are teaching near Chungking, and a third is teaching up toward Sian, having stopped school before graduating.

At Kai Chow the Middle School has been started again with James Liu in charge and has two hundred pupils and something over ten teachers. The church work is continuing though on reduced scale due to lack of finances. There are two workers responsible for the church, namely, Rev. Chang Ching and Mr. Ku Tungching. Both of these men have stayed with the church throughout the eight years of the war. Some of the former workers are in the vicinity but engaged in other work. Rev. Wang Wan-Chu, for instance, has gone back to his farm.

The hospital is operating on a small scale in the East Suburb, and the Dr. Hu and the head nurse, Mr. Wang Jui-ting, are also running a small dispensary in the city. I have no word as to whether it has any of the supplies and equipment which were totally lost during the war years. It will be one of my first concerns when I get in that vicinity to try and help the hospital back on its feet.

Our field has suffered many ways. The communists have been there for some time though I have no indication that they have molested church work. Famine was bad for a time and "countless numbers," according to my report, starved to death. Finally bandits have taken advantage of the confusion and have looted and killed large numbers. Our own church workers have only been able to maintain the minimum living conditions, and that, they say, only by the help of God. Our wealthiest member, Mr. Liu Kuo-hsiang, has been cleaned out completely. First taxed heavily by the communist government he had to sell land to pay taxes and then was robbed completely by the bandits. The report now is that he supports himself by cutting hair—long regarded as the lowliest occupation.

For myself and my work I should say that the trouble with malaria, which I had at first, has been completely cleared up, and my physical condition is practically normal. The American Advisory Committee, which is the China agency for the Church Committee for China Relief and with which the Mennonite Central Committee is cooperating, has asked me to serve as their provincial Director for Honan Province. In this capacity I shall be responsible for getting the church relief work in Honan province organized. It is a responsible position and will need much understanding and tact. I hope you will all remember me in this connection. The needs in that province are great because it has been occupied by the Japanese, overrun by bandits and flooded by the Yellow River. Now it is again threatened by civil war. Refugees are accumulating in Hanhow, many of whom hope to travel north to their homes in Honan. Northern Honan also forms the main highway for the migration eastward of refugees who have been in Kansu and northern Szechuen.

I am hoping to leave Chungking within the next two weeks for Chengchow in northern Honan. From there it will also be possible to get in touch with workers from our mission field and probably to take a trip up there.

Our MCC relief work has good opportunities and an open field in the area of northern Honan and southern Hopei which was formerly the field of two Mennonite missions. The first group of three or four should be coming from Calcutta shortly, and additional workers are expected early next year.

China in the confusion of the postwar period needs our help and sympathy. What the church does at this time may well determine what its future may be. The threat of civil war is the darkest cloud on the horizon. For this most Chinese are very apologetic. They feel, like we do, that it must be avoided, but so far no one has the solution.

I have written the sisters Elizabeth Goertz and Marie Regier, who it seems are now located at Tsintao but have no reply as communication is slow. They hope to get back to the station, but with the railways being continually cut by bandits and communists transportation is almost impossible.

Note: The sisters report that they received Pannabecker's letter in Peking.—P. H. R.

MENNONITES THE WORLD OVER

By Cornelius Krahn

People in Dispersion. Under this heading, Der Bote, published by D. H. Epp in Rosthern, Sask., for some time been printing letters written by Mennonites from Siberia and Germany (British and American occupied zones) who originally came from the Ukraine. Thousands of them are trying desperately to contact their relatives in Canada or South America in the hope of joining them.

Correspondence Across the Zones. There is still no postal service for civilians in Europe in occupied zones with people abroad. Formerly even persons in different zones could not contact each other. Now mail service has been resumed between zones. In the Russian zone, however this service has been suspended again.

To Siberia. According to the few reports that have come through from the Russian zone most of the displaced Mennonites from the Ukraine that had been taken to Germany are being sent to Siberia. Few survive the hardships connected with it. Former Russian citizens are being sent back even from British and American occupied zones.

The Christian Conscience. In a number of editorials the editor of The Christian Century has been appealing to the conscience of American Christians. Here is one of his statements: "The Potsdam policy of vengeance is far worse than anything that came out of Versailles. In its short-range effects, it is in a fair way to destroy Germany. But in its long-range effects, it is likely to destroy Europe. And if all Europe falls into chaos and despair, the rest of the world will not escape. How much longer will the governments that are responsible for the Potsdam decisions close their eyes to their own folly? How much longer will they ride blindly forward toward certain disaster, not only for Germany but for all western civilization. . . . The churches have been silent too long in the presence of this Potsdam atrocity."

Destruction by Water. Peter Dyck has visited the province of Zeeland which was flooded last winter by the Allies in order to drive out the Germans. He says, "I have seen thousands of houses blasted and burned and know something about the noise of battle and blitz but when we stood gazing at the pathetic beauty of houses and barns, trees and windmills quietly reflected in the calm water and knew that they were rotting away and that the soil was made useless for a long time to come, I pondered anew the meaning of "Victory."

Destruction by Fire. On his trip Peter Dyck also visited the Mennonite Church of Aardenburg, a city located just across the Belgium border. He did not find a single house undamaged. Fifty per cent of the people, including the Mennonites, had lost everything, twenty-five per cent had lost much, and everybody had lost something. Shoes and clothing are being sent to these war-stricken and suffering brethren in the southwestern part of Holland by the

Report from Quarryville, Pennsylvania

We have much for which to praise the Lord. He has blessed in abundant ways, and all honour be unto His holy name. We held a community Daily Vacation Bible School for two weeks in June. With gasoline still rationed, and the reports from parents that their children would have to help on the farm because of the acute labor shortage, we were somewhat discouraged but through prayer and house visitation the Lord blessed with an enrollment of 165 and an average attendance of 142. This was an increase of 70 over last year's enrollment of 95; thus our hearts were encouraged and strengthened the Lord. We were able to rent a public school bus and six automobiles, driving a total 1,800 miles in the two week period.

Two of our younger girls spent a week at the Pinebrook Bible Camp of which Rev. Percy Crawford is director. Their expenses were paid by the On-We-Go Sunday school class. Both of the girls were saved during their stay at the camp.

Our missionary, Anna Swarr, who been at home for almost two years because of the war has made application for passport to return to China, Miss Swarr is serving under the China Inland Mission, and indications are that she may get passport to return before the close of this year.

The Lord has blessed in our Sunday School this spring and summer. The average attendance in former years and through the winter of this year was 40, but we are happy to report that the attendance at present is from 60 to 82. The number of our classes has doubled from 4 to 8 classes.

We have many needs, and there is yet much to be done, but our God is able. With the increase in our S. S. we have a need for more teachers. A new foundation is to be put under the church building at an estimated cost of $1,000. The Young People's meeting needs to be supplemented with a Junior C. E., and we trust that this will be accomplished in the near future. Pray for a much needed bus to bring in the unreached children of the community to our morning and evening services. PRAY! PRAY! PRAY!

Your co-laborer in Christ, Alfred Regier

A CORRECTION: The title in this column in the November 27th issue should have read, "Pioneering in Nipawin." Nipawin, Saskatchewan, is the address of Rev. and Mrs. Chas. B. Dirks. It occurred to the Secretary of the Board that some Sunday School classes or C.E. groups might wish to correspond with this far northern group.—A.J. Neuenschwander

Mennonite Youth

"A United Mennonite Youth in Christ"

It Is Christmas Eve

Tonight in our homes there is happiness. There is gaiety and good food and laughter. There are candles and bows of evergreen and gifts. We are among friends. In our world we are content.

Tonight there are homes where there is no gladness. In a suburb of Berlin a small family huddles together in the cold and darkness of their one room home. In bomb-devastated Cologne a mother and her two children pick listlessly among the debris which was once their home. Tonight in Germany there is no gaiety, no warmth, no laughter of happy children, no table laden with holiday foods. There is only slow, gnawing starvation, gaunt faces, cold, despair, and the shadow everywhere of approaching death. In their world there is only sadness.

And the Christian soul cries out to Heaven: "Forgive us, we pray Thee, on this, the night of the birth of the Christ Child." From afar off we hear angel voices and suddenly there is about us a heavenly host, saying,

"Glory to God in the highest,
And on earth peace,
Good will toward men."

To our ears come these glorious words and we wonder: What does the birth in Bethlehem mean to you and to me? Let us seek anew to know the meaning of this Christmas season.

To many Christmas is a period of sentimental loveliness. There are the romantic traditions. But among the busy shops, in the tree and the tinsel, and in the colorfully wrapped gifts and the carols we do not discover the depth of truth in Christmas. We find the meaning of Christmas in the Christ Child.

Let Christmas be for you and me a time for re-discovering Jesus.

"For unto you is born this day in the city of David, a Saviour. . . ." The purity, perfect love and beauty of the Christ Child convicts us of our own stumbling, sordid selves. In penitence of spirit we cry out for the forgiving and saving love of our Master. It is He who says, "I am the Door; by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved and shall go in and out and find pasture." Unto us, this Christmas season "is born a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord."

"And she brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger." Jesus was of humble birth. He came into the family of a carpenter. The babe Jesus "grew and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom." Our's is the precious possession that our Lord came to us as Jesus, the Son of Man. He lived and dwelt among men. He was of flesh and blood—the Jesus of Nazareth, the Jesus of Galilee. He shares our common humanity. He knows our human hopes and joys. He knows our little frailties. He knows and understands and forgives.

"And a voice came from heaven, which said, Thou art my beloved Son; in thee I am well pleased." Sharing the humanity of man, Jesus also shares the divinity of the Father. He is the Son of God. Born unto the Virgin Mary, his was a miraculous birth. The compassionate, loving Heavenly Father gave us his only Son. No greater love hath anyone than this. This love finds its completeness when the Father gives his Son on Calvary. The very heart of the gospel is this redemptive love of our Father. Jesus is more than man, more than a man of genius. He is the very Son of the living God.

"And we believe and are sure that thou art that Christ, the Son of the living God." Jesus is the Christ. He is the Messiah, the fulfillment of a great expectancy. He is the End of our seeking and searching. In his Holy Presence we may rest. In Him we may look forward to an unfolding of the riches of the Spirit.

"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, The Mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace." That Christmas morn the angel voices announced His birth with a hymn of praise and peace: Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men. Amid this Christmas beauty the Prince of Peace urges us to "love our enemies." We are to bless those who curse us, do good to those that hate us, and pray for those who persecute us. This Christmas season we must needs dedicate ourselves anew to radiating the reconciling love of our Master in a hate and fear-ridden world. With a penitent conviction of our sins against brother man, we pray that we may go forth into the new day, following in the steps of the Prince of Peace.

This is Christmas eve 1945. Again our thoughts reach forth to those millions in Europe who are suffering a living death in the wake of this war. From the press we read: "Twenty-five per cent of the present population of Germany will not be living in the spring." And then even more heart-rending: "In some European districts no child born in 1945 is still alive." Can we in our comfort be content?

The Christ Child is to us the spirit of tenderness and compassion. That spirit should pervade our hearts this Christmas season—convicting us of our sins, chastening us, commissioning us for loving service in a world of need. Christ, who took upon Himself the sufferings of the world, calls us to sacrificial service.

The message of Christmas is the rediscovered Christ. It is the tender grace of the Christ Child. It is Jesus the friend. It is the Son of God, who is our loving Lord and Master. It is the Reconciling One, the Prince of Peace. It is the Christ, the Saviour of the world.

Christmas in Japan

Christians in Japan are also celebrating this Christmas season. On the island of Oshima, a missionary and his wife carried on their work for three years. Some of the Christians on the island wrote poems of Christmas joy in their native tongue. Mrs. Lois Johnson Erickson has translated them into English.

With the terrible suffering and the hate which follows devastating wars, our hands need to reach across the barriers of man-made boundaries and of hate and suspicion to brothers in faith in Christ. So, as we read these poems, let us rejoice for our unseen brothers—Yamamoto, Osaki, Kawabuchi.

This first poem reaches across barriers of space just as our spirits do.

The wireless brings us songs of Christian praise
From far and near;
And listening, we are one with you today,
Friends everywhere!

—Yamamoto.

Here are Yamamoto's thoughts on Bethlehem.

Two thousand years ago the star appeared
To wondering men;
Tonight it shines above our isle
As bright as then;
Lo, let us, let us go
To Bethlehem!
All quietly the maple leaves glow red
That once were green;
Without the camp
All silently
Tonight the Christ is seen,
New-born and helpless, now as then,
Lo, let us, let us go
To Bethlehem!

A leper expresses his joy over the Christmas season.

White snowflakes
Falling, falling,
Children's voices
Calling, calling,
Dance with joy, my heart!
Saved,
We celebrate Christ's coming,
Eager footsteps crowding, running,
All their pain forgot!

—Kawabuchi.

A prayer for guidance is expressed in this way.

The Wise Men once
You guided safe to him;
So guide me now,
O Star of Bethlehem!

—Osaki.

Let's Go Caroling

As the Christmas season draws near our thoughts turn again to caroling. From the earliest times Christmas was the chief festival of the Church. In the first century Clement admonished the priests: "Brethren, keep diligently the feast days and above all, the day of Christ's birth." Telesphorus, Bishop of Rome in 129, began the custom of celebrating the Nativity with the singing of carols. "Glory to God in the Highest" or "The Angels' Song" was always sung on these occasions. The chief themes of the early carols were the Annunciation, The Angels Message, The Lullaby, The Coming of the Shepards, and the Story of the Magi, which was the most popular of all. The Lullaby was also found frequently in sacred folk-song.

Perhaps the stories of some of our Christmas hymns and carols will serve to make them more meaningful to us as we go caroling this year.

History of Modern Carols

Carols of the modern type first made their appearance in the fifteenth century and were used not only at Christmas but throughout the year. They were simple, hilarious, popular, modern, spontaneous and direct in expression. They flourished until the seventeenth century when, in Puritan England, Christmas and other festivals were abolished for a time. A tract of that time calls Christmas Day "The Old Heathen's Feasting Day, in honour to Saturn their Idol-God, the Papist's Massing Day, the Profane Man's Ranting Day, the Superstitious Man's Idol Day, the Multitude's Idle Day, Satan's-that Adversary's-Working Day, the True Christmas Man's Fasting Day. . . We are persuaded, no one thing hindereth the Gospel work all the year long, than doth the observation of the Idol Day once in a year, having so many days of cursed observation with it."

The old carols did not fully recover after this period. New so-called carols were continued but they were mostly about "pork and pudding". It was not until the middle of the last century that the real carols began to come back into their own. The use of carols was gradually limited to Christmas and other occasional holidays until today they are commonly used only at Christmas time.

"Silent Night, Holy Night," one of the best loved of all Christmas carols, had its origin in an obscure German village. The words were written by an assistant pastor, Joseph Mohr, in 1818 at a Christmas celebration as a Christmas gift for his friend, Franz Gruber. Gruber was a schoolmaster, songwriter and organist in Arnsdorf, near Oberdorf where Mohr was located. On that same Christmas Eve, in 1818, after Mohr had retired to his rooms he heard his poem being sung to a beautiful melody. He hurried out to thank his friends and was greeted by Gruber: "Indeed, has not the song become a beautiful tune! One cannot do anything else at once but sing your beautiful song. Therefore the sound at once came to me, and while you were gone I played it to my friends, the Strassers, and we together have composed it." It was then sung by the author and composer, Mohr singing the melody and accompanying on the guitar while Gruber sang the bass.

Wandering Tyrolese singers made this carol well known and loved throughout Germany and Austria

"The First Noel" is one of the true old carols. It is thought to have originated no later than 1700. Neither the author nor the composer is known. It is based on the early popular theme of the Magi.

The word "Noel" or "Nowell" is from the old French word, which was used to signify Carol and also Christmas. In English, it takes on the meaning of "news," or "a cry of joy."

Phillips Brooks, who wrote "O Little Town Of Bethlehem," was one of America's foremost preachers. He was born in Boston in December, 1835. As a boy, he grew up in a musical home "where memorizing and reciting hymns was the order of the day." By the time he was ready for college he had committed two hundred hymns to memory. His family always knew when he was up in the morning for he was always singing or humming tunes. He graduated from Harvard and from Alexandria Seminary in Virginia, and served as rector at the Church of the Advent, Philadelphia, and at Trinity Church, Boston.

While he was in Philadelphia, he was given a year's leave of absence to tour Europe and the Near East. In Christmas week in 1865, he rode on horseback from Jerusalem to Bethlehem. The view of the little town is thought to have inspired this hymn which he wrote two years later as a carol for the Christmas Sunday School service in his Philadelphia church. Brooks asked the church organist, Lewis Redner, to set the carol to music. "It was done in great haste on Saturday night before Christmas. Redner was aroused from sleep by a melody which chimed in his heart. He wrote it down. . . and in the morning he filled in the harmony." Neither of them thought the hymn would ever be used again. For twenty years it was unknown. In about 1890 it came into use and since then has been used all over the world.

The words of "It Came Upon A Midnight Clear" were written by an American, Edmund Hamilton

Sears (1810-1876). After graduating from Union College in New York, he began to study law. He could not resist a call to the ministry and entered the Harvard Divinity School. All of his life, except for the years at Union College, was spent in Massachusetts where he held pastorates at several small churches in the central part of the State. "It Came Upon A Midnight Clear" was written while he was pastor at Wayland. He wrote a number of religious books and served as co-editor for a time of a religious magazine. The hymn first appeared in The Christian Register in 1850 and quickly attained a wide usage. It has been popular ever since.

The composer was Richard Storrs Willis, a musician and newspaper man. He was a brother of the famous poet, Nathaniel Parker Willis and the son of Deacon N. Willis, who founded The Youth's Companion. The tune is an arrangement of Willis' "Study No. 23", made in 1850 by Uzziah C. Burnap, who lived in Brooklyn, New York.

This hymn should not be thought of only as a Christmas hymn for it has a social emphasis which makes it suitable at all seasons of the year.

"Hark! the Herald Angels Sing" is the most widely published of Charles Wesley's hymns. It first appeared in Hymns and Sacred Poems, a joint hymnal by Charles and John Wesley published in 1739. When first printed it began.

Hark, how all the welkin rings
Glory to the King of Kings.

The words were revised several times. The opening lines we sing today were published by Whitefield.

The hymn was used for over a hundred years before any definite tune became associated with it. One of the approved tunes in the eighteenth century was the tune called "Easter Hymn," to which we sing "Jesus Christ is Risen Today." The present tune was discovered in 1855 by Dr. Cummings, principal of the Guild Hall School of Music. He found it while hunting through Mendelssohn's "Festgesang," which had been written in 1840 to celebrate the anniversary of printing. It is the second chorus in the book, Gott is Licht.

"Joy to the World," a song of praise, is taken from a part of Psalm 98. Isaac Watts (1674-1748), the author of the poem puts the verbs in present tense ("the Saviour reigns"), even though at that time religion was described by a historian as never having been at a lower ebb, and the great missionary movement of the century had not yet begun.

Handel's works were the source for the tune which is associated with this hymn. The first four notes are reminiscent of the opening notes of the chorus, "Lift up Your Heads" from the "Messiah", while later lines bear resemblance to the rhythm and melody of the opening bars of the tenor aria, "Lift up Your Heads," also from the Messiah. Lowell Mason is credited with the arrangement although it seems that he took it from an English collection. by Clark of Canterbury.

"Adeste Fideles" was first published in 1751 and in Latin. It "was written by an unknown hymnist of France in the early part of the eighteenth century, probably in the private chapel of some wealthy Roman Catholic family." Over forty translations have been made. The one most commonly used is by Frederick Oakly (1802-1880) and was made in 1841.

It is thought that the hymn and the tune came into use together, "being first used among Roman Catholics in the early eighteenth century, at a period when many Catholic families had their own private chapels and the custom prevailed of priests going from house to house copying music for general use." The Duke of Leeds heard it sung at the Portuguese Chapel in London and spread its fame. It was arranged by Vincent Novello, the organist at the Portuguese Chapel, and is known as the Portuguese Hymn.

THIS CHRISTMAS OTHERS, TOO, MUST BE JOYFUL

Not only abroad in foreign nations, but as well within our own church there will be many this season who will not be able to celebrate Christmas in happy fellowship with their family and loved ones. There will be those in C. P. S. and the army serving in distant places. Some will be working in hospitals or other forms of duty. Some will not get many remembrances from friends.

We need to observe Christmas in the deepest spiritual sense. Part of that privilege and joy can be observed by sharing with those not able to have the joy we will have. Each of us should try to think of someone of our acquaintances and make a special effort to remember them and have fellowship with them. Only by sharing can we truly understand within ourselves the meaning of Christ's birth.

CONTRIBUTORS TO THIS ISSUE

Robert Kreider, recently released from Civilian Public Service and his work at Akron, Pennsylvania, contributed the article It Is Christmas Eve. Robert soon will go to Europe to do his bit in relief work for those who are suffering and of whom he speaks.

The poems by Japanese Christians come from Onward, a Presbyterian youth paper.

Alice Loewen, writer of Let's Go Caroling, has for three months served as matron at the CPS unit at the Agriculture College, Lincoln, Nebraska. She is now at Newton, Kansas, with her husband, Esko.

RELIEF

The Need for Relief in Germany

Authentic reports from inside Germany and through the neutral Swiss press indicate that the people of Germany and Austria are facing a winter of hunger and suffering which beggars description. Evidently starvation has actually begun to grip certain areas in these countries. Peter Dyck, writing from Amsterdam, confirms these reports and suggests that, although our food for relief shipments, however large, will be of great value in the Netherlands, much of it should be diverted to Germany if at all possible. Further report on conditions in Central Europe is expected from C. F. Klassen who is coming out of Germany after several months of investigation.

To date it has been impossible for relief organizations to bring assistance to German nationals. UNRRA and several private relief agencies have been caring to some extent for the displaced persons in Germany from the Occupied Countries. The policy which is carried out in regard to German citizens by government officials grows out of an article of the Potsdam agreement which says that the German people are not to be supplied until the needs of the Occupied Countries have been met.

The M.C.C. along with a number of other relief agencies has been negotiating to gain permission to enter Germany with personnel and material aid. In addition to the bringing of a relief ministry to German war sufferers in general, Mennonites are greatly interested in serving the 24,000 German Mennonites and the ten or more thousand Mennonite refugees from Eastern Europe now in various parts of Germany. Also, we feel constrained, as a non-resistant people, to serve those who have been considered our enemies, remembering the Biblical injunction: "If thine enemy hunger feed him; if he thirst, give him drink." The prayers of the churches are asked that the "mountain of government policy which prevents the sending of aid might be removed and that authorities might permit and facilitate the sending of food and clothing to the German people.

Brazil Mennonites Express Relief Concerns

A letter from David Nikkel, a minister among the Mennonites in the Witmarsum Colony, near Saint Catharine, Brazil, expresses the concern of the church there in regard to a relief ministry to Mennonites in Germany and Holland. The letter reports that a sum of $525 has been gathered for German relief and $693 for the assistance of Dutch brethren. It is interesting to note that less than twenty years ago the Mennonites now in Brazil were, with others, given assistance by the Mennonites of Germany and Holland.

Relief Worker Sails

Fred Peters, Vancouver, British Columbia, appointed for two years of service in France, sailed from New York December 6.

Relief Worker to Return

Word has been received that Brother Coffman is returning after completing five years of service in England.

Food for Relief

Communities in Virginia, Maryland, and Pennsylvania are operating commercial canneries and large quantities of meat are processed along with other foods. From the western states there are equal contributions in meat with special interest in the donation of flour and wheat. One Mennonite congregation in the state of Washington has felt that they should give twenty carloads of wheat; a community in British Columbia has collected $90,000 for the purchase of beef to be slaughtered and processed for relief.

The trailer truck operated by the M.C.C. for the collection of food for relief and C. P. S. is now in Kansas communities transporting C. P. S. contributions to camps in Colorado and Nebraska and delivering relief contributions to the center at Kalona, Iowa. Within the next week this truck will leave for Nebraska, Illinois, and Indiana communities and will then come East by the end of December.

Twenty-five C. P. S. men are giving full time to the food for relief program by assisting with the canning and directing the collection and crating of foodstuffs for overseas shipment.

Notes from Paraguay

Brother and Sister Willard Smith sailed from Asuncion for the States on November 8. They have completed two years of relief service in Paraguay where Brother Smith served as director of M.C.C. relief interests and Sister Smith as matron of the Mennonite Center at Asuncion. Dr. John Schmidt has been asked to serve as interim director until a successor to Brother Smith is appointed.

The feeding program for school children at Itacurubi, near the Friesland Colony, has been halted temporarily with the closing of the schools in the first week of November. Betty Keeney, who has directed this project during the past six months, is now taking student health records to make a comparative study of this effort.

On the steamship JOHN J. CRITTENDEN sailing from Portland, Maine, November 22:

Ernest Bachman, Newton, Kansas; Francis Breneman, Stuarts Draft, Va.; Enos Grove, Stuarts Draft, Va.; Willis Voran, Moundridge, Kansas; Alden Voth, Walton, Kansas; Milton Schmidt, Walton, Kansas; Edward J. Pankratz, Newton, Kansas; Henry J. Pankratz, Mountain Lake, Minnesota; Raymond Regier, Moundridge, Kansas; Alvin Suderman, Newton, Kansas; Frank Schmidt, Newton, Kansas; Herman Schmidt, Newton, Kansas; Alvin Schmidt, Walton, Kansas.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS TO CANADA

Dear Christian Friends in Canada,

We are about to spend our first Christmas abroad, with Uncle Sam and our American Cousins. Yet to us Canadians, it does not feel as if the Christmas season were approaching. Not that the Christmas Spirit is lacking, but the weather is still so mild. The grass is still partly green and there is no snow on the ground. One is even awakened by thunder claps and lightning flashes, which make one feel as though summer were approaching.

You may wonder how we are enjoying college. I, personally, must say that I enjoy it. When I first thought of all the doctors and professors that I would meet here, my spirit quailed within me. That fear immediately vanished when I found how friendly and sympathetic they were, and how anxious they were to help us.

Much has been said for and against Bethel College. Humans always like to criticize but seldom give praise to anything. It is true that Bethel College is not a Bible School nor a seminary but a college that offers a good Christian education in various fields, which fill the needs in many vocations of life.

Having been in the ministry for the past sixteen years, five of which were spent teaching in a Bible school, I felt a definite need for a better education, in order to meet the problems of this present age. Bethel College is filling that need for me.

If any of you students and ministers wish to attend college, and you have not completed high school,

Bethel will help to solve your problem, as it did mine. If you are of mature age Bethel will give you a placement test, and, if you can pass the high-school level test, you will be accepted into college. If any of you would like to come to Bethel next year, start planning now! Begin with your planning now, in order to get your application approved and to get all necessary papers in time. If you would write to us we would be glad to send you valuable information so that you would not need to have too many delays.

As a ministerial student, I find many opportunities for Christian service. Many churches extend a welcome for preaching services. Then too, we have the Student Volunteer Group, which meets once a week for Christian fellowship and three times a week for prayer. The group often goes out on Sundays conducting services at various places, such as the old peoples homes and hospitals. These things add to the spiritual life in college and to the building of Christian character.

I would be glad to have you meet our teachers. I am pleased that professors here teach their subjects in harmony with The Word of God. Then too, there is a fine spirit of co-operation between teachers and students.

All the Canadian students (Pauline and Ruth Jahnke, Helen Kornelson, Viola Siemens, Elizabeth Peters, Paul Boschman, my family and I) wish you all a very Merry Christmas. With brotherly love, John P. Loewen.

camps and units. Of this number, 202 had completed at least four years of service. The remaining men were released for over age and a small number for dependency and for physical reasons. These figures are as of December 5, 1945.

Selective Service recently announced plans for releasing three-year men after January 1, 1946. These plans call for the release by June 30, 1946, of all men who have completed three years of service by June 15, 1946. These releases will be entirely on the basis of length of service without regard to age or material status. During the month of January, 1946, the group who completed three years of service on or before April 30, 1945, will be released.

Returning C. P. S. Men

Much is being said and written about the value of the C.P.S. experience and what it has done to the men who have been in camps. No doubt many reactions will appear in print from time to time. The following excerpts have come to our attention from camp papers published at Hill City and Luray respectively.

"In C.P.S. we have learned that an abundant Christian life does not consist of earning money. Friendships we have made and the fellowship we have had with many different people standing for the cause of peace and the Kingdom of God have made our lives richer than any amount of money we might have earned had we been at home. We want to remember when we come home that the best things in life cannot be bought with money. The key to happiness is: "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God."

"In discussing the values that C. P. S. men should take along home we would like to quote from an outline given by J. Winfield Fretz about a year ago: 1. A rediscovery of God; 2. doctrines of humility, simplicity, suffering, and self-sacrifice; 3. rediscovery of our Mennonite heritage; 4. rediscovery of a sense of Christian brotherhood. He also mentioned a few things which we do not want to take along home and one of these is selfishness and materialism."

Peace Section Notes

Testimony Before House Committee

The concerns and testimony of Mennonites and Brethern in Christ in regard to peacetime conscription were presented before the House Military Affairs Committee on December 3, 1945. The statement included the testimony given June 11, 1945, and also pointed out the concerns of Mennonite groups regarding alternative service should a system of conscription be enacted in United States.

COLLEGE AND SEMINARY NEWS

THE MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY

Our fall quarter drew to a close on November 21. With the coming of the winter quarter we were happy to welcome reinforcements to our student body and a new member to our faculty. Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Friesen of Los Angeles, California, have entered our Seminary, while Willie Unrau from Newton, Kansas, entered the Training School. Rev. A. E. Kreider of Goshen, Indiana, is now teaching a course in Life of Christ in the Seminary. Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Krehbiel have left for their home in Newton, Kansas. Dr. Krehbiel taught Mennonite Church Polity. We are indeed grateful for the work these men are doing for this school. Numerous visitors have stopped here recently. Arthur Voth who was from the C.P.S. unit at Fort Collins, Colorado, and who was on his way to Akron, Pennsylvania, stopped to visit the school on November 29. On the same day Mrs. Selma Sommer and Miss Martha Suter were our guests. Two young men on their way to board a cattle boat for relief in Europe stopped there for a few days the week-end of December 2. These were Milton Bartel and Henry Wiebe, both of Aberdeen, Idaho.

Last Friday we were happy to receive the good news that Dr. Warkentin had been permitted to leave the hospital. He is now at home, but it will be several more weeks before he will be able to resume his work at the Seminary. We are grateful to God for his recovery so far, and we do thank all who are interceding for him and for this school.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

The first Sunday evening of each month Prof. H. W. Berky speaks at the Pleasant View Church of the Brethern, near Lima. He is giving a series of lectures on "Science and Religion." On Monday, December 3, he spoke before the Putnam County Ministerial Association in the Methodist Church in Pandora. He gave a Christmas lecture, "The Voice of God." President Ramseyer spoke before the Columbus Grove Lion Club December 11 on Veteran's Education. The annual student-faculty Christmas dinner will be held in Ropp Hall on December 20. The Christmas recess begins the next day. Robert Geigley, who spent two years in relief work in Paraguay, is expected in Bluffton for a vesper address on January 13. His wife, whose home is in Argentina, will also speak. Miss Anna Leichty, Berne, Indiana, who will soon go to the Belgian Congo in Africa as a missionary, and Rev. Orlando Wiebe, who has been holding meetings at the St. John Mennonite Church, were recent chapel speakers.

FREEMAN JUNIOR COLLEGE

The Cimonoco Emoh Club members have been making Christmas gifts which they will sell on Founders' Day. The proceeds will be used for needed improvements in the Home Economics rooms. An Art class was started this quarter, with Prof. Toews as instructor. Rev. J. J. Regier and Rev. Willard Claassen were recent chapel speakers. Palmer Graber is coaching the basketball activities this season. A conference of South Dakota and Iowa Junior Colleges has been organized. The member schools will participate in athletic and forensic meets. The Academy play, "Be It Ever So Humble," under the direction of Miss Kaufman, was given November 29 and 30. Mr. and Mrs. Gerhard Buhr, both graduates of Freeman, have been campus visitors this week. Mr. Buhr was recently released from Fort Collins, where he was educational director and Mrs. Buhr was camp dietitian. Mr. and Mrs. Buhr have been appointed to do relief work in Paraguay with the Friesland Itacurubi sub-unit.

BETHEL COLLEGE

The busy round of Christmas observances began Friday, December 7, with the public program of carols, readings and a short play put on by the Department of Modern Languages—in German, Spanish, and French. Most campus organizations and residence halls are planning their own programs and parties and frequently go caroling. The final events will be the annual tableaux on December 17 and the Christmas dinner on the 19. High point of the season will be the eighteenth consecutive rendition of Handel's "Messiah" on Sunday evening, under the direction of Professor Hohmann. The community chorus of one hundred fifty voices is assisted by the College Orchestra, rehearsed by Mr. Vilas Gerber. Mrs. Erwin Goering will be special accompanist for the soloists: Ruthabel Rickman, New York City, soprano; Wilma Osheim, alto, and Herbert Gould, bass, both from the music department of the University of Missouri; and Herbert Sherman, tenor, from the Kansas City Conservatory.

JOTTINGS

—Paul Baumgartner, son of the late Rev. S. S. Baumgartner, died at his home in North Newton, Kansas, Sunday morning, December 16. Mr. Baumgartner will be remembered by delegates and visitors to the last General Conference for his address of welcome as mayor of North Newton.

—Hoffnungssau Church, Inman, Kansas: On November 28th a group gathered at the church to pack the canned foods for relief and C.P.S. Nearly a thousand quarts had been put up besides quite a number of pounds of dried fruits, vegetables, and lard. Mrs. Emil Klein passed away December 3. Rev. D. D. Unruh, a retired minister of our church, has been confined to the Bethel Hospital, Newton, for over a week. The trustees of the church have purchased a house and are now making plans to have it moved and remodeled into a parsonage. The annual mission sale of our three sewing societies brought in over $1900. Quite a few service men have made their appearance in church. —Corr.

—Fairfield, Pa. Members of the Fairfield church recently had the opportunity of hearing Wm. Henry Chamberlin and Dr. Jerome Davis discuss Russia.

The meetings were sponsored by the County Ministerium of which Rev. George Stoneback is secretary.

—Bethel Church, Fortuna, Missouri: Since Rev. Howard Raid left us we have had guest speakers including: Marvin Dirks, Waldo Harder, Erwin A. Albrecht, L. Metzker, John Schmidt, Walter McDowell, and John D. Epp. We are looking forward to the time when Rev. Albrecht, our new pastor, will locate here. The young people's C.E. gave a missionary play November 18. A week later the Junior C.E. had a special program. Their leader, Miss Hofstetter, gave each child one dollar in spring. The children now brought the earnings of their various projects. This was about $150. On November 22 friends and neighbors gathered at the church to help Mr. and Mrs. John P. Loganbill celebrate their sixtieth wedding anniversary. Rev. Arnold Funk and Rev. John Epp (both son-in-laws) and Rev. P. P. Hilty gave some talks. Hiltys have received word that their son Calvin is leaving with some stock for Poland.—Corr.

—Eden Church, Inola, Oklahoma: We enjoyed Miss Martha Burkhalter, missionary from India, in our midst very much and to learn that the Mrs. John Joseph, the young evangelist, which our four lower Sunday School classes have been supporting for a number of years, had been Miss Burkhalter's Bible student.—Corr.

—The First Church, Burns, Kansas, intends to lay the cornerstone of its new church building on December 30. The program is to begin at 2 P.M. The first part of it is to be held in the Burns high school auditorium. All those interested are heartily invited to attend.—Henry Goossen, Pastor.

—The Fairfield (Pa. Church) was favored in its Sunday morning service December 2 by a visit from some members of the M.C.C. staff at Akron. The visitors were: Richard Blosser, Roy Umble, Dan Widmer, Otto Sommers with his wife and baby, and Eleanor Weaver. The selections by the men's quartet were highly appreciated by all. Richard Blosser and Dan Widmer gave a report of the work that is being done at Akron.—Henry Burkhard, Corr.

—First Church, Lehigh, Kansas: The meat which was donated for relief was canned in several different homes. The Junior and Senior choirs gave a musical program December 9. The C.E. program before that was a volunteer program. The M.C.C. has rented a warehouse in Lehigh for relief and C.P.S. canned goods. Robert Benner from Akron has been here over a week helping Rev. B H. Janzen, chairman for the Kansas area, with the work. A large amount of food has come in by now.—Mrs. F. G. U., Corr.

—First Church, Aberdeen, Idaho: The offering for relief last Sunday morning amounted to $7,361.03. Since then additional money has been received and the total amount to date is $7,431.03 This is the largest offering ever received in our church.

O. B. A. BUILDS ADDITION

It is with gratitude and praise to our Lord and Master that we have been able to start the addition to our Oklahoma Bible Academy building. The basement is dug, and the foundation of the building is finished. We hope that the rest of the material which is needed will soon be released to continue the building.

We are grateful for all who have contributed to this cause with their gifts. It is our plan not to build above what we are able to pay in cash. More money will be needed before we can complete the building.

If the Lord lays it on your heart to send in a contribution either for the building or the upkeep of the school it will be greatly appreciated.

Send all your gifts to Mr. Nelson Wedel, Ringwood, Oklahoma.

Yours in our Master's service,
J. W. Bergen (Pres.)

NO ISSUE OF "THE MENNONITE" DURING CHRISTMAS WEEK
